ELECTION AT DENVER

Franchises and Charter Amendments Main Issues.

Three Sets of Candidates for Officials in the Field.

Denver, May 15.—Today the voters in this city are balloting for their choice of aldermen, three supervisors and three members of the election commission. In addition to the candidates for these offices, several charter amendments and franchises are being voted on. The latter include franchises for the Denver Tramway company, the Denver Gas & Electric company, the Municipal Traction company, which is a newly organized company and enters the field as a rival to the Tramway company; the Northwestern Terminal company, a franchise sought by the Moffatt road now building to Salt Sake; the Denver Terminal company, seeking terminals in Denver in connection with proposed electric lines to towns in Northern Colorado, and a franchise permitting the Union Pacific railroad to build a line on Blake street, which runs through the heart of the wholesale district.

The charter amendments are five in number, and provide for the regulation of rates for public utility service; the purchase by the city of the Lacombe lighting plant; the issuance of $5,000,000 of city improvement bonds, the money to be used to beautify the city; a ten-year contract with the Denver Gas & Electric company to furnish arc lights on streets at $60 per light and an amendment concerning pensions for police officers injured in the line of duty.

There are three tickets for the elective offices to be voted upon, in the field, namely, Republican, Democratic and Municipal Ownership. There is one independent candidate—that for the office of election commissioner. The campaign has been an exceedingly hot one, the interested corporations combining to pull through their franchise propositions, except in one or two instances where personal interest has caused them to oppose each other.

The Municipal Ownership League heralds its platform to the world through its name and charges that the two old parties have joined to carry the day for the corporations.

District Judge Johnson has issued an order appointing special watchers and an injunction against election officials, peace officers and others restraining them from interfering with the watchers. This order was based on the action of the supreme court in the last state election in appointing special watchers in certain of the precincts in Denver which resulted in contempt proceedings and sentencing to jail of a number of election officials and others enjoined. Last night the secretaries of the Municipal Ownership League were arrested on the charge of having forged the name of Republican Chairman Fred A. Williams to a campaign circular. They denied the charge and were subsequently released on bonds.

When the polls opened at 7 o'clock this morning, every indication was that the vote would be heavy.

APPROPRIATION INSUFFICIENT

To Accommodate Guardsmen Who Want to Camp With Regulars.

Washington, May 15.—Letters received by Assistant Secretary Oliver from the governors of states, in answer to his recent invitations to designate the military organizations which they desire to encamp with the regular troops, indicate that the proposition is popular among the National Guardsmen beyond expectation. In fact, it has become evident that the limited appropriation of $700,000 for this purpose will be entirely insufficient unless supplemented by congress, as many of the governors have replied to the invitation that they would direct that all of their militia organizations enter the combined camps. Therefore, Mr. Oliver has been obliged to send out another letter to these governors, stating that for the present the department will be able to care completely only for one regiment of infantry; one troop of cavalry and one battery of artillery from each state, providing these with subsistence, the transportation and pay. If the governors desire to send more troops than these, the government can provide only for their transportation. As there appears to be a misunderstanding as to the cost of rations, the governors have been informed that the field ration is limited to 22 cents, and the travel ration to 40 cents.

CATHOLIC KNIGHTS AND LADIES IN CONVENTION.

Detroit, May 15.—One hundred and fifty delegates from fifteen states are attending the eighth bi-ennial convention of the Catholic Knights and Ladies of America, which will be in session in this city for three days. It was stated before the opening session today that no radical legislation was anticipated although there was much important business to be done. Appointment of committees and routine business occupied the opening session, which was preceded by mass at St. Peter and St. Paul's cathedral. President Kelley of Memphis, Tenn., is presiding over the convention.

CRAPSEY IS SUSPENDED UNTIL HE SHALL CHANGE BELIEF AND TEACHINGS

Sentence of Jury Delivered to Famous Episcopal Divine.

Cannot Exercise Functions of Church Under the Verdict.

Jury Hopes He Will Change During Next Thirty Days.

Rochester, N. Y., May 15.—The verdict in the heresy trial of Dr. Algernon S. Crapsey today was delivered to the accused minister. Four of the jurors state that in their opinion sentence should be passed as follows:

"That the respondent should be suspended from exercising the functions of the church until such time as he shall satisfy the ecclesiastical authorities of the diocese that his belief and teaching conform to the doctrines of the apostles' creed and the Nicene creed as this church hath received the same. However, we express the earnest hope and desire that the respondent may see his way clearly during the thirty days that under the canons of the church, must intervene before sentence can be pronounced to the full satisfaction of the ecclesiastical authorities of such conformity on his part.

CHANDLER AND TILLMAN DENY

That They Initiated Negotiations With the President.

Washington, May 15.—Senator Tillman talked freely last night with a number of his callers about the statement issued by President Roosevelt. He expressed his preference, however, not to be quoted, pointing out that whatever he wished to say on the subject of the statement he would say on the floor of the senate. He discussed the president's statement with Former Senator Chandler and he urged Mr. Chandler to issue a statement giving a full history of the whole matter. Senator Tillman wanted the fact to go into the newspapers that he did not in any way initiate the negotiations with the president regarding the Democratic support for the railroad rate bill and that he did not ask Senator Chandler to go to the White House.

Former Senator Chandler refused to discuss the statement from the White House. He indicated that he did not expect to issue a statement at this time bearing on the subject. He also indicated that he was anxious to have railroad rate legislation enacted. Regarding his visits to the White House, Mr. Chandler said that, previous to his invitation to call to see the president on March 31, following which he conferred with the president regarding the pending rate bill, he had not been at the White House for about a month, and that previous to that invitation he had no immediate intention of going there. He said that he did not go to the White House as an emissary of Mr. Tillman, but that he went there in response to the president's invitation.

ARRESTED FOR MURDER.

Virginia, Minn., May 15.—(Special to The Herald.)—Last week P. M. Olson, a North Dakota sheriff, arrived here in search of two men who were charged with the murder of a man last fall. One of them, Nick Johnson, was located in Mount Iron, and the other, Gust Kangas, was found in Virginia. Their alleged victim was missed last fall and nothing was seen or heard of him until this spring, when his body was found in an out-of-the-way place partly covered with hay. It was evident that he had been murdered, and as Johnson and Kangas were last seen with him, they were suspected of being the murderers. Sheriff Olson left here Saturday with his prisoners.

CARGO BADLY DAMAGED.

Steamer Vigilancia Reaches Havana After Being on Fire.

Havana, May 15.—The Ward line steamer Vigilancia, which was reported from Cape Lookout May 12 to be on fire, reached this port from New York today, one day late. The delay in her arrival was caused by the precaution in keeping her near the shore during the fire, which was under control Saturday evening and which, it appears, was chiefly confined to the ship's stores in the forward part of the vessel, all of which were practically consumed. Her cargo was badly damaged by flooding the holds with water. The loss is not known and will not be ascertained until the report of the board of survey appointed by the American vice consul, is made public.

NEW POSTMASTER

Washington, May 15.—(Special to The Herald.)—William T. Blakely has been appointed postmaster at Farley, Beltrami county, Minn., vice K. McIver, resigned.

CHILD WIFE MURDERED

Denver, May 15.—A 14-year-old girl known as the wife of George Contesti, alias George Walse, was found dead today in a hovel, at 2437 Temple court, in this city. She had been beaten to death with a hatchet and her head was nearly severed from the body. The child wife was Salvatore Sarico before her marriage to Contesti which took place in San Francisco six months ago. The couple fled from San Francisco after the earthquake and the girl's mother is said to be in San Jose, Cal. The police are hunting for Contesti who has disappeared.

Okolona, Miss., May 15.—Mrs. Mattie McIntosh, a white woman, who was recently arrested charged with complicity in the murder of her husband, and who gave bond, reported to the officers at Okolona yesterday that Sunday night a number of men visited her house, took her to a tree and threatened to hang her unless she revealed her alleged accomplices in the murder. Mrs. McIntosh declined to talk whereupon she was strung up for several seconds. Upon being lowered to the ground she still refused to answer questions, and, she declares, she was strung up a second time. When the rope was taken from her neck, she heard her assailants announce that she was dead. Her body was carried into the woods and left there. She revived and immediately came here to tell her story.

PERILOUS POSITION

That Turkey Was In Finally Realized by the Sultan.

Time Was Up When He Accepted Great Britain's Demands.

Constantinople, May 15.—The sultan's complete submission to the Anglo-Egyptian demand was only given some hours after the expiration of the British ultimatum and it was not till noon Monday that Ambassador O'Connor was in a position to notify the British government that its demands were completely accepted. The word "delimitation," which the sultan considered implied the existence of a frontier, whereas he maintains that Egypt is a part of Turkey, nearly wrecked the negotiations. Numerous notes with necessary grades were drawn up on Sunday evening and communicated to the British embassy, only to be rejected and returned to the Turkish government. Finally shortly before the expiration of the ultimatum the British ambassador brought matters to a climax by a personal visit to Tewfik Pasha, the foreign minister, and the grand vizier, to whom he imparted the designs of the British government in the event of non-compliance and brought the Turkish government to a realization of its perilous position. In view of the assurances of these ministers the ambassador consented to twelve hours further grace and in the early hours of Monday morning a special meeting of the council of ministers was summoned at the Yildi palace and the sultan consented to the acceptance of all of the British demands. The arrival at Constantinople of the British vessel Imogene doubtless helped to convince the Turkish government, as it was presumed she came to take away the ambassador in the event of a failure of the negotiations.

Diplomatic circles consider that Great Britain has gained a great point in the fact that Turkish notes constitute Turkey's first recognition of Great Britain's position as the protector of Egypt.

Col. Muzaffer Bey and Col. Fehmi Bey have been appointed commissioners for Turkey to delimitate the frontier on the Sinai peninsula.

MONNETT DEMANDS AN INVESTIGATION.

Bucyrus, O., May 15.—Frank S. Monnett, former attorney general of Ohio, is here to demand an immediate investigation by the grand jury, of the charges against him in connection with the ouster proceedings against the Hocking Valley and Ohio Central railroads. Mr. Monnett, who is now acting as special counsel for the government in the investigation of the relations of the railroads with the oil and coal industries, in a statement today said:

"We want the fullest investigation and should there be any evidence upon which to reopen the case, we stand ready to continue the proceedings in the interest of the country, if so desired.

"The judgment was rendered by the Crawford county circuit court and a decree of ouster entered against the Toledo & Ohio Central Railroad company from paralleling the Hocking Valley Railroad company, by a common ownership of stock."

PHILIPPE BUNAU-VARILLA.

Paris, May 15.—In the course of a lengthy interview published in the Figaro this morning, Philippe Bunau Varilla, former minister of Panama to the United States, condemns the system of locks for the Panama canal and advocates a sea level canal. He sets forth the economical and scientific advantages of dredging over dry land excavation.

BODY OF JOHN HOGAN FOUND

In the St. Louis River—Missing Since Last November.

Virginia, Minn., May 15.—(Special to The Herald.)—On Nov. 11 last, John Hogan, a pump tender for the Mesabe Southern railway at St. Louis river, disappeared. It was supposed that he fell into the river and was drowned. Parties from Virginia dragged the river for his body several days but without success. On Sunday last, a lad discovered his body in the river seven miles below the landing where he was supposed to have fallen in, and moored it to a tree. Today the body was brought to Virginia and is at Mesberg's morgue.

Hogan made his headquarters at Mountain Iron. He was a member of Virginia aerie, F. O. E., and his body will be interred under the auspices of that order. He was 40 years of age and unmarried. The whereabouts of his relatives is unknown.

OIL INDUSTRY ESCAPED.

San Francisco, May 15.—Reports were received yesterday to the effect that a careful examination of all the oil fields of the state, has led to the discovery that the oil industry escaped injury so far as production is concerned by the earthquake of April 18.

All the Men Killed Were Mutilated Beyond Description.

Fifty Men at Work Near by Were Not Hurt.

Shenandoah, Pa., May 15.—Seven miners were torn to pieces and twelve badly burned by an explosion of dynamite in the Shenandoah City colliery of the Philadelphia & Reading Coal & Iron company, today.

A box of dynamite which a workman was carrying, fell from his shoulder and caused the explosion, which ignited the mine gas. There was about fifty men at work in the east gangway of the shaft when the explosion occurred, but so far as known all escaped except those working on the first lift. In this part of the shaft none escaped, meeting either death or injury.

All the men killed were mutilated beyond recognition.

The force of the concussion was terrific. Doors were torn off and brattices were wrecked in every section of the mine feeling the effect of the shock. The work of rescue was begun at once under the supervision of Mine Inspectors Lamb and Fenton, Division Supt. Pollard and the district superintendents. The absence of the deadly black damp, made the work of rescue less hazardous than in accidents of this character.

The force of the explosion was felt a great distance from the shaft, and friends and relatives of the entombed miners rushed to the mouth of the shaft. So great was the crush that it was necessary to call on the coal and iron police to keep the crowds back.

All of the killed and injured were foreigners.

VERY FEW GERMANS

Emigrate to South America Compared With United States.

An Article by Baron Sternburg Excites Much Comment.

Washington, May 15.—Much comment has been provoked in diplomatic and congressional circles by a magazine article written by Baron Sternburg, the German ambassador, in which he denounces stories concerning the "German peril" in Southern Brazil, and quotes official German statistics, showing the number of Germans who have gone to Brazil, and the size of the German contingent now in that country.

According to Baron Sternburg's figures, the total number of Germans who went to Brazil from 1871 to 1894 was 54,719. In the same time the number of Germans who came to the United States was 2,380,792. For the same period the number of German emigrants to all South American countries, except Brazil, was 31,814. In 1904 the number of German emigrants to Brazil was 355, and in no year between 1898 and 1904 did the number of Germans entering Brazil exceed 821. The total number of native Germans in Brazil at present is given by German authorities at 20,000, while the number of German subjects in Brazil is 8,000.

In commenting upon these figures, Senator Cullom of Illinois, chairman of the senate committee on foreign affairs, said the ambassador shows the number of Germans in Brazil to be insignificant, and added:

"It would not seem that there ought to be any cause for alarm. Germans pour into the United States by the thousands every year. We frequently get more on one ship than go to Brazil in several years, and nobody here seems to be afraid of the German population. The German is one of the best citizens we have. He makes a good American, and everywhere in the West his thrift and industry have done much to build up the country."

Baron Sternburg states that 96 per cent of the emigrants from Germany normally come to the United States, where they lose their German citizenship, and soon become identified with American institutions. He says the same is true of the small number of Germans who go to Southern Brazil. He denounces as untrue reports circulated that Germany is making every possible effort to divert emigration to South America, and quotes figures in order to show how limited the activities are of the German emigration bureau, which has been charged with being the source of the movement to divert German emigration to Brazil and other parts of South America in the temperate zone, in the hope of eventually gaining territory and perpetuating German commercial supremacy.

TRAGEDY IS MYSTERIOUS

Freight Car Burns and Two Lose Lives as Result.

Horses Killed by Being Turned Out of Moving Car.

Portland, Or., May 15.—A dispatch to the Oregonian from Pendleton, Or., gives an account of the mysterious burning yesterday, of a freight car near Foster, Or., and the death of two persons, one of whom is thought to have been murdered and the body consumed in the flames. The other was shot by a member of a sheriff's posse under the belief that he was the murderer.

The car was one of an Oregon Railway & Navigation railroad's westbound freight train and contained the household goods and two horses of Col. S. W. Taylor, commandant at Fort Worden, Wash. It was in charge of Private William Wilson, Twenty-fifth battery, coast artillery and was enroute from Fort Riley, Kas., to Port Townsend, Wash. According to Wilson's statement while he was currying one of the horses about 7 o'clock yesterday morning, the animal kicked him in the breast, causing insensibility. When Wilson came to, he says, that he found the car on fire. He turned the horses out of the moving car and they were killed in falling to the ground. Wilson says he then made his way over to the caboose where he notified the trainmen, who cut the car out at Foster siding.

After the car had been cut out a body which it is stated may have been either that of a man or woman fell out at the end of the car. A physician says this body shows indications of foul play.

While the train was still standing at Foster, a man who had been on the train, declared that there were two tramps riding in it and that both had been burned to death. This man hurriedly made his escape.

A sheriff's posse followed him and ran down another man near Pine City, a few miles west of Foster, who was thought to be the fugitive. When ordered to surrender he made a motion as if to draw a revolver and was shot and fatally wounded by Posseman Otis McCarty. This man before he died gave the name of John Condley of Pendleton, Or. It is said he is not the man for whom the posse was hunting. Wilson who had proceeded with the train was arrested at Umatilla and taken back to Foster. Wilson in his statement declared that he was alone in the car.

GAPON'S BODY IS IDENTIFIED

Former Priest's Lawyer Says There is Absolutely No Question.

St. Petersburg, May 15.—At the inquest on the body of Father Gapon which was found May 13 in the upper chamber of a lonely villa in the summer suburb of Ozerki, Finland, M. Margolin, the former priest's lawyer, positively identified the body. The autopsy showed that he received a blow on the head, and the theory is that revolutionists were listening in an adjoining room and heard Gapon betray his connection with the government and that Putenberg, the terrorist leader, who is said to have lured Gapon to his death rushed in, felled him to the floor and afterwards hanged him.

HUNT FUGITIVE TO CLEAR SPIER CASE.

New York, May 15.—Friends of Charles Spier, who still believe that the bullet which killed him may have been fired by a burglar, have asked the Staten Island police to make a determined effort to capture Charles Beam, a fugitive from justice, who disappeared from Mariners Harbor on April 6.

A complaint was lodged against him at the West Brighton police station on that day, accusing him of shooting Mrs. Hester Cozine, a relative of his wife, who lives on Union avenue, in Mariners Harbor. Beam is known as a desperate character along the north shore of Staten Island, and has served at least one term in prison for robbery, according to the police. There have been two burglaries in the precinct since he became a fugitive.

There are many residents on the north shore who believe he may have entered the Spier house on the night of the tragedy and that he would have used his revolver if cornered. They would at least like to see his fingerprints compared with those found on the Spier silverware and preserved at police headquarters.

INSURANCE RATES DOUBLED AT FRISCO.

San Francisco, May 15.—The Call says: Certain insurance companies doing business in this city are charging double the rates for insurance on local business that were assessed by them before the recent fire. Various reasons are assigned for this. One is that the water pressure is still weak, another is that the fire alarm service is out of order. While the double rates are announced, persons seeking insurance are told that there will be rebates later, when the normal conditions are restored and the underwriters have time to look over the field. No time is mentioned positively, but a period of from two to three months is suggested as the possible one during which the present high rates will rule.

CONCERNING WOMEN

A wedding of much interest to Duluthians took place yesterday in New York, when Miss Katherine Wohlforth daughter of Dr. and Mrs. A. P. Wohlforth of that city and F. A. Patrick of Duluth were married. The service was read by Rev. Newell Dwight Hillis, pastor of Plymouth church, Brooklyn, and only the members of the family were present. Mr. Patrick and his bride sailed today for a short trip abroad and will be at home in this city after July 1.

Mr. Patrick is one of Duluth's prominent citizens and his wedding is of much interest to a large number of friends here. He is at the head of F. A. Patrick & Co., and has for many years been identified with the progress of the city. His bride is a personal friend of his eldest daughter, Miss Rosamond Patrick, and first met Mr. Patrick at the home of his sister, Mrs. Hillis of Brooklyn. The month of June will be spent in England and France and Mr. and Mrs. Patrick will arrive in this city the latter part part of June and will be at home after July 1.

ANNUAL MEETING.

One Hundred Dollars Pledged for Secretary.

The fourth annual meeting of the Young Women's Christian association of Duluth was held last evening in the gymnasium of the association and was the most largely attended in the history of the association. The guest of honor at the meeting was Miss M. Belle Jeffrey, general secretary of the Minneapolis association and her presence added much to the interest of the meeting. The annual reports of the officers, the election of eight board members and an address by Miss Jeffrey were the features of the meeting.

Mrs. W. A. McDonagle, fourth vice president of the association, presided. The report of the general secretary, Mrs. Wesley Feetham, was given and reported growth in the various departments of the work, spiritual, social, educational and material and she also reported that the local association is 88 per cent self-supporting. It was decided at the last annual meeting that a per cent of the profits from the lunch room be laid aside as a nucleus for the building fund and from this source $972.92 has been saved for the building of a new home. It is thought most appropriate that the first money for this much-needed building come directly from the members themselves. The mite boxes were also opened and from this source $82.60 was added to the building fund.

The board members elected were, Mrs. J. O. Milne for a term of one year; Mrs. J. D. Titcomb for two years, and the following six directors for a term of three years, Mrs. Robert Smith, Mrs. W. M. Hubbard, Mrs. Brewer Mattocks, Mrs. W. C. Sherwood, Mrs. G. H. Claypool and Mrs. A. E. Gooch.

The subject of Miss Jeffery's informal talk was "Extension." She prefaced her remarks with a comment on the lack of enthusiasm among the members. "If a balance of over a thousand dollars was reported by our treasurer at an annual meeting, the members would at least have shown that they were awake and appreciative and delighted but that splendid report was greeted with stony silence and that grudging little handclap that I got when I was introduced rather frightened me."

The frequent applause which punctuated Miss Jeffery's remarks proved that the Duluth association although previously lacking in expressed enthusiasm was apt at learning and quick to act on suggestion. Miss Jeffery's talk was short and impressive. The value of extension work among the women of the factories in the cities where associations were organized was dwelt upon and then the need of extending the work outside of the city, state and country was spoken of. The need which existed in South America, and especially at Buenos Ayres, of work among the young women was told and the decision of the American committee to send Miss Jean Batty, for some years, general secretary of the state of Pennsylvania. Miss Batty will sail the first of September and her salary for the first year is to be raised by the associations of Pennsylvania and Minnesota. Duluth's apportionment was $100 and under Miss Jeffery's enthusiasm $108 was pledged in eight minutes.

At the business session a motion was made that a committee be appointed to revise the by-laws of the association to report to the board of directors, action to be taken by them. The need of the revision is urgent as nothing of the kind has been done since the constitution was first drawn up.

The members of both Palestine and Ionic lodges are invited to be the guests of the members and this last of the series of most delightful affairs promises to be one of the most delightful of the spring functions.

Recreation Hours.

More than ordinary interest will be taken in the Western city conference of the Young Women's Christian association which will be held during August at Lake Geneva, Wis., as Miss Ruth Roberts, physical director of the local association, will be in charge of the recreations of the conference. The meeting will this year be held from Aug. 21 to 31 and the plans for the hours of recreation during the afternoons will be in charge of Miss Roberts. Her successful plans for the outing club of the local association for Saturday afternoon, assure interesting and delightful hours of recreation for the conference attendants.

Annual Breakfast.

The third annual May morning breakfast of the Young Women's Christian association was held this morning at the rooms, breakfast being served from 7 to 9 o'clock. Marsh marigolds were the flowers used and during the two hours a large number of members and their friends enjoyed breakfast at the rooms. Presiding at the tables were Mesdames C. C. Cokefair, W. S. Horr, Mary E. Rogers, R. E. Denfeld, W. J. McCabe, E. H. Williams, G. H. Claypool, H. R. Sutherland, F. H. De Groat and W. G. Hegardt.

WHAT RETAIL MARKETS OFFER.

Carrots, 5 cents a bunch.
Tomatoes, 55 and 90 cents a basket.

Tomatoes are 18 cents a lb, and though the grocery man may say, in a seductive tone, "Tomatoes, 55 cents a basket this morning," don't let him fool you, the basket is just two pounds smaller than you think it is. The vegetables are lovely, though, firm, red, ripe, rapturous earth apples, that would induce the money out of the pocketbook of the most economical of housewives. However, if you really don't care for tomatoes, get carrots. They are good for the complexion. Very good. You must eat them raw, and they are better plucked newly from the ground, and the bit of superfluous rich, black earth palmed off, and then crunch into the complexion beautifier. If you can't, there are really nice bunches at the stores for 5 cents, and maybe some one of your household would like them better with that everlasting and gooy mess that is put around questionable dishes, cream sauce.

For those who like that sort of thing, sirloin steak and mushrooms is recommended to this column by somebody who once tasted these expensive things in combination.

WORK BEGUN ON SECOND STREET

By the time the curb has been reset, and everything is in readiness to begin laying the macadam, it is expected that Contractor Hugh Steele will be through with the city's mixing plant on the West Superior street job, and the plant can then be transferred to Second street.

Seventeenth avenue east is also to be paved this summer, and there is enough work to keep the plant busy until late in the fall.

Seventeenth of May,

Norway's independence day, will be celebrated at Lester Park with a big dance in the evening.

GUARDSMEN ARE DISGUSTED.

Want Warm Days So They Can Work at Rifle Range.

Among the other people who are out of sorts with the weather which has been handed to Duluth in chilly doses of late, are the members of Companies A and C of the Third regiment, Minnesota National Guard.

The militiamen had planned to be busy on their rifle range, over the hill, during every spare interval they could amass, but for nearly a month now, the weather, particularly on Sundays, has been so cold as to preclude any shoting.

A few of the hardier ones have gathered at different times to show their skill on the range, but their enthusiasm could not warm up the winds any and shooting with cold hands and in a cool breeze is sure not to be the best in the world.

Some of the faithful gathered at the range Sunday afternoon, but the day was so disagreeable that they tarried but a few moments. The results they accomplished were not at all satisfactory.

THE STAGE

TONIGHT'S ATTRACTIONS.

LYCEUM—"What Women Will Do," also tomorrow afternoon and evening.
METROPOLITAN—Frank E. Long company in "Among the Hills."

"WHAT WOMEN WILL DO."

At the Lyceum this evening Holde Bros.' big scenic production, "What Women Will Do," will be given at the Lyceum. The play deals with a keen story of life and advanture, and it is said that the audience is kept in a half-raising state of excitement from the rise of the curtain to its fall. Some of the very remarkable scenic surprises are, the sight of the audience, a wonderful leap for life into the boiling sea, a struggle for life or death on the rocky abyss, a very clever and interesting lifeboat and many other wonderful and novel effects.

FRANK E. LONG COMPANY.

"Among the Hills" will be given an elaborate presentation at the Metropolitan this evening, by the Frank E. Long Stock company. This company was greeted with another large audience last evening, when it gave "Wedded, but No Wife." "Among the Hills" will also be the bill tomorrow evening, while on Thursday and Friday evenings and at the Thursday matinee, "Lost and Won" will be the attraction. "The Sign of the Crucifix" will be given Saturday afternoon and night. The specialties between the acts are said to be excellent and those who have witnessed one of the Long company's productions are enthusiastic. Ladies have formed the greater part of the audiences thus far.

"PE-RU-NA WORKED SIMPLY MARVELOUS."

Suffered Severely With Headaches—Unable to Work.

Miss Lucy V. McGivney, 452 3rd Ave., Brooklyn, N. Y., writes:

"For many months I suffered severely from headaches and pains in the side and back, sometimes being unable to attend to my daily work.

"I am better, now, thanks to Peruna, and am as active as ever and have no more headaches.

"The way Peruna worked in my case was simply marvelous."

We have in our files many grateful letters from women who have suffered with the symptoms named above. Lack of space prevents our giving more than one testimonial here.

It is impossible to even approximate the great amount of suffering which Peruna has relieved, or the number of women who have been restored to health and strength by its faithful use.

Revised Formula.

"For a number of years requests have come to me from a multitude of grateful friends, urging that Peruna be given a slight laxative quality. I have been experimenting with a laxative addition for quite a length of time, and now feel gratified to announce to the friends of Peruna that I have incorporated such a quality in the medicine which, in my opinion, can only enhance its well-known beneficial character. DETECTIVE COMES FOR PRISONER

Indianapolis Officer Will Take Charge of Fugitive Arrested Here.

Detective D. R. Lancaster of Indianapolis, Ind., arrived in the city this morning to take charge of Charles M. Case, who was arrested here Saturday afternoon, at the request of the Indianapolis police.

According to the story told by Detective Lancaster, Case was in business with Edward H. Rentsch of Indianapolis. The partnership was closed out, and Rentsch continued the business employing Case as an assistant, on a salary.

Rentsch was called to Chicago on business, and in his absence Case is claimed to have cleaned out the safe of all the money and valuables it contained. He is said to have secured $700 in money, and a number of shares of the Indianapolis Wonderland company.

Case, when arrested, claimed that he was not guilty of any crime, and that he could satisfactorily explain everything. He claimed that the money was rightfully his, and he stated this morning that he could account for the Wonderland stock in a satisfactory manner.

He signified his willingness to return without extradition papers, and he will leave tomorrow morning in company with the detective for Indianapolis.

ALBERTSON'S

SO THE PEOPLE MAY KNOW!

Intelligent housewives all over the country are waking up to the fact that it is cheaper, quicker, cleaner, easier—better in every possible way—to COOK WITH GAS than any other fuel. With the vast improvement in gas ranges of late years, and the present low price of gas in Duluth, it is no longer economical to use any but a GAS RANGE. A GAS RANGE is cheaper in first cost than a coal range. It is also cheaper in last cost. It costs less to buy, costs less to operate, costs less to maintain. A Gas Range saves TIME, it saves WORRY, it saves MONEY, it saves WORK. Cooking with GAS is a modern method. No sensible woman can afford to do housekeeping without a GAS RANGE.

Toilers' Toilet

Nine-tenths of all the people at the Head of the Lakes live by the sweat of their brow. The store that hasn't the man in overalls (and his economical wife) as a friend and supporter might as well give up the ghost, for it doesn't stand a ghost of a show.

The Columbia is building up a tremendous business in overalls, working pants, gloves, shirts and everything else needed by men on railroad, dock, in mill, in shop, and by mechanics of all sorts, because this part of our business is not a side issue with us. In contrary we give it as much time, effort, thought and care as our highest priced Sunday suits, and our most exclusive Haberdashery receives.

We endeavor to give the workingmen the very best article for their money, to make a success by selling vast quantities at minimum prices, and offer garments which are of such a quality that being once bought and worn they will create a positive demand for others like them.

Examine our overalls, our 50 cent shirts, or our low-priced underwear, keeping in mind that there is just as much difference between cottons as wool, find out whether they are dyed with aniline or indigo, investigate whether the yardage has been skimped in a garment or not—and you will know why we succeed so well.

But we are not resting on our laurels. We are ever on the lookout for bettering the service. Our latest move is the securing of the agency of

Hansen's Perfect Working Gloves

They are "built like a hand" and we secured them because they fit into our scheme of giving workers the best there is.

SUICIDE CASES ARE DISCUSSED

At Investigation ot the Northwestern Mutual Life.

Milwaukee, May 15.—Second Vice President Skinner of the Northwestern Mutual Life Insurance company again appeared before the Wisconsin legislative committee today. He asked to be allowed to offer some evidence in regard to some of the suicide cases into which investigation has been made. In regard to the policy on the life of a Cleveland, O., man, Mr. Skinner produced a letter of a Chicago agent of the company, showing that the proposition for a "twisting" of the policy did not originate with agents of the Northwestern, but with the family of the insured man. This is the case where a man lapsed a policy in another company, and then took a new one in the Northwestern Mutual Life Insurance company. The man insured committed murder and then killed himself before the two-year suicide limit in his policy had expired, and thereby forfeited the insurance.

The taxation question was touched upon. Mr. Skinner said he thought his company was being unjustly taxed in Wisconsin. The taxes, he said, of insurance companies, should be limited to their share of the expense of maintaining the insurance department of the state.

GOVERNMENT BUYS GRAVEL

Maj. Charles L. Potter, United States engineer for this district, is issuing notices for bids for furnishing 1,000 yards of gravel to be used at the government reservation on the north side of the Duluth ship canal. About half the gravel will be used in manufacturing concrete, to be used in building sea walls, sidewalks and copings. The remainder will be used for filling purposes.

Experience has shown the government and all other persons or corporations who handle sand that it is a difficult material to hold, unless inclosed by walls that are perfectly tight. There are some places where the concrete pier blocks do not rest tight on the timber cribbing, and through these small apertures the sand has been gradually leaking. The coarse gravel will be thrown in the holes caused by the leakage, and will in turn be covered with soil.

The government has a crew of men at work constructing a boat landing, on the inner end of the north pier. There is a portion of the concrete wall, about seventy feet long, inside the curve, where heavy timbers are being bolted to the wall, and iron mooring posts are being put in. The landing will be used only for the government boats, and will be available when there is not a heavy swell running through the canal. A concrete walk will connect the landing with Lake avenue.

Sciatica Cured After Twenty Years of Torture.

For more than twenty years Mr. J. B. Massey of 3322 Clinton street, Minneapolis, Minn., was tortured by sciatica. The pain and suffering which he endured during this time is beyond comprehension. Nothing gave him any permanent relief until he used Chamberlain's Pain Balm. One application of that liniment relieved the pain and made sleep and rest possible, and less than one bottle has effected a permanent cure. If troubled with sciatica or rheumatism, why not try a 25-cent bottle of Pain Balm, and see for yourself how quickly it relieves the pain. For sale by all the leading druggists.

METHODIST MISSIONARIES

Kansas City, May 15.—One thousand missionaries, high church officials and visitors from all parts of the world, were in attendance at the opening session here today of the annual missionary convention of the Methodist Episcopal church for Missouri, Kansas and Oklahoma. Among those who attended the first session were nine bishops and missionaries from the Philippine Islands, China, Japan, India and Porto Rico. Others present were E. H. Conger, former United States minister to China, who will address the convention tomorrow. Dr. Frank Mason North, secretary of state evangelization of New York state, and Dr. John Goucher, president of the Woman's college, Baltimore.

One of the chief attractions of the gathering which is being held in convention hall, is an extensive educational exhibit composed of articles from every country on the globe and covering 5,000 square feet of the floor space. Today addresses were delivered by Bishop W. F. McDowell, Chicago; Bishop J. W. Bashford, Chicago; Dr. F. D. Gamewell of Pekin, China; Bishop Henry W. Warren of Denver, and Bishop W. F. Oldham of Chicago.

Will Ask for New Trial.

Monaghan & Scott, against whom a verdict was rendered in the district court some weeks ago in favor of Henry Holland of his claim for a commission on a damage case he claimed to have procured for the attorneys, has applied to the court for a stay of proceedings for twenty days. Mr. Monaghan states in his notice his intention to make a motion for a new trial and will perfect an appeal from the order of the court if the motion is denied. In his affidavit Mr. Monaghan claims that he has been using diligence to collect evidence to defeat the claims of Mr. Holland and in contradiction of some of the evidence admitted at the trial.

Only About Two Per Cent of 1904 Taxes Delinquent.

County Tax Sale Was One of Best Ever Held.

Only about 2 per cent of the real estate tax for 1904 on a valuation of $92,000,000 remains delinquent in St. Louis county. This is said to be one of the best records the county has ever made, and compares most favorably with the returns from any other county in the state.

The annual tax sale, held by the auditor yesterday, was also one of the best ever held in the county, the total receipts for the day running between $40,000 and $50,000. One outside buyer of tax titles is said to have invested between $8,000 and $10,000 in the properties the auditor offered for sale. The sale in the morning was of the delinquent city property, and in the afternoon of the delinquent land in the county outside the city. There was a good demand for tax titles, both inside and outside the city of Duluth, and practically all that was left for the state to bid in were delinquent parcels of land, where the unpaid taxes or assessments were in small amounts, too small, in fact, for the tax title purchasers to care anything about.

Previous to the sale, the county treasurer had collected about 94 per cent, so that the authorities figure about 98 per cent of the total real estate tax for 1904 has been paid in.

This sale is said to be the first ever held in the county, where tax title purchasers have shown an eagerness to buy to such an extent as to cut the annual rate of interest down to 11, 10 and 8 per cent, and in some instances to an even lower rate.

DAMAGE CASES REACH JURIES

Arguments Are Made in Thuren-Lounsberry Personal Injury Action.

The personal injury case of the heirs of Charles Thuren against G. H. Lounsberry, the contractor, was given to the jury this noon after the morning session of the court had been spent with the arguments of the attorneys. Thuren was accidentally killed in a fall from the top of the Masonic Temple during its construction. He stepped on a timber that broke and permitted him to fall to the ground. Thuren's sister, as administratrix of his estate, started suit against the contractor for damages in the sum of $5,000, alleging negligence on the contractor's part.

Mr. Lounsberry produced several witnesses who testified that at the time Thuren fell he was not carrying any working material, that he was a helper to the masons and was not obliged to cross the joist that broke and permitted him to fall.

The adverse possession case of Maria La Panta against Adolph Sjoselius was still on trial today. Testimony was produced by Mr. Sjoselius to support his claim that he has occupied the strip claimed by Mrs. La Panta, for more than fifteen years, believing it to be his own property. The case was expected to reach the jury today.

In Judge Cant's room the alleged timber trespass case of Stephen Harker against George Trader was nearing the close of its trial. The land involved is in section 31-52-14 and a judgment of $630 is asked.

BIG FLEET ABOUT DUE

Rush Expected Shortly in Boats Coming for Ore—All Steamers

Very Few if Any Grain Cargoes Offered—General News.

It is expected that the bulk of the large fleet which has been passing the Sault Sunday and yesterday will begin to arrive this afternoon and evening. However, many of these boats will go to ports lower down Lake Superior and not all of them by any means will hit Duluth. There are such ports as Marquette, Two Harbors and Ashland at which ore can be secured, and while a large number of the boats are expected here, the docks at these other places will be given something to do. There are very few tows, nearly all being steamers.

Plenty of ore cargoes are offered, but there are few or no grain cargoes.

The Union Towing company here has put on five tugs and tonight a sixth will be put in commission. As soon as the new wheel for the tug Superior arrives, she will be put in commission also, which makes the whole fleet at this point. All of the tugs have not been in commission since the beginning of the strike.

A FOOT LESS WATER.

Lake Erie Causes Apprehension Over Loss of Water Level.

Toledo people are scared to death that in a thousand years or so Toledo will be an inland town. But the only worry that vesselmen have is over the present low stage of water, the level of Lake Erie having dropped a foot and the rivers, including the Cuyahoga at Cleveland and the Maumee at Toledo and the Lime Kiln crossing are much shallower than last season. A Toledo paper says:

"Lake Erie lacks one foot of its usual depth this year. Geologists declare that eventually the lake will disappear, except for a channel, leaving Toledo, if in existence at that late day, an inland city. The drop of a foot in several harbors of the lake, including Toledo, may prove to be a serious thing.

"Capt. W. L. Varnum, in charge of the United States hydrographic station on Lake Erie, makes a definite explanation of the drop.

"Several things must be considered," he said. "Lack of rain and snowfall may be a reason. The Chicago drainage canal requires a great deal of water, and may be a cause. The water used by the great plants at Niagara Falls may be a factor. A federal commission is now investigating. It may prove a serious menace to navigation. In the Lime Kiln crossing in the Detroit river and in the Sault canal there never has been any more depth than needed."

ELLWOOD REPAIRED.

Big Steamer Has Damage Received Last Fall Fixed Up.

Repairs on the big steel trust steamer Ellwood, which was badly bumped in the big storm of last November, are almost completed at the yards of the Toledo Shipbuilding company.

Twenty-three damaged plates were taken off the boat's bottom, but all except four of these were re-rolled and replaced. All frames under these plates were replaced with new ones and she was also given new bilge ceiling plates. Other work on her was the fitting of new doors in the screen bulkhead and two strakes of new fender wales. All of the boat's hatch combings were also taken up and replaced. The woodwork was given an overhauling along with the other repairs.

The Ellwood entered the harbor about half an hour before the Matsafa made her fatal attempt to get in on the afternoon of Nov. 28 last. The Ellwood struck the north pier of the entry and sank just after she got into the harbor.

Boulder at Lime Kiln.

There is believed to be a big boulder on the floor of the Lime Kiln crossing at Detroit, as several steamers have hit some obstruction there, and several of them have hit it hard. The passenger steamer City of Cleveland hit so hard that it awakened the passengers and the crew that was off watch. An inspection of the crossing is being made with a view to determining what is in the channel and having it removed.

"BIG BILL" DEVERY TO START A BANK.

New York, May 15.—It was learned in financial circles yesterday that William S. Devery, former chief of police, is to start a bank in this city at an early date. "Big Bill" has so much money that he cannot use it all in the real estate business, it is said, and for some time has been considering the advisability of embarking in the banking business so that he may find employment for his capital.

Coupled with Mr. Devery's name, in connection with the new venture, is that of R. R. Moore, until recently president of New Amsterdam National bank. Not long ago Mr. Moore clashed with C. W. Morse, who is the controlling spirit in the New Amsterdam bank, with the result that Mr. Moore left the institution and Miles O'Brien was elected in his place.

TEN-YEAR-OLD BOY

Helena, Mont., May 15.—Carried through one of a half dozen eight-foot pipes, which are temporarily conveying the main channel of the Missouri river under the workings of the new dam, being constructed near here, was the experience of a 10-year-old boy named Potter, on Sunday.

The boy was playing on one of the temporary structures above the dam, and slipped and fell in. Three hundred or more men working at the scene made frantic efforts to save him before he would be carried through the pipes, which are about forty feet long.

The river is at high-water stage and when the boy was sucked into one of the pipes, all hope was abandoned. Boats were launched on the lower side and sent in pursuit. The body did not appear on the surface for some time, but was finally caught far below. The lad was uninjured beyond a few bruises received in being thrown against the sides of the pipe, he having had presence of mind to keep his mouth closed. This undoubtedly saved his life.

WEST DULUTH

CONCERNS THE ROCKS

Council Committees to Meet Wednesday to Discuss Point.

Desired to Do Something to Clear Menace Out of Way.

Alderman Watson S. Moore, chairman of the council committee on streets, alleys and sidewalks, together with the aldermen from the Sixth, Seventh and Eighth wards, recently appointed as an auxiliary committee on the Point of Rocks matter, has called this committee to meet Wednesday afternoon in the board of public works office to consider this dangerous point along the line of traffic in the West end.

Alderman Moore is quite anxious that something be done about the matter and the residents of the western part of the city are urging that the menace be removed in order that they may go to and from the center of the city without fear of death or injury.

West Duluthians are particularly fearful of the rock as they have probably more traffic on the street cars than others and it is noticeable that the street cars go more slowly past the Point of Rocks, prolonging the feeling of dread in passing there than at any other point on the line.

Must Believe It

When Well Known Duluth People Tell It So Plainly.

When public endorsement is made by a representative citizen of Duluth the proof is positive. You must believe it. Read this testimony. Every backache sufferer, every man, woman or child with any kidney trouble will find profit in the reading.

Edward J. Hoppman, mineralogist, living at 422 First St. W., Duluth, Minn., says: "The best proof of the merits of Doan's Kidney Pills that I can give is that since using this remedy for a bad attack of kidney trouble, some six years ago, I have not found it necessary to use any medicine at all for my kidneys. At the time when I began using them I suffered from sharp aching pains in the back and loins. The kidney secretions were disordered and the trouble told on my general health. Doan's Kidney Pills brought prompt relief and a final cure, and the permanence of the results thoroughly proves that this remedy can be depended upon in such cases."

The right arm was fractured and he is laid up today at his home, 4917 Grand avenue. He will be laid up for a few days.

WEST END

DULUTH MAN A SUICIDE

The Milwaukee papers of last Saturday contained an account of the suicide in that city of a man formerly a resident of the West end, and whose parents live here now. His funeral took place in Duluth this morning.

He was Louis B. Schiltz, who was employed in Milwaukee in Yahr & Lange's wholesale drug house. Schiltz worked in the West end for some time, leaving here about two years ago, and going to Milwaukee. While working in the West end, he was employed by Quayle, who at that time kept a drug store on West Superior street, between Garfield and Seventeenth avenues.

Schiltz was very well known among West enders in general and particularly among the young people as he was then quite a young man. He was popular and well liked and much regret is felt among his Duluth friends over his tragic ending.

According to reports received here Schiltz seemed to be in the best of spirits previous to his suicide. The act took place at the wholesale house for which he worked and was by the carbolic acid route. It is claimed that on the previous Wednesday he tried suicide by drinking wood alcohol, but was unsuccessful and even after that attempt he appeared perfectly cheerful. On Friday he joked with his companions at work and did not appear at all depressed. When it was discovered that he had taken carbolic acid it was too late to do anything to save him, so his second attempt at suicide proved successful.

Schiltz was 22 years of age and married. Besides his wife he leaves two children, one about 2 years of age and the other about 5 months. Mrs. Schiltz's parents live on Garfield avenue, Duluth. Their names could not be learned at this time.

The father of the unfortunate young man is Leonard Schiltz, who keeps a blacksmith shop on West Michigan street, between Twentieth and Twenty-first avenues. The funeral of the young man took place this morning and interment was had in Calvary cemetery. The body was was brought here yesterday.

TRANSFER STATION WANTED.

Commercial Club Will Ask One for Garfield Avenue.

The West End Commercial club will meet this evening at Sloan's hall, the meeting night having been changed from the second and fourth Fridays of each month to the first and third Tuesdays.

A number of important matters will likely come up for discussion, but a matter of which will likely be agitated to a considerable extent will be the matter of having the street railway company place a station at the corner of Garfield avenue and Superior street. That is a transfer point which is used by large numbers of people and at the present time there is no shelter, particularly for women and children, and if they transfer there they must wait in rain and wind in summer, and cold and snow in winter for their cars to come along; and it is asserted that the general thing is a lack of street car connection there so that waits are long and tiresome. It is desired that the street railway company establish a station for transferred passengers there so that some shelter may be afforded.

PAVING PROGRESSING.

Delayed on Account of Lack of Bricks Last Week.

The paving of West Superior street is again progressing well. The cause of the delay last week was the lack of bricks for the curbing of the street railway tracks. This brick could not be obtained because of the marine strike, and after waiting a few days in an attempt to get some, the street railway had to substitute rough granite blocks, which, while not appearing as smooth and neat, will suffice and make a strong protection for the tracks.

The work is being pushed and the paving is almost up to Garfield avenue now. All preparation is being made for the rushing of the work after that avenue is passed.

Coffee Hurts One in Three

It is difficult to make people believe that coffee is an absolute poison to at least one person out of every three, but people are slowly finding it out, although thousands of them suffer terribly before they discover the fact.

A New York hotel man says: "Each time after drinking coffee I became restless, nervous and excited, so that I was unable to sit five minutes in one place, was also inclined to vomit and suffered from loss of sleep, which got worse and worse.

"A lady said that perhaps coffee was the cause of my trouble, and suggested that I try Postum Food Coffee. I laughed at the thought that coffee hurt me, but she insisted so hard that I finally had some Postum made. I have been using it in place of coffee ever since, for I noticed that all my former nervousness and irritation disappeared. I began to sleep perfectly, and the Postum tasted as good or better than the old coffee, so what was the use of sticking to a beverage that was ruining me?

"One day on an excursion up the country I remarked to a young lady friend on her greatly improved appearance. She explained that some time before she had quit using coffee and taken Postum. She had gained a number of pounds and her former palpitation of the heart, humming in the ears, trembling of the hands and legs and other disagreeable feelings had disappeared. She recommended me to quit coffee and take Postum, and was very much surprised to find that I had already made the change.

"She said her brother had also received great benefits from leaving off coffee and taking on Postum Food Coffee."

"There's a reason."

RAILROADS

NEW TRAINS TO CHICAGO

Possible Plans of the Omaha and Southeastern Roads.

Competition Will Mean More Trains in Passenger Service.

Four direct Duluth-Chicago passenger trains a day is a possibility of next year at this time, where now there are only two trains that have a direct route through to the Windy City. Others go round by way of the Twin Cities and transfer over to the Chicago train at that point.

But with the Lake Superior & Southeastern in operation there will be sharp competition for the business, and both roads may find it necessary to have two trains each way every day, in order to keep their share of the business. Whether this is done or not, the Omaha will, it is believed, put another train on the Duluth-Chicago run before another year has passed. The business over this section of the line has grown to such proportions that at times the passenger equipment now in service has all it can do to handle the traffic, although the cars and trains as a whole are thoroughly up to date.

For a few months after the new line is opened up the Lake Superior & Southeastern will be handicapped to a certain extent in getting passenger business, by the fact that the roadbed will be new, and consequently a trifle rough, until the repair crews and constant service have put it in shape. If the Omaha puts on two trains, it is considered very likely that Southeastern will follow suit.

The Rainy Lake Road.

It is said that the Duluth, Rainy Lake & Winnipeg road will assist P. McDonnell in carrying out his contract for building the road northward to the border. The company, according to this arrangement, will work in conjunction and harmony with the contractor in pushing the work through to completion. It is now pretty certain that the line will run to Pither's Point, on the Rainy river, two miles east of International Falls. This route was announced before, but it was thought some deal might be made whereby the extension would run direct to International Falls and cross the river at that point, but this hasn't been brought about as yet.

Consolidates Freight Lines.

Montreal, May 15.—The Grand Trunk railroad has decided to consolidate its fast freight lines, among which are the Commercial Express, operating over the Erie and its connections; the Lackawanna-Grand Trunk, operating over the New York Central lines; the Grand Trunk Dispatch, over the West-Shore; the Reading, over the Lehigh Valley, and the National Dispatch, over the Grand Trunk exclusively. The last named, it is understood, will alone be maintained with branches, instead of the other parallel companies.

Merchants' Excursions.

Yesterday was the first day of the last series of merchants' spring excursions into Duluth, over the different railroads entering the city. At certain seasons of the year a special low round-trip fare is made for merchants, who have business dealings with Duluth houses, allowing the outside merchants an opportunity to visit the local wholesale houses at small expense. The rates are pretty well patronized, as a rule.

Railroad Personals.

R. B. Haase of the Baltimore & Ohio road is a visitor in the city.

S. J Bigelow, commercial agent of the Wisconsin Central, left today for a trip through the Michigan copper country.

ANOTHER FALLS BY THE WAYSIDE

Telephone Company Finds Expenses More Than It Looked for.

Philadelphia Press: Doylestown—By order of the court the Bucks County Trust company, trustee under the mortgagee, sold to R. D. Brown all the property and franchises of the Standard Telephone and Telegraph company. The price was $50,000.

This company, which went into the hands of a receiver a few months ago, has been operating less than four years. Due to Bell competition and inadequate rates, the company has not been able to meet its current operating expenses or to lay aside a fund to offset the usual depreciation of its plant.

The Bell company, with its larger volume of business and extended toll and long distance service, has placed itself in a strong position in this territory and is rapidly extending into the rural sections, connecting up all the farmers on a co-operative plan.

A striking feature with above-mentioned sale is the speed with which a telephone plant depreciates and emphasizes two facts—first, that the public prefers and demands a comprehensive telephone system reaching all points; and, second, that, like any other business, there are many expenses, of which depreciation is one, which telephone promoters either do not see or fail to explain to investors. It is extremely unlikely that the farmers of Bucks county can again be induced to put their savings into a competing telephone proposition.

REMOVING OLD WARSHIPS.

London, May 15.—The rapidity with which Great Britain is removing from the navy all but her really efficient warships was evidenced by a statement presented to parliament today, showing that no less than forty battleships and cruisers have practically been removed fro mthe list since 1902.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from ten drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials.

REFORM IN ELECTIONS

Move to Extend the Scope of the Federal Courts.

Important Legal Question Relating to State Officers Raised.

Washington, May 15.—Congress is inclined to take a firmer grasp on elections at which federal officers are voted for. The revelations before the committees to which contested election cases come for consideration are responsible for the movement for more stringent federal election laws. Almost every election contest involving a seat in the house of representatives discloses unfortunate and deplorable conditions with regard to the conduct of elections in many parts of the country. At one election case decided during this session the testimony showed that in a single congressional district thousands of names were registered from livery stables and barber shops, and votes cast in those names by repeaters, with the aid and under the protection of the local authorities. In the light of such revelations, members of congress feel that it is time for action, time to make an effort to place congressional elections on a higher plane.

The committee on the election of a president, vice president and representatives in congress has reported a bill which it hopes congress will pass before the session closes. The purpose of the bill is to extend the jurisdiction of the United States courts so as to include certain interferences with elections of members of congress, "and to punish certain unlawful and fraudulent acts prior to such elections, which are made criminal by the terms of the bill." The proposed legislation is based on the assumption that all the states have enacted registration laws. One of the chief objects of the bill is effectually to restrain and prevent illegal registration and voting, and the exercise of improper influence over the voter. The elections are left just where they are at present, in the custody of persons authorized by the state laws to conduct them, and no new duties are imposed on such officers.

Section 1 relates to registration, and makes it a crime—

Knowingly to personate another or register, or attempt to register, in his name.

To do any unlawful act to secure registration for one's self or for another.

To prevent by intimidation or bribery any person who has a lawful right to register from doing so.

To compel or induce by intimidation or bribery an officer to admit to registration any person not entitled thereto.

To interfere in any manner with an officer of registration in the discharge of his duty.

To induce by any unlawful means an officer of registration to violate or refuse to comply with his duty.

For a registration officer knowingly and willfully to refuse to register as a voter a person entitled to registration.

For an officer or other person having any duty to perform in ascertaining, declaring or certifying the result of a registration or election knowingly to neglect or refuse to perform such duty or violate any such duty.

For any person or officer to do any act unauthorized by law affecting registration or election or the certification thereof.

For any person to procure or advise commissions or omissions made criminal by this bill.

Section 2 interprets the registration referred to in section 1 of the act as registration for any elections at which a representative or delegate in congress or elector for president and vice-president is to be chosen, although such registration may also include qualifications of other elections.

Section 3 relates to voting, the conduct of elections, and to certifying the result. It makes it a crime:

Knowingly to impersonate another and vote or attempt to vote in his name.

To vote more than once at any election.

To vote at any place where one is not lawfully entitled to vote.

To vote without having a lawful right to vote.

To do any unlawful act to secure to one's self or to another an opportunity to vote.

To prevent, by intimidation, bribery or other unlawful means any voter from voting.

To induce by intimidation or bribery or other unlawful means any voter to refuse to vote.

To compel or induce by intimidation or bribery any election officer to receive an illegal vote.

To induce an election officer to violate his duty in ascertaining, declaring or certifying the result.

Knowingly to receive the vote of any person not entitled to vote.

Knowingly to refuse to receive a legal vote.

To procure or advise commissions or omissions, made criminal by this bill.

Section 4 provides that when it is proven that any person cast a ballot required by law to contain the name of a representative or delegate in congress at any election, where such officers are to be voted for, it shall be a prima facie evidence to convict any person charged with illegal voting under this to prove that the person so charged cast or offered to cast such a ballot.

Section 5 makes it unlawful for an election officer, whether appointed under federal or state law, to fail or refuse to perform any duty required by such law, or to make any false certificate or return, or to withhold, or destroy any certificate of record required by law, or to aid or advise the commissions or omissions of any of the specified acts before set forth as required or prohibited.

An important legal question which arises in connection with the proposed legislation is whether congress may impose on state officers charged with the performance of duties toward the government of the United States in connection with the election of representatives in congress additional limitations, directions and penalties designed to secure the faithful performance of those duties, and may through the instrumentalities of the United States courts punish failure to perform these duties. The committee declared in its report on the bill that "no one would doubt that congress might take entire charge of the conduct of elections at which federal officers are voted for." Congress, it maintains, might prescribe the time, place and method of elections and provide for appointing the officers to conduct them. In considering this phase of the subject further the committee says:

"May not congress, while leaving the time, place and manner of the election to be determined by state laws, and the elections to be regulated by state law, and conducted by officers of state selection and appointment, confer upon the courts of the United States the power to punish violations of duty on the part of such officers in the conduct of national elections and registration thereof? Is there no middle ground between absolute control by the United States government of elections for the offices mentioned and the entire abandonment by the government of the United States of all right and authority whatsoever in regard to the elections of its popular branch of congress?"

The committee says it "is useless to shut one's eyes to the conditions which actually exist, and the only proper course to take under such circumstances is to enact such remedial legislation as will serve to make the continuance of these conditions impossible."

This same committee has refused to report the so-called publicity bill—the bill which proposed to make it compulsory to give publicity to campaign contributions and expenditures. The only hope of any legislation dealing with campaign contributions lies in the Foraker bill reported favorably in the senate, which makes it unlawful for corporations to contribute, or perhaps in the Rucker bill introduced in the house. It seems doubtful whether this legislation will be enacted. Ostensibly most of the senators are for it, but some feel they may need the corporations to "help out" in a campaign in case of an emergency.

FRATER BECOMES INDIAN AGENT

Brainerd State Senator Goes to Leech Lake Reservation.

Washington, May 15.—State Senator John Frater of Brainerd has been appointed Indian agent for the Leech Lake reservation, Minnesota, succeeding Special Agent McNichols, who has been in charge since the resignation of Maj. Scott.

Frater's candidacy was urged by Representative Buckman, and he was recommended for the appointment by Senators Nelson and Clapp. H. A. Rider of Little Falls was considered in connection with the place, but finally decided that he was satisfied with his job as deputy marshal.

F. O'Malley is here to fight the cancellation of the allotments of himself and wife in the White Earth reservation. It is claimed that O'Malley and his wife do not belong to the band of Chippewas residing on the reservation and therefore are not entitled to allotments.

ZION CITY FACTIONS TO FIGHT TO A FINISH.

Chicago, May 15.—All overtures for a peaceful compromise of the controversy over the control of Zion City were called off yesterday, and General Overseer Voliva and his associates have decided to fight for supremacy in the courts. Application will be made in court for the dissolution of the temporary injunction recently granted to Dowie. This will bring the crisis that will determine whether John Alexander Dowie shall own and rule Zion or whether the present administration shall continue in power.

For several days Voliva and his lieutenants have waited for Dowie and his leaders to accept the proposition made by the court to place the Zion estate in control of three trustees, one named by each of the contestants and the third by the court. The failure of Dowie to accept threatened another crisis for Zion and the decision to call the peace negotiations off was the result. This was prompted largely by threats of Zion investors heretofore held in leash by Voliva to begin bankruptcy proceedings against Dowie and have a receiver appointed for Zion City industries.

MONUMENT FOR "WHITE BEAVER."

La Crosse, Wis., May 15.—Though Col. D. Frank Powell (White Beaver), was buried in Los Angeles, a monument will be erected in La Crosse. A movement is under way to procure a large marble image of a beaver, which will be placed in a park here, to be paid for by public subscription.

Piles Cured

As Easily As a Cough; Painlessly, Quickly and Without Cutting.

Trail Package Mailed Free.

The agony and suffering in piles is so great, that if a surgical operation was a certain cure (which it isn't), and there was no other means of relief, some persons might be willing to take the chance of blood poisoning or lockjaw.

But, now that the Pyramid Pile Cure has been discovered and has been proven to be a quick and certain means of relief and lasting cure, there is no excuse for risking your life.

Does Pyramid Pile Cure give immediate relief? Does it cure? Try it and prove it to yourself as thousands have done before you. Then go to your druggist and get a 50 cent box and complete the cure.

Pyramid Pile Cure will cure you and do it with a certainty and a rapidity that will astonish you.

Take, for example, the case of Mr. Benjamin Shaw, Postmaster of Bland, Mo. We quote his own words in his letter of Oct. 21, 1905: "I was in great agony of mind and body. In the meantime, a gentleman told me of the virtue of your Pyramid remedy. I fortunately found it at a drug store, and by the next morning I did not feel that any operation was necessary, and in three days I was able to return home, and a complete cure was accomplished, to my great satisfaction and the surprise of the physician."

For a trial package send your name and address to the Pyramid Drug Co., 481 Pyramid building, Marshall, Michigan, and you will get a trial package by return mail. No marks.

THE WORLD OF SPORTS

WILL CARRY FOURTEEN

Duluth Team Will Have Big Squad on Fargo Trip.

Three Men Are Released and Three New Ones Arrive.

Fourteen men will be carried by the Duluth team, when it leaves for Fargo tomorrow night, to open the season of the Copper Country and Northern league there, on Thursday.

The White Sox will have a pitching staff of five men, including Treadway, Krick, Ferguson, Morton and Pool.

"The story that we have lost Treadway is not correct," said O'Dea this morning. "He's due to pitch the second game against Fargo, and the report that Winnipeg has him, is wrong. We have been assured that he would be awarded to us."

Duluth has an embarrassment of riches in shortstops. Both Bruebner and Newman arrived last night, and Graham is still being held. Newman delayed so long in accepting terms, that O'Dea had given him up, and signed Gruebner. Then Newman suddenly changed his mind again, and came in on the same train with Gruebner, last night.

Graham is out of the game with a lame arm, but the Duluth club will keep a string on him, and when he recovers, he can be called upon if needed. He is a valuable man, and if his arm were in shape, a place would be found for him in the infield.

Pitcher Nordstrom, Catcher Hunchie and Outfielder Baer were released last night, and will return to Iowa. Adams will do the backstop work for the Sox, and Barto will take Baer's place in the outfield. The other two outfielders will be Ludwig and McCormick, and Menlee may yet be secured.

McCormick is developing into a long distance hitter, having secured four homerun hits since coming to Duluth. He can also be used as a substitute pitcher if necessary. He is a southpaw and formerly twirled for a Chicago independent team.

"I am well satisfied with the showing made at Hibbing," said O'Dea, this morning. "The boys played two errorless games. Ferguson pitched a phenomenal game on Saturday, and we couldn't find him. Then on Sunday, Disch was too much for us. There is no question but that he was Disch. He came down on the train with us, and several of the boys knew him.

"If the team plays as well on this trip as it did at Hibbing, I will be satisfied."

This afternoon and tomorrow the Sox will play the Millers at Athletic park, and tomorrow night will leave for Fargo.

The following is a list of the players who will be taken along: Pitchers, Treadway, Krick, Morton, Pool and Ferguson; catcher, Adams; first base, O'Dea; second base, Livingstone; shortstops, Newman and Gruebner; third base, Lovett; outfielders, McCormick, Ludwig and Barto.

A CRICKET LEAGUE

Hancock, Mich., May 15.—(Special to The Herald.)—Although cricket is by no means new to the Copper country, with its considerable English population, this is the first season that the various clubs have been banded together in a league, under the auspices of which they will play a regular schedule of games. The teams are those of Trimountain, Painesdale, Atlantic, Tamarack, Kearsarge and Portage Lake. All six clubs are made up of good material, the great majority of the players being cricketers who learned the game in England. The playing rules of the Marylebone club of England have been adopted.

Association football, the "socker" game, is being played to a great extent in the mining locations of the Copper country, and there are a number of strong teams.

ELEVEN TEAMS

To Compete in the Upper Peninsula Interscholastic Meet.

Lake Linden, Mich., May 15.—(Special to The Herald.)—It is the expectation now that teams representing eleven different communities in Upper Michigan will contest for the honors at the annual track meet of the Upper Peninsula Interscholastic association at Ishpeming, Saturday, June 2. The participants will include promising young athletes from Calumet, Menominee, Hancock, Bessemer, Ironwood, Norway, Escanaba, Sault Ste. Marie, Marquette, Ishpeming and Negaunee. Houghton was also to have been entered, but the recent accident to Carlos Haug, the captain, who suffered a fractured skull, the result of being struck by a hammer while at practice, is considered to have put that team out of the games this year. Bessemer, Ishpeming, Menominee and Escanaba are expected to show up strong, but there will be general surprise if the honors are not taken by Calumet. The Copper country team won last year's meet, Capt. Victor Curto alone scoring seventeen points, and it is stronger this spring than last. An innovation this year is the fact that the meet will not be held on Memorial day, the date selected in the past.

ACCIDENTS AT TWO HARBORS

Two Men Take Headers in the Ore Pockets.

Two Harbors, Minn., May 15.—Ole Barene took a header into an ore pocket and sustained some bad bruises, but was not fatally injured. He was dumping a car of ore, and lost his balance. The pocket into which he fell contained two loads of hard ore from Ely. He was taken to the Budd hospital, where he is being cared for.

Waino Parrin, a laborer on the ore docks, sustained serious injury by falling through an ore car which he was unloading direct into a boat. He went through the car and dropped to the bottom of the pocket, and as the door at the bottom of the pocket he slid down the chute into the hold of the steamer Simon J. Murphy. He was taken to the Budd hospital.

IRELAND MAY NOT BECOME CARDINAL

Dinner by the American Ambassador Offended the Vatican.

Rome, May 15.—Mgr. Ireland, archbishop of St. Paul, who left this city recently on his return to the United States, made many additional friends while here, but the opinion is nevertheless held in Vatican circles that his promotion to the Sacred college has become impossible. The Vatican might have overlooked some of the American prelate's liberal utterances in the past, such as his advocacy of the renunciation of the claims to temporal power on the part of the pope, and his stand taken on the educational question in Minnesota. While in Rome, however, Mgr. Ireland was entertained at dinner by the American ambassador to Italy, and four cardinals honored him by being present. The fact that an ambassador to the Italian king was able to entertain such prominent prelates in the city of the popes has given umbrage to the Vatican authorities, and it is believed that the American archbishop will be made the scapegoat, even if the cardinals concerned are not publicly reprimanded. It has even been suggested here that the dinner was arranged to give practical reiteration to Mgr. Ireland's opinion regarding the temporal power, but this the Vatican authorities are said not to believe.

As an offset to the political effect of the dinner just referred to and to affirm once more that the pope is the only legal sovereign of Rome, an intimation of tremendous importance has just been made, semi-officially, at the Vatican. It is to the effect that all necessary arrangements have now been made for a visit to the Vatican by the king of Spain and his bride during their honeymoon. The visit will be made during the summer and the royal couple will be received with great honor. Arrangements are made that the king shall be a guest of the Spanish embassy to the Vatican, and that during his short stay in Rome he shall absolutely ignore the Italian officials. It is the opinion in Vatican circles that a visit to the pope by a Catholic reigning sovereign will practically constitute a new affirmation of the rights of the pope to temporal supremacy over the city of Rome.

Several apostolic visitors have been sent by the pope since Easter to the dioceses of central Italy, and it is expected that many reforms will result from their reports. In Rome itself several apostolic visitors are investigating the religious orders and communities, and it is rumored that the pope is considering sweeping reforms among them. Several female communities have already been prohibited from receiving novices and will therefore gradually go out of existence. Several male religious orders have received intimation from the Vatican that their superiors and generals will hereafter be appointed by the Vatican, and not elected by the members of the order until reforms suggested by the apostolic visitors shall have been adopted. It is also known that the pope intends to abolish entirely some of the French religious communities which have settled here and which have no definite religious work.

LOCHREN STAYS ON THE BENCH

Veteran Jurist to Continue as United States District Judge.

Minneapolis, May 15.—Judge William Lochren will continue on the bench of the United States district court.

For some months the judge has been in doubt as to his course. He has been on the federal bench ten years, and had felt for a time that the state of his health might not permit him to continue.

On May 21 it will become optional under the law whether he retires from active service. Fifty years ago this summer Judge Lochren made his first appearance at the Minnesota bar, and next fall it will be twenty-five years since he took his place upon the bench in the district court of this judicial district. The recent meeting of the Minnesota State Bar association opportunely fell upon his 74th birthday, and the ovation that was tendered to him at that time must remain for years as the finest honor bestowed by the bar of this commonwealth to one of its number. At that time Judge Lochren announced that he had not yet determined whether he would retire from the bench or not, but that it would be largely determined by the condition of his health.

But Judge Lochren's health has been steadily improving of late, and much of his old-time vigor and enthusiasm for his work has returned. He has been attending to his duties as regularly as of yore, and shows no signs of needing a protracted vacation.

Accordingly the veteran jurist has decided to retain his seat for an indefinite period.

It is Dangerous to Neglect a Cold.

How often do we hear it remarked: "It's only a cold," and a few days later learn that the man is on his back with pneumonia. This is of such common occurrence that a cold, however slight, should not be disregarded. Chamberlain's Cough Remedy counteracts any tendency of a cold to result in pneumonia, and has gained its great popularity and extensive sale by its prompt cures of this most common ailment. It always cures and is pleasant to take. For sale by all leading druggists.

HIS PAROLE EXPIRES.

Theodore C. Idell Will be Returned to State Asylum.

Walking into the county jail yesterday afternoon, removing his coat and announcing his intention to remain, Theordore C. Idell, aged 52 years, told the jailors that he knew the champion lightweight and heavyweight liars of America, could whip Jim Jeffries and invent more rat traps than any other living man.

His engagement to stay at the jail was not cancelled, and he was shown to a cell which he will occupy until the attendants from the state asylum at Fergus Falls reach the city to take him back to that institution.

Idell was paroled from the state hospital about two weeks ago, having been committed last March. Since his return to Duluth he has been living with his family on East Fourth street.

His mania is said to be inventions and he claims to own a large number.

CARL SCHURZ.

Perhaps no American citizen of foreign birth has been more eminent in American affairs than Carl Schurz, the statesman, publicist, reformer and student of affairs who passed away yesterday morning after a long, vigorous and useful life. Few have stamped their personalities so permanently upon the history of their adopted country.

He was certainly the most widely known of that gallant band of liberty-loving Germans who came to this country to escape the consequences of their bold strike for freedom in the revolution of 1848. This element has been a strong factor in the communities in which it settled, like St. Louis and Milwaukee. Perhaps no single band of immigrants in the history of the country had a higher average, and Carl Schurz was one of its most notable members. Yet probably no German citizen of the United States has been more fiercley criticised, by his own people as well as by others, than he. He was a man of most positive character, fiercely devoted to his ideals, and careless of public criticism in his devotion to them. His singleness of purpose in pursuing his aims for the betterment of condtions led him to make frequent changes of party, so that he became widely known as a mugwump of mugwumps. He was a strong anti-slavery reformer, and in later years a firm civil service reform advocate.

Fleeing his home land in 1849, after several years on the continent he came to Philadelphia, and remained there three years. Then he settled in Watertown, Wis., and was in at the organization of the Republican party, running on that ticket unsuccessfully for lieutenant-governor of Wisconsin in 1857. He took an active part in the presidential canvass of 1860, and President Lincoln made him minister to Spain. He resigned in December, 1861, however, to enter the army. He took a valiant part in the struggle between North and South, and became a major-general of volunteers.

At the close of the war President Johnson sent him as a commissioner to find out the condition of the Southern states. Then he became Washington correspondent of the New York Tribune, and in 1866 he founded the Post newspaper at Detroit. In 1867 he became editor of the Westliche Post, a German newspaper of St. Louis, and in 1869 was made United States senator from Missouri. In 1872 he took a leading part in the organization of the Liberal party and presided over the convention that nominated Horace Greeley for president. President Hayes made him secretary of the interior, in which position he put his civil service reform ideas into effect by establishing competitive examinations for positions in his department.

In later years his energy has been applied to editorial and literary work. He was editor of the New York Evening Post and Harper's Weekly. He published several important books on political and sociological subjects, and his autobiography, now running as a serial in a magazine, will be shortly issued in book form. It should form an important contribution to the history of two nations.

SOMETHING RADICALLY WRONG.

According to a recent judicial interpretation, the new code contains at least one very bad flaw, one that sets justice at naught and would make of the law court a nest of corruption if it were allowed to remain.

A man in St. Paul was sentenced in April to five months in jail for attempting to bribe a juror, and he was liberated by the supreme court a few days ago through unavoidable compliance with the provisions of the new code. Section 4648 of the revised statutes of 1905 divides contempt into two kinds, "direct" and "constructive". The former is contempt committed in the presence of the court, and of which it has personal knowledge, and is punishable by a fine of $250 or six months in jail, or by both such fine and imprisonment. The other kind of contempt, which is contempt committed beyond the court's personal observation, is punished only by a fine of $50, and no imprisonment.

And the court did not see the defendant try to bribe a juror, so according to the supreme court the most it could do was to impose a fine of $50 for constructive contempt.

Obviously, there is something ridiculously wrong here. As Judge Kelly of the Ramsey county district court put it, "A judge may fine a man $250 and send him to jail for six months for making a face at the court, but if he strikes at the very foundation of justice and the security of civil rights by an unsuccessful attempt at bribery, there is nothing to do but give him a paltry fine and let him go."

It would seem that bribing a juror ought to be something much more serious than contempt of court. The security of civilization and the assurance of peace and the safe possession of property rest in a large measure upon the courts and the clarity of their justice. If men can with impunity approach jurors and seek to pollute the steam of justice at its fountain head, this security immediately becomes unsettled.

Bribery of jurors, or attempt at bribery, ought to be a felony, not a misdemeanor. It ought to merit five years in the penitentiary, rather than six months in a jail. It is more than contempt of court. It is contempt of society and all its most priceless institutions. It is an assault upon justice in its very stronghold, and a menace of mein most unpleasant.

It is difficult to see how such an anomalous condition could arise. It ought to be, and no doubt will be, remedied at the next session of the legislature.

S. S. McClure and John S. Phillips, of McClure, Phillips & Co., publishers of McClure's Magazine, have split on the "muck-rake" question, Mr. Phillips retiring to start a new magazine with Lincoln Steffens, Ida M. Tarbell and Ray Stannard Baker to carry out the exposure idea. McClure's, which has rendered valuable service in exposing rascality will take another tack, probably.

IRON IS KING.

The iron and steel exports of this country have grown tenfold since 1870, and practically one-third since 1900, while for the first eight months of the present fiscal year they were six times as much as our imports of like commodities during the same period. These facts are from statistics issued by the federal bureau of statistics, and they show how firmly iron is seated upon its throne as king of metals.

In 1870 we exported iron and steel to the value of $18,000,000, and imported $37,400,000, or more than twice our exports. In 1890 our exports were still below the imports, the former being $27,000,000 and the latter $45,000,000. In 1900, however, things had radically changed. Our imports had jumped to $130,000,000, while the imports had dropped to $20,400,000. In 1905 the exports were $142,900,000 and the imports $26,400,000, and for the first eight months of the calendar year of 1906 the exports were $102,000,000 and the imports $18,000,000.

It is our production of pig iron, apparently, that has brought about this startling change in the relative position of imports and exports. In 1870 pig iron production was 1,700,000 tons; in 1890 it was 9,200,000 tons; in 1900 it was 13,800,000 tons, while in 1905 it was 23,000,000 tons. The production of steel increased from 68,750 tons in 1870 to 4,250,000 tons in 1890, 10,000,000 tons in 1900, and 14,000,000 tons in 1904, the latest year for which figures are obtainable.

The total value of our iron and steel was $207,000,000 in 1870, $297,000,000 in 1880, $479,000,000 in 1890, and $836,000,000 in 1900. This is a gain of more than 300 per cent in only thirty years, and a gain of $357,000,000 in only a decade. This shows why our imports of iron and steel sank steadily downward, and why our exports leaped swiftly upward.

This region has produced much of the iron ore that has made these astonishing figures possible, but it would be a good deal more highly appreciated if Duluth could have had more to do with the ore after it was mined. A few smelters and factories located in Duluth might not affect the exports materially, but they could take care of a lot of interior consumption, and thus leave Eastern products more free to seek the world's markets. Incidentally, they would have given Duluth and Minnesota a larger share of the profit from the exploitation of their great mineral wealth.

Duluth has not abandoned the hope that some of this immense industry will be transferred here before the supplies of raw materials are all gone.

A CURIOUS ANOMALY.

The bill prohibiting corporations from contributing to campaign funds, which has been reported out of committee into the senate, is a strong measure, apparently, and one that should do the business if it is properly enforced—that pregnant "if" that so sadly confuses our politics and society in this country. So strong a bill is it that the Indianapolis News says:

"The bill is so good that it is hard to believe it will pass."

That phrase seems to throw a flood of light upon our congress down at Washington. Why should it be that every time a particularly good bill comes up, it is accompanied by depressing doubts of its passage? And the better the bill, and the more popular, the greater the doubt of its success.

This does not seem just right. One would think, looking at it from an abstract viewpoint, that a good bill, one that was popular and that seemed bound to afford relief to the people and make their condition better, would be hailed with delight by the statesmen who are in congress to represent and serve the people. One would naturally imagine that the better the bill the quicker it would be passed. But it does not work that way. The railroad rate bill is a good bill, one that is popular, and one that will serve to greatly improve the condition of the people. But the men sent down to congress by the people have not hailed it with delight, but with fear and trembling and evasion and more or less concealed hostility.

The denatured alcohol bill is a splendid bill. By taking the tax off alcohol unfit for drink but fit for light and power and a horde of useful purposes, innumerable benefits would result. But while the house has passed it, in the senate it has fallen into the hands of Senator Aldrich. Denatured alcohol, free of tax, would compete with kerosene and gasoline, and Senator Aldrich's relation-in-law, the Standard Oil company, controls these commodities. So the chances are that Senator Aldrich will absentmindedly destroy this meritorious bill, and deny the people the boon they seek from these who should be their servants, not their masters.

The bill prohibiting corporations from contributing to campaign funds is a most excellent bill. It is before the senate. Its excellent promises of reform are enough to condemn it in the senatorial eye, so that the chances are that it will have a stormy career, ending in tragedy.

It is worth thinking over, this proposition that the better the bill, the poorer are its chances of passing.

HOTEL GOSSIP.

"Milwaukee's Wonderland park will open May 19," said D. S. Lyons of Milwaukee, at the McKay. "Workmen have been beautifying the park since the frost days passed. It will be much more elaborate this year than it was last. City water has been introduced into the park by the management, and all the cinder paths have been done away with and crushed stone walks have taken their place. An automobile station and carriage accommodations have been provided, and the attractions have been added to.

"All this expenditure of money at Milwaukee should be encouraging to the backers of Duluth's amusement park, for if such a place pays there, there is no particular reason why it shouldn't be a paying proposition up here. The Milwaukee enterprise has been a payer from the start, and I guess the same thing is true of all other places of the kind, wherever they have been started.

"It has often struck me that a good beer garden would be a money-maker in Duluth. You haven't anything of the kind here, have you? In Milwaukee there are several of them. Schlitz has the swellest place. A person can go there and hear some of the best music afloat. The decorations are something beautiful; and the place is patronized by good people, too. There isn't anything objectionable about it. A person merely goes in, sits down at a table and sips a glass of beer. You never see a drunken person around. It is always orderly, and affords a pleasant resting place where one may while away an hour or two."

"Some queer things happen around railroad ticket offices sometimes," said a traveling passenger agent at the Spalding. "Down in St. Paul a few years ago a ticket agent friend of mine found an extreme case of economy in one of the patrons of the road.

"A man appeared at the ticket office and said he wanted two tickets for St. Cloud. He desired one for himself an one for a corpse of which he had charge. The agent was getting ready to pull out two first-class tickets from the rack, when the man asked him if there were no cheap rates to St. Cloud at that time. The agent said there were excursion tickets, but remarked that he couldn't see why any one should want an excursion ticket for a corpse.

"'Oh, that's all right,' said the man. 'You see, the corpse is here, and we are going to bury it here. We had lots of friends in St. Cloud. It would cost a lot of money among them to come here to the funeral. My idea is to take the corpse to St. Cloud, hold the services there, and bring the body back to St. Paul for burial.'

"That was actually done. There is a tendency among all men to imitate, but there is an agent in Chicago who no longer indulges in the custom. A man with a hairlip appeared at the window and asked about connections. The agen twisted his lip into the same shape as that of the other fellow and replied in the same tone. The agene found that the man who was possessed with the infirmity was well educated and in good circumstances. The stranger continued to ask questions for about half an hour, and during this long period the agent had to twist his upper lip, and make believe there was an impediment in his speech. He did not dare to talk in his natural manner for fear the man would catch on and report him to the higher officials. At the end of half an hour the man behind the window was nearly exhausted answering questions through his twisted mouth. He has tried few imitations since that time."

A Young Artist.

Little Willie made a drawing.
And he showed mamma with pride,
"What is that?" he asked, exultant,
"'Tis a puppy," she replied.

Then he took it to his father,
Who exclaimed: "I wonder, now!
It's quadruped for certain,
I should say it was a cow."

Willie wondered that his parents
Did so strangely disagree.
"It was meant to be the sofa
In the parlor," murmured he.

"Why Don't Ye Habla?"

Pittsburg Dispatch: An Irishman brings this story fresh from Panama: "There's an Irish boss named Clancy in charge of a lot of native laborers employed on the big ditch. He's struggling with Spanish, and is very proud of knowing a for'n language. One morning not a laborer showed up. Clancy fretted and fumed all day. Next morning they appeared as usual, explaining sheepishly that it had been the fiesta of Nuestra Senora de la Chandelahra and they couldn't possibly work on a holy day. 'Well, it's all right,' said Clancy, 'but when ye savvy in the noches that ye can trabajar on the manana, why the h— don't ye habla?'"

Don't Worry, My Brother.

Don't worry, my brother; don't threaten to blow
Your brains out because you a multitude owe—
Because tradesmen's duns you're receiving each day
And can't reckon when you'll be able to pay.

There's in such straits as yours but one sensible plan,
And that's not to worry. One's foolish who frets.

THE WEATHER.

While the temperature moderated last night, and this morning was mild, the wind still sticks in the northeast, and the clouds hang tenaciously overhead. The weather man is not looking for anything very different right away, either. He says there will be showers and thunder storms tomorrow, and possibly tonight, that it will be cooler tomorrow, and that there will be fresh and brisk northeasterly winds. Last night's lowest temperature was 42 degs., and yesterday's highest was 50 degs. Says Mr. Richardson of conditions:

"The North Pacific and South Dakota disturbances have apparently joined forces, forming a low pressure area that is this morning centrul over Montana and Wyoming, and causing rains throughout the entire Northwest, Eastern Nebraska, Eastern Kansas and Oklahoma, and also milder temperatures over Minnesota and Wisconsin. The barometer being high to the eastward and low in the West favors a continuance of easterly winds in this locality tonight and Wednesday, probably attended by local thunderstorms."

Mark Twain's "Scoop."

Chicago Chronicle: Mark Twain once lost a position through a practical joke. It was when he was a sub-editor on a California paper, and his friends used to swell his record by giving him exclusive news. One night a friend brought in an account of a "smash-up," and Mark, tickled with the idea of a "scoop," sent it up without reading. The next day people wondered what happened to good Mr. Schuyler, for this is what appeared:

"Distressing Accident.—Last evening about 6 o'clock as William Schuyler, an old and respected citizen of South Park, was leaving his residence to go down town, as has been his custom for many years, with the exception of only a short interval in the spring of 1850, during which he was confined to his bed by injuries in trying to stop a runaway horse by thoughtlessly placing himself in its way and throwing up his hands and shouting, which, if he had done so a single minute sooner, must have envitably frightened the animal still more instead of checking its speed, although disastrous enough to himself, as it was, and rendered more melancholy and distressing by reason of the presence of his wife's mother, who was there and saw the sad occurrence, notwithstanding it is at least likely, though not necessarily so, that she should be reconnoitering in another direction when accidents occur, not being vivacious, and on the lookout as a general thing, but even the reverse, as her own mother is said to have stated, who is no more, but died in the full hope of a glorious resurrection, upward of three years ago, aged 86, being a Christian woman without guile, as it were, or property, in consequence of a fire in 1849, which destroyed every thing she had in the world. But such is life. Let us all take warning by this solemn occurrence, and let us so endeavor to conduct ourselves that when we come to die, we can do it. Let us place our hands upon our hearts and say with earnestness and sincerity, that from this day forth, we will beware of the flowing bowl."

Immediate Application.

New York Sun: Mr. Man—Tell you what, old fellow, this disaster has been a lesson to all doubting souls. Humanity shines out splendidly in these days of greed and graft, and revives our faith in human nature—er—sorry, old man, but I can't lend you a quarter.

Men.

In men whom men declare divine
I find so much of sin and blot,
In men whom others class as ill
I find so much of goodness still,
I hesitate to draw the line
Where God has not.
—CLOUGH.

Lazy.

It is ten o'clock
An' no bait ain't dug,
An' there ain't no joy
In the old brown jug,
An' there ain't no tellin'
How tired I be,
Oh, hee—oh-heigh-oh
My—oh—me!—

An' I'm noddin' here
With a derned ol' book,
When I ought to be
In a bayou-crook
Where the shadows are,
An' sun-flecks fall
Like blobs o' gold
And the wild birds call.

It is most too late
For to go out now,
An' there ain't no bait
Dug anyhow;
An', if 'twa'n't too late,
It seems to me
I'm too derned lazy—oh—
My!—oh—gee!

I'm goin' to sprawl
Here on the floor,
An' not give a thought
To the fish no more,
And sleep and dream,
Till the shadows fall,
That I'm fishin' out
Where the wild birds call.

Yes, it seems to me
That's the best way
For to spend a warm,
Old springtime day,
Just layin' around
The house like me—
Oh—hee—heigh-o—
Oh, my!—oh—gee!

Oh, dern it all,
I'm a weary duck!
I s'pose I'm missin'
Some dandy luck
Where the fishes bite
An' the breezes blow,
But I'm goin' to sleep,
Oh—hee—heigh-o!

TWENTY YEARS AGO.

A young attorney named Smith, Debbage committed suicide in his room at the residence of Herman Oswald on Third avenue west, near First street, shortly before 7 o'clock yesterday morning. His room adjoined that of L. R. Bondy and Capt. Henri Dewitt. The latter gentleman was awakened by the report of the pistol and Mr. Debbage was found dead. Deceased had been in Duluth four months and came from Brooklyn, N. Y. His parents are dead and an uncle lives at Oswego, C. M. Parkhurst was his fellow student at Hamilton college several years ago. He was about 28 years of age. A. J. Whiteman was also his college mate at Williams for two years. His health was poor and this made him despondent. The Duluth bar held a meeting this afternoon at Judge Stevens' office and made arrangements for the funeral.

Success crowned the dance which the bachelors gave at the Kitchi Gammi club room last night. The entertainers were Isaac P. Beck, Albert S. Chase, Charles W. Culver, Thomas Cullyford, William O. Hughart, Jr., Monroe Nichols, H. F. Thompson, Charlemagne Tower, Jr., Alonzo J. Whiteman and Charles B. Woodruff.

The Duluth ball team administered a sound drubbing to the Minneapolis team yesterday, the score being 25 to 14. Baldwin pitched for Duluth. Minneapolis made ten errors and Duluth nine.

For almost a week Duluth has been hampered in lake traffic and in all classes of commercial pursuits by a season of the most despicable weather. The early opening of navigation this year, of which Duluthians were wont to boast, proved only an aggravation, as since the opening day, May 4, we have scarcely had twelve hours of continuous fair weather. The ice has repeatedly moved just far enough away to allow a few vessels to enter or clear port and then returned with an apparently increased determination to obstruct navigation. The ice has been moving out steadily today, and once more the lake is open.

O. P. Stearns to the Lakeside Land company, lots and lands in township 60, sections 12 and 13, $70,326.

Heirs of Bela T. Hastings to H. H. Bell, lots 13 and 14, block 91, and lots 1 and 2, block 113, Portland division, $900.

J. O. Smith to H. H. Bell, lots 15 and 16, block 91, Portland division, $750.

The Republican state committee met yesterday in St. Paul and decided to hold a late convention, but did not fix the date. The following members of the committee were present: H. A. Castle, chairman; John Epsy, secretary; M. J. Daniels, Rochester; Frank A. Day, Fairmont; W. J. Ives, Hutchinson; Joseph Bobleter, New Ulm; W. P. Sergeant, Albert Lea; E. G. Holmes, Detroit; C. H. Pettit, Minneapolis.

MINNESOTA OPINIONS.

Rochester Post and Record: Senator Carter of Montana thinks it ill becomes a fellow senator to criticise a federal judge for getting hilarious at a banquet, presumably on the theory that a fellow feeling should make a senator wondrous kind.

St. Peter Free Press: The present attitude of the United States senate on the rate matter and on the industrial oil bill only confirms the correctness of the people's notion that senators should be elected by a direct vote of the people.

Hibbing Mesaba Ore: A. L. Cole is not backed by any branch of the state ring, and that alone should be endorsement enough to secure for him the Republican nomination for governor.

Stillwater Gazette: This is the season of the year when the flat, stale and antiquated fish stories are once more sprung on the defenseless public.

Park Rapids Enterprise: By a vote of about 152 to 80, congress decided to continue the free seed graft. There are a larger number of political hulks in congress whose lack of ability creates a need of other inducement for keeping them there, than many had supposed.

St. Paul Review: Possibly that Duluth convention may decline to select any one of the eight active candidates now hustling for the nomination, and turn to some prominent man not yet named. There are lots of them in the state as good, and some far better, than any one in the list, and the convention is liable to do this very thing. There is no need whatever to name names, but one is easily found.

Grand Rapids Independent: The day when a yellow dog could win on the Republican ticket in this state has gone—and will never return.

Backus Times: The man who went out to milk and sat down on a boulder in the middle of the pasture and waited for the cow to back up was a brother to the man who kept a store and wouldn't advertise because he reasoned that the purchasing public would back up to his place of business when it wanted something.

Grand Rapids Independent: A great reform wave has struck Minnesota—reform in the policy of the state toward its own development, and the southern part of the state which has been antipathetic to the movement is falling into line. And the new sentiment will elect A. L. Cole governor of Minnesota.

St. Cloud Times: The friends of A. L. Cole claim for him 200 votes on the first ballot, and that he will be second choice of the friends of several candidates. When Brother Eastman read this item he yelled: "Corporations! Corporations! Boodle! Harmony! Hustle! Hell!"

Greenbush Journal: Unless Father Time can gain a notch or two before June 13, the list of eligibles for the Republican nomination for governor is liable to overbalance the list of delegates at the Duluth convention.

Northfield News: It now appears that there is to be a contest in Minnesota this year between corporate greed and the public, and it will be interesting to see how many politicians will "bend the pregnant hinges of the knee that thrift may follow fawning."

Reflections of a Bachelor.

New York Press: A girl would be twice as pretty if you told her so.

A woman has an awful good time crying because she isn't having one.

There are worse things to be married to than cold feet, but hardly anything more uncomfortable.

When a man pays his pew rent regularly it does seem as if the preacher ought to be grateful enough to make the sermons shorter.

Too Many of Them.

A new story of Whistler is recorded. The artist and a friend went for a walk along the Thames embankment one wonderfully starry night. Whistler had been in a very discontented mood all day, and inclined to find fault with everything. Nothing pleased him; the houses were ugly, the river not what it might have been, the lights hard and glaring. His friend pointed out several things that appealed to him as beautiful, but the master would not give in.

"No," he said, "nature is only sometimes beautiful, only sometimes, very, very seldom, indeed, and tonight she is, as so often, positively ugly."

"But the stars! Surely they are fine tonight?" urged the other.

Whistler looked up at the sky.

"Yes," he drawled, "they're not bad, perhaps; but, my dear fellow, there's too many of them."

He Loved Her Not.

Harper's Bazar: A little 6-year-old girl friend of mine came running to me and threw herself into my arms, sobbing as if her heart would break.

"God doesn't love me any more," she walled. "God doesn't love me."

"God doesn't love you! Why, dear, God loves every one," I assured her.

"Oh, no, he doesn't love me. I know he doesn't. I tried him with a daisy."

Reciprocity in Trouble.

Chicago News: Doubtless the sugar trust would be glad to proffer the oil trust the assurance of its sympathy, only it has a premonition that it is going to need all its sympathy for home consumption.

How About the Senate?

Chicago Tribune: The entente cordiale between the president and San Francisco has been restored.

Why Not?

Fame's just a bubble, is it not?
Then may we not believe it
Is he who blows the most that's got
The best chance to achieve it?
—Philadelphia Press.

MIRTHFUL REMARKS.

Cleveland Leader: "What books have benefited you most?" the young reporter inquired of the fabulously rich man.

"Law books," the Croesus promptly replied. "My father intended me for a lawyer, but I failed to pass my examination, and now I'm worth $50,000,000."

Philadelphia Ledger: "Please send a stamped and directed envelope with your manuscript," said the magazine editor's circular.

"No, thanks," replied the occasional contributor. "I've heard of people so conceited that they wrote letters to themselves, but I'm not one of them."

Cleveland Plain Dealer: She—And you really think Agnes married him for his money?

He—There can't be any doubt about it. She preferred him to me.

"Bless 'em!"

"Yes; this week they are taking lessons of a short change artist and practicing six hours a day."

Washington Star: "When I was your age," said the young man's father, "I took care of every dollar."

"Well," was the answer, "I don't think it's quite just to be jealous because I know more things that can be done with a dollar than you did."

Cleveland Plain Dealer: "Did you notice that a college professor says that in twenty years from now women will be ruling the world?"

"Not until twenty years? Isn't he foolish?"

"Probably the trouble with him is that he isn't married."

The Sage of Sauk Center.

Frank M. Eddy in Sauk Center Herald: If men were as careless in selecting men to manage their private business as they are their public business, the world would be bankrupt in a month.

When a man opens headquarters prior to convention time, he simply announces he is willing to offer consideration for support.

There is only one way to do successful business, and that is to let people know you desire to do business.

The "favorite son" cry is responsible for more corruption and imbecility than any other one thing.

It doesn't take any brains to find fault.

Never support a man for a political position unless you can give a good reason for such support.

If everybody was perfect, this world would be an awfully dull place in which to live.

You can never make your home town prosperous by sending money to Chicago.

An honestly earned dollar never troubles the conscience.

Lost Brigadiers.

Detroit News: When the landlord has taken one week's pay, and the coalman and the iceman another, and when you find that it's cheaper to dine on penny buns than beef, and that you may have enough left at the end of the month to pay some more car fare—then you can cheer yourself by remembering that Washington statistics show the cost of living is lower.

Mass Meeting Called to Consider Proposed Garbage Collection.

Plan Has Endorsement of Women's Council and Garbage Commission.

Endorsed by the women's council of the city, the garbage commission, and the common council committee, to which it was referred, the application of J. M. Root for a license to collect garbage and refuse in the city, will be taken up at a mass meeting of citizens, to be held in the city hall on Monday afternoon, at 2:30 o'clock, when an opportunity will be given for both sides of the question to be heard.

The members of the council, last evening, seemed unable to find any valid argument against the proposed license, which was not promptly met by Mr. Root, but they were unwilling to act without some expression of opinion from the property owners. On the motion of Alderman Lyle, the meeting was called, and on the opinion expressed there, the action of the council will largely depend.

As the council stood last evening, a vote would probably have been unfavorable to the acceptance of the bid, but several of the aldermen are not yet fully decided upon the merits of the plan, and would have voted against it last evening, only on the ground that sufficient time had not been given to consider it.

"It costs money to be sanitary," said Mr. Root, when called upon to explain his offer more fully. "It costs money to keep a city clean. In this climate the garbage and refuse runs about one pound per capita per day, or about thirty tons of garbage a day.

"I bid in good faith for this contract, and I asked for a ten-year contract, because I didn't like the idea that some future council might get it into its head that I was making too much money, and revoke my license, after I had put in an expensive plant.

"I have been asked why I don't collect ashes also. One good reason is that this was not called for in the advertisement for bids. If you had asked for a bid on collecting ashes too I would have bid on the work. But ashes are useful. They are not unsanitary. They can easily be made use of.

"Your town is scattered full of filth here. If you want to keep it clean, you have got to pay for it. I offer to put in an up-to-date and sanitary plant for the city."

"Do you contemplate doing anything with the ashes?" asked Alderman Moore.

"Yes. I expect to collect hard coal ashes free of charge.

"Now, in regard to the cost," continued Mr. Root. "Mr. Moore, for instance, is paying $1 a month to have his garbage taken away. He is getting one collection a week, made in a wooden wagon, that scatters its contents all the way from the point of collection to the incinerator.

"I figured out the floor space in Mr. Moore's home with him, and I will give him two collections a week, made in steel carts, of the most approved type, for 90 cents a month.

"Mr. Moore's house is much larger than the ordinary residence in this town. For an average six-room house, I figure that the cost will be 25 to 30 cents a month, for two collections a week or more if the health department considers them necessary.

"I am paying you $500 a year for a license to do this work, and remember that this is not an exclusive license. The city attorney told me the council could not give an exclusive license, and that word had to be struck out of the contract.

"I might make fewer collections and charge less, but there's your ordinance that tells me how I must collect the garbage, and the kind of carts I shall use, and how often I shall make collections. You made the ordinance. I didn't.

"One man told me he got his garbage collected for nothing. I asked him what was done with it, and he said it was taken out here in the country and fed to hogs. You can't feed that stuff to hogs. It's rotten, and when the hogs get all of it they can stand, the owners stick a knife into them, and bring them down here to the city, and you eat pork."

City Attorney Fesler was asked by the aldermen if it would be possible to grant other licenses for the same work, under the new ordinance, if Mr. Root's bid was accepted.

"Anyone else can get a license," said Mr. Fesler. "Some one might want a license to do the work in West Duluth, or in some part of the city covered by Mr. Root. The council would have a right to grant it, and I see no reason why a lower price could not be asked for this license if the council thought proper. Mr. Root made the offer of a $500 license fee, and he cannot therefore object to that figure as being too high."

"If the prices asked by Mr. Root were found excessive after a trial, we could advertise again?" asked Alderman Moore.

"Yes," replied the city attorney.

"It seems to me that this is a contract that we can jump if we don't like it," said Mr. Moore. "But if Mr. Root doesn't like it, he forfeits his bond."

"I would just like to say a word," said Mr. Fesler. "The city has made an investment for an incinerator, and some people have criticized the manner in which the garbage is collected. Now it seems to me that the people have just three propositions before them. They can accept this bid, or they can advertise for new bids, or they can put in a collection system of their own. One of these three methods must be adopted if the city is to be kept clean, and the incinerator made use of."

Alderman McEwen made an impassioned speech on municipal ownership, urging that the city put in a system of its own, do the work and save the profit which Mr. Root is to make from it. He protested against giving away any valuable franchise.

"Why, so far as I can see," said Mr. Moore, "this leaves the way open for the city to enter the business at any time. The city now has barely enough money to make the ordinary repairs demanded by the public safety. We haven't even money enough to remove those rocks in the West end that threaten to come loose and fall on the heads of the West end aldermen on their way to council meeting. The first cost of installing such a plant would be heavy, and we haven't the money. But there is nothing in this franchise or license to prevent the city doing it at any time."

"I am frank to say," said Alderman Wilson, "that I don't know where I stand yet. I have not had time to look into it thoroughly enough. I don't place much faith in the argument that the maximum rate won't be charged. Where there is a maximum rate prescribed, it is generally the one adopted. Mr. Root has urged that he desired to be fair at all times, but that, of course, is nothing to base a business agreement on. Then the argument that we can readvertise is not a valid one, it seems to me. If we can only get one bid now, we are not likely to get more when Mr. Root is firmly established in business."

"If we were able to get only one now," said Alderman Moore, "it proves that nobody was very anxious to handle the work at this figure."

On the request of Health Commissioner Murray, President Tessman read a communication from the women's council, endorsing the plan.

The council finally laid the matter over for one week, and on a motion by Alderman Lyle, called a mass meeting of all citizens interested in the plan, for next Monday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock in the council chamber.

Mayor Cullum's communication regarding the dispute between the health department and County Commissioner Kugler, was referred to the finance committee.

Theodore Nushbaum, proprietor of a Turkish bath parlor on Seventh avenue east, claims the street flushing gang destroyed $63 worth of property in his place of business, and gave notice of suit to recover the amount.

The board of public works requested an arc light on the south approach to the ferry bridge, and on a motion by Alderman Lyle, it was ordered installed.

The bill for gasoline twice presented by the fire board, was ordered paid, after a notation had been made that no more gasoline would be purchased until the city has acquired an automobile. The requisition for the gasoline was passed by the council, and the fire commissioners said that if the council did not allow it, they would pay the bill out of their own pockets.

An amendment to the illuminated sign ordinance, including gas signs, was placed on its first reading.

PROJECT FOR CENTRAL BANK

To Maintain Stable Rates Launched by Hancock Banker.

New York, May 15.—A project to establish in this city a central bank with an immense capital to operate as a medium for maintaining a stable price for money has been launched by Charles A. Wright, a banker of Hancock, Mich.

Mr. Wright's plan aims to neutralize the power resulting from the centralization of the control of the great industries of the country, which he says in a circular letter given wide distribution, can dominate the policy of the principal banking institutions of New York and even determine the price of money in this market.

He believes that the capital of the proposed central bank should be fixed upon some representative basis and suggests that an amount equal to one-half of 1 per cent of the banking power of the 14,850 reporting banks of the United States would give a capital of $66,000,000. Then, if these banks would keep on deposit with the central national bank, 5 per cent of their own deposits as part of their reserve, this sum would amount to over $500,000,000.

BIWABIK'S WAVE OF PROSPERITY

Wonderful Wealth of Ajax, Syracuse, Hector and Bangor Properties.

Dr. Bray's $10,000 Hospital ---A $5,000 Odd Fellows Home.

BY J. A. MONGER.

The greatest ore strike made since the opening of the Mesaba range is now being opened up at Biwabik. Nowhere has there been such a large body of ore found as on the new properties Ajax, Syracuse, Hector and Bangor. The real work of opening these mines, which includes the sinking of steel shafts, the building of power houses and laying railroad tracks to the mines, is now being pushed. These four mines with the Williams that is being reopened, will swell the output of the Biwabik mines from 1,487,717 tons in 1905 to 3,500,000 tons in 1907; will increase the number of men employed here from 700 to 1,700, and the payrolls from $6,500 to $150,000 a month. There is nothing now to prevent Biwabik from becoming one of the great ore producing centers of the Mesaba range. The known deposits of these properties exceed those of any two locations yet discovered. This is not all; they will give renewed confidence in the stability of the Mesaba iron ore range, as a permanent producer. These discoveries will tickle the fancy of the steel makers of the United States, stifle the cry that the end of the age of steel is within our day and generation. The opening of these mines will be followed by that of others until the Mesaba produces 45,000,000 tons, as against 20,086,040 tons in 1905. It has been estimated that the value of the iron ore deposits heretofore discovered on the Mesaba has been more than a thousand million tons! What will be the increase, when the Ajax, Syracuse, Hector, Bangor and Williams are fully developed and on the shipping list of mines? It is iron ore that builds and populates cities and towns; that attracts the dollars of the millionaires. It is these dollars that have built Biwabik and developed the Mesaba range. The mines of the Mesaba range have created more than a thousand millionaires, and will make a thousand more. This range as an ore producer, is only in its infancy. There are untold millions of tons of iron ore tucked away in the bosom of mother earth, awaiting the touch of the explorer's drill to unlock these undiscovered treasure vaults. Until 1895 there was not an iron mine in the world that had produced half a million tons in a single year, while today the Biwabik mine is one of seven on the Mesaba range that produces from one to two million tons yearly. In talking about the greatness of the Mesaba iron ore range, keep in mind that it produces one-third of all the iron ore mined in the United States, and one-sixth of all that is mined in the world! That one-half of all the steel made in Pittsburg, Youngstown, Wheeling and Joliet is manufactured from Mesaba ore, a part of which comes from the mines located here.

	Tons.
Biwabik	1,092,048
Holland	153,484
Duluth	142,172
Cass	61,581
Ajax	28,459
Total	1,487,717

The number of men employed to operate these mines, including strippers, is 700, with an average payroll of $65,000 a month. These figures do not include the money expended in explorations, steel shafts, powerhouses and other improvements.

The Williams mine, formerly the North Cincinnati, is being reopened. The property has two shafts down in a large body of ore. A shafthouse is being built with other improvements. In another month it will be on the shipping list of mines.

It will be seen at a glance that the present and future prosperity of Biwabik is fixed beyond the undoing of this generation.

BIWABIK EXPENDING $25,000 FOR PUBLIC UTILITIES.

At the spring election, March 13, there was voted a bond issue of $10,000 to perfect the waterworks system; $10,000 for a complete sewerage plant, and $5,000 to enlarge the present electric lighting system. When these three public utilities are put into operation, Biwabik will stand shoulder to shoulder with any city on the Mesaba range.

The water supply is taken from a subterranean lake, 200 feet below the surface, and pumped into a water tower holding 95,000 gallons, having an elevation of eighty feet above the tallest building, giving ample pressure for fire and other purposes. The water is clear as crystal, cold as ice water and absolutely free from all organic matter—an invigorating, life-giving beverage. The new system will have water mains throughout the business and residence portions, and fifteen hydrants for fire protection, making the service all that could be desired.

The sewerage system is a new event in the history of Biwabik, but one much needed, as a safeguard against contagious diseases and for the comfort and well being of its people. Ten thousand dollars is the amount of money voted for this purpose. The sewerage system will be put in at once, covering the business and residence sections. Biwabik's sewerage system is but the inaugural step to paving, in another year.

The electric lighting plant derives its circuit from the Biwabik mine power house, as a matter of economy. This is in addition to its own plant. The streets are lighted by fifteen arc and 4,000 incandescent lights, for individual use. The sum of $5,000 was vvoted to improve and enlarge the service. Biwabik, in the next three months, as to the three great public utilities, waterworks, sewerage and electric light plants, will be fully abreast of the times.

BIWABIK'S MANY ADVANTAGES.

This is an incorporated city of 2,500 population, delightfully located at the head waters of Embarrass lake, eighty miles north of Duluth. It is the judicial seat of St. Louis county. Being the junction of the Duluth, Missabe & Northern and the Duluth & Iron Range railroads, it makes a splendid receiving and shipping railroad center. Biwabik is surrounded on all sides by nine open pit and underground mines, the backbone of its prosperity. Two of these mines will be on the shipping list this year for the first time, while two others were new properties in 1905. The five new mines, with the reopening of the Williams, will double the payrolls and the number of men heretofore employed, which means much to the continued growth and prosperity of this city. In business blocks, residences, churches and schools, Biwabik will compare with any on the Mesaba. Its health rating is A1; it has the finest city water in the United States, perfect sewerage, clean streets, and is electric-lighted. Lake Esquagma, some four miles south, affords every attraction for picnic parties and tourist visitors who desire to commune with nature in her virgin purity. The shores of Lake Esquagma are well wooded, while its waters team with black bass, walleyed pike and pickerel, making it one of the fisherman's treasure spots. In secret and benevolent societies, Biwabik has the Knights of Pythias, Independent Order of Foresters, Odd Fellows, Royal League and Maccabees. The Odd Fellows will build a $5,000 home, size 30x50 feet, two stories. The first floor will be used for dining rooms, kitchen and closets. The second for lodge rooms and dancing hall. Those who are looking for quick returns and to double their money will find no better place to invest their dollars than right here in Biwabik, as prices are sure to double in the next year.

THE COMMERCIAL CLUB.

The Commercial club is composed of fifty members, all public spirited men of affairs. They are boosters for good roads and the development of the overcut agricultural timber lands of this section of St. Louis county. The leading spirit in the good roads campaign is F. S. Colvin of the lumber and saw mill firm of Colvin & Robb. He is not a talker, but a man who backs his opinions with dollars. At this writing Mr. Colvin is building six miles of road on the old Vermilion trail, in order to give an outlet to the products raised by the homestead farmers and loggers in this section. The road will prove a money maker for the merchants of Biwabik in new and enlarged trade. The officers of the Commercial club are: F. S. Colvin, president; F. S. Dane, vice president; T. E. Grae, treasurer and I. R. Gillpatrick, secretary; all leading and public spirited citizens.

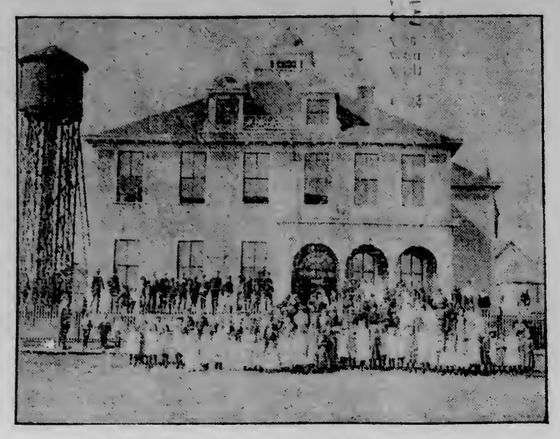
BIWABIK OPEN PIT MINE THAT SHIPPED 1,092,048 TONS IN 1905.



PUBLIC SCHOOL BUILDING OF BIWABIK.

The school census of district No. 24, of which Biwabik is a part, has 235 scholars in regular attendance. The school building, a two-story frame, size 50 by 72 feet, cost $15,000. In addition there is a well selected school library of 700 volumes.

Prof. T. E. Grae, superintendent, a graduate of the Winona state normal, class 1900, also took a summer session at the Minnesota state university. In the fall of 1900 Prof. Grae commenced his educational work here in a four-room school, which has been increased to seven. The following is the able corps of teachers:

T. E. Grae, superintendent, teacher of mathematics and science; Miss Eleanore Lowrey, kindergarten; Miss Laura E. Mau, primary; Miss Winifred Grant, first grade; Miss Grace Dane, second and third grades; Miss Marie Lasch, fourth and fifth grades; Miss Agnes Boal, sixth and seventh grades; Miss Mayo Morisette, drawing and mathematics; Miss Pearle Caldwell, history and civics and Miss Lorena MacFarlane Latin and English. They are all picked instructors, who are entitled to full credit for the high standing of the grades over which they preside.

The school board of district No. 24 has such friends of the public school system as J. E. Riley, director; C. H. Morrill, clerk, and William Carmichael, treasurer. The question of more school room is making itself felt, and within another year there will have to be another building to accommodate the ever increasing attendance.

A MILLION DOLLAR PROPOSITION.

During the last eighteen months there has been much talk of building an electric road to encircle the towns of Biwabik, McKinley, Elba, Sparta, Eveleth, Virginia, Mountain Iron, Buhl, Chisholm and Hibbing, a distance of forty miles. The present head of this great enterprise that means so much to Duluth and St. Louis county is F. B. Myers, cashier of the State bank of Biwabik. A county franchise has been granted and an auxiliary company has been organized with a capital of $50,000. The corporation is known as the Mesaba Range Traction company, which is composed of men of ample money to build the line when all the preliminary details are threshed over. Such a line would be a big dividend payer, as it will pass through a thickly populated mining section of the Mesaba iron range. There will be a million population to draw patronage from in the next ten years if the Mesaba Range Traction company runs its line into Duluth. Biwabik will be the headquarters for this road when built, which will mean much for the growth and prosperity of this city and whole section.

THE HOMESTEAD FARMERS.

There are 400 farmers located on the old Vermilion road some eight miles south of Biwabik. The soil of this fertile section is rich, sandy clay loam that has been fertilized for ages by the autumnal crops of vegetation, making it a great crop producer for all small grain, fruits, vegetables, clover and grasses. In a 15-mile drive on the old Vermilion and its tributary roads we visited many of these homestead farmers and found clearings of twenty to sixty acres in a high state of cultivation. There were good houses, roomy barns and other buildings. Stock and poultry is receiving attention, and in a few more years St. Louis county will produce a large percent of its dairy products, poultry, small fruits and vegetables. When the state awakens to the necessity of draining its swamp lands, agriculture will take a new start, and become one of the leading occupations.

In no other locality will be the greatest dairying and stock raising portion of Minnesota. The clover and timothy yield runs from two to three tons to the acre, two crops a season. There is no prairie land with the equal of this soil and climate for these crops. Independent and wealthy families of the future will be those that adopt farming as an occupation in St. Louis county.

BIWABIK TOWN OFFICERS.

The following are the officials who are pushing Biwabik to the fore rank in the three great requisites to city building, waterworks, electric lighting and sewerage systems. They were elected on the issue of bonding the village for $10,000 for waterworks; $10,000 for sewerage and $5,000 for electric lighting. The three systems will be accomplished just as soon as the contractors can complete the work of construction and equipment.

N. B. Shank, mayor; G. M. Gleason, treasurer; N. M. Butler, recorder; J. McGilvery, city attorney; John Kostomo, street commissioner.

Trustees: F. B. Myers, Thomas Trevena and John Riley.

It is safe to predict that Biwabik will make more progress in the year 1906 than it has made in the past five years. There is no boom on and none is wanted. It is a steady growth of development, based upon the iron ore mines and agricultural resources.

THE BRAY HOSPITAL.

Charles W. Bray, a graduate of the medical department of the university of Minnesota, class 1885, located here in 1886, and opened a hospital for the treatment of surgical and medical cases. In fact, he had all the sick and injured that worked in the mines, and the city practice besides, being local surgeon for the Duluth, Missabe & Northern and the Duluth & Iron Range railways. This practice grew to such proportions that he now employs two assistants, Dr. A. G. Hoode, a graduate of the university of Minnesota, class 1903, and Dr. N. E. Verne of the same medical college. In February last Dr. Bray's hospital burned to the ground, entailing an entire loss. On the site of the former hospital the doctor is building a larger and more pretentious structure, 54 by 62 feet, two and a half stories and basement, at a cost of $12,000. It will have twenty-five rooms and accomodations for thirty patients. The hospital will be equipped with every appliance known to the science of surgery, including electric and X-ray machines. It will be heated by hot water, lighted by electricity, and have hot and cold water throughout the building, toilet closets, and every convenience that is conducive to health and comfort. The new Bray hospital will be a credit to Biwabik and this section of the Mesaba range. In the matter of public spirit, few men equal Dr. Charles W. Bray in loyalty to Biwabik, or who take more interest in the welfare of their fellow-citizens. This is the keystone of his success as a physician and surgeon.

THE BIWABIK OPERA HOUSE.

The ground floor of this building is used for a playhouse and dance hall. It has a stage 18x22 feet, new drop curtain and two dressing rooms. The seating capacity is 500, with standing room for as many more. The second floor has council chambers and municipal court rooms.

STATE BANK OF BIWABIK.

This is one of the best known banking houses on the Mesaba range. It was organized under the state banking laws in 1903, with a capital of $15,000. At the close of business April 6, 1906, the surplus and undivided profits were $1,143.04. The financial standing of the State bank is rated high, it being one of the sound banking houses of St. Louis county. In choosing a bank to receive your money, you want to find a safe bank, one that is accommodating up to the limit of safe banking, you who are looking for such a bank will find the State Bank of Biwabik up to the highest standard: The officers are: C. H. Taylor, president; C. W. Bray, vice-president; J. S. Lutes, vice-president; F. B. Meyers, cashier, and J. S. Hopkins, assistant cashier. In addition to banking, they carry on an extensive fire insurance business.

BUTLER' DRUG STORE.

In January, 1904, F. M. Butler, a registered pharmacist, opened up a drug store, stocked with drugs, patent medicines, druggists' sundries, stationery, confectionery and cigars. It was one of Biwabik's needs. Mr. Butler has filled the drug field so satisfactorily that he has the whole field. You that have prescriptions to fill will find Butler's prices below those of the city, and none but the best fluid extracts are used in compounding. Next to your doctor stands your druggist. You will make no mistake in buying all your family supplies at Butler's drug store. It is headquarters for this section of the Mesaba range.

COLVIN & ROBB'S LUMBER YARD AND MILLS.

The leading promoters and builders of Biwabik's diversified business interests is lumber and sawmills is the firm of Colvin & Robb, who have lumber yards at Biwabik, Eveleth, Sparta, Aurora, Nashwauk and Bovey, and sawmills at Fryling Pan and Bassett lakes. The business has grown into one of the big interests of St. Louis county. The mill at Fryling Pan lake has a capacity of 15,000 feet of lumber and 10,000 lath. They have a million and a half feet of logs on the bank for sawing. The mill at Bassett lake has a capacity of 25,000 feet of sawed lumber and 15,000 lath. The product of their mills is white pine and tamarack. These mills have enough standing timber in sight to keep them busy for the next five years. F. S. Colvin, the resident partner, is a very active, progressive man, who accomplishes things. He is now building six miles of road on the old Vermilion trail in order to make it possible for the homesteaders to reach Biwabik, their natural trading center, and to make a market for their standing timber, their mainstay and financial support. Mr. Colvin has been too busy to give much time to holding public offices, still he was elected town treasurer in 1903-4 without going to the polls. What Biwabik needs is more men of F. S. Colvin's mold to make it one of the best cities of the Mesaba iron range.

BIWABIK HARDWARE CO.

This business was established in 1899, and has grown to be equal to any in its line on the Mesaba range. The stock carried comprises everything in builders' and shelf hardware, stoves and ranges, table and pocket cutlery; all lines of household goods. This stock, with its shop and plumbing department are all on the first floor, size 25 by 90, while the second story is devoted to furniture, undertaking, supplies, caskets and embalming. H. G. Seeley, the resident partner, is one of Biwabik's pioneers, having built the first building in Merritt, one mile east of the present city, in 1892. Mr. Seeley is a native of New York state, born there in 1859. He located in Duluth in 1890.

CITY CASH MEAT MARKET.

The great hustler for business in his line is J. J. Papic, who established his Metropolitan Meat Market in 1905. Mr. Papic not only covers the location of Biwabik, but that of Aurora as well. As a result, he has a large and growing business in all lines of fresh and salt meats, fish and poultry. One o the attractive features of the City Cash Meat market is its cold storage and refrigerator for properly taking care of the large stock carried to supply the demands of his trade. Mr. Papic's belief in full weights, lowest prices and choicest of stock has given the City Cash Meat market a wide range of patronage. He is a native of Minneapolis, born there in 1882, and where he received his school and business education.

A LEADING CLOTHING HOUSE.

Max Cohen opened up a first-class, up-to-date clothing house in March, 1906. The stock carried also includes gents' furnishing goods, boots and shoes, hats, caps, trunks and kindred lines. Max, as he is familiarly called, does a large business, as he is very enterprising, carrying a fine stock and marking every article in plain figures at the lowest price, and always 10 per cent below all competitors. Mr. Cohen owns his own business block, 24x50, two stories, and other business property located here and in Aurora. He is a native of Russia, born there in 1870, and came to the United States in 1892, locating in Boston, Mass., where he worked as a laborer down to 1896. In that year he came to Iron Belt, Wis., where he conducted a clothing store for four years, coming to Biwabik in 1900.

BIWABIK NOTES OF INTEREST.

U. B. Shank operates a logging camp three miles south of Biwabik during the season, cutting two million feet of lumber and mining timber.

One of the leading hotels on the Mesaba range is the Hill hotel, conducted on broad, liberal lines by W. L. Hill. It is a twenty-five room house well furnished and lighted by electricity. The Hill is not only the commercial men's headquarters but their friend as well.

William Carmichael, superintendent of the Duluth mine, came here in the spring of 1898. The Duluth is an open-pit and underground property and will show a shipping record for 1906 of over 150,000 tons. Mr. Carmichael is now serving his fifth year as a member of the school board, which position he has filled with credit to the cause of education. He is a native of Scotland, born there in 1846, leaving his native land for the Copper country in 1869.

* * *

S. E. Moren, proprietor of the Biwabik meat market, is one of the live business men. The business was established in 1900 and has grown to large proportions. Mr. Moren owns his business block, 33x54, which is well heated and fitted up with all the conveniences for handling a large business.

* * *

The growth of Biwabik is no better illustrated than by the steady growth of the postal business. It has nearly doubled in the past two years and will double again in the next six months. U. R. Gillpatrick, postmaster, graduated after four years' faithful service as assistant to the then postmaster, W. B. Shanks, who resigned to give his whole time to his other business affairs. Mr. Gillpatrick was appointed on Mr. Shank's recommendation in October 1905, and is proving as ideal a postmaster as he did assistant. I. R. Gillpatrick is young, active and full of ginger, is up and doing in behalf of good roads and other interests for the upbuilding of Biwabik and St. Louis county.

J. A. Talle established his present grocery, crockery, thware, flour, feed and hay business in 1902, but has been in business here since 1900, as the partner of Erickson & Co. Mr. Talle does the leading business in his line for he keeps the stock, sells on a close margin and makes three daily deliveries His stock covers the entire store building and basement, size 24x50, besides large warehouse and barn for storing surplus stock. J. A. Talle was born in Norway in 1880, and came to the United States in 1896, locating in Tower, where he learned the grocery business.

The knockers who do not believe in the agricultural resources of the soil of this section of St. Louis county should take a twenty-mile drive over the old Vermilion road and its tributaries and visit with the four hundred homestead farmers. Then will they stop knocking and talk good road building instead.

It is all right to talk about beauty habits, but most women are too busy hustling and have no time to cultivate beauty habits. Therefore, they take Hollister's Rocky Mountain Tea. 35 cents, Tea or Tablets. Ask your druggist.

COMPANIES MUST REPAIR

Protests have been made to the county authorities by settlers near the stations of Zim, Forbes and Wallace on the Duluth, Missabe & Northern and the Great Northern roads, that the railroad companies have neglected to construct proper road crossings at those places and the farmers are put to great inconvenience and some danger in crossing the tracks. The matter was brought to the attention of the county board several weeks ago and the county attorney was instructed to notify the railway companies of the bad condition of the road crossings and request them to take immediate steps to repair the crossings as required by law. This notice was sent to the companies. The settlers claim the request has not been complied with, the crossings being left in as bad condition as they were at first. At the last meeting of the board the complaints were given a hearing and the county attorney was directed to take action immediately to have the crossings put in the proper condition for travel.

Millions Spent to Make Clean Beer

Cleanest Manufacturing Process Known Is That of the Leading American Brewery.

We regard beer as a food and the business of brewing beer one of our most important industries. When we tell our readers that without exception there is no other brewery in the world so absolutely clean in its process of manufacture as Pabst, we speak from exact knowledge of the conditions. The monster Pabst Brewery at Milwaukee represents an outlay of millions of dollars and many of those millions have been expended to make the Pabst exclusive process absolutely clean. Pabst Beer stands alone today, the only food product that from the beginning to the end of its manufacture is absolutely beyond reach of even the contaminating germs of the air.

Doctors boil their instruments in water to sterilize them. Pabst boils his brew in closed kettles and thus sterilizes it. From there it passes through sterilized pipes to sterilized hermetically sealed tanks where it is fermented. Then through more sterilized pipes it goes to sterilized hermetically sealed storage tanks and when bottled it is pasteurized. Throughout the entire process it never is touched by human hands and comes in contact only with sterilized air. No other food product known can show such a record of positive cleanliness.

This process of manufacture is the exclusive Pabst method. It is one reason for the "always the same, always the best" reputation of Pabst Beer.

The cleanest beer and the richest beer, Pabst Beer has no equal as a mild, refreshing, healthful beverage.

AURORA VILLAGE

Output of Mines This Year Estimated at Million Tons.

BY J. A. MONGER.

There is no 1-year-old in the United States that has made such strides in building business blocks, residences, churches and schools, graded streets and alleys as the incorporated village of Aurora. It has grown from an exploration camp to 500 population. Aurora before another winter's snow blows, will have 1,000 population. The Mohawk and the Meddow, both underground mines, will both be on the shipping list of mines. These, with present explorations, will make Aurora one of the busy mining locations on the Mesaba iron rage. The following is the output of the shipping mines in 1905:

	Tons.
Stephens	367,714

The output of the Aurora mines for 1906 is estimated at 1,000,000 tons. This will be quite an increase over 1905. The average monthly payrolls of the mines is $36,000. This does not include the money paid out in wages for explorations or improvements.

There is great activity in the building of business blocks and residences. There is much need of a hotel, where commercial travelers and business men can be accommodated. This want is a permanent drawback to the present spirit of push and prosperity so visible on every hand. A bond issue has been voted of $10,000 for a waterworks plant and sewerage system, which will be built the coming summer. The board of trustees also has under consideration the granting of an electric lighting plant. When these three public utilities are in operation, Aurora will be the equal of her other sister mining towns of this range. Prof. C. H. Graham is principal of the Carnegie school, a handsome three-story building, lighted by electricity and heated by hot air. It cost to build, $10,000. On the railroad map Aurora is located seventy-four miles north of Duluth, on the Duluth & Iron Range and Duluth, Missabe & Northern railroads.

The following is a list of the board of trustees and officers, all picked men of ability and public spirit: R. J. McGhee, president; Math. Alto, J. F. Nickers and C. R. Hill, trustees; F. N. Anderson, recorder; P. M. Johnson, treasurer.

R. J. McGHEE & CO.

This general store was located here in 1903, removing here from the old town one mile north. This is the big store of Aurora, that carries full lines of dry goods, clothing, boots, shoes, groceries, crockery, glassware, hardware, a general line of furniture and housefurnishing goods; meat market; drugs and medicines, with a graduate pharmacist in charge. The stock of the various departments cover a floor space of 48 by 60, two stories, which is being enlarged to 48 by 100 feet. There are also two track warehouses, 24 by 50 feet for surplus stock. R. J. McGhee & Co. are a very busy firm as their large stock of goods and low prices make them headquarters.

R. J. McGhee is postmaster, appointed in 1903, besides being mayor. He is the leading spirit of Aurora and is bending all his energies to make it one of the leading cities of the range.

AURORA HARDWARE CO.

This business was established in July, 1905, by Christenson and C. S. Nelson, both active young business men, who are making a winner of the business. Their stock covers everything in builders' and shelf hardware, stoves and ranges, harness and saddlery, paints, oils, glass, all lines of furniture and house furnishing goods. They also have a tin shop and plumbing departments in addition. The Aurora Hardware Company is a credit to this section of St. Louis county.

J. W. OLSON & CO.

On June 9th, 1905, J. W. Olson & Co. opened up their present stock of dry goods, groceries, canned goods, glassware, hats, caps, boots and shoes. Their stock is carefully selected, and contains all the very latest goods in all lines. J. W. Olson & Co. give every customer a "square deal" as to prices, weight and quality of goods, making it possible for a child to buy as cheaply and with as good taste as the most experienced buyer. They make three daily deliveries, which is one of the attractive features of the store. They own their own business block, one of the best located in Aurora.

The State Bank of Aurora was established under the banking laws in January, 1905, with a capital of $10,000. It pays interest on time deposits, and does a regular banking business. They also do a large fire insurance and real estate business. They own their own building, located on one of the choicest corners in the village. The officers of the State Bank of Aurora are: F. B. Myers, president; W. J. Smith, vice president, and P. M. Johnson, cashier. If business integrity, liberal and safe banking methods will build up a city, then the outlook for Aurora is exceedingly bright.

Nathanson Brothers of Virginia are building a 25 by 75 feet, two-story building, at a cost of $4,000. The building will be finished by June 1st, and occupied by M. Levin, late of Michigama, Mich., with a stock of dry goods and clothing.

Math Alto is one of the leading spirits of Aurora and member of the board of trustees. He conducts a large hotel and buffet, size 34 by 56, two-story, which he built in 1905, Mr. Alto is a native of Finland, born there in 1874, but came to the States seventeen years ago.

Alex Mattson conducts a cigar, tobacco, stationery, confectionery store, with ice cream parlors, and a side line of jewelry. The business was opened in 1905, and has been a winner from the start.

* * *

There is no opportunity for establishing new stores here, for every line is overdone. There are twelve saloons, the limit under the ordinance. This is a plenty, but there are twelve more applicants, who are trying to get a $500 license.

The soldiers then attacked the people who had gathered, with their bayonets and the butts of their guns, wounding eleven persons, making a total of four killed and nineteen wounded.

THE BAYHA STORE

ITS PERSONALITY:

Each store has a personality of its own as pronounced as the personality of individuals. "A good store, but careless," you say of one. "Full of tricks; worth watching," is the comment about another. "Conservative and safe, but pretty high priced," the estimate of a third. A fair store and a careful one is the judgment we have worked hardest to deserve for the Bayha store. Fairness in its broadest sense may be expected here—fairness to producers, from whom we buy, no less than to consumers, for whom we gather goods from all over the world. Fairness which makes your permanent satisfaction a requirement in each transaction. Fairness which assures low pricing—the least cost for worthy goods. A careful store, too—for that we work no less than to be fair. Carefulness eliminates from these stocks everything not thoroughly worthy. Carefulness that makes sure that promises are kept—that the details of every transaction are carried to the limit of fulfillment.

This store stands for these two characteristics. They express its personality. They have won the reliance of Duluth people.

FIRST LICENSE IS GRANTED

A. G. Boyer Gets County Permit as an Auctioneer.

The first auctioneer's license ever issued by St. Louis county was recently taken out by Alfred G. Boyer of this city. Mr. Boyer, who has a license, made application to the county board for a county license. The request was so unusual that the county authorities did not know such a step was necessary until they looked up the statutes.

The law authorizing the licensing of auctioneers was passed in 1895 and it has been embodied in the new code under Chapter 56. It provides that the county board may license any voter in the county as an auctioneer. The auditor shall issue the license and it will permit the holder to conduct the business of an auctioneer in this county and adjoining counties for the period of one year. The fee is $10 and the applicant must give the county a bond in the sum of not less than $1,000, conditioned that he will pay all the auction fees required by law and conform to the laws relating to auctioneers.

Another provision of the law is that an auctioneer shall keep an accurate account of all property sold by him, the names of the persons from whom the same was received, of those to whom sold and the price paid.

Any person who attempts to sell property at an auction without first having obtained a license shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor. The law does not extend to sheriffs, coroners, constables, collectors of taxes or sales of personal property under chattel mortgage or other lien.

WILD BEASTS FREE IN STORM AT SEA.

New York, May 15.—One of the liveliest voyages ever made across the Atlantic was completed when the British freighter St. Andrew came into port with the biggest menagerie that has ever gone afloat since the days of Noah. The St. Andrews met a gale in mid-Atlantic, and as the animals would have been suffocated had the hatches been battoned down, the crew had a busy time.

In the blackness of a stormy night, several of the animals got free, and while some of them assailed each other, others attacked their keepers with the result that many of the latter now show severe lacerations.

An elephant attacked by a puma which had broken from its cage, curled its trunk about the savage little beast, slammed it on the deck and trampled it to death. A wolf jumped overboard and a hyena, which assailed a polar bear, has now much less fur, but much more wisdom.

AN IMPORTANT DECISION MADE

Cass Lake, Minn., May 15.—(Special to The Herald.)—The register and receiver of the local United States land office have rendered an important decision in the contest case of Peter M. Larson vs. Charles J. Hansey, which is a prior settlement contest, involving an entry made Aug. 15, 1905, for the southeast ¼, section 8, township 145, range 31, the lands in question being a part of the Chippewa reservation ceded lands that were thrown open under the order of the secretary of the interior. The contest was inaugurated to establish the prior rights of actual settlement and entry.

The decision made by the local land officials states that, in reviewing the case, Larson, the contestee, entered upon the land for settlement five seconds prior to the time set for filing on the land; that the defendant in the contest, Hansey, made his entry for the land at the land office at one minute past 9 o'clock on the day of entry. The secretary of the interior, in issuing orders to govern the opening of the land, warned all persons that anyone going on the lands for the purposes of establishing prior settlement, prior to the hours set for the filing at the land office, would be considered and dealt with as trespassers, and preference would be given the prior legal applicant, notwithstanding the unlawful settlement. In the decision, the register and receiver say:

"The premature entrance of the alleged settler upon the land can avail nothing. In view of the fact that Hansey's entry was made not later than one minute after 9 a. m., and especialy in view of the fact that if Larson, as directed by said order, had remained outside of the boundries of the lands, which were opened on said day, it would have been a physical impossibility for him to have posted his notice and commenced the digging of his well at the point selected by him prior to the time of completion of Hansey's entry. Preference should be given Hansey as the prior legal application, as is provided in the portion of the order quoted."

This decision is far-reaching and will have the effect of establishing a precedent for several other contests that were started at the same time on other entries made at that time.

MONUMENT FOR CHIEF BEMIDJI

Mayor Carter of Bemidji Would Mark Indian Chief's Grave.

Bemidji, Minn., May 15.—(Special to The Herald.)—The grave of Chief Bemidji will be adorned by a suitable monument, if the plans of Mayor A. A. Carter are carried out and the patriotic people of Bemidji respond to the appeal which is being made to them. Mr. Carter has determined upon a plan to raise, by popular subscription, $200 or $300, with which a suitable monument may be purchased and the grave where the old chief lies properly recognized.

According to reliable information, there will be two railroad spurs built from Northome this summer. Operations have already commenced on the spur into Bartlett lake; and in a few days the engineers will run their line into Island Lake. It has been the intention of the Minnesota & International officials to run the spur from Bridjie, but later reports say it will be run from Northome. Engineer M. D. Stoner is on the ground with a score of assistants who are pushing the work with all possible speed. It is the intention to have both lines completed and in operation this summer, as there are millions of feet of logs in the lakes ready to be taken out this year.

Ole Torgerson, a farmer living in the town of Frohn, was yesterday committed to the insane asylum at Fergus Falls by Probate Judge Clark. Torgerson has not exhibited violent symptoms except within the last week, when it has been necessary for six neighbors to watch him. Torgerson has three brothers and one sister who are already inmates of the institution at Fergus Falls.

George J. Britten, who has conducted a fine nursery at Brainerd, has been looking over Bemidji and has decided to remove to this place. He has secured an option on eighty acres of desirable land located near town, and will plant trees and other hardy plants and raise them for the home market.

KILLED BY EARTHQUAKE.

Osceola, Wis., May 15.—Word was received here yesterday by Mr. Miller of the death of his brother Rempal, a wealthy resident of San Jose, Cal., in the earthquake. His relatives were found through certificates of deposit on the Bank of St. Croix Falls. eH was 65 years old and removed from Polk county to California twelve years ago.

Found $5,000.

An employe in one of the large railroad stations in the East recently picked up a satchel which contained $5,000. ATTITUDE OF PRESIDENT Toward Rate Bill Set Forth in an Official Statement.

Says There Has Been No Opportunity for Honest Misconception.

Washington, May 15.—The sensational rate bill incident in the senate Saturday, during which Mr. Tillman, on the authority of Former Senator Chandler, made statements regarding the president's course in connection with pending railroad rate legislation, some of which statements were denied by Mr. Lodge on behalf of the president, had its sequel last evening when an official statement was issued by the White House, giving an account of the subject on the part of the president and Attorney General Moody. The statement comprises two letters, one from the president to Senator Allison, and the other from Attorney General Moody to the president, both dated yesterday.

The president says: "In no case, either in the case of Mr. Chandler or anyone else, was there the slightest opportunity for any honest misconception of my attitude or any belief that I pledged myself specifically to one and only one amendment or set of amendments, or that I would not be satisfied with any amendment which preserved the essential features of the Hepburn bill, as it came from the house."

The president says that as to many of the amendments, including the so-called Long, Overman, Bacon and Spooner amendments, he had said he should be entirely satisfied to have them in the bill, and suggested modifications as to other amendments, but that "as to none (of the amendments) did I ever say either to Mr. Chandler or to anyone else that I should insist upon having them in the bill as a condition of my approval," and that, on the contrary, he (the president) was careful to state that he was not trying to dictate any particular program of action.

The president says the statements made to Senator Chandler were the same in substance as those made to Mr. Allison and other senators of both parties. He says he was asked to see Mr. Chandler as the representative of Mr. Tillman, in charge of the bill, and that the conferences Attorney General Moody had with Senators Tillman and Bailey were such as had been held with many other senators to determine the phraseology and discuss the effect of amendments proposed by them.

The president states that he became convinced that it was impossible for senators "with advantage" to use him as an intermediary, and suggested to all to whom he spoke that they communicate with Senator Allison, whose purpose and the president's were "identical." The president says that his own opinion that the Allison amendment in no way changed the court review as provided in the original Hepburn bill, is also the opinion of Attorney General Moody and Secretaries Root and Taft.

The attorney general's letter gives an account, at the president's request, of the conferences which Mr. Moody had at the president's direction with Senators Tillman and Bailey regarding the court review feature. He says he advised the president that he should not, at any stage, become finally committed beyond recall to any form of language in any part of the bill, and the president affirmed the wisdom of that course. He reviews the discussion of interlocutory injunctions, and concludes that there was nothing in the "conversations" between the senators and himself which bound the president to any particular amendment.

Following is the correspondence embraced in the statement given out by the White House this evening. The president's letter:

"The White House, Washington, May 14, 1906.

"My Dear Senator Allison—As Senator Tillman brought in your name in connection with mine in the statement he made concerning our relations to the rate bill last Saturday. It is perhaps due to you that I should write you on the matter. After the rate bill was reported from the committee, and after by vote of the committee Mr. Tillman had been put in charge of it, many senators and many outsiders came to see me with reference to it. Among others I was asked to see Former Senator Chandler as representing Mr. Tillman, who was in charge of the bill. I stated in response that I was of course entirely willing to see Mr. Tillman personally or to see Mr. Chandler, or anyone else who could speak for him, and I accordingly directed my secretary to make an appointment for Mr. Chandler to see me. My understanding was that he was the representative of Mr. Tillman.

"In this first interview he stated to me the views of Mr. Tillman, with seeming authority. He called on me several times. During the same period I saw other gentlemen who professed to give the views of other senators. In addition I saw numerous senators, both Republicans and Democrats, some of them once or twice, some of them many times. I also saw numerous outsiders, railroad men, shippers, newspaper men and students of traffic regulation, including especially the attorney-general and the members of the interstate commission and on two occasions I saw groups of newspaper men en masse.

"To al lof these senators, representatives of senators and outsiders, I made the same statements; those that I made to Mr. Chandler being the same in substance that I made to you and to those of your colleagues of both political parties with whom I had any extended conferences on the subject. The letter of the attorney general, which I enclose, shows fully the facts as to the conference which, at my instance, he held with many other senators to determine the phraseology and discuss the effect of amendments proposed by them.

"To all whom I saw I stated that the Hepburn bill was in its essence entirely satisfactory to me. The Hepburn bill as it passed the house simply recognized the right of review by the courts—that is, the jurisdiction of the courts—but did not attempt to define it, thus leaving the courts to prescribe the limits of their own jurisdiction. This was in accordance with the ideas of the attorney general, his belief being that thereby we avoided all danger of the bill being declared unconstitutional because of the attempt to confer either too much or too little jurisdiction on the courts.

"I also repeatedly stated that while it was entirely satisfactory to me simply to leave the Hepburn bill in substance as it was, that is with the recognition of the jurisdiction of the courts, but without any attempt to define the jurisdiction; yet that I was entirely willing that there should be a definition, provided that this definition did not seek to grant a broad review, but explicitly narrowed it to the two subjects which as a matter of fact I believed that the courts would alone consider, in case there was no attempt to define the limits of their review; that it would limit it to the question as to whether any man's constitutional rights had been impaired. I stated that if the question of defining or limiting the review was brought upat all I personally felt that this was the way in which it should be limited or defined.

"At different times at least a score of tentative amendments were either prepared by the attorney general at the request of the senators or submitted to me by senators. As to many of these amendments (including among others the substance of the so-called Long, Overman, Bacon and Spooner amendments) I stated that I should be entirely satisfied to have them in the bill; as to others; I suggested modifications which would make them satisfactory; as to none did I ever say either to Mr. Chandler or to anyone else, that I should insist upon having them in the bill as a condition of my approving it. On the contrary I was always most careful to state that I was not trying to dictate any particular program of action. In no case, either in the case of Mr. Chandler or in the case of anyone else, was there the slightest opportunity for any honest misconception of my attitude, or any belief that I had pledged myself specifically to one and and only one amendment or set of amendments, or that I would not be satisfied with any amendments which preserved the essential feature of the Hepburn bill as it came from the house. You will doubtless recall that in the course of the several visits that you personally made me we discussed a number of these proposed amendments trying to find out for which there could be obtained a sufficient body of assent to secure its passage and the passage of the rate bill.

"To almost every amendment proposed by anyone I was informed that there were excellent men who objected or who at least wished to change it and I finally became convinced that it was impossible for senators with advantage to use me as the intermediary in coming to an agreement with their colleagues, especially when they only communicated with me through an intermediary, and I earnestly suggested to all to whom I spoke that they should communicate with you, whose purposes and mine were identical.

"About this time I was informed by various Democratic senators that they could not come to an agreement upon any amendment and that the best chance for success lay in passing the Hepburn bill substantially unchanged. I was informed and believed that this was Senator Bailey's view; and a number of the Republican senators who favored the bill expressed the same opinion Shortly after this you in company with Senator Cullum called upon me with the amendment which is now commonly known as the Allison amendment. I told you that while I should prefer the Long and Overman amendments yet that your amendment was entirely satisfactory.

"Your amendment does not in the slightest degree weaken or injure the Hepburn bill. It merely expresses what the friends have always asserted was implied by the terms of the bill. I may add, that my own opinion that your amendment in no way changed, whether by diminishing or enlarging the scope of the court review as provided in the original Hepburn bill, is also the opinion of the attorney general, of Mr. Root and Mr. Taft. Their judgment is that the amendment merely avoids the criticism that the Hepburn bill would not be constitutionally invalid in not expressly providing the court review which its supporters have always contended was plainly implied in the original language.

"The original Hepburn bill stated that the avenue for certain actions was in certain courts; the amendment states that these courts shall have jurisdiction to consider such actions. To my mind it seems difficult to assert that this works any change whatever in the principle of the bill.

"Yours very sincerely,

"THEODORE ROOSEVELT."

BOULEVARD FOR POINT

Lew Dockstader, the famous minstrel, while in Duluth the other day, manifested the kenest interest in the plans relating to Oatka Park, the outdoor place of amusement that will be built on the Point this summer for the entertainment of pleasure-loving Duluthians and their friends from outside points.

Mr. Dockstader expressed confidence that the enterprise would be a successful one, and made some valuable suggestions as to steps which might be taken to add to the attractiveness of the Point, thus drawing more people to it. He proposed that the city provide a driveway and bridle path along the beach from the Duluth entry to the Superior entry, remarking that a finer drive could not be found anywhere in the country. The minstrel predicted that, if built, it would become as famous as Duluth's boulevard.

"The location for the park is an ideal one," said Mr. Dockstader, who not being satisfied with being told about it, visited the site on the point in company with Charles A. Marshall, vice president and general manager of the company. "Everybody who visits the city during the season will be sure to go down to Oatka park, if they can possibly spare the time, and your home people should become regular patrons. The outsider is naturally interested in the Point, anyway, and is always anxious to see the aerial bridge, and to ride across on it. With the park as an additional attraction there will be few who do not make it a point to see what the place has to offer.

"I was very much impressed with the magnificent piers at the entry, and they tell me the piers at the Superior entry are just as interesting, and on as big a scale. With the steps now being taken to further beautify them, and the grounds about them, what could be more pleasant on a summer's day than a drive from one set of piers to the other, a distance, I am told, of seven miles. A fine boulevard could be laid out along the beach at small expense, and it should not cost much to keep it in repair. A bridle path in connection would be a good idea. These improvements would be among the best advertisers of the city that Duluth could have, and besides would be a source of continual pride and pleasure to citizens themselves.

"But there is certainly a good field for an amusement park on the Point. It is sure to be a fine success from the start. Oatka is a pretty name, too, having a sound and appearance that will prove of value from an advertising standpoint."

Men are already at work on the Oatka Park grounds, and the force will be added to this week. Everything will be in readiness for a grand opening, July 4, or before.

MOB QUIETLY HANGS NEGRO ASSAILANT.

Eastman, Pa., May 15.—Mrs. Pope, a widow, who lives alone about six miles north of Eastman, was assaulted by a negro, named Will Wommock, last Friday night. He told her if she made the assault known he would kill her and that he would be back the next night. When the negro returned Saturday Mrs. Pope began firing, one bullet striking Wommock in the stomach and passed through his body. The negro ran and Mrs. Pope continued to shoot at him until she had emptied her pistol. Neighbors attracted by the shooting, came and heard the facts. They went to Wommock's house and found him in bed wounded. At first he denied his guilt, but later he confessed. He was taken out and strung up and his body riddled with bullets, after which the mob quietly dispersed.

PALE PEOPLE

Wonder why they feel so debilitated—why their cheeks, lips and tongues are almost colorless.

The reason is easy to find.

This condition is not a disease in itself, but the result of disease.

It may be produced by dyspepsia, malaria or hemorrhage; but the most common cause is insufficient nutrition.

What is wanted is a nutrient which will increase the vital force and put the blood in a normal condition.

Ozomulsion

does this as no other remedy can. It supplies the nourishment to build up the tissue and increase the red corpuscles of the blood. It gives strength and color. It does this because it contains Guaiacol, Glycerine and the Hypophosphites.

The Cod Liver Oil supplies the food that puts on the flesh and makes strength.

NOT EASY TO BUY COPPER

George L. Walker in his weekly review of the copper market reports prices as very strong and showing a tendency to harden. The producers do ot want speculation in the metal, being well satisfied with present prices and they are taking precautions to sell only to consumers. Walker says:

"Copper continues remarkably strong. Domestic and foreign prices show unmistakable tendency to harden. The strong control exerted by large producing interests is undoubtedly preventing too rapid advance to the higher level of prices which existing conditions seem to warrant. Lake is held at 18¾ to 18⅞ cents per pound, electrolytic at 18½ to 18¾ cents, and casting at 18¼ to 18½ cents.

"Very little copper is available for nearby delivery, the large producing interests being practically sold up to Aug. 1. Some scattering purchases for nearby delivery are reported at 19 cents. Large sales of electrolytic at 18¾ cents for delivery in September were negotiated this week.

"Inquiry among the producers and selling agents reveals the fact that very little copper can be obtained before July. The market is apparently free from speculation. Producers report that conditions are such that they have difficulty in supplying the requirements of regular customers, and they are taking every precaution to sell only to actual consumers.

"In accord with copper, the consumption of iron, steel and metals generally in this country is breaking all records, while the production in all of these lines is barely able to keep pace with the great demand. Tin, antimony, lead and spelter are all selling at record prices. The advance in antimony is even more marked than in copper. A year ago it was selling around 8½ cents per pound; it is now selling in the neighborhood of 25 cents per pound, and higher prices are predicted. Brass manufacturers, wire drawers and manufacturers of electrical apparatus all report phenomenal business, with no let-up in sight.

"The annual report of the General Electric company for the fiscal year ended Jan. 31 furnishes sufficient evidence of the enormous current consumption of copper and the unprecedented demand for electrical goods. While the business of the company for the year 1905 surpassed all previous records, indications are that the business of the present year will be still larger.

"With the wonderful strength of position reflected in both the foreign and domestic markets, and with the producing interests sold up for several months ahead, the outlook for the metal is exceedingly bright.

COPPER SHARES.

"The recovery that has taken place in Wall street has brought a much better tone to the Boston market and particularly to copper shares. These specialities have passed through a very trying ordeal, and their action has been extremely encouraging to all holders. Prices suffered material losses, as was to be expected, but there was far less selling pressure than is noted usually on such a market. It has been made apparent, to all that there are no weak speculative accounts in the copper shares.

"The general public has kept out of the coppers simply because these stocks have not shown as much relative activity and strength as the balance of the market. It is difficult to distinguish altogether between cause and effect in this case, and to say positively whether the absence of the public has caused the inactivity, or the inactivity has caused the absence of the public.

"There have been persistent endeavors to frighten holders of the coppers into selling, and to discourage others from buying. The floating supply of coppers, as has been thoroughly demonstrated during the past few weeks, is very small. The stocks will respond readily to any aggressive buying.

"Every condition favors higher prices for the copper shares and I look for a good market in these during the coming months. Big interests that have accumulated large lines of the good copper stocks are about ready to take an active part in the market. This is all that is necessary for a big advance. Good copper stocks can be bought with much more safety than any other class of stocks. They should break away from the New York market altogether."

A FAMILY OF NINE KILLED

Preacher, Wife and Seven Children Murdered and Then Cremated.

Pensacola, Fla., May 15.—One of the most horrible crimes in the history of this state, if not of the entire South, was committed in Santa Rosa county, ten miles north of Milton, Sunday night. An itinerant preacher named Ackerman, his wife and seven children, the eldest about 14 years old, were killed and their bodies cremated in their home, which was fired by the assassins. The crime was discovered yesterday morning by persons with whom Ackerman han an appointment. They found the house in ruins and the charred bodies of Ackerman and the eight members of his family scattered among the wreckage. Examination by physicians showed that Ackerman and his wife had been struck on the head with some blunt instrument, their skulls being crushed. The citizens of Milton have raised more than $1,000, which will be offered as a reward for the apprehension of the assassins, and Governor Broward has been appealed to to offer a reward for the state.

Ackerman was considered as a peaceful and quiet citizen. It is not known that he had any enemies who could have a motive for the crime.

MISTAKE COSTS THE COUNTY $80

State Authorities Refuse to Pay Detention Hospital Bill.

St. Louis county will pay a hospital claim of $80 that is really chargeable to the state but which the state board of control has turned down on account of a technicality.

The claim has been pending for some time. It is one that St. Luke's hospital rendered on account of persons cared for at that institution who were examined for insanity and whom the examining physicians decided were not in condition for the insane asylum at Fergus Falls, but were subjects for local hospital care for a short time.

I the past year there have been a few instances where the examining board appointed to pass on the condition of a person alleged to be insane have decided that the patient "was of doubtful sanity." The law provides that cases of "doubtful sanity" may be cared for by the county and the expense charged against the state. Through an error of the examining physicians, however, the papers contained the statement that the patient was not insane and did not qualify as to "doubtful sanity." At the recommendation of the physicians the patients were taken care of for a time at St. Luke's hospital and then discharged, as their condition warranted it.

When the county presented the hospital's bill for the care of the patients the state board of control refused to pay it on the ground that the state is not liable for the care of any but insane persons or persons of doubtful sanity.

The law contains no provision for the payment of the hospital's claim by the county, although the papers were really made out under the supervision of the county authorities and there was a possibility that the hospital would have to stand the loss although not responsible for the mistake in any way.

The matter has been taken up with the state authorities and an understanding reached whereby the county is assured that it may pay the bill without interference by the public examiner. The position is taken that the county officials are really in the blame for the error and that the county shall bear the expense, but the state authorities insist that the payment under the circumstances shall not be regarded as a precedent.

TAWNEY MAY START FIGHT.

Washington, May 15.—There will be a merry row on the floor of the house if the committee on appropriations reports in the sundry civil bill, as it now threatens to do, a provision that will in effect abolish the position of receiver in United States land offices. Representative Lacey, chairman of the public lands committee, was turned down when he made an effort to report his bill doing away with the receivers, and, true to his promise, he took the matter before the committee on appropriations. This committee is in a position to report to the house in favor of withholding the wherewithal for receivers, and if Chairman Tawney joins with Representative Lacey in the latter's movement to have the work in land offices consolidated in one official, namely, the register, the receivers.

The commissioner of the general land office estimates that there would be a net saving to the government of $250,-000 a year if the office of land receiver is abolished, with no impairment to the efficiency of the service.

"This is more than a fight for the receivers," said a Northwestern member yesterday. "The way things are going now there will be nothing left in a couple of years in the way of patronage for members of the house. We are confronted with a rule that eventually will deprive us of the privilege of naming postmasters in our districts. The tendency of the Indian service is to place agencies in charge of bonded school superintendents, and that has been done in a number of instances. Now they want to knock out the land receivers."

If the house should fail to appropriate the salaries of receivers, these officials would have to depend upon their fees, unless it were held by the legal lights of the government that the act of withholding the salaries legislated the receivers out of office. The point is made by the opponents of the Lacey bill that if the committee on appropriations refuses to make funds available for the salaries of receivers, and such action is indorsed by the house and senate, it will result in the filing of a large number of claims against the government by aggrieved receivers.

NORTH DAKOTA.

Grand Forks—Pat Rooney, wanted at Williston, on a charge of shooting with intent to kill, who was arrested at Winnepeg several weeks ago, has been fully identified, and as soon as proof of crime is presented to the Manitoba justice he will be held for extradition. In order that this may be furnished, the case was adjourned for a week. Sheriff Lampman, Williston, and Special Agent Delaney, Spokane, have returned from Winnipeg, where they went to identify Rooney, who said that his name is Murphy and that he had never been in Williston. As Sheriff Lampman has had charge of Rooney on two different occasions since the shooting and Special Agent Delaney figured in his arrest the last time on the streets of Spokane, there can be no question but Rooney has at last been located. In August, 1905, Rooney and two companions named Coleman and Howard, boarded a freight train east bound from Williston, and at a point five miles out endeavored to hold up the brakeman, Jay Thompson. Thompson put up a fight and two shots were fired at him. One cut the top of a memorandum book off as it rested in his vest pocket and made a slight wound across his breast. The second bullet was buried in the calf of his leg. The three men were overpowered and taken to Williston. Coleman and Howard drew five years each in the penitentiary and Rooney made his escape. He was arrested several months later in Spokane and was taken to jail at Williston. He said then that his first escape was made possible by some politicians who sought to discredit the sheriff at that time. He remained in jail but a short time when he again escaped, and although diligent search was made for him he was not located until his arrest at Winnipeg on suspicion of being in some burglaries.

Fargo—First plans in the high school declamatory contest was won by Miss Alice Fuller and second by Miss Ruth Miller. The former won a gold and the latter a silver stickpin. In addition they have the honor of representing the city at the state contest to be held May 18 and 19 at Grand Forks.

Lack of harmony between the stockholders and Manager Heath of the Fargo & Moorhead Street Railway company has resulted in the acceptance of Heath's resignation, which becomes effective June 1. Heath's relatives own a large block of stock, but not the controling interest.

A boycott will be made on the merchants who have failed to join in the early closing movement started by the clerks of Fargo. The trades assembly took the matter up and indorsed the clerks.

Dickinson—Two touring automobiles were destroyed by fire in the Millard Automobile company garage of this city, one machine belonging to the Millard company and the other to Commissioner George W. Lee. The machines cost $1,200 each this spring, and only the company's machine was insured. One auto had just been run into the garage and was hot, and it is supposed that some waste on the floor took fire.

One of the Millard boys was badly burned and Mr. Lee had a narrow escape. A 50-gallon tank of gasoline was so heated before the fire department arrived that the solder in the cover melted, but the oil did not take fire.

Oakes—Paul, the 16-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. W. M. Hutslupiller, prominent residents of this city, was drowned in the James river Sunday. He was a promising youth.

Ten delegates have been selected from Dickey county to the state convention, and they will be voted upon at the primaries on June 12. They are the choice of the Republican county central committee and favor the renomination of Congressman Marshall.

SOUTH DAKOTA.

Sioux Falls—Rumors that Mrs. James G. Blaine intended to come to Sioux Falls for the purpose of establishing a residence and securing a divorce became a reality Monday by the arrival of herself and maid in the city for the purpose of taking up their residence here for the necessary period of six months.

They were driven from the train directly to the Cataract hotel, where Mrs. Blaine had engaged a suite of four rooms and where she will make her home during the six months or more she remains in Sioux Falls, pending the commencement of her divorce suit and the securing of a divorce decree.

Her arrival caused a flutter among members of the local divorce colony. It is recalled by old residents that she is the second Mrs. James G. Blaine to come to Sioux Falls with the object of procuring a divorce, the first being former Miss Nevins, who now is the wife of Dr. Bull of New York city.

Langford—Kenneth Drew, 11 years of age, son of Mrs. Bertha Drew of Niles, Mich., accidentally shot and killed himself while hunting gophers near here Sunday. Mrs. Drew and the boy came here about two months ago to visit Mr. and Mrs. L. Chamberlain. Sunday the lad went hunting with a 22-caliber rifle, and when he did not return to dinner in the evening his mother grew uneasy and secured the assistance of neighbors to search for him. The boy was found lying on his back with a bullet-hole in the corner of his right eye. He died an hour later. It is thought the rifle was discharged while he was crawling under a wire fence, as the weapon was found there later.

THE BISBEE COMPANIES

Rumors of Consolidation of Four Are Growing More Persistent.

Rumors of a possible consolidation of the four leading Bisbee companies outside of the Calumet & Arizona, which means the Lake Superior & Pittsburg, Calumet & Pittsburg, Junction and Pittsburg & Duluth companies, are in general circulation. They have been heard for some time but are more persistent than ever of late. A meeting of directors of the companies was held yesterday in Calumet, Mich., and a report was spread that it was upon this matter, but no information as to what the session was for has been made public.

The Bisbee Review publishes a story that a $20,000,000 holding company is to be formed. A stock broker, Frank J. Graf, was quoted with reference to it. If all of the statement is as reliable as the assertion as to the capital stock of the different companies there is not much in it, for Mr. Graf was credited with saying that the combined capital stock issued by the four companies is $2,500,000, whereas it is $10,000,000, each company having $2,500,000.

The leading men in the control of the companies are known to favor consolidation and there is little doubt that they are striving to find a means to bring it about. The difficulty, however, will be in finding a basis upon which it can be done satisfactorily to all the stockholders.

Copper stocks opened strong, broke, rallied and closed higher than yesterday. North Butte opened at $92.25, sold as high as $93.25, as low at $91.25, and closed at $92 bid and $92.50 tsked. Amalgamated opened at $109.37½, sold as high as $109.62½, as low as $107.25, and closed at $109.12½ bid and $109.25 asked.

Anaconda opened at $271, sold as high as $273.75, as low at $261, and closed at $268 bid. Butte Coalition was inactive and closed at $32 bid and $32.50 asked. Calumet & Arizona was inactive and closed at $113 bid. United Copper opened at $66, sold as high as $66.75, as low at $65, and closed at $65.75 bid and $66.25 asked.

The Bisbees closed unchanged, although some of them were weaker during the session. Calumet & Pittsburg sold at $28.12½ and $28.25, closing at $28 bid and $29 asked. Denn-Arizona closed at $13.50 bid. Junction sold at $25.12½ and $25, closing at $25 bid. Lake Superior & Pittsburg sold at $33 and $32.50, closing at $33 bid and $33.75 asked and Pittsburg & Duluth closed at $19 bid and $19.50 asked, after selling at $19.25 and $20.

Black Mountain sold at $11 and closed at $11.50 asked; Kewecnaw at $11 and closed at $11 bid. Warren closed at $15 bid. Copper Queen of Idaho sold at $2.25 and closed at $2 bid and $2.25 asked, and Ophir Tunnel sold at 19 cents, closing at 17 cents bid and 19 cents asked.

POSSIBILITY OF WAR WITH TURKS

Tiflis, Trans-Caucasia, May 15.—There is considerable excitement in Trans-Caucasia owing to the possibility of a war with Turkey in the summer. Turkey seems to be mobilizing troops near the frontier, explaining that they are simply engaged in maneuvers. Nevertheless the viceroy of Trans-Caucasia appears to be preparing for possible eventualities. General Mafiansky, the chief of staff, and the artillery and commissary officers have made an extensive inspection to our frontier, and the fortifications of Kars, the strongest fortress on the border, are being strengthened.

St. Petersburg, May 15.—No admission is obtainable here that Russia is indulging in warlike preparations in Trans-Caucasia, but it is possible that the military activity reported in the dispatch from Tiflis is an echo of a demonstration designed to support Great Britain in her dispute with Turkey regarding the boundary of Sinai peninsula.

CONFERENCE CONTINUED

Marine Workers and Carriers Have Not Yet Agreed.

Cleveland, May 15.—Conferences of marine workers and their employers who have not as yet agreed on conditions of employment for this season, were continued today. The executive committee of the Lake Carriers' association headed by President William L. Livingstone, conferred until afternoon with the delegates of the Marine Firemen, Oilers and Water Tenders' union, headed by President D. J. Keefe.

The demands of the men, for $52.50 a month for the regular season instead of $45, and $55 a month for the fall season instead of $50, and for a fall season, beginning September 1, instead of October 1, were discussed at length.

It was said that no agreement had been reached, but it was expected that all of the points of difference would be settled on a compromise basis by night.

THE PAPER AND PULP MAKERS TO AMALGAMATE.

Dayton, Ohio, May 15.—A settlement of the dispute among the International Brotherhood of Paper Makers is practically at hand, Secretary Morrison of the American Federation of Labor, stating that it will doubtless come before night, and that the paper makers and the pulp makers will amalgamate.

The paper makers recently withdrew from the organization. The settlement will be satisfactory, and especially to the pulp makers. A president's report shows a membership in the United States of 14,000, and not a strike on anywhere.

THE EASY OIL.

Scott's Emulsion is "the easy oil"—easy to take, easy in action. Its use insures deliverance from the griping and nauseating sensation peculiar to the raw oil. Nobody who has any regard for the stomach thinks of taking cod liver oil in the old way when Scott's Emulsion is to be had. It is equally certain that no one whose health is properly regarded will accept a cheap emulsion or alcoholic substitute for Scott's Emulsion. It fulfills every mission of cod liver oil and more.

Lincoln, Neb., May 15.—A dispatch from Crawford, Neb., says four are now dead in the riots between white men and negro soldiers from Fort Robinson. William Murphy, white, was killed at midnight by a squad of soldiers guarding the jail at Crawford. Murphy, with others, tried to form a lynching party to gain possession of a negro soldier who killed Arthur Moss, the night watchman.

Malta-Vita has qualities not found in any other food, and these are of importance to you if you want to be well and happy. You know it's hard to be happy unless you are well.

Malta-Vita contains the highest possible degree of nutritious food and demands the least possible digestive effort on the part of the stomach.

To begin with, Malta-Vita is made from the very best white wheat. After this wheat is cleaned and scoured, cooked through and through and matured in fresh, pure air (there is no other kind of air in the Malta-Vita factory) it is mixed with the finest malt extract that was ever made. The malted wheat is then rolled into little flakes and baked in intense heat, each flake becoming crisp—the crispest, most nourishing food in the world.

You understand, of course, that the thorough cooking and steaming of the wheat gelatinizes its starch, and the malt extract, a powerful digestive agent, quickly converts this into Maltose (malt sugar). Malt sugar is great food, and the weakest stomach digests and assimilates it without effort. That is why Malta-Vita is so good for sick folks or folks with weak stomachs.

Malta-Vita melts in the mouth. It's always crisp, refreshing, satisfying. The perfect food for children and grown folks. All grocers, now 10 cents.

DAVIS ARRAIGNED

On Charge of Manslaughter, Growing Out of Iroquois Fire.

Chicago, May 15.—Will J. Davis, who was manager of the Iroquois theater at the time of the great fire in that building, was arraigned today on a charge of manslaughter, growing out of the fire. By agreement with the state's attorney, a continuance was taken until tomorrow.

Counsel for Mr. Davis said that a change of venue had been asked by Mr. Davis on March 10, 1905, but that it had never been argued nor disposed of.

The state's attorney declared that if a change of venue was to be asked for and arguments made, it should be done at once as the matter had grown so old that it should be disposed of.

GUILTY OF BAD FAITH

Charge Made by Senator Tillman Against the President.

Washington, May 15.—The senate began its consideration of the railroad rate bill today by taking up Senator Lodge's amendment providing for the increase of the interstate commerce commission to nine members, and requiring that one be appointed from each of the judicial circuits of the country. Senator Hopkins opposed the amendment, on the ground that it would deprive the commission of its national character.

Mr. Hopkins also found fault with the proposed increase of salary for the members of the commission. "We are running mad in our efforts to increase salaries of officials," he declared.

The amendment received the hearty endorsement of Senator Martin, who especially commented on the propositions to increase salaries, increase the size of the commission and distribute the members throughout the country.

Mr. Tillman then referred to the letter addressed by the president to Senator Allison. He said he hoped that Senator Allison would put the letter in the record and that something would be said in reference to the question of veracity. Mr. Tillman said that the president was ingenious and not ingenious. Mr. Tillman declared emphatically that he had never made any overtures to the president.

"This is Tillman speaking now," he said, and a wave of laughter went over the senate and galleries.

"The charge I make," he said, "is that the president is guilty of bad faith."

Mr. Tillman said he had never sought an interview or any communication with the president.

Senator Allison said he had received a letter from the president which he offered and it was read. When the words "I saw the newspaper men in a mass" were read, there was a roar of laughter in the senate and galleries.

As soon as the president's letter and Mr. Moody's letter had been read, Senator Nelson moved to lay the pending amendment on the table. This was carried by a viva voce vote, taking the Lodge amendment and collateral amendments with it. Such was the close of the Tillman-president incident.

FINDS BODIES OF PROSPECTORS

Caliente, Nev., May 15.—Joseph Constantine, a prospector, who has just returned from a trip into Death Valley, reports the finding of the bodies of two young Eastern prospectors, at the foot of the Funeral mountains. Both men wore trousers, bearing a label, "Walsh, the tailor." One of the men carried a watch, inscribed, "M. G. H.," and wore a seal ring, bearing the letter "H."

They perished nearly thirty miles from water. The fingers of one of the men had been worn to the bone digging in the sand, evidently in an attempt to reach water. Constantine and his men brought the bodies out and buried them near Carroll Springs.

WHEAT HAS A DECLINE

Flax Slightly Weaker But the Undertone Fairly Firm.

Duluth Board of Trade, May 15.—Showers and predictions of showers depressed wheat in all American markets today. Larger receipts in the Northwest contributed to the decline, too. Liverpool closed unchanged to ¼d lower, Paris unchanged to ¼c lower, Berlin and Antwerp unchanged and Budapest ⅞c lower.

The May option closed ⅞c lower in Duluth and Minneapolis, 1¼c in Chicago, New York, Kansas City and Winnipeg and unchanged in St. Louis. The July option closed ⅝c lower in Duluth and Winnipeg, 1¼c in Chicago, Minneapolis and New York, ⅝@⅞c in St. Louis and ½@⅝c in Kansas City.

Corn was unchanged in Chicago and unchanged to ½d lower in Liverpool. July oats closed a shade off in Chicago.

Primary receipts of wheat were 214,000 bus, last year 153,000 bus. Shipments 208,000 bus, last year 184,000 bus. Clearances of wheat and flour aggregated 77,000 bus. Bradstreet's reports a decrease of 3,884,000 bus in the world's visible supply of wheat. East of the Rockies there was a decrease of 3,494,000 bus, and in Europe and afloat, a decrease of 490,000 bus.

Primary receipts of corn were 304,000 bus, last year 174,000 bus. Shipments 600,000 bus, last year 320,000 bus. Clearances of corn were 25,000 bus. The world's visible supply of corn decreased 1,450,000 bus.

Wheat was very active in the Duluth market during most of the session. The opening was dull. Prices fell off as the session waned. May wheat was inactive at the opening, sold ¼c higher to 82¾c, advanced to 82¾c, fell off to 81⅝c and closed at that price, a loss of ⅝c from yesterday. July wheat opened unchanged at 82½c, advanced to 82⅝c at 10:30, declined to 82¼c at 11:10, rallied to 82⅝c at 11:20, declined to 81⅞c at 12:20 and closed at that price, a loss of ⅝c from yesterday. September wheat sold at 79⅝c, advanced to 79⅝c and closed at 79c, a loss of ¼c from yesterday.

Flax was dull, but while prices were a little weaker, there was a fairly strong undertone. Flax was ⅝c lower in Antwerp and 1¾c lower for Laplatta and ⅝c lower for Calcutta linseed in London. A small amount of flax was worked for export from Duluth. May flax opened unchanged at $1.16½, declined to $1.16¼ and closed at that price, a loss of ¼c from yesterday. July flax opened ¼c lower at $1.17½, declined to $1.17¼ and ranged between that and $1.17½ during the rest of the session, closing at $1.17½, a loss of ¼c from yesterday.

September flax opened unchanged at $1.17½ and closed at that price, after a session of inactivity. October flax opened ¼c higher at $1.16 and closed at that price.

THE CHICAGO MARKET.

Rains and Predictions of Rains Cause Weakness in Wheat.

Chicago, May 15.—The wheat market today opened weak because of rains in the Southwest and predictions of additional rain in the wheat belt. Larger receipts in the Northwest were also a bearish influence. Pit traders were free sellers and the offerings were taken largely by commission houses. July wheat opened 1⅝@1¾c to ⅞@1¼c lower at 80⅝c to 80⅞c, sold up to 81c and reacted to 80¾c. Minneapolis, Duluth and Chicago reported receipts of 204 cars, against 181 cars last week and 185 cars a year ago.

The market became weaker as the session advanced. The low point for July was 80¼c. The close was weak with July off 1½c at 80½@⅝c.

The corn market was easier because of local receipts being somewhat larger than had been estimated. Cables were lower and this also depressed prices. The volume of trading was small. July opened a shade to ⅛c lower at 46¾c to 46¾@⅞c and sold at 46¾c. Local receipts were 117 cars, with 21 of contract grade.

The market in oats was steady. Offerings were very small and business dull. July opened a shade higher at 32⅝c to 32⅝@⅔c and declined to 32@⅜c. Local receipts were 158 cars.

The provisions market was quiet and easier because of a weaker market for live hogs. Prices declined very slightly, but the tone of the market was weak. July pork was 5c lower at $15.40. Lard was down a shade at $8.57½. Ribs were 2½c lower at $8.77½.

Close: Wheat—May, 82⅝c; July, 80½@⅝c. Corn—May, 48¾c; July, 46⅝c. Oats—May, 33⅝@¾c; July, 32c. Pork—May, $15.50; July, $15.60. Lard—May, $8.52½; July, $8.62½. Ribs—May, $8.72½; July, $8.85@$8.87½. Grain Gossip.

Logan & Bryan, Chicago: Wheat—That there is considerable merit and staying quality in this wheat around present prices for the new crop months, was demonstrated today by the fact that prices made a half cent net loss for the session while the bearish influences predominated more or less all day. There was less talk of Northwest points shipping wheat to this market to fill short sales. Bradstreets decrease of nearly 4,000,000 bushels in world's stocks was a supporting influence. The recognized leaders on the bull side in the local trade were not letting go of any of their lines. In fact, the bear forces were quite timid about putting forth any selling pressure during the morning. Late in the session the trade again had alnts from very good sources that negotiations for settlement are in progress between the Eastern holders and the Northwest short interest. Naturally this had a little bearish influence, and resulted in the lower prices. If such a settlement takes place and the crop prospect continues as fine as at present, there may be a sudden change of feeling of the bear side of these new crop months.

Corn—Because the local receipts of corn continue small, an estimate of only 51 cars for tomorrow, many in the trade are inclined to think that the talk of a larger movement from first hands is without foundation. Those most friendly to corn claim that the corn raiser is going to be slow to part with his reserves, and without stocks and without receipts, a remarkable bull situation may develop. It is more reasonable to suppose that the planting season will be followed by very liberal offerings from first hands, a larger run of receipts resulting.

Germany—Crops are making good progress, but further rains wanted, however. Supplies are larger.

Roumania—Weather conditions are favorable and crop prospects are good.

Russia—Condition of the crop in the South, Southwest and West Central are very favorable. Supplies are fair. In the Southeast, East and East Central there are further complaints of drought. Supplies have decreased.

Spain—There is no change in crop prospects.

Australia—Beneficial rains have fallen.

Chicago Inter-Ocean: J. J. Hill, in an interview with a Winnipeg man, predicts that by 1916 the United States will count 100,000,000 people. He says: "Our average consumption of wheat is six and one-half bushels per capita, and with a production of 650,000,000 bushels, which may decrease instead of increase, you see where we will eb in a few more years. Then will come your chance in the Canadian West. We shall be obliged to become your best customer, and how the orders to fill our wants will increase every year will astonish you."

The Cotton Market.

New York, May 15.—The cotton market opened steady at an advance of 1@6 points in response to higher cables, big English spot sales and continued apprehensions of an unfavorable weekly bureau report. Later the market yielded to heavy realizing and local bear pressure, under which it eased off to a decline of 2@2½ points of last night's finals, and during the middle of the morning was rather less active, although the tone seemed steady around the opening figures.

Cotton spot closed quiet; middling uplands, 11.85; do gulf, 12.20. Sales, 50 bales. Futures closed steady. May, 11.38; June, 11.18; July, 11.17; August, 10.96; September, 10.71; October, 10.60; November, 10.66; December, 10.67; Jan., 10.71; Feb., 10.72; March, 10.75.

Details of the raid are lacking at present. A force of constabulary is now on the trail of the raiders.

ADVANCES IN STOCKS

Market Eased Off Under Liquidation But Had a Rally.

Dullness Followed the Recovery—Closing Was Firm.

New York, May 15.—A number of the speculative market leaders opened at unchanged prices from last night. Otherwise fractional gains were the rule with the copper group conspicuous. Smelting rose nearly a point and Amalgamated Copper ⅝. Northern Pacific gained ⅞ and Minneapolis, St. Paul & Soo fell a point.

Business was rather light throughout the first hour, but there was an increasing show of strength which as of late was most beneficial to the specialties. Union Pacific and Reading were dealt in heavily at advances, but St. Paul met stock on the rise. Kanawha & Michigan went up 9 points very suddenly and then fell back 6 on one transaction. Smelting rose 2½ and the railroad equipment stocks, Amalgamated Copper, Lead, Colorado Fuel, Brooklyn Transit, Reading, Union Pacific, Great Northern preferred, Norfolk & Western, Denver & Rio Grande and Rock Island preferred, 1 to 1⅞. Northwestern ran off 2.

The market turned weak in the second hour. Prices fell to below last night, the Northwestern Grangers leading the decline. Northern Pacific lost 3; St. Paul, 2; Great Northern preferred, 1⅜, and there were declines in Federal Mining of 4½; Anaconda, 4; Distillers' Securities, 2¾; Tennessee Coal, 2, and International Pump, 1¼. Wabash preferred rose 1 and American Express 10. There were some small rallies before noon. Bonds were irregular.

Considerable stock was thrown on the market for which there was no sustaining demand and prices yielded sharply. Most of the well known stocks sold a point or more below yesterday's closing. Liquidation was evident in some of the transcontinental stocks. Chief declines up to 1 o'clock were Anaconda 10, Great Northern preferred 4, Northern Pacific 4¼, Northwestern 4, Pacific Coast 3, St. Paul 2¾, Pullman 2 and Union Pacific, Southern Pacific, Pennsylvania, New York Central, L. & N., Mexican Central, Amalgamated Copper, Colorado Fuel, Lead, Sugar and Brooklyn Transit 1 to 1½.

Selling decreased temporarily but as the market made no effective rally pressure was renewed. Smelting was forced down 1 and Reading 2 points and a number of stocks of similar importance sold lower than they had previously. Before 2 o'clock the market was picking up again, Smelting making a full recovery and some of the western stocks also rallied over a point.

Prices rallied with the announcement of the quick sale of the Pennsylvania note issue and of the intention to keep the proceeds on deposit with the banks. Great Northern preferred and Northern Pacific rallied 3⅛, St. Paul 2¾ and other prominent stocks a point. Hocking Valley fell 4. The market became very dull at the recovery and was inclined to yield for a time. Smelting then rose vigorously 1⅝ over last night and held prices elsewhere in sympathy. The closing was firm.

Stock Gossip.

Logan & Bryan to Paine, Webber & Co.: The market closed irregular. The early strength gave way to quite a little weakness, the entire list selling off under liquidation. In the last half hour, however, market rallied sharply, the list generally speaking making somes advances over yesterday's closing figures. From our advices, we are inclined to think the reaction at this time is a good thing for the market. It was overdue, and the rally today indicates how well stocks are held. We would not be surprised to see the advance carried further.

* * *

New York to Baker: Few can bring themselves to believe that a decided bull movement is likel yto set in at this time of year, following immediately after a real crisis in prices. There is undoubtedly still a considerable short interest outstanding which is always a stedying influence in the market.

Walker Brothers to Paine, Webber & Co.: The market today after the opening was inclined to sell off and later developed a great deal of weakness. Traders sold and caught some stop orders and the break was sharp. All the active stocks had losses and at one time it looked as if there was heavy liquidation. This, however, did not last long and the market turned and short covering helped prices.

Dick Brothers to Paine, Webber & Co.: The market continued reactionary this morning and some sharp declines were scored in leading stocks. In the afternoon, however, the pressure disappeared and there was a sudden change in the tone of the market and before the closing there was a sharp rally. The leaders in the early decline and also in the late rally were Union Pacific, Copper, Brooklyn Rapid Transit, Smelters and Reading. Specialties were not much in evidence.

Copper Gossip.

Boston to Paine, Webber & Co.: The market today continued to show liquidation especially in Parrot, which closed weak at 26¾@⅞. North Butte opened strong, but there was little demand for the stock toward the close. All the rest of the coppers show a sagging tendency and should be sold on any rally, until we see evidence of public support. We think there will be some money in buying Parrot at its present level.

FULL AMNESTY IS DEMANDED

Russian Parliament Prepares Address to the Throne.

St. Petersburg, May 15.—The draft of the address to the throne, in reply to the emperor's speech at the opening of parliament, was submitted to the lower house of parliament today by the commission. It consists practically of the following ten demands:

1. General amnesty.
2. Abolition of the death penalty.
3. The suspension of martial law and all exceptional laws.
4. Full civil liberty.
5. The abolition of the council of the empire.
6. The revision of the fundamental law.
7. The establishment of the responsibility of ministers.
8. The right of interpellation.
9. Forced expropriation of land.
10. Guarantees of the rights of trades unions.

The reply to the speech from the throne concludes as follows:

"Your Majesty: On the threshold of our labors, one question agitates the soul of the whole Russian people and prevents us as their representatives from calmly entering upon our legislative work. The first word pronounced in parliament was amnesty. It was met with cries of sympathy. The country is thirsting for it. It is a demand of the people's conscience, which it is impossible to refuse or delay.

"Sire: The parliament awaits full political amnesty as the first pledge of a mutual understanding in the future and concord between the emperor and the people."

WOMAN LOSES $10,000 LIFE INSURANCE.

Columbus, Ohio, May 15.—Sarah M. Finnegan, a Cincinnati widow, lost by a decision of the supreme court today a $10,000 life insurance judgment against the Mutual Reserve Fund Life association. John Finnegan, whose life was insured, found the agent's office closed when he went to pay a premium on the day it was due, so he went back and paid it the next day. It was accepted by the agent, but the home office refused to take it, and it was returned.

While the matter was in dispute, Finnegan died, and the company refused to pay the policy. Mrs. Finnegan sued and got judgment below, but the supreme court today set it aside.

SUPPLIES FOR CANAL

Washington, May 15.—The president today transmitted to congress a letter from Secretary Taft, accompanied by numerous appendices, bearing on the controverted question of the right of the Isthmian canal commission to purchase supplies abroad, if they can be secured cheaper than in America. The president, in a letter to Secretary Taft, says the views expressed by the latter in the affirmative, have his full approval.

The letter of Secretary Taft to the president relates to the purchase of dredges for use in the construction of the Panama canal. In this particular case, says Secretary Taft, there were nine bids for the construction of two sea-going suction dredges, one to be used at Colon and the other at La Boca, on the Pacific side of the isthmus. The lowest two bids were submitted by, first, the Maryland Steel company of Sparrows Point, Maryland, at $724,850, and the second, by the Scotch firm of William Simons & Co. of Renfrew, at $654,000. The Maryland dredges were to be delivered at Sparrows Point, and the Scotch on the Clyde, but the Scotch firm offered to deliver them at Cristobal and La Boca at an advance on the contract price of $17,980 for the first, and $34,020 for the second.

Keeping in mind certain arguments advanced by the Maryland Steel company in favor of their bids, the secretary says:

"The result of this comment seems to be that there is, under any circumstances, a difference in favor of the bid of Simons & Co. of about 8 per cent of the total expenditure. There is no question of the high standing of both bidders, and no doubt that if the bid of either is accepted it will be satisfactorily performed. The exact question now presented is whether, on the sole ground that one bidder is an American manufacturing corporation, and the other is Scotch, the Isthmian canal commission shall pay to the Maryland company from $60,000 to $70,000 more for two steel dredges than the price at which it may buy those dredges from Simons & Co.

"In my letter of Jan. 12, 1905, in which I transmitted to you the first report of the Isthmian canal commission, I invited your attention to the general policy to be pursued in cases like this."

In the letter referred to the secretary appealed to congress to specifically direct him whether or not he should continue this policy of purchasing in the cheapest market but he remarks that no action has since been taken by congress on this subject. He then briefly reviews the law as it stands bearing on the procurement of supplies under government contract beginning with the appropriation act of 1875 giving preference to American material, which act he points out applies to the United States and not to the isthmus. Coming down to the experience of the army in the Philippines the secretary shows that large amounts of meat have been purchased from Australia instead of from the United States because its cost was about one-half of that brought from the Pacific coast.

"Therefore," says the secretary, "the result of a consideration of general principles of law and the practice of government in the absence of specific direction to the contrary, is that in the construction of the Panama canal in the canal zone on the isthmus, which is outside the tariff wall surrounding the United States proper and into which, by virtue of the Hay-Varilla treaty with the republic of Panama, material supplies and machinery of all kinds for the construction of the canal are to be introduced free from tariff imports, it is your duty to buy where you can obtain the material, supplies and machinery at the cheapest price, other conditions with respect to quality, prompt delivery, etc., being equal. This view it seems to me is confirmed by the failure of congress to direct any different course on your part."

The secretary transmits a letter from the Maryland Steel company in which they contend, briefly stated, that if the vessels are built in Scotland the costs of inspection will be about five to ten thousand dollars more than if built here; that if the vessels are delivered at the isthmus, the government must take them over with untrained crews; that the auxillaries cannot easily and quickly be replaced; that the costs of transportation to the isthmus are excessive, and that the dredges cannot be used in United States waters.

Commenting on these arguments, Mr. Shonts, president of the commission, says the difference in cost of inspection would be trifling; that it will be easy to get men familiar with the dredges, and he attaches no importance to the matter of auxiliaries, and other points made. He says "While we would of course prefer to patronize American industries, unless congress changes the law, are we not compelled to buy in the lowest market?"

Attached to the secretary's letter is also the correspondence referred to by him relative to the purchase of foreign cement, summarized by Joseph Bucklin Bishop, secretary of the commission, in the statement that in the case of a lot of 20,000 barrels purchased abroad "the commission would not have been justified in paying $7,400 more for American cement than for foreign cement, particularly in view of the fact the quality of the foreign cement was fully equal to that offered by the lowest bidder on American cemen.."

Claims Delayed Shipment.

Herman Tetzloff, a Chisholm business man who has been sued by H. J. Kolling & Company on account of a bill of goods shipped to Chisholm last winter, has filed an aswer to the complaint. Mr. Tetzloff admits buying the goods but claims he bought them for his Thanksgiving trade and they were to be delivered on or before Nov. 30 last. He claims the goods were not delivered until about Dec. 2 when he refused them and notified the local firm of his refusal. Mr. Tetzloff asks that the wholesale concern take nothing and that he be given his costs.

AN OPERATOR RUNS AMUCK

Atlanta, Ga., May 15.—James H. Clarke, night telegraph operator at Chamblee, a small station on Southern railway, northeast of Atlanta, late yesterday afternoon killed Will J. Cheek, a merchant at Dunwoody, dangerously wounded S. Purcell, his son, W. W. Purcell, and W. S. Mark, the day operator at Chamblee, and is still at large in the woods of De Kalb or Fulton counties, hunted by officers and volunteers. Clarke, who is believed to be mentally unbalanced, aggravated his condition yesterday by drinking. Late in the afternoon he went to the home of S. Purcell, with whom he boarded and demanded admittance. Being refused he broke down a door, set fire to the kitchen and encountered the two Purcells, father and son, and Mr. Mark. Clarke then began firing first with a revolver and then with a shotgun, seriously wounding each of the three. Then he dashed from the house, going toward Dunwoody about five miles distant. Reaching there he went to the store of Nash & Clark and demanded cartridges. Mr. Cheek, the clerk, refused to sell them, being warned by telephone, whereupon Clarke shot Cheek through the heart. He also fired at Nash, who dodged and escaped from the building. Clarke then helped himself to ammunition, securing several boxes of cartridges and disappeared in the woods.

ABSOLUTELY UNTRUE

Is Statement That Dr. Johnston Has Been Offered Presidency.

New York, May 15.—Statements that the Rev. Dr. Rufus P. Johnston, pastor of the Fifth Avenue Baptist church, has been offered the presidency of the University of Chicago to succeed the late Dr. W. R. Harper, were declared by Dr. Johnston today to be absolutely untrue. Dr. Johnston of whose church the family of John D. Rockefeller are members, has resigned his pastorate to go abroad.

DOWIE DENIES THAT HE IS INSOLVENT.

Chicago, May 15.—Attorneys for John Alexander Dowie filed today an answer in the federal court in the receivership proceedings brought against Dowie some time ago. In the answer, Dowie denied that he was insolvent if all the property was restored to him. Extended legal argument followed the filing of the answer.

The most eminent physician can not prescribe a better preparation for colic and diarrhoea, both for children and adults. The uniform success of this remedy has shown it to be superior to all others. It never falls, and when reduced with water and sweetened, is pleasant to take. Every family should be supplied with it. Sold by all leading druggists.

JAPANESE WILL NOT EVACUATE

Manchuria Until Assured That Russians Will Get Out.

Tokio, May 15.—Premier Marquis Saionji returned here today from his tour of inspection in Manchuria. It is expected his report will suggest a solution of the deadlock between the military and civil authorities over the best means of settling the Manchurian difficulties.

The Japanese and Russians in Manchuria are closely watching each others' movements. The Japanese apparently will not evacuate that territory before they are assured that the Russians will get out in accordance with the stipulations of the Portsmouth treaty.

WILL RUN AN EXCURSION

Northern Pacifc Will Bring One From Morris, Minn.

To Arrive June 6—First of the Present Season.

The Northern Pacific is the first railroad to announce the running of a special train for excursionists into Duluth this year. A low-priced excursion will be run from Morris, Minn., and intermediate points June 6, leaving Morris at 6:50 a. m., and arriving in Duluth at 2:35 p. m. the same day. Returning, the special will leave Duluth at 4:15 p. m. on Friday, June 8.

This is a very good territory from which to draw, and it is expected that the attending crowd will be of comfortable size. The price is attractive, only $2.50 for the round trip, and will probably be taken advantage of by so many people that it will be necessary to run the train in two or more sections. The people at Morris who patronize such excursions, and the people between here and there, are of a highly desirable class, and will be welcome visitors to Duluth.

Probably popular-priced excursions into Duluth will be more numerous over all the railroads this summer than they have been during any summer in the past.

Gas Cheapest Fuel.

Cooking by gas in Duluth is a tried and proven success. For convenience, cleanliness and economy it excels every other fuel. Probably no city in the United States supplies gas as cheap a rate as Duluth, and yet in the larger cities, even at an increased rate, it is used by all classes. To cook with gas in Duluth costs about one-half as much as coal or wood. The Zenith Furnace company, the gas appliance department of which is located at 331 West First street, has hundreds of gas ranges on display at prices ranging from $12 up, which they would be pleased to have the women of Duluth call and see.

The Reply to the Throne is Considered Revolutionary.

St. Petersburg, May 16.—The opinion is quite general today that parliament's adoption of the reply to the speech from the throne will make a conflict with the crown inevitable, since it contains a number of points upon which the supporters of the government say it is impossible for the emperor to yield. The Nove Vremya regards the reply as a purely revolutionary document, "such as might appear as a leading article in a Social Democratic newspaper."

On the other hand, the Constitutional Democratic leaders, while boldly asserting that the reply is intended to make clear to the emperor that the country will be satisfied with nothing less than a constitutional monarchy, on a Democratic basis, nevertheless insist that it is not an ultimatum. They consider the reply to be exceedingly temperate in tone, and say it required all their ability to prevent the introduction of more radical expressions. There is every indication that the emperor and Premier Goremykin's cabinet desire to avoid a conflict, and that by a compromise on the question of amnesty, they will seek to gain time. It can be asserted on high authority that partial amnesty will be proclaimed May 19, the emperor's birthday.

When parliament reassembled at 11 o'clock this morning, the impression prevailed that the day would witness stirring scenes. Premier Goremykin and the entire cabinet were seated on the ministerial benches, and it was understood that the premier intended to outline the views of the government in regard to the reply to the speech from the throne.

The excited frame of mind of the members of parliament was evidenced by the long list of speakers submitted even before President Mourmtzeff had called the house to order. This was not so much due to Russian love of talk as to the fact that every member seemed to feel himself charged with a message from his constituents which he must deliver. The speeches of the peasants were delivered in the simple language of the villagers which was more easily comprehended than the utterances of the city members who were inclined to indulge in high flown eloquence and hyperbole, airing their erudition in the use of foreign phrases and dialects which the little Russians, members from the Baltic provinces and Poles sometimes found it difficult to understand. The leadership in parliament is being rapidly assumed by the Tver group of members whose ability thus far has stood out in relief. The contingent from the Volga provinces is showing the greatest radicalism. None of the members from the Caucasus or Siberia has spoken, up to the present time, but it is noticeable that they applaud the most radical utterances. Although the Mussulmans took their place on the right, the majority are acting with the Constitutional Democrats and the Poles. Most of them wear picturesque natural costumes, long coats of brown or blue, trimmed with red, and belts with tassels. The members from the Baltic provinces also wear their national costume of white. These latter are radical to a man. More than half the village priests are enthusiastic members of the opposition.

From the very outset today words in favor of moderation were few and far between. Semlnoff, a Social Revolutionist from Saratoff, was the first speaker. Amid wild applause he declared that the reply to the speech from the throne was too weak. Parliament, he said, was evidently content with less than the people. To cries of "Semlia Ivolia" (Land of freedom) Semlnoff announced that the people who had sent him to parliament did not want land without liberty. The peasants were so revolutionary "that only a spark was required to kindle a conflagration, and anarchy and destruction were certain if the demands of the peasants were not satisfied immediately."

POLITICAL PRISONERS ARE SERIOUSLY BEATEN.

St. Petersburg, May 16.—President Mommtzeff today received a telegram from the political prisoners confined at Yekaterinoslav, South Russia, saying that on May day they were beaten with the flat of swords by the gendarmes and that some of them were seriously wounded. The prisoners asked parliament to demand the punishment of the guilty persons and to hasten the granting of amnesty.

PRESBYTERIANS ARRIVING FAST.

Des Moines, May 16.—Four hundred commissioners to the one hundred and eighteenth session of the general assembly of the Presbyterian Church of America, the advance guard, arrived in Des Moines today and are attending the foreign missions and educational conferences preliminary to the assembly proper, which opens at 11 a. m. tomorrow, at the Auditorium. The home missions conference will convene at 2 o'clock this afternoon.

SENATOR IS VERY ANGRY

Says Author and One Who Inspired it Are Deliberate Liars.

Washington, May 16.—The calm of the senate's discussion of the railroad rate bill was disturbed today by a personal interruption by Senator Bailey who rose to a question of personal privilege to make reply to a charge made in a Chicago paper yesterday by a Washington correspondent, to the effect that Mr. Bailey had been responsible for the failure of the agreement between the president and Senator Tillman. Former Senator Chandler was given as authority for the statement that Tillman had been suspicious of Bailey, who it was also stated was really opposed to rate legislation and was also in constant conference with Senator Aldrich with the purpose of defeating the rate bill. After this statement had been read Mr. Bailey took the floor and said deliberately: "I have taken no part in the question of veracity between the president and Mr. Chandler and I had not even given any public expression on the question of good faith because I knew nothing about either question. I had never conferred with the president directly nor with Mr. Chandler. It was therefore a matter of great surprise to me when a senator called my attention to the extract which I have read. That correspondence it was understood was sent by a correspondent who is very close to the White House and is presumed to speak with some degree of authority concerning transactions there. I do not know as to the truth of that and I do not charge that his statement was made with authority. But I denounce the publication as an unqualified, deliberate and malicious lie. I denounce that correspondent as an unqualified, deliberate and malicious liar. I denounce the man who inspired the statement as an unqualified, deliberate and malicious liar, whoever

WATER MAIN EXTENSIONS

At Virginia Have Been Ordered by the City Council.

Virginia, Minn., May 16.—(Special to The Herald.)—The city council last evening ordered the twenty-four blocks of water main extensions proposed last week by the Virginia Light & Water company as well as a main three blocks in length on Pine street. The company makes these extensions with the understanding that it is to establish twenty hydrants when under its franchise it would be entitled to twenty-seven. These extensions, which will be put in this year, will bring adequate protection to every corner of the city as well as to the sawmills and brewery. It will afford hundreds of citizens an opportunity to connect their premises with the water mains that have been denied that privilege heretofore, and it will result in a rapid extension of the sewer system. A long petition for sewers in the south side addition brought a statement from Mayor Eaton that he was opposed to the building of more sanitary sewers until those citizens already served by sewers would use them and obey the ordinances and resolutions of the council. Last fall owners of property in the business district were instructed to connect their premises with the sewers and to do away with outside closets. But very few have complied.

P. E. MacCormick, the life insurance man, intends to make Virginia his headquarters in future and will move his family here from St. Paul.

Register of Deeds M. C. Palmer was in town over Sunday.

Mrs. F. W. Anderson of Buhl was a guest of her sister, Miss Anna Anderson, over Sunday.

FATHER IS LIVING, ROCKEFELLER SAYS.

Cleveland, May 16.—"Whoever says that my father died before John D. Rockefeller, Jr., was born, lies. My father is alive, so far as I know, and I know pretty well. If he died today I would hear of it immediately.

"Of course I am not on good terms with John D. Rockefeller, but I do not think he told New York newspaper men that his father died before John D., Jr., was born.

"Dr. William Livingston was not my father, and, of course, not the father of John D. Rockefeller."

In these terse sentences Frank Rockefeller disposed of the New York story to the effect that Dr. Livingston, the Freeport, Ill., man who died within the last few days, was his father, and also of the so-called authentic statement that the father of John D. Rockefeller and Frank Rockefeller has been dead many years.

It was suggested to Frank Rockefeller that he might tell at the present time the present residence of his father, since he denied so vehemently that Dr. William Livingston was that person.

"Why should I tell?" asked the brother of the oil king.

He was told that the public naturally wanted to know.

"It is none of the public's business," he replied.

SAFE BLOWERS BREAK JAIL.

Marshalltown, Iowa, May 16.—Six safe blowers arrested here a few weeks ago, broke jail last night and escaped. They pried away bricks in a second story window.

PREPARING INJUNCTION

To Restrain Presbyterian Churches From Proposed Union.

Loyalists Meet at Decatur to Complete Petition to Court.

Decatur, Ill., May 16.—Judge William Reister of Evansville, Ind., Maj. G. V. Menzies of Mount Vernon, Ind., Judge G. B. Green of Mount Carmel, Ill., and other "loyalists" opposing union of the Cumberland and Presbyterian church, went into conference here today to complete a petition for injunction, restraining the general assembly of Cumberland Presbyterians, which meets Thursday, from effecting the proposed union. The grounds for the application are that money with which the Cumberland Presbyterian property was purchased was given for the promulgation and perpetuation of the Cumberland Presbyterian doctrines, and that said property is not to be diverted to any other use; that the church has no constitutional right to give itself away, and that there are errors in the manner in which the arrangements for the proposed union were made.

EACH COMPANY FOR ITSELF

Insurance Companies Will Pay Frisco Losses in Its Own Way.

San Francisco, May 16.—The insurance companies will settle their losses in their own way, each company acting for itself, according to the contracts embodied in its policies and the fire underwriters, adjusting bureau will make no attempt to dictate a general policy or lay down uniform rules for the companies to observe in the settlement of claims, according to a statement made yesterday by Attorney T. G. Coogan, as legal adviser to the adjusting bureau. The adjusting bureau is merely to act as a board of appraisers in dealing with claims, and only report on losses sustained, leaving the settlement entirely to the respective companies. Mr. Coogan said:

"The companies will pay what they legally owe. Moreover, they will be perfectly fair. But they will obey no rules laid down for them by any bureau."

THE FUNERAL OF FATHER GAPON HELD IN FINLAND.

Ozerki, Finland, May 16.—The funeral of Father Gapon, who was found hanged, May 13, in a cottage in this town, and who is believed to have been executed by revolutionists for treason, was held here today.

OIL OCTOPUS SENDS GASOLINE SOARING.

Cleveland, May 16.—The Standard Oil company today announced an additional advance in the selling price on all high grades of gasoline. Seventy to seventy-two degrees test gasoline is advanced ½ cent per gallon, while all other high grades are put up 1 cent per gallon. An official of the Standard Oil company said today that the demand for high-grade gasoline is unprecedented owing to its heavy consumption in connection with automobiles. The new quotations sent out by the Standard Oil company today are as follows:

	Per Gallon.
86 degs. test gasoline	20c

FIRST IN RACE OF MANKIND

Japanese Prediction of the Future of the United States.

Washington, May 17.—Eki Hioki, who was charge of the Japanese mission to Washington until the arrival of the new ambassador, Viscount Aoki, several weeks ago, left Washington last night to return to Japan, where he will report to the foreign office preparatory to receiving another appointment. Mr. Hioki will stop at Houston, Tex., to visit friends and will also be in San Francisco a short time before going to Seattle, from which port he will sail on May 24.

"Never in my life have I had a pleasanter time than during the last two years in the United States," said Mr. Hioki, as he was leaving Washington. "Having arrived at the beginning of one of the most gigantic struggles the world has ever seen, having been at this post at the time when that struggle was to be terminated by the masterful efforts of the great president of the great republic, having seen the people of this country bring succor so willingly to the distressed by famine in the northern provinces of Japan and having also seen our people express genuine appreciation of the American sympathy and friendship in their noble efforts of tendering relief to the unfortunate Californians, I can say that I have seen the expressions of cordiality and good will, in all their phases, existing between Japan and the United States. I now go home almost intoxicated by the exuberance of American friendship.

"The United States with its immense territory, rich and fertile with its political and social institutions, which offer equal opportunity to each and every one of its citizens and which alone make fair competition possible, will undoubtedly soon be the first in the race of mankind."

CRUISER MUST MAKE TWENTY-TWO KNOTS.

Rockland, Me., May 16.—The new protected cruiser, St. Louis, constructed by Neafie & Levy at Philadelphia started out today for her official standardization trial on the Rockland course. The trial was expected to conclude early this afternoon and will be followed by the usual anchor test. The contract requirement is a speed of twenty-two knots an hour.

MAN'S HEAD IS MISSING

The Head Evidently Removed to Prevent Identification.

Granite City, Ill., May 16.—The headless body of a man was found today in a cess pool in the rear of a Madison saloon, not far from where John Hickey, an overland traveler to Oklahoma, was sandbagged and killed last week. The body was brought to an undertaking establishment here. The absence of the head, it is believed, indicates that the man was murdered by an injury to the head, and that it was removed to prevent identification. No other marks of violence were found on the body.

It is believed that possibly the clothing may lead to identification. The body had evidently lain in the cess pool for several months. Several negroes had been put to work at cleaning the pool, and they discovered the body. A stiff hat was also found in the pool.

Coroner Streper stated that he would at once begin an investigation.

IMMIGRATION IS DISCUSSED

Philadelphia, May 16.—The topics discussed during the final sessions of the National Conference of Charities and Corrections included children, needy families, neighborhood work, working men's insurance, charitable finance and immigration. The latter subject was brought before the conference at the morning session by a report of the committee on immigration, and papers were read by Joseph Lee, vice president of the Massachusetts Civil league; Prof. L. C. Marshall of the Ohio Wesleyan university; Hon. William Williams, former commissioner of immigration of the port of New York and Maurice Fishberg of New York. All but three of twelve members of the committee on immigration stood for "raising the bars."

The committee unanimously favored encouraging in all possible ways the more desirable kind of immigration.

DAVIS HEARING IS AGAIN POSTPONED.

Chicago, May 16.—The hearing of Will J. Davis, former manager of the Iroquois theater, who is charged with manslaughter, in connection with the fire which cost so many lives, was postponed until tomorrow. The case was called yesterday, and continued until today.

TROOPS ARE CALLED OUT

To Suppress Riot Between Italians and Negroes Near Albany.

Striking Italians Attack Colored Men Who Take Their Places.

Albany, N. Y., May 16.—A riot between Italians and negroes broke out in the brick yards at Coeymans, twelve miles south of here today. Sheriff Pitts and deputies, and Lieut-Col. Davis of the Tenth regiment went to Coeymans and the commanding officers of the local military companies have been instructed to be in readiness for orders. One negro has been brought to the Albany hospital with a bullet in his side. The trouble grew out of the importation of Southern negroes to take the place of striking Italians.

Shortly after the noon hour Sheriff Pitts requested that the local militia be sent to Coeymans and arrangements were at once made to have the four companies of the Tenth regiment located here forwarded to the scene of trouble.

TRAIN WRECKED AT BUFFALO

Buffalo, May 16.—A Wabash passenger train running over the tracks of the New York Central within the city limits ran off an open switch today. The engine and three of the coaches were wrecked. James Howe of Buffalo, engineer of the train was killed. John Hertel, fireman of Buffalo, sustained probably fatal injuries, Philip O'Donnel, a passenger of St. Thomas, Ontario, was injured internally, J. Saunders, porter of Chicago was bruised and lacerated and three other trainmen were severely hurt.

COMMON PRACTICE

St. Louis, May 16.—Policemen John Dyen, a witness in a police court case, was last night convicted of perjury in the criminal court and sentenced to two years in the penitentiary. Dyen's defence was that when the oath was administered to witnessses in the police court case, he stooped over and tied his shoe string, and thereby avoided raising his hand and taking the oath, and, therefore, he was not a sworn witness. He testified that it was a common practice of policemen to bend over and fumble with their shoe strings when they wished to keep from being sworn.

STEPMOTHER COMPELS

Rockford, Ill., May 16.—Sensational testimony is expected in the coming hearing of the charges of cruelty preferred against John Denton, a rich farmer of Winnebago township, and his second wife. They are charged with mistreating Denton's two daughters, Bessie and Mary, aged 12 and 16 years respectively. Efforts are being made to take the girls away from them.

It is charged that the stepmother compelled the girls to do the cakewalk with her, dressed in scanty costumes. Almost all the work of Denton's 80-acre farm; it is asserted, was put on the shoulders of the girls, and Denton frequently threatened to horsewhip them for failing to do the tasks he set for them.

The case will be heard before Judge Bailey in the county court. It has attracted widespread interest. The girls are temporarily in custody of the county.

J. J. Smith, a neighbor of Denton, testifies that the girls were made to clean out the stables, butcher calves and husk corn.

"Denton has not been himself since he was married a second time," he says.

EMBEZZLED $51,000

Chicago, May 16.—Charles T. Wenham, formerly agent for the Canadian Pacific railroad in this city, was today indicted on a charge of embezzling $51,000 belonging to the company. He is at present in New York, and an officer left here today to bring him back for trial.

TANK OF GASOLINE EXPLODES.

New York, May 16.—A 30,000-barrel tank of gasoline, belonging to the Standard Oil company at Constable Hook, on the New Jersey shore of New York harbor, exploded today with a terrific roar. It started the liquid to blazing, so as to threaten five other tanks nearby, and a dangerous fire was feared.

Several Men Were Assaulted and One Shot on Tuesday.

St. Paul, May 16.—(Special to The Herald.)—United States Marshal Grimshaw today sent his deputies to Minneapolis to serve injunction papers on the striking telephone linemen in that city restraining them from interfering in any way with strike-breaking crews which are trying to repair the damage done to telephone lines by the violent thunder storms of Sunday and Monday evenings. The injunction was issued by Judge Lochran who is holding a term of the United States district court in Winona. The injunction was secured on affidavits of the telephone company officials, who allege that threats had been made, and in some instances carried out, to stop crews at work.

Half a dozen men were assaulted in Minneapolis Monday and Tuesday and one man was shot Tuesday evening.

The shooting was done by a non-union man as a result of an attack made upon a repair crew by alleged union men or their sympathizers.

Minneapolis, May 16.—(Special to The Herald.)—The trouble between the striking telephone linemen and their successors reached serious proportions late yesterday when Perley Hall, a strikebreaker, pulled his revolver and shot Ward Werring during a fierce riot at Central avenue and University, southeast Minneapolis.

Hall and Adam Charette were at work stringing a wire, when a crowd of twenty strikers bore down on them and commenced firing a volley of stones at the two men.

The two men were in desperate straits. Hall being knocked down and pounded over the head. While he was being pummeled he drew his revolver and fired, hitting Werring in the calf of the leg.

Charette, who was at work at the top of the pole, came down and forced his way to his companion's side, revolver in hand. Before the infuriated strikers could take out their revenge further upon Hall, Policeman Gonyar appeared and placed both Hall and Charette under arrest. Werring was taken to a doctor's office and his wound dressed.

While the policeman was escorting the two men to the station a brother of the wounded man attempted to assault Hall and was placed under arrest.

MUNICIPAL OWNERSHIP

Denver, May 16.—City election returns were still incomplete early today, but show that the municipal ownership city ticket was defeated yesterday, with the possible exception of two election commissioners and three of the sixteen aldermen. The Republicans elected one election commissioner, three supervisors and seven aldermen, and the Democrats six aldermen.

DROWNS IN CISTERN.

Albert Lea, Minn., May 16.—Mrs. Sarah C. Gavin of this city committed suicide by plunging into a neighbor's cistern some time between midnight and 5 o'clock yesterday morning.

Last February she made an attempt upon her life in the cistern at her own home, but was rescued by her husband. Later she was committed to the hospital for the insane at Rochester, but a month ago was apparently cured. She was 46 and had lived here most of her life. Her father was insane a few years before his death.

PEN FOR DEITZ'S ALLY.

Hayward, Wis., May 16.—Valentine Weisenbach, who was convicted a couple of weeks ago in the circuit court for Chippewa county of attempted murder, was sentenced by Judge A. J. Vinje to twelve years' imprisonment in the penitentiary at Waupun. Weisenbach was the confederate of John Deitz and assisted Deitz when he made his famous attack upon the officers who attempted to arrest Deitz.

LATE DOINGS IN MICHIGAN

Menominee—By the bursting of a steam pipe in the mill of the Wells Lumber company Tuesday night, Nicholas Gemenden, night watchman, was killed and Engineer Bush and Fireman Johnson so badly scalded their recovery is considered doubtful.

Escanaba—Notice has been served that every drayman engaged in business in Escanaba must pay the license fees demanded by the city charter. The mayor gives warning that in all cases where this is not done he will adopt stringent methods to compel compliance with the terms of the ordinance.

Houghton—The Atlantic mine has entirely suspended operations owing principally to considerable ground having caved in as a result of frequent disturbances similar to those felt in the Quincy and other mines in the district.

Considerable damage has been caused in D and E shafts of the Atlantic and work will not be resumed until extensive timbering repairs have been made.

Munising—Claiming $3,500 damages, Cornelius F. Donahue, circuit court commissioner and former village attorney of Munising, has instituted a sensational suit against Hans Hanson, a Munising saloonkeeper and his two bondsmen.

In his declaration the plaintiff sets up that at 11 o'clock the night of Saturday, Feb. 3 last, he and a man named Steep were in Hanson's saloon, and both were intoxicated. Despite this condition, it is recited, Hanson continued to sell them liquor until the hour of 5 o'clock Sunday morning. The plaintiff further alleges that by reason of their intoxicated condition, he and Steep became involved in an altercation and that the latter struck him a violent blow in the face, breaking his eye glasses and forcing pieces of the lens into the right eye. By reason of this blow, the plaintiff avers, his eye was seriously injured and the sight permanently impaired. Furthermore, that because of this injury he was obliged to spend many weeks in a Marquette hospital, and that he has suffered great pain, loss of business, and has been put to many hundreds of dollars expense for nursing and medical attendance.

It is the intention of the plaintiff, if possible, to have the case tried at the June term of the circuit court.

Norway—The Wisconsin & Michigan Railway company has concluded a deal for the sale of 25,000 ties to the Northern Pacific. The ties are stored at various stations and were to have been used in the building of extensions this season. The sale indicates that no new work will be done by the Wisconsin & Michigan this year.

Ontonagon—An Ontonagon tailoring establishment has just completed a pair of trousers which are rather unusual in size. They are for Henry Turcott, who was employed as a camp cook by James Norton during the past winter. The waist measurement is fifty-six inches, hip sixty, thigh thirty-nine and length thirty. Mr. Turcott weighs 398 pounds, but in spite of his excessive avoirdupois, does not take a back seat for any in attending to his duties as a cook.

MAY 28 WILL BE CIRCUS DAY

Sells-Floto Show to Appear in Duluth That Day.

May 28 will be circus day in Duluth. Then the Sells-Floto show, a new amusement enterprise which has come out of the West, will give two performances on the regular circus grounds in the West end. There will be the usual parade and all the other delightful things which are included with the visit of a big show to any town in these United States.

The Sells-Floto show is a new one, at least to Duluth. At its head are "Willie" Sells of the famous Sells family of circus magnates, and Otto Floto, the well known Denver sporting writer. Several Western capitalists are said to be interested in the show and to have spared no means to make it one of the best on the road. It is sometimes called "the circus beautiful."

The show will arrive in Duluth Sunday, May 27, from the Twin Cities, but, of course, no performances will be given on Sunday. The aggregation will rest and prepare for the entertainment to be given Duluthians Monday, May 28.

RAILROADS ARE GOOD ON THE RANGE

Interchangeable Mileage Books Recognized on Foreign Lines.

The new interchangeable mileage tickets issued by the Great Northern and Northern Pacific also will be honored on the Minnesota & International railway, the Duluth & Iron Range, and the Duluth, Missabe & Northern. At the same time these roads have granted another concession to the traveling man—excess baggage books, each equal in value to $60, which will be sold at the rate of $48. It is said that this is the first concession of the kind to be made by any of the Western railroads.

Traveling men of the entire country have taken up the fight for a flat rate book. Appeals to railroads have been in vain, and the traveling men finally came to a realization that they would have to take the matter up through the courts to secure relief from the excessive deposit required by the railroads on mileage tickets. The Great Northern and Northern Pacific have taken the lead in making concessions to the traveling fraternity, without being compelled to do so by the courts, by announcing the issuance of the interchangeable mileage books, good on these systems and the ones named above, in Minnesota and North and South Dakota.

A 5,000-mile book will be sold for 2 cents a mile flat, and a 3,000-mile book will be sold for 2½ cents a mile, with a rebate of $15 when the cover is returned.

WILL BE NO RATE WAR.

The threatened passenger rate war between Chicago and St. Paul has been stopped, and the Illinois Central, which last week gave notice that it would put in a rate of $4 for the round trip on the day of the B'nai Brith convention, has withdrawn this rate.

This arrangement was made after the Great Western had agreed to stick to the $12 rate agreed upon by the other roads, instead of putting in a rate of $8. This settlement considerably relieves the minds of the passenger officials of the Chicago-St. Paul lines.

All the Eastern lines are awaiting the result of the meeting of railroad presidents next Tuesday in New York. War or peace in rates hangs upon this result. If the committee of three presidents reports in favor of arbitration, peace will reign, and the cut rates of the Grand Trunk and Wabash will be restored. If the committee fails to agree, it is acknowledged the last hope of averting a financially disastrous rate war will be gone.

IS THERE WIRE ATTACHED

To Senator Clark's Announcement of Not Seeking Re-election?

Butte, Mont., May 16.—Senator Clark's recent announcement that he is not a candidate for re-election has not created any alarm here. The people of Montana are so accustomed to political tricks that they are always on the lookout for gold bricks—or perhaps copper bricks—and the general impression among politicians is that Clark's announcement has a wire attached to it.

A rumor sprang up here last year that Senator Carter was in favor of Clark's re-election rather than the election of a Republican senator with whom he would have to divide the senatorial patronage. The only prominent Republican candidates for the senate are Former Senator Lee Mantle and Representative Joseph M. Dixon, neither of whom can be controlled by Senator Carter, and he is not the man to favor the election of a Republican he can't control.

It is the general belief in Montana that Senator Clark's announcement was made in order to prevent newspaper criticism until the legislature meets in January.

Senator Clark is not a candidate, he says; but suppose when the Democratic state convention meets in September the delegates "demand" that "our leader, Senator Clark," come to the rescue of the party and lead it to victory? There is time between now and September for Clark's lieutenants to create this demand.

PRINCESS CHIMAY

Vienna, May 16.—The eccentric Princess Chimay has just taken her last Italian husband to visit the mother of the gypsy violinist, Rigo, in the village of Bakred. She brought from Paris the tombstone of Rigo's father, who is buried there.

She confided to her former mother-in-law that she was unhappy in her present marriage and that she hopes to recover Rigo.

Hearing of Rigo's financial difficulties in America, she telegraphed a large sum but it was declined.

After scattering money in the village she has arrived at Pest, where she proposes to earn more by exhibiting herself as a living statue.

THE AFTER-EFFECTS

Other beer may be equal to Schlitz in your liking. But perhaps it is green beer—insufficiently aged; and the after-effect is biliousness.

Or it may be impure, unfiltered, unsterilized; and the after-effect unhealthful. More than half the cost of our brewing is spent to insure purity.

That is how important we deem it.

ENGLISHMEN ENCOURAGED

By Denunciation by President Roosevelt of Misused Wealth.

Pleases Those Combating Society's Influence on Public Service.

London, May 16.—President Roosevelt's recent denunciation of the demoralizing effects on public and private life of the abuse of riches, and his insistence on the necessity of doing something to check their pernicious influence, have greatly encouraged many public-spirited men here who have long been convinced that the greatest danger which confronts England lies in misused wealth. By a singular coincidence about the same time that President Roosevelt was delivering his address, a public meeting was held at the Royal United Service Institute here, at which the Rev. Mr. Tracy, head of a big scholastic institution, read a paper, in which he denounced the whole tone of fashionable society and fashionable education. He was warmly applauded by an audience composed largely of naval and military officers, and which included many famous generals and admirals. In the discussion which followed, the commandant of the Royal Military college at Sandhurst—England's West Point—declared that the cadets received there were ignorant of history and geography, had neither judgment nor imagination, could not write nor compose intelligently and were, in fact, unfit to follow military instructors in the simplest problems. At the same meeting, Lord Ellenborough expressed the opinion that schools like Eton and Harrow, by encouraging games at the expense of knowledge, and by fostering luxury and self-indulgence, were promoting national defense. Lord Hugh Cecil, who, until the last election, represented Woolwich in parliament, caused a sensation by stating that among the humbler classes in that district, he found a wider knowledge of public questions and a keener interest in morals and religion than existed in society so-called. In his blunt, sailor fashion, Lord Charles Beresford has recorded his opinion that "English society has been eaten out by the canker of money. From the top to the bottom, the tree is rotten."

It is in the army that the evil effects of upper-class snobbery and degeneracy are most keenly felt, because it is from that class the officers are drawn. A movement has been started by the best men in the army itself to agitate for such reforms in the educational training of the young sprigs of the aristocracy as will ensure their being at least as well grounded in the rudiments of learning as the working-class pupils of the free schools, and in general, to work for efficiency all round. Of this movement, the unofficial spokesman is Dr. T. Miller Maguire, a brilliant Irishman, who for many years has conducted the largest army coach school in England, and is an expert on everything that pertains to army organization, and military matters. Many of those who are backing the movement are muzzled, because of their official positions, but the doctor—he is a doctor of law—is under no such restrictions, and furthermore, is utterly fearless in expressing his opinions and cares not a straw for the red-tape-bound tinkers of the war office.

"The matter is a vital one," said Dr. Maguire to the writer, "and we shall keep up the fight until we win it, but I wish to heaven that we had a man like President Roosevelt at the head of our government to help us! The richer English universities and public schools are allowed to waste revenues which were intended for elevating the poor and securing for the nation a proper supply of directing brain power, on cherishing ignorance, laziness, games and snobbery. The irony of fate is that those places were founded by medieval heroes and priests, and by Elizabethan merchants in the interests of hard-working men, to whom their endowments really belong, and that they have become preserves for idlers and rich snobs, and are not of the least use for education, or instruction, or research. In fact, real aristocrats are degraded by their residence in such abodes of sloth, ignorance and inefficiency. These institutions belong to the poor. They have become costly anachronisms, adverse to the public interests. Rich and poor should study side by side in them. If the rich want more knowledge, they should pay for it out of their own pockets. These institutions should be reformed and modernized and their revenues devoted to helping workingmen of all ranks from peers to peddlers and not wasted on snobs, sportsmen, lazy pendants and other triflers."

I ventured to suggest to Dr. Maguire that his language was rather suggestive of personal bias and his condemnation somewhat too sweeping.

"Not a bit of it," he replied, "I can justify everything I say by the official statements of such men as Lord Roberts, Gen. Hutchinson, Gen. Smith-Dorrien, Gen. Ian Hamilton, and a host of others, whose rights to speak with authority on the subject none can dispute. Consider this, for instance. Soon after Lord Kitchener went to India, a memorandum was issued stating that many of the officers who had recently joined were "so wanting in elementary education that they are unable to cope intelligently with the professional subjects, a knowledge of which is essential for officers in the army, and that, therefore, there would be a loss of time and labor in sending them to courses of garrison instruction." Most of the young men thus referred to had gone through our much-vaunted public schools. And yet, mark you, they were found wanting in "elementary education"—the sort of education that any bright board schoolboy acquires before he enters his teens. Lord Morley, when he was secretary of state for war, told me in writing that the war office deliberately expunged English literature and modern history and the story of the development of the empire from the army examinations in the interests of gentlemanly, though ignorant, fools from public schools.

"The officers themselves are not to blame. Many of them never receive an education worthy of the name, and their early environment is such that they have no mental curiosity, can only think and talk about sport and games and foolery, and fashionable females much older and more frivolous than themselves. They are the victims of a decadent society, void of knowledge and of manners. Indeed, considering the character of their early training, our young officers are marvels of excellence. A cabinet minister, who knew all the members of both houses of parliament, assured me that the officers were decidedly the most creditable representatives of the class to which they belong.

"But as long as that class is permitted to dominate the government, as it still does, it is hopeless to expect anything like a thorough reform. It is in the growing strength of the labor party in parliament lies our chief hope of securing efficiency in the army and other branches of the public service. Were I free to mention their names, you would be surprised to learn how many distinguished military men there are who look to representatives of the John Burns type—men who can see straight and think clearly and who are free from all taint of class snobbery—to put the army on a sound basis. Fashionable millionaires, retired brewers and rich loungers stand in the way of military proficiency. Talk of the battle of Waterloo being won on the playing fields of Eton! Rubbish! It was much more probably won on the potato fields of Limerick and in the kail gardens of Inverness or the cornfields of Essex. The families of Scotch parsons and Irish peasants and English traders have done more for the empire than all the peers and squires and plutocrats put together. If our soldiers had depended on the so-called ruling classes of England, there would have been no army at all. There was a large proportion of Etonian and Oxford men in the cabinet of Mr. Balfour, yet what an ignominious mess they made of our military interests and at what enormous cost!

"Our military code is a barbarous anachronism, as was recently shown by Sir Charles Dilke. Our system of military training is ridiculous. Our soldiers spend the greater part of their time in mounting guards, in pipe-claying accoutrements, polishing buttons, scrubbing barrack floors and in general acting as charwoman, gardener, porter, cook, valet, clerk and general servant to the regiment and the officers—in fact, as a scholar of a gigantic Dotheboys hall. It is the pernicious system with its many irritating technical offenses, which is responsible for the fact that a total of 22,000 men on the home stations are driven into military prisons every year."

ADVOCATES OF GOOD ROADS MEET IN DULUTH

The Good roads convention today was called to order at 10 o'clock sharp this morning. T. W. Hugo, chairman of the public affairs committee of the Duluth Commercial club, in whose rooms the convention is being held, remarked upon the promptness of attendance and congratulated those present on being there in such good time. At the opening the gathering was small and Mr. Hugo in his talk said that the strangers present must not be discouraged at the small attendance of Duluth people.

"That's the way we do business of this kind in Duluth," said he. "The business men simply will not turn out to a thing of this kind, but will read it in the papers and so long as matters are going all right will say nothing, but will kick if they are not all right. But don't imagine that they are not interested, for they are. If we went to them and wanted to raise $10,000 or $25,000 we would get the money all right and with very little difficulty, but they will not attend the meetings.

"The matter of good roads is one that the public affairs committee has long recognized for we know that good roads are a necessity if we want business, and we do want the business. Speaking for the Commercial club, I may say that I am glad that you are here and I hope that great good may be accomplished because of this gathering. I believe it will."

It was noticeable that Ed Patterson was the only county commissioner present. Odin Halden was the only county officer, and the mayor was the only city officer present.

Mr. Hugo then introduced Mayor Cullum who gave a short address of welcome in which he said that he believes the missionary work for good roads is just as commendable, but at the same time is just as hard as that of Livingstone and Stanley in Darkest Africa. He said that Duluth needs good roads and needs the advice in the matter of just such experts as will be heard at this convention. In the name of the city he welcomed them heartily.

Gustave Scholle, president of the state highway commission was the next speaker and proved to be most interesting as his speech was wholly confined to what has been done in the matter of obtaining good roads in Ramsey county. He said that the Good Roads association organized only two years ago, but that it has accomplished great things. He said that in organizing, the men who were obtained for membership are most important, for with a lot of drones nothing will be accomplished, but with men who are interested, a great deal can be done. In Ramsey county he said, the organizers got in among the first the city and county head officers and then sent out 5,000 postals with the notice that anybody signing the agreement on the back thereof would become a member without having to pay anything then or at any other time; that all that was wanted was their influence and co-operation. As a result of this style of campaign within three weeks the association had 3,000 members. Then pressure was brought to bear on the county commissioners.

Mr. Scholle said that up to that time the idea of road building by county commissioners seemed to have been to go out once or twice a year in carriages and inspect the roads. When a mud puddle was found they would get out of the carriage and solemnly inspect it, then would make a note of that place and resolve to fill it at an expense of about $500, making it no better than before.

The association demanded of the commissioners that they stop expending the money in this foolish way, and that a system be adopted, and that it be put under the officer which the law allowed them, the county surveyor, and proper road building be inaugurated with the $35,000 which was being spent annually. With 3,000 members behind them, the officers of the association had considerable weight with the county commissioners, with the result that the board capitulated, and that year improved macadam highways, 14 feet wide, to the extent of twelve miles in all, were built, at a cost of $35,000. This year, Mr. Scholle said, the county board finds good road building popular, and is spending $75,000, and will build considerably more. In the previous ten years, he pointed out by way of comparison, $250,000 had been spent, and the county had only a mile and a quarter of good road to show for it. Since this campaign has been inaugurated the trade of New Brighton, for instance, which has unnaturally been going to Minneapolis because of the better road to that place, has been diverted to St. Paul because there is a good road there now, and the distance is shorter.

Mr. Scholle said that the kind of road they are building there is with a 6-inch limestone bottom and a 4-inch surface of best gravel.

The road building fever extended to the city, and the city council appointed a committee to act with a committee from the association to lay plans for building roads inside the city limits to connect with the county roads. The first year of this saw the expenditure of $25,000, and seven miles of road were built. This year they are going to build a first class macadam road between St. Paul and Minneapolis, along University avenue, and will start building June 1. The association asked for $25,000, but the council did better than that, granting $50,000.

This road will be 70 feet wide, and will be built with a bottom of limestone, a layer of coarse gravel and a surface of screened gravel, three inches thick, which will be saturated with a new substance, known as westomite, which gives an asphalt surface and sheds rain, and is said to be one of the best surfaces a road can have. The city council of St. Paul has given $35,000 to improve the roads in the city leading to county roads this summer, and about thirty-five to forty miles of road in the city and county will be built this year. He said that this was all accomplished by a few energetic men getting busy, and by the boosting of the newspapers, which put no limit on the space necessary for pushing the work along.

A. D. Wilson, assistant of the state agricultural experimental stations was slated to talk of the advantages of improvement to highways but dismissed that subject in detail, saying that he would talk more on roads from the farmers' point of view. He said, however, that were there better roads rural schools could be consolidated and a much better system of education in the country afforded. He admitted that the system of road building as followed by the farmers is bad—in fact he said the system could not be worse—but he said that the farmers had built all that were built and had made the best of what was at hand.

Mr. Wilson's talk was principally in pointing out the injustice done the farmer in making him do all the road building that has been done while at the same time the city is getting just as much benefit out of it as is the farmer. He said that it has come to the point where the city business interests must realize that they must pay for at least half of the expense of road building in the country. He believed that farmers are willing to pay the other half. He asserted that at present the 700,000 people on farms are paying half of the taxes of the state as against the half paid by the 1,000,000 in the cities; and besides this are bearing all the expense of what road building there is.

Mr. Wilson asserted that about $1,000 a mile should be spent on road building and advocated that the state should be taxed reasonably heavy for that purpose. He advocated a bond issue of $75,000,000 for the purpose of road building and went on to show that the good roads would reduce the average cost of hauling produce to railroad for a farmer by at least 4 cents a ton, which based on the average produce of a 160-acre farm, figured at 50 to 75 tons, would mean a saving for the farmer of about $10 a year. This $10 a year could be easily applied to pay the interest on the bonded indebtedness and also to pay the principal. Mr. Wilson asserted that this amount so applied, would in thirty years wipe out the debt beside saving the expense of broken wagons, foundered horses and other matters of that kind.

He spoke briefly of the evil of autos. He said that while the average auto driver will respect the rights of others, every once in a while an autoist will come along who will drive everybody on the country roads into the ditch. These, he said, have so incensed the farmers that they are going to cause difficulty in getting the farmers to treat with city people in the matter of road building, and the prejudice must be overcome.

Mr. Wilson said that the farmer of today would rather have the cash system of poll tax than the working system and he believes the working system to be a failure.

This address being open to discussion, A. E. McManus of Duluth replied in behalf of the autoists and said among other things that he believes it is the experience of most drivers of auto cars that when on a country road and they meet a team, ninety-nine out of 100 cases the first thing the farmer will do when he sees the auto is to begin beating his horse. Mr. McManus said that as a matter of fact the horse is not hal as much afraid as the driver is, and the driver of the horse is not as much afraid of an accident as the driver of the auto. He said that he had no defense to make of the hoggish autoist and would advocate stringent laws dealing with such.

Replying to a question by W. E. Culkin, Mr. Scholle, who had spoken before, said that at present the state is levying one-twentieth of a mill for state road purposes, an amendment to the state constitution having been passed for that purpose a couple of years ago; and that another amendment providing for a levy of one-fourth of a mill will come up at next fall's election.

Chairman Hugo then appointed the following committees, after which adjournment was taken until 1:30 this afternoon:

A verdict of $250.45 damages against Herman Tetzloff, a Chisholm meat dealer, was rendered in faor of H. J. Kolling & Company, in Judge Cant's room this morning. The action was brought to recover for some turkeys and chickens shipped to Tetzloff last winter. The latter claimed that the shipment did not arrive in time for his Thanksgiving trade, according to agreement, and he refused to pay the bill.

In the alleged timber trespass case of Stephen Harker against George Trader, Judge Cant directed the jury to return a verdict for Mr. Trader. Mr. Harker sued for something over $300 claiming Trader had cut timber on his land.

The adverse posession case of Maria La Panta against Adolph Sjselius was given to the jury about 10 o'clock this morning and at an early hour this afternoon no agreement had been reached. The history of the adverse possession cases thus far tried in the district court would indicate that the jury is likely to be out for some time before arriving at a verdict for one side or the other or in reaching no agreement at all.

The personal injury case of Edwin Day against the Oliver Mining company was started for trial in Judge Cant's room shortly before noon today and that of Wilfred Berneche against John W. Hilliard, the contractor, was started in Judge Ensign's room. The latter case is one in which an employe claims he was knocked off the foundations of a building where he was at work, through the negligence of the contractor in not warning him of the danger and the proximity of a heavy stone being raised by derrick and tackle.

John W. Boardwell one of the petit jurors did not answer to the roll call this morning and a bench warrant was issued for him. Up to this noon it had not been served. Petit jurors who absent themselves from duty without the permission of the court, and without reasonable excuse, are liable for contempt of court, the penalty for which may be a fine or jail sentence.

WHICH DID STABBING?

Was Steve Buckovich stabbed by his brother Marco or his brother Nicco? The answer to this question may have an important bearing on the fate of Steve Bukovich, who is being tried for the murder of his brother, Marco, at a boarding camp fight at the Morris mine location near Hibbing.

Steve Bukovich is indicted for manslaughter in the first degree, which means the killing was done in the heat of passion and without deliberation or premeditation.

The killing took place the evening of April 15, following a general drinking bout during which some twenty-five or thirty Austrian miners in a boarding camp drank a keg of beer and then some bottled beer. According to the evidence there were some differences between the Bukovich brothers, Steve and Marco, the former having discharged the latter from his position as cook the day before. During the quarrel Marco is said to have either pushed or knocked Steve down. Witnesses to the quarrel claim that when Steve got up he ran to a trunk, smashed it open with a keg and seized a revolver with which he ran back to the stove and shot Marco. The bullet struck Marco in the breast, penetrating his body and remaining in the clothing on his back. The injured man died within a half hour.

Before Steve Bukovich ran for his revolver and while he was scuffling with Marco and Nicco he is alleged to have called out that Marco had stabbed him. Witnesses for the state this morning claimed that the cutting was not done by Marco, but by Nicco Bukovich.

The testimony showed that when Steve Bukovich came back with his revolver he first called for his brother Nicco, but the latter had got out of the way. The shooting at Marco then took place. One witness for the state testified that Marco when shot was standing erect with his arms folded.

After the shooting Dan and Mike Bukovich, also brothers of the murdered man, disarmed Steve and he was put in bed.

The revolver with which the killing was done was placed in evidence this morning. It is a large Colt's 38-caliber, officers' model.

Steve Bukovich, the accused, is a small man, black haired, black-eyed with a heavy mustache and a swarthy complexion. He is now recovering from the knife wound in his right side. The wound was about an inch and a half deep, had it been a little deeper it is believed that it would have been fatal.

All the testimony is being taken by interpreters and the case is proceeding rather slowly on that account.

HIGH JINKS ON BORDER

Warm Tale Comes From Little Town of International Falls.

A story comes from International Falls about a "wealthy lumberman of Duluth," and a bold, bad adventuress, who touched him for $3,100, several thousand dollars worth of diamonds, and a few other trifling trinkets.

Both of the parties in the affair are well known in Duluth. The man's name, according to the Border Budget, published at International Falls, is John Londen of 327 Twenty-seventh avenue west, and the woman is Miss Florence Flett, or Mrs. Florence Flett, as she is known to the local police. The woman formerly lived in the Lowell block on East Superior street. Another young woman living here is unfortunate in having the same name as the woman.

"Some of our most highly respected citizens were treated to a little touch of scandal among the shades of high life Wednesday, and as scandal is very toothsome to the great majority, there were very few that missed it.

"The good feature of the escapade was that the principals were strangers. Who were enjoying a little lark in our goody, goody town. John London, not Jack, the author, and Miss Dora Flett, were cognomens given by the leading man and prima donna and according to Dora, he was a wealthy lumberman of Spokane, Wash., and she a milliner and dressmaker. London looked his part in every respect, and as Dora was called comely, and a warm dresser, their promenades caused the natives to gaze at them with envy, and comment on their appearance very freely. They arrived Monday and stopped in the Fort, but put in most of their time looking over the metropolis of the Rainy. John and Dora had smooth sailing and apparently were as happy as two bees on a honey suckle, until Wednesday morning, when John put in an appearance with a jag of mixed drinks bigger than a load of hay. In the parlance of lovers, everything was off with the petite Dora from that time on, and she made her escape from her wealthy paramour, hiding most of her time in places where she could secure such beverages as to prevent her feverish lips from becoming parched.

"In the meantime John got busy and confided to a few acquaintances that the handsome Dora was an adventuress; that she had robbed him of $3,100 in hard cash, a couple of thousand dollars worth of diamonds and a few personal effects. He told his story so convincing that Judge Walsh issued a search warrant for the valuables, and Marshal Klein was given the papers to serve. The bird was located in short order, and just how the peace officer served the papers we could not earn, but the sum total of her cash amounted to 60 cents and she was released.

"She immediately captivated one of the young sports of the town and decamped for the Canadian shore, where she would be safe from her cruel persecutor. The next morning she took the Canadian Northern Cannon Ball for the West.

"In the meantime, London gave a free exhibition of Western sporting methods. He proceeded to souse his interior with fancy highballs and spent the night rolling the dice for $5 a throw. He flashed his roll of greenbacks on every provocation and proclaimed himself a genuine ten-time millionaire. Taking a brace the next morning, he took the next outgoing freight in search of the bonnie Dora, but returned the next day sad and morose, and minus the money-extracting enchantress. In a fit of despondency he attempted Osler's cure for the ills of life by the morphine route, but was resurrected by physicians and locked up by the authorities. As he gradually returned to his sane senses he grieved greatly over his troubles. He confided to Marshal Klein that the captivating adventuress was Miss Florence Flett and not Dora, and that he was a highly respected business man of Duluth, his family residing at 327 Twenty-seventh avenue west."

The woman left the city several weeks ago, and the police later had a letter from her from Sarnia, in which she stated that she had secured a position to teach school there. Attached to the letter were some newspaper clippings from a Sarnia paper, telling of the appointment.

NORTH DAKOTA.

Forman—District court convened at Forman Tuesday, Judge Allen presiding. The calendar is the largest in many years, there being ten criminal and thirty-five civil cases.

The most important case is against John B. Hazlett, charged with the cold-blooded murder of L. M. Van Buskirk at Genesco some six weeks ago. The defendant, who is wealthy, is 62 years of age and a veteran of the Civil war. The state will be represented by State's Attorney Bowen of Forman and Charles E. Wolfe of Wahpeton, while the defense has retained S. A. Sweetman and former Judge William S. Lander of Wahpeton. There is some talk of a change of venue.

The case of the state against Albert Bopp for blindpigging is attracting public interest. It seems it was brought before Justice Packard and that the defense took a change of venue to Justice McKerche of Stirum. The case was tried and Bopp was bound over to the May term of district court under $500 bonds. The defense contends that the justice had no right to try the case on the ground that he was a witness.

The First National bank owners are preparing to erect a two-story bank building of brick here this month.

A petition is being circulated and generally signed asking the county commissioners to build a 100-foot steel bridge across the bed of an old lake between the Soo station and F. Argesinger's residence along the public road.

Fargo — Drags-the-wolf, Makes-the-dust-fly and Medicine Chief are the names of a trio of Indians held to the United States grand jury by a court commissioner at Washburn. They were arrested on the Fort Betnold reservation by United States Marshal Shea and Deputy Quiet of this city, who have just returned.

Last December Indian Policeman Hunts-Along attempted to break up a dance in which Drags-the-Wolf and his friends were participating. There was a row and Hunts-Along killed one of the party. The policeman was then beaten into unconsciousness by some of the other Indians and left for dead. After laying on the ground through one of the coldest nights of the winter, he regained consciousness and recovered.

Despite the fact that the affair occurred five months ago, the evidence in the matter had not been of such a nature as to warrant arrests earlier.

Drags-the-wolf is the son of the famous Indian chief, Crow-flies-high, and a remarkably splendid specimen of the Gros Ventres. He is the leader of a large contingent on the reservation.

Webster—Rosa Ozlowski, living in the northeast part of the county, and her husband and sister, were arrested Tuesday charged with infanticide. A 3-days'-old child to which she gave birth was found in a nearby slough, with marks around its neck indicating that it met its death by strangulation.

Rapid City—Fred Kuenster, a settler on Cottonwood, died Tuesday from the effects of the accidental discharge of a gun. He and his brother Ernest and their friend, Charles Ishmael, were walking over their land, when Fred stumbled, and the gun which he was carrying was discharged, the bullet entering his head. He lived but a few hours. He was 22 years old and leaves a father and mother in Cassville, Wis.

Work has progressed so rapidly at the Downie-Wright foundry that it is expected the machinery shops will be in running order in three weeks. Four carloads of machinery are on the way, and eight carloads have already been unloaded. The foreman of the foundry, August May, has arrived from York, Neb., and Percy Kilner, manager; George P. Chestman, president, and L. F. Downie, secretary, all from York, are in the city. The shops will be run by water power.

Galena—William McCracken, a well-known miner, was instantly killed Monday evening in the Hoodoo shaft of the Branch Mine mine. It is supposed that he walked into the shaft from a drift just as the cage descended. He was struck on the top of the head and crushed. He leaves a wife and several brothers and sisters, all living in the Hills. He was about 25.

REV. A. C. MANSON COMING

Former Duluth Pastor Will be Heard Here on Sunday.

Rev. A. C. Manson of Chicago, formerly pastor of the Second Presbyterian church of Duluth, will be in the city at the end of this week. Mr. Manson will preach at the First Presbyterian church on Sunday. He will be remembered by many in Duluth. He left here about three years ago to take charge of a pastorate in Chicago, and reports indicate that he has made fully as much of a success in Chicago as he made here, and that was considerable.

Mr. Manson was well known in Duluth in all walks of life, taking a lively interest in affairs in general.

VILLAINOUS JOKE

Philadelphia, May 16.—An English joke cost James W. Lacey his power of speech. The perpetrators of the jest are held in the house of detention, awaiting a decision whether they are fit to become citizens of America. Lacey, according to the physicians, never will regain his speech. What was to have been a happy reunion of two brothers, separated for sixteen years, was changed into a tragedy.

Lacey lives in Wilmington, Del. He parted with his brother Arthur, then 7 years old, at Liverpool sixteen years ago. Several weeks ago James sent for his brother, and was at the dock to welcome him.

The first persons to come down the plank were two young Englishmen. They were instantly accosted by Lacey, who asked them if they had met his brother on board.

"Arthur Lacey?" said one; "why, yes; of course, we met him. Charming fellow, but he's dead, you know. He died three days out. We buried him at sea. Just chucked him over, you know. Ain't it so?" to his companion.

"Quite right," said the other Englishman. "Sharks got him."

Lacey listened in horror, and then fell unconscious to the floor. Dr. Clarke of the United States marine service was summoned, and he finally restored him to consciousness. But Dr. Clarke said Lacey's laryngeal muscles were paralyzed.

In the meantime Arthur, hearing the commotion, had come to his brother's side. When James revived, it was found he was speechless. By means of a tablet and pencil, he explained what had happened, and the two Englishmen were arrested. They gave the names of John Ratcliffe of Dover and William Wheelock of Bristol.

RELICS OF FEUDALISM

England Has Not Outgrown Influence of Those Old Days.

London, May 16.—The need of some act which will make a clean sweep of the preposterous relics of the feudal system of land tenure which still survive in many parts of England, has been strikingly shown by a case which has just come to light near Sevenoaks in Kent. There lives Earl Amherst, who, among his other hereditary claims to distinction, boasts that of being lord of the manor of Ortford. Within the borders of the domain thus designated, Herbert Couldrey took up his abode some months ago, totally unaware that thereby he incurred any obligations as a vassal of the lord of the manor. The other day, one of the earls deputy stewards, called upon Mr. Couldrey and seeing a horse and trap standing outside the house, asked Mr. Couldrey if the horse was his. On being answered in the affirmative, the deputy steward cut some hairs from the horse's mane and after depositing them in his pocket, placed a hand on the horse's shoulder, accompanying the action with the words, "This horse is now the property of Lord Amherst."

In the twentieth century, this appears much like a bit of fooling from a comic opera than a valid process, but thanks to the medieval laws that still remain unrepealed, the deputy steward's fantastic performance actually made Earl Amherst the owner of Mr. Couldrey's steed. However, the deputy steward only took away the hairs that he had cut from the mane; the major portion of his lordship's newly appropriated property, which required stabling and feeding, was left with Mr. Couldrey. It was explained to the latter that the earl, being a generous man, did not wish to push his rights to their legal limits and would, therefore, permit Mr. Couldrey to redeem the horse. The price of the redemption was subsequently fixed at $57.50—about one-third of its real value—which shows that Earl Amherst is a much more liberal man than his feudal ancestors who were wont to exact everything they could claim from their vassals.

Finding there was no other method by which he could recover the horse, Mr. Couldrey bought it back at the price stipulated. Then, in order to call public attention to the case, he brought a suit against the earl for the keep of the horse during the two weeks that the settlement of the matter was pending, for, in accordance with the absurd law under which it had been seized, for these two weeks the horse was unquestionably the property of Earl Amherst. But this modern sort of procedure was not at all in accordance with feudal notions, and the Sevenoaks judge, before whom the suit was tried, promptly gave his decision against the audacious vassal. Public opinion, however, is with the latter and it is probable that a bill will soon be introduced in parliament to put a stop to all such revival of medieval rights.

Mr. Couldrey, it seems, last year bought near Sevenoaks a property consisting of 2½ acres with a house and stable, for $8,500. The property is what is known as a "customary freehold" of the manor of Ortford. And, according to the customs of the manor, the lord of the manor is entitled to a "heriot" on every change in the ownership by alienation or succession. As the heriot, the lord may legally seize the tenant's best live beast, but in the absence of a beast to seize, he has to be content, in lieu thereof, with a modest fine of 3 shillings and 6 pence (87 cents). The customary freeholder who sold the property to Mr. Couldrey possessed no best beast, and on that occasion Earl Amherst got only the 87 cents. Without any idea that he was thereby jeopardizing his own best beast, Mr. Couldrey recently sold a half acre of his land for $200. Then Earl Amherst's emissary swooped down on him as already told and claimed his heriot. Mr. Couldrey did not even know what the word meant until he had consulted a dictionary. If he had kept a motor car instead of a horse, he would have been able to settle the earl's claim by paying him 87 cents.

Of course, there are many manorial lords who never think of enforcing the ancient feudal rights which have never been abrogated. But it is always possible for such claims to be enforced vexatiously and oppressively. It is actually on record, though it happened many years ago, that a lord of the manor seized as his heriot a tenant's racehorse, worth between $10,000 and $15,000.

GAINS FROM FORFEITURES

Milwaukee, May 16.—Testimony given by Actuary C. A. Loveland of the Northwestern Mutual Life Insurance company, before the Wisconsin legislative committee today, developed that the reserve on policies lapsed between 1899 and 1904, on which the third premium had not been paid, was $1,600,000. The gains from forfeitures during 1904 alone was $302,64.

It was pointed out by Mr. Loveland that the cost of issuing policies, including agents' commissions, medical examinations, etc., should be taken into consideration. Mr. Loveland was asked if he did not think a policy should be made non-forfeitable after the payment of the second annual premium, and said he preferred to reserve his answer to the question until after he had thoroughly investigated matters bearing upon the subject.

CORN DOCTOR TURNED DOWN

Claiming that he had been left destitute by the San Francisco disaster, a corn doctor this morning asked the police for a special permit to ply his vocation as street "fakir," in order that he might have an opportunity to get another start.

The police had no power to grant such a permit, and it was refused.

This spring the ordinance covering peddlers and street fakirs is being rigidly enforced, and none of them are allowed to remain on a corner or occupy the street for more than ten minutes at a time. This prevents them from attracting a large crowd and blocking the street.

PROF. CURIE'S WIDOW

Will be Appointed to the Chair Created for Him.

Paris, May 15.—Instead of pensioning Mme. Curie, widow of the discoverer of radium, who was killed in an accident a few weeks ago, the cabinet has decided to appoint her to the chair of natural sciences, which was specially created for her husband. This innovation makes the conservative population in the Sorbonne neighborhood gasp with astonishment. Minister Briand, who is a Socialist, is unable to see that the question of sex makes any difference. He said today:

"Prof. Curie always acknowledged that he would not have accomplished half of what he did without the collaboration of his wife. The world stands a better chance of developing the uses of radium with this woman carrying on the dead man's work than would be the case if I appointed one of Prof. Curie's disciples. I do not expect any difficulty in the matter."

When the correspondent asked Mme. Curie whether she would accept the position, she replied: "I cannot really believe that the chair will be offered to me, and it would not be in good taste to discuss the matter thus prematurely. But in some form or other, I intend to devote the rest of my life to extending our knowledge of radium."

PRAYED BEFORE CORPSE

Of Wife He Had Murdered and Then Killed Himself.

Lincoln, Neb., May 15.—A coroner's inquiry into the murder of Mrs. Sid Mackey by her husband and the subsequent suicide of the latter near Fairbury, Neb., discloses a tragedy unique in the criminal annals of the state.

Mackey was a widower with several grown children, and married the woman eighteen months ago. They quarreled frequently and Mackey, brooding over his unhappiness, bought a revolver three weeks ago.

On Saturday morning a neighbor woman entered the house anw found Mackey's body on a bed. A ghastly wound was in his temple and a pistol was clutched in his hand. Several days before he had told the neighbors that his wife had gone on a visit, and it was not until the coroner reached the scene, six hours later, that the woman's corpse was discovered in another room.

Mrs. Mackey's body lay on a bed partly covered with a shroud, and a bullet hole in the head disclosed the manner of death. The hands were crossed above her breast and her head was almost completely hidden in a mass of flowers. A small table stood at the head of the bed and on it were a Bible and a cross with charred candles on either side of the cross.

Mackey had held funeral services over her body every day for several days. A note scrawled before he took his own life explained that he had prayed for her forgiveness for the unhappiness she had caused him.

BERKMAN IS TO BE FREED

Would-be Assassin of Frick to Quit Cell Friday.

Prisoner Changes His Theories, But Still Believes in Anarchy.

Pittsburg, May 16.—Alexander Berkman, who attempted to assassinate H. C. Frick during the Homestead strike in July, 1892, and succeeded in wounding both him and John G. A. Leishman, now minister to Turkey, will be released from prison next Friday. Early last week Mr. Frick and Mr. Leishman, evidently fearing that they might be attacked again, visited Berkman in prison in order that they might become familiar with his changed appearance.

Their apprehensions were without basis, however, for Berkman emerges from prison with his anarchistic theories completely changed. He is still an anarchist, but he no longer believes in the torch and the bomb.

"I have satisfied society," he says. "I have paid the penalty for my act. Society has no further claim on me on that score. I want to be at peace with the world and I've my days without interference. My ideas regarding the use of force have changed. My imprisonment has been of benefit to me, for it opened the doors of opportunity and I go out into the world with a good education. I shall spend the rest of my life among my people, trying to teach them some of the things I have learned. I hope to be of use to my fellow men."

On his last Sunday in prison Berkman attended divine service. The chaplain chose for his text I. Corinthians ix. 9: "Who maketh a war at his own charges." If it met with any personal response in Berkman's mind he did not show it.

He is getting anxious for freedom, and this week promises to drag heavily on him. He refuses to tell any of the prison authorities what he will do when he is liberated.

Berkman is regarded as one of the most remarkable characters ever inside a Pennsylvania prison. During the period of his confinement he never had a black mark against him. He spoke English imperfectly when arrested. After going to the penitentiary he asked permission to attend the prison school. Here he mastered the English language quickly, and took up German and French. He also perfected his education in Russian. Today he is master of four languages. His knowledge of the world's best literature would do credit to a university graduate, while as a historian he could pass a hard examination.

He has a passion for reading and his fancy was indulged to the limit in the penitentiary by Chaplain J. J. Milligan, who is his firm friend. They have a fair library at the prison, and when he had read everything in it the chaplain scoured him other books. Some of the things Berkman has read during his prison life are Shakespeare, Tennyson, Longfellow, Guizot's "France," Carlyle's French Revolution, Victor Hugo, Gibbon's Rome, Green's "History of the English People," "History of Greece," Macaulay's "England," Thackery, Dickens, Sir Walter Scott, and a vast host of other standard works.

Not only has he read these books, but he has studied them. Tolstoi particularly has been his delight and as a result of reading the works of his great countryman, Berkman's mind has undergone a change. He is still an anarchist but he is no longer an apostle of force. He believes in education and that it and it alone will remedy the evils he so blindly struck against when he shot Mr. Frick.

Berkman has served fourteen years and eight months, having cut down his original sentence of twenty years by good behavior. He played a prominent part in the historic Homestead riots, which followed a strike in the Carnegie steel mills at that place in 1892. The mills shut down the night of June 30. The striking workmen at once took possession and established a guard to keep out imported workers. The Carnegie company employed a number of Pinkertons, who were taken to Homestead July 6 in a barge, which was towed up the Monongahela river from Pittsburg. A battle between strikers and guards followed, which raged all day. More than a dozen men were killed and many more injured. The Pinkertons surrendered that evening and Homestead was in the hands of a mob of anarchists.

The Pennsylvania National guard marched into Homestead July 11 and placed the town under martial law. This practically ended the strike. At a cost of many thousands of dollars the Carnegie Steel company opened its works, taught new men the secrets of making steel and has been independent of labor unions ever since.

Berkman, a Russian, was a bookbinder, scarcely 21 years old. He had been in this country only a short time and had lived in the slums of New York struggling on meager wages. The wrongs of the working class in Russia had driven him into the ranks of the anarchists and he remained there when he came to this country.

Berkman conceived the idea that he was destined to right the wrongs of the Homestead steel workers and came to Pittsburg with the intention of killing Mr. Frick, whom he held personally responsible for the slaughter at Homestead. The Saturday following the arrival of the troops in Homestead he went to the Carnegie offices, forced himself into the private room of Mr. Frick, who was talking business with Mr. Leishman. Without a word Berkman began firing at Mr. Frick with a revolver he held in one hand, while he flourished a long knife in the other.

Mr. Frick grappled with his assailant, Mr. Leishman joined in the fight, and for a couple of minutes they battled all over the office. Mr. Frick had been hit with Berkman's first shot and had been stabbed. Mr. Leishman also was stabbed. Clerks rushed in and Berkman was soon overcome. A great mob gathered and demanded the life of the prisoner, but the police dispersed the rioters.

Calumet—J. Kojima, M. Otagawa and T. Fujibaynashi, subjects of the Mikado, and representing the Furnkawa Mining company, Tokio, Japan, are in the Lake Superior copper district inspecting the mines. Their company is heavily interested in copper mines and they came to this country to study modern methods and machinery.

"Japan is the third largest of copper producing countries on the globe," said Mr. Kojima, "but we believe its output can be more than doubled with modern machinery. We produce about one-twentieth of all the copper mined in the world at present, but our methods are primitive. We have made a close study of the way this metal is mined in the Lake Superior district. At Buffalo we expect to visit several copper smelting plants and the power stations at Niagara Falls."

The Calumet & Hecla Mining company is the largest holder of timber lands in the upper peninsula, having 90,000 acres of pine and mixed timber. This company uses over 30,000,000 feet of timber annually in its mines at Calumet, most of which is bought in open market, little being taken from its own lands. The company's holdings extend from Sault Ste. Marie westward to Minnesota, where it is constantly acquiring lands.

That the scarcity of timber is making itself felt is shown by the increase in the amount of cement used in the mines of the copper country. The Calumet & Hecla company was among the first to use cement in place of timber in its workings and the use of this material has increased yearly.

Menominee—Mrs. James Gregory, living at Marquette, is one of the few survivors who witnessed the shooting of Abraham Lincoln in Ford's theater in Washington in 1865. Mrs. Gregory, who was then a young girl living with a married sister in Washington, attended the theater that night, it having been advertised that Mr. Lincoln would be present.

She heard the muffled shot from the president's box and saw Booth spring out, catching his foot in the flag draped about the box and falling upon the stage.

An interesting lawsuit for the possession of a 13-year-old boy has just been finished in circuit court here. The boy, John Segerdahl, lost both his parents when he was 4 years old, and was then adopted into a family named Jones near this city.

Now his two older brothers and a sister wish to recover the boy and have him live with them. The boy's foster parents produced formal adoption papers and the lad said that he wished to live with them, and the court decided that he should remain in their custody.

Edward Renard, described as an aged and helpless pauper of Menominee, has brought suit for $3,000 damages against F. X. Morro, an alderman of Oconto, Wis., and the head of the poor commission there. Renard charges that Morrow forcibly evicted him from the poor house in Oconto, where his board was being paid by his nephew, in fear he would gain residence in Oconto and become a county charge. It is alleged that Morrow left Renard alone and destitute at the depot and the Menominee sheriff had to go after him. He claims his health was greatly impaired by exposure to the January weather.

BOY'S HEAD ONE SOLID SORE

Hair All Came Out and He Suffered Very Much—Under Doctor Three Months and No Better—Permanently Cured at Expense of $2.

CUTICURA REMEDIES WORK WONDERS

Mr. A. C. Barnett, proprietor of a general store in Avard, Oklahoma, tells in the following grateful letter how Cuticura cured him and his son of terrible eczemas:

"My little boy had eczema. His head was one solid sore, all over his scalp; his hair all came out, and he suffered very much. I had a physician treat him, but at the end of three months he was no better. I remembered that the Cuticura Remedies had cured me, and after giving him two bottles of Cuticura Resolvent, according to directions, and using Cuticura Soap and Ointment on him daily, his eczema left him, his hair grew again, and neither he nor myself have had any eczema since.

As to his own case, Mr. Barnett says: "I suffered with eczema, a burning, itching, breaking out on my face for more than a year. I took treatment from physicians for several months, which did no good. I was then advised to try Cuticura. I took six bottles of Cuticura Resolvent, and used Cuticura Soap and Ointment freely every day. I began to improve soon after starting to use them, and when I had taken the six bottles of the Resolvent my face had become clear, I had good color, and all eruptions had left me.

We use the Cuticura Soap and Ointment in our family now for general use, and it keeps our skin soft and healthy. I cheerfully recommend the Cuticura Remedies for all cases of eczema. (signed), A. C. Barnett, Avard, Oklahoma, Mar. 30, 1905."

DEATHS DUE TO STANDARD OIL

Owing to Orders for Kerosene and Gasoline Being Mixed.

Moorhead, Minn., May 16.—The Standard Oil company has settled the Glyndon damage case, and thus forestalled any action against it or against C. G. Tracy & Co. of Glyndon.

This is the outcome of the recent explosion of oil at that place, whereby Mrs. Olaus Anderson, her infant son and Mrs. Peter Anderson, her mother, came to a horrible death. Mrs. Anderson, thinking to freshen the fire in the kitchen stove, poured on what was supposed to be kerosene. The oil took fire and exploded the can. The flames spread all over Mrs. Anderson and her mother, and the latter, in an effort to rescue the baby, picked it up and ran out. All three were horribly burned and died in a few hours.

The coroner's jury at the inquest held the Standard Oil company and C. G. Tracy & Co. of Glyndon responsible, charging neglect in an endeavor to rectify a mistake. It is alleged orders were mixed by the Standard Oil company in filling two tanks of oil, one with kerosene and the other with gasoline. The mistake consisted of the gasoline tank being filled with kerosene and the kerosene tank with gasoline.

Later the mistake was discovered, and the oil ordered pumped out of the tanks. It is alleged that the gasoline tank was only half emptied, and that it was then filled with kerosene. This mixture was sold to Tracy & Co. by the Standard Oil company, and this is what the Andersons purchased, and which caused the explosion.

The amount which the Standard Oil company would be liable under the Minnesota law, if proven guilty of carelessness, would be $13,000. The sum which has been finally settled upon so nearly approximates the above sum that it would not pay the Andersons to bring suit, and consequently the settlement was made.

N. H. Stadum of Glyndon has been appointed administrator of the estates of the Andersons. Orrin Oliver represented Charles S. Marden, the attorney for the Andersons. The settlement was made with them.

Widow May Sue Company.

Mrs. Frank Van Fletern who resides in the West end made application to the probate court yesterday for letters of administration of the estate of her deceased husband. Van Fletern was employed at the ore docks and was killed by a falling log from a passing train while walking along the railway tracks last April. At the time he was killed a divorce suit was pending, Mrs. Van Fletern claiming that her husband treated her in a cruel manner. It is understood that the widow contemplates suing the railway company for $5,000 damages, the statutory limitation in case of death. Van Fletern's estate is valued at about $500. His heirs are his widow and three children. Mrs. Van Fletern's petition will be heard June 11.

Verdict Favors G. H. Lounsberry.

The jury in the $5,000 damage case brought by the heirs of Charles Thuren against George H. Lounsberry, the contractor, returned a verdict in favor of Mr. Lounsberry, about 4 o'clock yesterday afternoon. Thuren was employed on the Masonic Temple building as a helper to the masons. He walked out on the joists in the top of the building and one of them broke, precipitating him to the ground many feet below. Emma Carlson, the administratrix of his estate, claimed that the contractor was responsible for her brother's death in that he supplied defective material and an unsafe place to work. Mr. Lounsberry claimed that Thuren's duties did not take him to the place where the timber broke, and alleged contributory negligence on the employe's part. Miller & Clapp represented the administratrix and H. T. Abbott the contractor.

BUFFALO LITHIA WATER

"All the Argument Necessary."

The International Journal of Surgery, August, 1905, under the heading "CYSTITIS" says: "In the treatment of Cystitis water is the great aid to all forms of medication. Moreover, BUFFALO LITHIA WATER is the ideal form in which to administer it to the cystitic patient, as it is not only a pure solvent, but has the additional virtue of containing substantial quantities of the alkaline Lithates. Patients should be encouraged to take from two to four quarts per day if they can, and the relief they will obtain will be all the argument necessary after the first day or so.

"IN URIC ACID DIATHESIS, GOUT, RHEUMATISM, LITHAEMIA, and the like, ITS ACTION IS PROMPT AND LASTING."

Dr. Geo. Ben. Johnston, M. D., LL. D., Richmond, Va., Ex-President Southern Surgical and Gynecological Assn., Ex-President Virginia Medical Society, and Prof. of Gynecology and Abdominal Surgery, Medical College of Virginia: "If I were asked what mineral water has the widest range of usefulness, I would unhesitatingly answer, BUFFALO LITHIA WATER In Uric Acid Diathesis, Gout, Rheumatism, Lithaemia, and the like, its action is prompt and lasting. * * * Almost any case of Pyelitis and Cystitis will be alleviated by it, and many cured. I have had evidence of the undoubted Disintegrating, Solvent and Eliminating power of this water in Renal Calculus, and have known its long continued use to permanently break up the gravel forming habit."

Voluminous medical testimony on request. For sale by the general drug and mineral water trade. Hotel at Springs opens June 15th.

OBSERVE FLAG DAY.

Thursday, June 14, will be the 129th anniversary of the adoption of the stars and stripes as the flag of the United States. In recent years Flag day has come to be recognized more and more as a national anniversary, and it is a very fitting thing that the day should be recognized, particularly in the public schools.

In these days when the nation appears to be having a new birth of freedom, when the powers of commercialism, corruption and greed are slowly giving backward as an awakened people advance to take their rights, it is peculiarly fitting that devotion to the flag as the emblem of the nation and all it stands for should be shown upon every possible occasion, and a good time for everybody to join in a tribute to the red, white and blue glories of the American flag will be June 14.

On that occasion every flag in Duluth should be afloat. It is not very much for a patriotic citizen to tax his mind with, to think of running his flag to the top of the staff on that day, but it seems to be too much, generally, for most people. The schools always observe the day with appropriate exercises, and this is proper.

The American Flag association is sending out appeals to the mayors of cities, the press, officers and members of patriotic societies, school officers and teachers, and to the citizens of the United States generally, asking them to observe Flag day. Mayors of cities are requested to order flags displayed upon all municipal buildings, and by formal proclamation to invite the citizens to do the same upon private buildings.

School officers and teachers are asked to arrange for patriotic exercises celebrating the day, and to teach the story of the flag and what it represents, asking the young people to pledge their loyalty to it. Patriotic societies are urged to assist in stirring up enthusiasm by public appeals, and to arrange observance of the anniversary. And, finally, every American citizen is requested to join in the public recognition of the birthday of the emblem of our nationality, even if all he does is to tack up a few small penny flags on his front porch.

On June 14, 1777, congress prescribed the form of flag that should be used, and on April 4, 1818, further provided that on the admission of a new state into the union, one star should be added to the union of the flag. Starting with thirteen, that flag now bears forty-five bright stars.

THE CENTER OF GRAVITY.

Parents of pupils in the New York public schools cannot complain that the school authorities do not give close attention to the welfare of their children.

Indeed, a recent rule issued by the superintendent of the New York schools has had a tendency to create some amusement. By this order pupils are required to carry their books on the right side on even days of the month, and on the left side on odd days. The object, according to the order, is to prevent the danger of spinal curvature by alternating the strain on the backbone.

This danger may appear to the average individual to be rather remote, but very likely the superintendent of the New York schools knows what he is doing, and has reason to believe that the common affliction of spinal curvature may be caused by the habit of bearing burdens upon one side habitually. The school children, doubtless, get in the habit of carrying their books always upon one side, and it may be that even so light a burden as a bundle of school books would have a tendency to give the spine a twist to one side.

But it is easy to see where he is going to have trouble enforcing the rule. When a child starts for school in the morning, it is assuming a good deal to expect that he will invariably look at the calendar before shouldering his strap-full of books, to see whether, it being an even day of the month, he shall carry the books on the right side, or vice versa. He is much more certain to think of it just before he gets to the point where the principal is likely to be looking out of the window to note the manner in which he is carrying his bundle. Then he will probably forget whether it is an odd-numbered day or an even-numbered day, and if he can remember that he is likely to forget which side he is supposed to saddle the burden upon.

But doubtless the order is well-meant, and it is certain that it can harm nobody. One New York citizen has written to the Times of that city, suggesting that the number of books to be carried should be fixed by an executive order, "so that an innocent and pliable youth may not thoughtlessly carry five books one day and six the next, to the everlasting derangement of his center of gravity."

The center of gravity may be in the man that issued the order, but the center of levity is squarely in the middle of the order itself.

THE SERPENT'S TRAIL.

While the Standard Oil company is working up a plausible imitation of righteous indignation over the mild charges made against it by the Garfield report, and stoutly protesting its lamblike innocence, in the hearing on Standard Oil methods before the interstate commerce commission in Chicago the hideousness of the oil trust's practices are being laid bare.

Hypocrisy, cunning, stealth, deceit, treachery, bribery, and corruption generally, characterize these methods. The showing made in Chicago is enough to condemn the Standard Oil company as a thief in the night, a wolf in the fold. It is rankest flattery, in view of these developments, to call it a highway robber. It is more like a sneak thief, a poisoner, a barn-burner. Nothing so brave and open as highway robbery is in its line. It has the courage of the contemptible rascal that snatches pennies from the hands of babes, and skulks in the alleys when men appear.

The evidence in Chicago shows that railroad employes and agents of independent oil companies have been bribed and corrupted by Standard Oil agents, and paid to betray their employers. It has given short measure, compelling its employes to be dishonest and to sell 208 gallons of oil from wagons with a capacity of 200 gallons. It has sold poor oil as good oil, and has taken three different prices for three different grades of oil, all sold out of the same tank. It has sneaked into the offices of its competitors, bought information about their business, and then, by underhanded methods, used that information against them.

When it had bought the names of those dealing with independent concerns, it has held up the shipments of the independents through bribery of railroads until it could rush in its own trains of oil to the market. When it has been necessary to undersell competitors, it has stealthily substituted cheap oils for the good oils it was underselling, and, in short, it has spread its dishonesty over as much ground as it could. It has stopped at nothing except things requiring courage. Nothing, apparently, has been too low for it to attempt in order to throttle competition and bleed the last dollar from the consumers.

It is high time that a stern attempt to search all its evils was being made. It is like turning up a flat stone from the sod in summer time, when a world of slimy, crawling, loathsome things are uncovered. It is unpleasant, but it is necessary and in the end wholesome.

THE UNPREPARED CLASS.

It has been pointed out that perhaps the keenest suffering from the San Francisco calamity was felt among clerks, professional men and those other than laborers. It shows, in a measure, the unpreparedness of the average middle class family, and it might be made to teach a lesson even in cities where no such calamities threaten.

The days following the fire and earthquake found these people with their homes and household goods gone, their employment suddenly interrupted, and their savings, if they had any, tied up in burned banks that could not open for business until the vaults had cooled. In these circumstances they were practically helpless. When men were wanted to dig trenches and ditches and clear away the ruins they volunteered with the rest, but they were unused to manual labor, and blistered hands, aching backs and wearied limbs soon made them practically useless in this capacity.

Laborers, on the other hand, quickly adapted themselves to the new circumstances, and with hardened muscles and sturdy limbs turned to the work that was offered them with cheerful content.

The average clerk, bookkeeper, merchant and professional man is a pretty helpless animal when deprived of the attributes and appurtenances of civilization to which he is accustomed. Lack of manual labor and exercise makes his hands tender and his muscles flabby. His endurance is small, and hardships that will hardly affect those accustomed to poorer living than his will well nigh overwhelm him. Unless he happens to have a little savings account somewhere within reach he is as a wisp of straw on the raging surface of a torrent when calamity befalls.

It would be easy for him to acquire a degree of preparedness that would make things easier for him when ill luck befalls, if it were not for the fact that he does not expect ill luck. He cheerfully spends nearly all he earns, and as cheerfully does he waste his muscular strength in sedentary living without wholesome exercise.

It would be worth while if every man would ask himself how he would find it to be suddenly cast into the situation his brothers of San Francisco are now occupying. Would he have any savings to bear him up? If he had to do manual labor would his strength suffice? It is true that no earthquake threatens Duluth. But there is no harm in being prepared for anything that can come, and a store of health and strength and a little money for a rainy day will prove to be a source of immense content.

"Have you noticed that Duluth is getting an awful lot of advertising out of J. Adam Bede's bear story stunt in the presence of President Roosevelt?" said F. A. Cochrane of Grand Rapids, Mich., at the Lenox. "Practically every newspaper in the country had something about it, and while the news stories were all alike, being furnished by the Associated Press, I suppose, there were numberless side remarks made on the editorial pages and in the funny columns.

"The average Easterner has had the name Duluth stamped more firmly on his mind by this bear incident than by anything else. Everybody is interested in the president, and what the president does, and takes particular interest in his hunting expeditions. Congressman Bede has something of a reputation himself, and the three—President Roosevelt, Bede and the bear story—combined, make an advertising scheme that would be hard to beat.

"Talk about bears, though, did you ever go on a hunt after bruin? I was in a black bear country down in Michigan for a couple of weeks once, and the settler with whom I was staying got me all excited one day about a monster bear he had seen about a mile from the house. He urged me to shoulder a gun and go with him to the spot. As there was a little snow on the ground he said we wouldn't have much difficulty in locating our quarry. He remarked that the animal wasn't at all wild, but this, instead of increasing my desire to sally forth in search of adventure, had just the opposite effect, and I was strongly tempted to remain in the house. Of course it would never have done to allow this fact to become known, however, and so I put on as bold a front as I could under the circumstances, and tried to appear eager to begin the hunt.

"I was somewhat reassured when my friend told me that a black bear was as harmless as a house dog, and that there was no particular glory in shooting them, because they never offered fight. I felt better after this, and rammed eight cartridges into my rifle and started out. Even before we reached the bear tracks we saw the bear. He came out in the road 150 feet ahead of us and stood looking carelessly in our direction. He looked as big as a cow, and really was a monster of his class. I got a bad case of buck fever in an instant, and began shooting in every direction but the right one. After I had shot twice, bruin turned and ambled slowly up the road, going away from us, and not paying the slightest heed to the reports of the gun. I emptied the gun at him and still he continued his promenade, unhurt and unscared.

"Here my settler friend began to get interested, and, saying the specimen was too valuable a one to lose, he took the gun from my hands and slipped in three cartridges. The bear continued his course, but he stopped at the first shot and bit savagely at his ham. As he turned a second bullet caught him behind the shoulder, and a second later the third was planted in a vital spot. He was dead before we reached him. I have always been sorry that I got the buck fever, for there is a certain distinction about being able to say that one has killed a bear, even if said bear stands broadside in the road 150 feet away and lets one shoot at him till the gun is empty."

"It is a mistake to think of extremely cold weather in connection with the names of towns in Northwestern Canada," said A. C. Goodell of Minneapolis, at the St. Louis. "The climate around Edmonton and to the west of there is, on the whole, much milder than it is here in Duluth. The summers are warmer, and the winters are not so severe. Nearer the coast the weather is very much like that prevailing in the state of Washington, which is very nearly ideal in some sections. Warm winds, called chinooks, come along every spring and quickly melt the snow and put the ground in condition for seeding.

"The travel of settlers into the Canadian Northwest is still heavy. The trains over the roads leading into the district are all of them loaded to full capacity, and many have to run in several sections. A great many of the new settlers are from the United States, and most of the latter are those who have sold their lands in older, settled communities for a good price, so that they are in good condition to start right in Canada. Quite a lot of government land is still left in the Dominion, but it is all taken up near the towns.

"The Grand Trunk Pacific and other railroad extensions now building will open up a fine new country. Some of it will be suitable for farming, and some is rich in mineral resources. You might say that the development of Canadian mines has only just begun. Of course there are some old mines that have been in operation a good many years, but there is a vast stretch of mineral territory that is hardly more than explored as yet. Rich mining properties are opening up right along. A lot of these enterprises are backed by American capitalists, and in numerous instances they are in charge of American engineers and superintendents. Eastern Canada capitalists are also putting a good deal of money into the Western mines."

Bill's Wife Alarmed.

Exchange: A Kansas paper tells the following on Bill Jones, a local merchant who went to Kansas City last spring to buy goods. The goods were shipped immediately and reached home before he did. When the boxes were delivered at his store his wife happened to look at the largest, and, uttering a loud cry, called for a hammer. A neighbor, hearing her scream, rushed to her assistance and asked what was the matter. Mrs. Jones, pale and faint, pointed to an inscription on the box which read as follows: "Bill inside."

The ever-faithful old northeast wind was with us again this morning, together with lowering clouds and a tendency to fog. Yesterday afternoon the wind let up long enough to entertain a few smart thunder showers, and it was hoped that this disturbance would dislodge the northeaster and bring a touch of real summer. But it didn't, though it did bring warmer temperature. Last night's lowest was 42 degrees, and yesterday's highest was 56 degrees. The weather man expects the showery and thundery conditions to maintain tonight and tomorrow, but gives hope that the northeast winds may shift to southerly. Says Mr. Richardson of conditions:

"Barometric conditions have changed but slightly since Tuesday morning, pressures remaining high over Atlantic and Pacific districts and low in the Northwest. The storm area over the latter district has been attended by a continuance of showery weather there and from Minnesota southward to Louisiana. Temperatures continue high in the central valleys, but it is much cooler in the far West attending rising pressures there. The Northwest storm area will continue to affect this locality tonight and Thursday as regards showers and cool northeasterly winds."

Accordingly, they set fire to the capitol and made a swift sneak.

Philadelphia Press: "Ah! Mabel—er—that is to say, Miss Bright," stammered Mr. Kloseman, "no doubt you can guess what I am about to say; perhaps you realize why I have sat here in your parlor night after night—"

"Why, yes," interrupted the clever girl, "I suppose you find it cheaper than taking me out to the theater or anywhere."

A Child's Good Advice.

Ladies' Home Journal: One morning a Sunday school was about to be dismissed and the youngsters were already in anticipation of relaxing their cramped little limbs after the hours of confinement on straightbacked chairs and benches, when the superintendent arose and, instead of the usual dismissal, announced: "And now, children, let me introduce Mr. Smith, who will give us a short talk."

Mr. Smith smilingly arose and, after gazing impressively around the classroom, began with: "I hardly know what to say," when the whole school was convulsed to hear a small, thin voice back in the rear lisp:

"Thay amen and thit down."

The Minneapolis boom has about played out, according to the Tribune of that city. Of course; the boomers have moved to Duluth, where their field of labors will prove profitable. They are a class of men that know when to quit a town. They can tell when the end is reached. We expect to see several of the large flour mills of Minneapolis moved to Duluth in a short time.

BOOSTING NORTHERN MINNESOTA.

Brainerd Tribune: There is nothing that makes a safer investment than Northern Minnesota realty. It will never sell for a cent less than today and the man who can buy now and hold for five or ten years will have a fortune.

Princeton Union: When those Southern Minnesota newspaper fellows who are opposed to the drainage movement attend the Republican state convention it would be well for them to consume a day or two in visiting the swamp lands of the North. Then, perhaps, they would cease their antagonism to the movement.

Hibbing Mesaba Ore: The way to develop a wilderness is to build roads, and there is some wilderness north of Hibbing that needs only development to bring rich returns.

Warroad Plaindealer: With Northern Minnesota recognized on the state ticket, and each of the legislative districts sending their most capable men to the state legislature, Northern Minnesota will receive the recognition desired, and it will make the development of this part of the state a much easier problem to solve.

Brookston Herald: If you are not disposed to help along the drainage campaign, you can knock. Every knock will lead some one to have a look. Have a look at the drainage proposition and you will be convinced that it is righteous and must prevail.

Royalton Banner: State development should be the object of all legislation and the aspiration of every patriot. The man who aids in the development of the resources of Minnesota or who incites others to work for it is rendering the state a service which will inure to the benefit of all its citizens.

Littlefork Times: The state land sale clearly demonstrated the possibilities of Itasca county. With unimproved land selling as high as $20 an acre, it begins to look as though there is something in Itasca county besides "hot air."

Elk River Star-News: There is commendable unanimity among Northern Minnesota newspapers on the question of knocking and booming. They are all boomers of local interests and that's where their heads are level.

Staples Tribune: Northern Minnesota should see to it that a set of level-headed men are sent to the next legislature. Men that stand for good government, drainage and good roads are the kind we want and must have. The man that doesn't stand for these should be told to go away back, for he is of no use to us.

Minneapolis Telegram: It is more than time to do something for the northern part of the state.—Minneota Mascot.

This is no time to be doing anything for the northern part of the state. The northern part of the state can take care of itself. We would favor doing something for the entire state, though, by draining those swamps up there. That's business. It reduces taxation.

Her Bookkeeping.

Harper's Weekly: There is a certain young business man of Baltimore, not long married, who bethought him of a device to curb the growing extravagance of his wife.

"Now, Margaret," said he, producing a neatly ruled memorandum book, "for some time you've been spending the money I give you for household expenses, not to speak of your own personal expenses, in a somewhat loose and haphazard manner. So I've got this little book for you. You'll find that a keeping of your accounts will tend to a more economical disbursement of our funds." And the husband explained how the receipts were to be entered on this side and the expenditures on the other, thus affording an itemized statement of the monthly balances.

The young wife took the suggestion in good part and promised to keep the book as directed.

At the end of the month the husband asked that he might see how she had kept the accounts.

Dick took the book. A single glance was sufficient to send him into hysterical laughter, for these were the entries:

One one side: "January 1. Received from Richard, $100." On the other: "Spent it all."

Love of Home.

Onaga, Kan., Herald: "Does this seem to be a pretty good place for fish?" asked the newcomer down on the bank.

"I guess it is," replied the angler, with the cob pipe. "I can't get them to leave it."

MINNESOTA OPINIONS.

Greenbush Journal: The June bride and the Republican convention will soon be the all-absorbing topics.

Roseau Region: And still legislative candidates are silent as to what they stand for.

Minneota Mascot: "The band wagon has no attractions for the honest, thinking citizen." That may be true, and yet there are men riding in that vehicle who come pretty close to belonging to that class. It is a mistake to take for granted that a man is not upright just because he is successful.

Paynesville Press: Speaking of campaign contributions by powerful corporations and trusts, it is safe to say that Standard Oil will not contribute much for the re-election of the present administration.

Clarissa Independent: A Missouri man has been arrested and fined for making a false return as to his personal property. Newport millionaires should be thankful that summer resort is not located in Missouri.

Mankato Free Press: The Slayton Gazette laments the defeat of the primary election law in Iowa. It was the trust and standpat crowd that brought about the law's annihilation.

Crookston Times: The demand for reform is a swelling tide; if it is dammed back too long it may break all bounds and sweep everything before it. After the defeat of the rate bill, if it be defeated in fact or in purpose, will come the deluge.

Breckenridge Gazette: The presidential bee is buzzing loudly in the headgear of Speaker Cannon. And this is about all it will ever amount to. "Uncle Joe" is a little too close to the great trusts to ever make a satisfactory president. The next president of the United States will be a man who is in sympathy with the policies of Theodore Roosevelt.

Ely Miner: Some of the Southern Minnesota papers, who are white with fear that some of their delegates will be under corporate influences at the Duluth convention, will please take notice that such easily influenced characters are not wanted, in the first place; and secondly, that there is no more corporate influence in Duluth than there is in either of the towns from which the delegates hail.

Deer River News: We cannot see why smashing "lids" does not make more noise than putting them on does.

Red Wing News: Young man, did you ever stop to think that the want columns of the papers never contain an advertisement reading: "Wanted—A young man who drinks, gambles and smokes cigarettes, and who spends his evenings in questionable company." Such are not wanted, and when one of them does get a responsible position, it is through false pretenses.

International Falls Press: Jacobson's legislative record is his platform. He always opposed every effort to develop Northern Minnesota. What could we expect of him as governor?

Turned On Him.

Harper's Weekly: An officious policeman of the United States capitol met a man in the senate corridor with a cigar in his mouth.

"Pardon me," he said, "but unless you stop smoking I will have to exclude you from this building."

"Sir," replied the offender, "you may note that I am not smoking. This cigar is not lighted. To have a cigar is not necessarily to smoke. Here, I have others in my pocket. Am I guilty on three counts simply because I have three cigars? I have shoes on my feet, yet you would hardly decide from that that I had walked to the capitol, would you?"

The guardian of the building was non plused a second, but he came to all right.

"No," he replied, "and neither would I want to testify that you rode over just because you have wheels."

Reflections of a Bachelor.

If a man loves a woman she can sit on his lap without getting heavy unless they are married.

A man no sooner gets the Christmas present his wife gave him paid for than he has to begin to save up for the one he is going to give her.

A NEW GOSPEL IS UNEARTHED

London, May 16.—Doctors Grenfel and Hart, during continued researches of the ruins of Oxyrhynous, whose ancient monasteries some years ago yielded the famous logia of Christ, found a fragment of a supposed lost gospel which is now in Queen's college, Oxford.

It is a tiny scrap of vellum, perforated by worms and yellowed by sixteen centuries, but the writing is perfectly legible. It is written in Greek characters, which are almost microscopically minute, with scarlet initials. There are about 300 words.

It is certainly no part of any extant gospel, but its theological value may be left to theologians. It is unusually well written from a literary viewpoint. It begins in the middle of a speech. Jesus and his disciple have entered the temple and met a Pharisee, who rebukes them for omitting some ceremonial of ablution.

Jesus asks the Pharisee what the latter has done to comply with the ceremonial. The Pharisee's reply minutely describes the process of purification, of which no previous authority has given the details.

Then follows a powerful, eloquent denunciation by Jesus of mere outward purification, he saying that he and his disciples have been purified by the water of life. There is also a mention of a hitherto unknown part of the temple, called the Hegneuterian or place of purification.

Theological circles are greatly interested in the discovery, which promises a sensation equal to that created by the logia of Christ.

The promise held forth in the name "What Women Will Do" was fulfilled at the Lyceum last evening, and the five acts and ten scenes of rapid action, stirring scenes, and melodramatic crisis were well worth while, for those who have a liking for melodrama.

The characters bore classic names taken from the works of Dickens, and the story would make Bleak House seem tame and insipid.

The company is above the ordinary run of companies producing this class of plays. Little Alice Katherine Berry is an exceedingly clever child, and her work in the juvenile parts was deserving of special note.

"AMONG THE HILLS."

"Among the Hills," one of those "hold on thar, pardnah" plays of mountain life, was given before an interested audience at the Metropolitan last evening by the Frank E. Long Stock company. The plot does not differ materially from the other dramas of the kind which are familiar to theater-goers, but it furnishes a very satisfactory evening's entertainment and last evening's audience was very generous with its applause.

Charles D. Mack plays Jack Oak, the honest mountaineer, and Miss Nana Sullivan, the young feminine diamond in the rough. The other members of the company are happily cast. The specialties are interesting.

Another performance of "Among the Hills" will be given this evening, but tomorrow afternoon, there will be a change of bill. Then "Lost and Won" will be produced and will hold the boards until Saturday, when "The Sign of the Crucifix" will be given an elaborate presentation.

THE BIJOU BILL.

Allen Doone, last seen in Duluth as the star in Joseph Murphy's famous play, "The Kerry Gow," heads an excellent vaudeville bill at the Bijou this week. Mr. Doone and a charming young person named Edna Keeley have a most entertaining act which they call "Sweet Molly O." Mr. Doone introduces some pretty songs.

The Buckeye State quartet is another strong feature on the bill. Its turn has been very well received. The Great Westin gives some interesting character impersonations. The York-Herbert trio comprises three very clever acrobats and their act is very finished and satisfactory.

Howard and Hunt seem to please and Morey Long's illustrated song number, "Coming Through the Rye, Jennie Dear" is very pretty, as are the colored pictures which illustrat it. The moving pictures are very laughable this week, too.

BANDITS, AT BAY, FIRE ON OFFICERS.

Winnipeg, Man., May 16.—The robbers who held up the Canadian Pacific express week, were captured east of Kamloops, B. C., Monday afternoon.

According to a special from Kamloops, three men, answering perfectly the description, were arrested one mile from Douglas lake and between that and Nicola river. The mounted police called on the trio to surrender, but the bandits opened fire.

They were surrounded, however, and one of the highwaymen was badly wounded in the leg by a bullet. The other two came out in the open, laid down their arms and surrendered.

The dispatch does not say whether they admitted the crime. They were tracked all day by bloodhounds brought across the boundary by a United States police officer.

A doctor is being hurried over from Nicola to the wounded man. The robbers had traveled to a point forty miles south of Kamloops when captured.

PASSED TO ASSEMBLY

New York, May 16.—As the court of last resort in the Presbyterian church, the general assembly this week will take up, if it dare, the case of the Rev. Samuel T. Carter, retired, who for many years has fomented rebellion against the Westminster confession. Presbytery and synod and most of his brethren for the last two years have been seeking to evade any discussion of Dr. Carter's views before an ecclesiastical tribunal.

The presbytery of Nassau, which has been looked upon by those of ultra-Calvanistic leaning as a veritable hotbed of heresy, last week decided to pass the case of Rev. Dr. Carter to the general assembly of the church, which will meet next Thursday in Des Moines, Iowa. Dr. Carter is known in the church as the "Father of Revision."

He was the pastor of a church in Huntington, Long Island, in 1889, when he sent to the presbytery of Nasseau an overture afterward duly forwarded to the general assembly, which asked that the chapter in the confession of faith relating to the decrees of God be revised.

The Nassau presbytery was the only body which made the request and the whole affair was tabled. The "Father of Revision" quietly organized his forces, and in 1900, fourteen presbyteries had joined the movement.

The general assembly in 1903 actually consented to the revision and some modifications were made. Then came the struggle for the "brief statement," which, although its friends professed that it was merely an epitome of the revision document, was in reality an opening wedge for still more liberal ideas.

On his retirement from the ministry Rev. Dr. Carter proceeded to carry the war into the very citadel of the Westminster Presbyterianism. He wrote letters and he publicly expressed views which made him amenable to discipline, in the opinion of many persons.

There was then talk of sending Nasseau out of the fold. Students of church history recalled that a presbytery in Pennsylvania was expelled from fellowship for championing Rev. Dr. Albert Barnes, who, compared with Rev. Dr. Samuel Carter, was a champion of Calvanism. The synod of New York has refused to consider the case of Dr. Carter. He still circulates his views.

"This Westminster confession," declares the clergyman, "provides for the allegiance of man to God, who, according to the good pleasure of His will, assigns the human race to endless torment before they were born or done good or ill. The Westminste confession says that God is a monster; modern theology says He is not.

"Tamerlane and Judge Jeffreys were sweet souls compared with a God who could condemn a whole race to endless torment for a single sin.

"The great objection to the Westminster confession is not this or that, but it is the whole tone and style of the confession. To put the matter in a word, it is the God of the Westminster confession that is wrong."

These were some of the things which the presbytery of Nassau had been turning over in its theological mind when a still more vigorous declaration was sent by the father of revision to Rev. Dr. William H. Roberts, the stated clerk of the general assembly, with the request that it be read.

The presbytery of Nassau held a meeting on the strength of this, and decided to do something to bring the affair of Rev. Dr. Carter to an issue. There is a well-defined opinion that whatever may be the communication from the presbytery, it will be considered as a demonstration of strength by the Carterites.

"There never was," declared the archdissenter in his last letter, "there is not now and there never will be such a God as the God of the Westminster confession.

"To me this whole confession is a matter of truth or falsehood. To my mind the character of God as portrayed in our confessoin is simply false. And the matter appears to me to be of the greatest importance, because I believe that the biggest and worst of all the big bad lies is the lie about God. I am not alone in my convictions as to the falsity of the confessions. Thousands upon thousands of Presbyterians uphold me in this view."

COMMISSION TO APPEAL CASE

Wisconsin Body to Carry Sanborn Decision to Higher Court.

The Wisconsin Grain and Warehouse commission has determined to appeal from the decision made by Judge Sanborn of the federal court in the case brought by the Globe Elevator company against the commission and the matter will be brought before the United States circuit court of appeals, at Chicago.

The entire case is a result of the enactment of the Wisconsin grain inspection law. The Globe company tried for an injunction restraining the Wisconsin commission from interfering with its business and the order was granted, the law being held to be invalid.

The Globe company suit has been a test case. Injunctions were also secured by the Barnum Grain company, the Terminal Elevator company and other concerns, but these will be allowed to stand until the present case is disposed of in Chicago.

Attorneys for the commission will get to work on the briefs at once and it is expected that the case will be brought before the court of appeals some time in October.

SUICIDE OF FARMER.

WILL DEVELOP MISSISSIPPI

At a special meeting of the Great Northern Development company held yesterday, it was decided to ratify a contract recently made by C. C. Cokefair, president of the company, for the development of 50,000 horse-power on the Mississippi between Minneapolis and St. Cloud.

The company has been working on these plans for some time and the necessary rights and permission from congress to erect the dam have been secured. The power can easily be transmitted to the Twin Cities.

In Minneapolis most of the power of the St. Anthony Falls Power company is utilized by the big flour mills. The only other water power in the vicinity is on the St. Croix river and is being developed by the Minneapolis General Electric company.

WILL EMPLOY EXPERT.

City of Superior Will Take Steps to Protect Itself.

Acting on Mayor Victor Linley's request the city council of Superior last evening voted to employ Dr. Russell, the state chemist of Wisconsin, to consult with the special committee on the water question. It is the intention of the authorities to have the expert advise the city as to the condition of the water so that it may be prepared to enforce its rights in case the matter is taken into the courts. Mayor Linley declared that the people of Superior would never be pleased at the manner in which the water company is seeking to relieve the situation relative to the water supply in that city.

Mayor Linley used his power of veto for a second time since his election by turning down the council's resolution to have the proceedings published in a weekly paper in Superior. He claimed that it was of no use to waste the city's funds in printing the council proceedings where the people do not get the worth of their money. The weekly paper has been the official paper of the city for the past four years.

Buys St. Louis River Property.

A deed running from the Merchants National Bank of St. Paul to Francis W. Sullivan of Duluth and transferring about twenty-one acres of land on the Wisconsin side of the St. Louis river was filed with the register of deeds of Douglas county, Wis., yesterday. The property is described as lot 1, section 1-48-15 west and comprises a triangular shaped piece of ground extending into the river southwest of Spirit lake. The land is said to be nicely located for summer cottages. The consideration was $8,902.35.

Game Warden Seizes Fish.

Deputy Game Warden Craig of Wisconsin made a seizure of seventy-five pounds of pike that were shipped to that point from Cass Lake, Minn., and sold the fish for the benefit of the state. The fish had been shipped in four small boxes by some person not known to the authorities. The pike season is open in Minnesota but not in Wisconsin until May 25. Under the Wisconsin laws it is unlawful for a person to have pike in his possession in that state before the date mentioned, even though the fish may have been caught in Minnesota.

FINE GOES TO WIFE.

Prisoner Given Alternative of Paying Her or Going to Rock Pile.

Joseph Sullivan, the millwright who was arrested yesterday morning on the charge of threatening his wife with a revolver, was arraigned in the municipal court yesterday afternoon, on the charge of drunkenness.

He entered a plea of guilty and was fined $25 and costs by Judge Windom, with the alternative of thirty days in jail. The fine was remitted by the court on condition the money was paid to the prisoner's wife.

Mrs. Sullivan told a sad story of desertion and neglect to the court.

"I have lived in misery," she said. "He has slandered me, but I have refrained from punishing him for the sake of the children, until he came to the house and frightened me with a revolver. He has spoiled my life and his own, and now all I want is to be left in peace."

SUB-STATIONS ESTABLISHED.

Sub-stations of the general recruiting office in Duluth of the United States general army have been established at Brainerd and Superior by Lieut. O. H. Dockery. Corporal William Van Wagoner, who has been stationed in Duluth for nearly a year, has been placed in charge of the Brainerd station, and Private Nelson, who has also been connected with the Duluth station, will be in charge at Superior.

Corporal W. L. Wilson comes up from Fort Snelling to take Van Wagoner's place in Duluth. Lieut. Dockery says that few recruits are being obtained this spring because work is so plentiful and wages so good.

COUPLE'S NARROW ESCAPE

From Being Killed by Lightning Which Made Them Unconscious.

Bemidji, Minn., May 16.—(Special to The Herald.)—A. H. Cochran and wife, who live on their farm a mile east of Bemidji, narrowly escaped death from the combined effects of lightning and fire, during a severe storm Monday night. While they were sitting in one of the rooms of their home there was a deafening report and a sharp crack of lightning, followed by a crash that upset the couple and rendered them unconscious. When they regained their senses, the room was filled with smoke, and fire was rapidly gaining headway among the bed clothing and curtains in the room. The flames were extinguished after a hard struggle, with not much damage to the interior of the house. One of Mrs. Cochran's arms was quite badly burned and Mr. Cochran had a bad burn under the buckle of a belt that he was wearing, exactly the size and shape of the buckle.

The school board has selected the corps of teachers who will have charge of the various departments of the Bemidji public schools during the next year. The following is the complete roster: A. P. Ritchie, superintendent, mathematics and science; Miss A. A. Bright, English and history; Miss G. Falk, Latin and German; Nellie Hardin, Eighth grade; Floy Donaldson, Seventh grade; Clare Loud and Margaret Vannet, Sixth grade; Mrs. E. Dwyer and Helen Olson, Fifth grade; Mabel Brown and Lillian Nelson, Fourth grade; Hattie Allen, Emma Leyde and Maud Hayden, First grade.

STEPHENS' FRIENDS

Believe He Has Good Prospect of Getting Gubernatorial Nomination.

Crookston, Minn., May 16.—(Special to The Herald.)—With the approach of the Republican state convention at Duluth, the people of the Ninth district are pricking up their ears to catch every political echo that is being wafted about the state, and there is a growing sentiment that Senator A. D. Stephens has a good prospect of being nominated for governor. Since the organization of the "Andy Stephens Club" in this city several weeks ago, which now has an enrollment of between 1,400 and 1,500, active work has been done to canvass the situation, and assurances have been received from every county in the district of warm and loyal support, with the possible exception of Ottertail county, where it is possible there will be a divided delegation. The delegations will not only be for Stephens, but they will go down with their hustling clothes on and work tooth and nail for their candidate.

One of the strongest points in favor of Senator Stephens, it is generally considered here, is the fact that his friends in soliciting support for him have antagonized no other candidate.

URIC ACID GRAVEL

IS CAUSED BY THE KIDNEYS BEING UNABLE TO CARRY THE POISONOUS WASTE MATTERS OUT OF THE BLOOD.

The urine of persons suffering from uric acid or gravel is generally scanty, and after it has stood a while, a reddish sediment like brick dust forms in it. In advanced stages the uric acid sometimes appears as fine sand, or large crystals.

Those who pass gravel in any considerable quantity are usually troubled with inflammation of the kidneys, bladder and urinary organs, sour stomach, indigestion, heartburn, gout and rheumatism.

CURED BY WARNER'S SAFE CURE

"I have used Safe Cure for chills caused by uric acid poison in my system and I have been perfectly cured. It has done for me what I have never known any other medicine to do. It cures people in the South who suffer much from malaria, which always affects the kidneys. If all the doctors would prescribe Safe Cure instead of quinine for cases of malaria there would be less bad after effects, as quinine does not remove the disease germs from the system like Safe Cure. I take 'Safe Pills' when I need a gentle laxative."—Mrs. M. E. Dean, Treas. Lotus Club, Chattanooga, Tenn.

For sale at all drug stores, or direct, 50c and $1.00 a bottle.

REFUSE SUBSTITUTES AND IMITATIONS.

They are worthless and very often exceedingly dangerous. Ask for Warner's Safe Cure; it will cure you.

WATERWORKS FOR KELLIHER

Bemidji, Minn., May 16.—(Special to The Herald.)—The village of Kelliher, on the terminus of the Beltrami county branch of the Minnesota & International railway, has decided to put in a waterworks system. A. H. Harris, representing the Duluth Engineering company, looked over the proposed site for the system and gave estimates on the cost of construction. He estimated that the entire cost of the plant, exclusive of the well for the water supply, would be $6,000, and recommended that the elevated tank be built on the site of the village hall. A tank elevated eighty feet was considered sufficient to supply the power needed. The water mains will be built around the principal business block of the town, with hydrants at each corner. The Duluth company will put in a bid for furnishing the plans and specifications.

POPE RECEIVES SCHWEBACH.

MISTAKE CAUSED HIS DEATH.

Barron, Wis., May 16.—W. H. Brandt, a prominent druggist and highly respected citizen of this city, is dead. He took half an ounce of belladonna by mistake for brandy; then took two ounces of hive syrup for an emetic, which failed to work. One hour elapsed before the doctors got to work on him. He was about 50 years of age.

Can You Cut Out the "Yellow" Streak?

All got one, you know. Some small, some large. The more "yellow" in your make-up, the less yellow gold in your character and pocketbook.

Is your yellow streak the coffee habit? Does it reduce your working force, kill your energy, push you into the big crowd of mongrels, deaden what thoroughbred blood you may have, and neutralize all your efforts to make money and fame?

It does that very thing for thousands who don't suspect it. Languid, half sick with stomach and bowel troubles, heart weak and hardly half alive, you cannot succeed under such fearful handicaps nowadays, when the world only yields the crown for the best efforts of keen people.

Try leaving off coffee for 10 days. Build back to a clear-cut mind and healthy body, by Postum Coffee. That's the true route to health, and with bounding exuberant health you acquire "Energy plus."

Then to "do things" is easy.

NO PLACE.

The Lazy Ones Must Stand Aside.

The dull heavy feeling from coffee may not amount to much in itself but it's a great obstacle in the way of fame and fortune for it kills ambition and makes one lazy and finally sick.

The successful men or women must first conquer themselves. The way to conquer that dull, stupid feeling 9 times out of 10 is to pay a little attention to proper food, coffee in particular will dull the senses and make one feel lazy and stupid after the first effects of the cup have worn off an hour or so after drinking it.

"I was a lover of coffee" says a New York man. It seemed to me breakfast was nothing without it, but I noticed an hour or so after breakfast a dull, stupid feeling came over me accompanied frequently by nausea.

"Thinking perhaps it was caused by coffee I wanted to make sure of it so I gave up the use of coffee and drank Postum in its place. My old trouble disappeared and I learned to look forward to my Postum with as much eagerness as I used to look to coffee and instead of being bad in its effect, Postum is very healthy and I feel 'fit as a lord' right along." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

There's a reason why Postum helps toward fame and fortune when used in place of coffee, the drug drink.

TURNS DOWN COMMISSIONER

Secretary of Interior Sustains Decision of Duluth Land Office.

A land decision made by Secretary of the interior E. A. Hitchcock was received today at the land office, in which the officials of the land office at the time the decision was made, Register Cuikin and Receiver Smith, are sustained, and the reverse decision of W. A. Richards, general land office commissioner, turned down.

The case is that of Nelson S. Hillman vs. William Karpella, and the land in contest is described as lot 2 and the southeast quarter of the southwest quarter of section 22, and lots 3 and 4 of 27-60-9. This tract is about forty-five miles from Ely. About two years ago Hillman filed a contest against the homestead entry of Karpella. This contest was heard in the local land office a year ago last February, and the land officers recommended the entry for cancellation. This was appealed to the general land commissioner, who reversed the local office. The contestant then appealed to the secretary of the interior, who has now reversed the land commissioner and sustained the local office, cancelling the entry. It was simply a case of the entryman not living up to the law.

AN OCTOGENARIAN.

Washington Cor. New York World: "During the last national campaign," said Secretary Shaw today, "an eloquent orator was urging the people in one of the southern cities to support the Democratic ticket. Henry Gassaway Davis, who was over 80 years old, was considered a poor candidate, and many of the spellbinders believed that the presence of Davis on the ticket weakened it. The orator was trying to overcome the defect in the ticket by urging the young men to support Davis, who, although an octogenarian, was still a man of ability and would live out his term with good luck.

"One of the auditors, who had drank more than his allowance of redeye, almost broke up the meeting by exclaiming: 'I am a pretty good Democrat, but I can't vote for an octogenarian, as no member of my family has yet voted for a man with nigger blood in his veins, and I'm not going to do it now.'"

LUCKY TO HAVE HEAD

Chandler Says He Might Have Lost It Under Different Conditions.

Writes Tillman a Letter Bearing on Lodge's Statement.

Washington, May 16.—Senator Tillman today received from former Senator William E. Chandler a statement of his course as an intermediary in negotiations between President Roosevelt and Senators Tillman and Bailey on the railroad rate bill. The communication bears upon Senator Lodge's denial for the president of Mr. Chandler's statement, quoting the president as saying he had lost confidence in Senators Foraker, Spooner and Knox. It was offered in the senate by Senator Tillman and will be printed in the congressional record.

The most interesting feature of Mr. Chandler's letter to Mr. Tillman is contained in the closing paragraph in which he says:

"On the whole, perhaps, I ought to consider myself fortunate. If the old imperialist days had been fully revived at the White House, one whom I considered the best of friends, Senator Lodge, upon demand, would have cut off my head and taken it to President Roosevelt on a charger and I should have spoken no more. Now at least, I have left to me the power of speech. But I shall never use it again as a missionary from President Roosevelt to the Democratic party."

Upon convening today the senate promptly took up the railroad rate bill, the anti-pass amendment being the immediate subject of consideration.

Senator Culberson presented a substitute for the provision adopted earlier in the session. The substitute so modified the provision as to permit members of the families of railroad employes, bona fide attorneys for railroads whether constantly employed or not and the caretakers of livestock to accept free transportation.

Senator McCumber chided the senate for fickleness, saying that after taking action on the pass question a few days ago the senators had been sent tumbling over one another by the receipt of a few telegrams in opposition to the amendment. He contended that the incident illustrated the influence of the railroads and the bad effects of too much paternalism.

Senators Bacon and Clay advocated the limitation of the inhibition against passes to officials of the government and federal judges, contending that congress could not exercise authority over the granting of such favors to private individuals.

Senator Culberson said that his purpose in presenting the amendment had been to get rid of a very vexatious practice in the Southern states. Senator Daniel sought to have the provision so amended as to include the families of attorneys among those who may receive passes, and Senator Tillman said that Mr. Daniel's amendment would make the provision a laughing stock, and suggested that Mr. Daniel should withdraw his amendment so that we can get to "something else."

The Culberson anti-pass amendment to the rate bill was adopted by the senate 60 to 16.

IN THE HOUSE.

Washington, May 16.—A satirical amendment by Leader Williams of the minority, amused the house today. It provided for naming the rival of the British ship Dreadnought, "Skeerd O'Nothing" with a proposal for a contest between the two with the president and cabinet as chief guests.

The large battleship was vigorously opposed by Messrs. Tawney and Burton.

The motion to strike out of the naval appropriation bill in the house the provision for a big battleship was lost, yeas 93; nays 129.

Rochefoucauld wrote. "We promise according to our hopes, and perform according to our fears." If some of your employes illustrate this truth, take up the "Help Want" ads. in The Herald as a course of reading—and perform acording to your interests!

MARKINGS ANNOUNCED

Eligible Lists Established for All the Municipal Departments.

At a meeting held last evening in the city hall, the civil service board passed upon the papers submitted at the recent examination, held for applicants for positions in the city's service.

As a result of the examination, an eligible list has been established for all of the city departments, and appointments will be made from them to any vacancies that may occur.

Six men passed the examination prescribed for firemen, and all of them will be immediately given positions on the department, as a number of substitutes are now being carried, and there are still some vacancies. Of the six men, four are firemen, one a driver and one a stoker. J. K. Peterson passed the examination for drivers with a percentage of 75.5 and M. J. Yax secured 80 per cent in the examination for stokers. The following men passed the examination for firemen: J. A. Finlayson, 92.5; J. A. Lubansky, 90.5; O. M. Chalman, 90; W. H. Margan, 86.

Six men passed the examination for the police department, the standings being as follows: A. J. Noren, 90; L. A. Root, 89.25; J. B. Conner,. 83.3; George Ritzman, 77.3; M. Mason, 76.5; Oscar Peterson, 76.25.

There are no vacancies in the police department at the present time, but some changes are likely to occur during the summer, and one or two of the men will secure appointments.

Two applicants were successful in the examination for assistant librarians. Miss Alice Gaylord had a percentage of 77.5 and Miss Mildred Hobbs had a percentage of 72.

Six firemen passed the examination for promotion to the position of lieutenant, the markings being as follows: J. F. Payne, 82.5; L. E. Larson, 82; L. J. Baine, 81.5; Frank Clore, 81; John A. Fisher, 80.7; W. A. Johnson, 78.

The applicants for positions in the fire and police department, were examined on writing, spelling, composition, arithmetic, and physical fitness. The firemen seeking promotion were examined on these points, and also on their experience, ability to command and their record in the department. Chief Black gave no preference in his markings on record and ability to command, marking all six of the applicants on an equal basis.

Weak Women Made Strong, Sick Women Made Well.

The record of cures effected by this remedy is without a parallel. Thousands of testimonials received from patients and from physicians who have tested it in the more aggravated and obstinate cases which had baffled their skill, prove it to be the most wonderful remedy ever devised for the relief and cure of suffering women.

It is composed wholly of medicinal principles extracted from the roots of native, American forest plants, pure triple-refined glycerine of proper strength, being used instead of harmful alcohol both in extracting and preserving these medicinal principles.

IT IS A POWERFUL INVIGORATING TONIC,

imparting health and strength in particular to the organs distinctly feminine. For weak and sickly women, who are "worn-out," "run-down," or debilitated, especially for women who work in store, office, or school-room, who sit at the typewriter or sewing machine, or bear heavy household burdens, Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription will prove a priceless benefit because of its health-restoring and strength-giving power.

AS A SOOTHING AND STRENGTHENING NERVINE,

"Favorite Prescription" is unequaled and is invaluable in allaying and subduing nervous excitability, irritability, nervous exhaustion, nervous prostration, neuralgia, hysteria, spasms, chorea, or St. Vitus's dance, and other distressing nervous symptoms commonly attendant upon functional and organic disease of the organs distinctly feminine. It induces refreshing sleep and relieves mental anxiety and despondency.

CURES OBSTINATE CASES.

"Favorite Prescription" is a positive cure for the most complicated and obstinate cases of leucorrhea, excessive flowing, painful periods, unnatural suppressions and irregularities, prolapsus or falling of the pelvic organs, weak back, "female weakness," anteversion, retroversion, bearing-down sensations, chronic congestion, inflammation and ulceration of the uterus, inflammation, pain and tenderness over the ovaries and kindred ailments.

FREE CONSULTATION.

An invitation is extended by Dr. Pierce to every sick and ailing woman to consult him by letter. There is absolutely no charge or fee for this consultation. Every letter is carefully considered, fully answered, and its statements held as strictly private and sacredly confidential. Address Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N.Y.

THE BADGE OF HONESTY.

Each bottle of the above medicine bears upon its wrapper a badge of honesty in the full list of ingredients composing it—printed in plain English. This frank and open publicity places this medicine in a class all by itself. It cannot be classed as a patent nor secret medicine for it is neither—being of known composition.

DR. PIERCE'S PLEASANT PELLETS

cure billousness, sick and bilious headache, dizziness, costiveness, or constipation of the bowels, loss of appetite, coated tongue, sour stomach, windy belchings, "heart-burn," pain and distress after eating, and kindred derangements of the liver, stomach and bowels.

One little "Pellet" is a laxative, two are cathartic. They regulate, invigorate and cleanse the liver, stomach and bowels. As a "dinner pill," to promote digestion, take one each day. To relieve the distress arising from over-eating, nothing equals one of these little "Pellets." They're tiny, sugar-coated, antibilious granules, scarcely larger than mustard seeds.

HEALTH AND HAPPINESS.

How to live in health and happiness, is the general theme of Dr. Pierce's Common Sense Medical Adviser. This great work on medicine and hygiene, containing over 1000 pages and more than 700 illustrations, is sent free on receipt of stamps to pay expense of mailing only. Send 31 one-cent stamps for the cloth-bound volume, or only 21 stamps for the book in paper covers. Address Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y.

HILL TELLS CANADIANS

He Will Have Road Completed From Winnipeg to Coast in 1907.

Winnipeg, May 16.—James J. Hill, president and dominant force of the Great Northern railway, was an honored guest in Winnipeg yesterday. Arriving with a distinguished party of officials, including his son, Louis W. Hill, the famous magnate was met by an influential deputation and taken first to the Manitoba club. Later he was entertained at luncheon by the Canadian club, where 600 representative citizens sat down.

Mr. Hill talked in a reminiscent mood, and then he gradually approached the optimistic, phophesying a wonderful future for Winnipeg and the Canadian West. He strongly advised against the giving away of public demains, especially in large blocks, believing that the steady influx of immigration would serve to fill up the country.

Mr. Hill said, in an interview, he expected to have a through line completed from Winnipeg to the coast by the time the Grand Trunk Pacific had reached the city, which means by the fall of 1907. He stated that Winnipeg would be headquarters of the Canadian roads, and he intended to build terminals and a station on the Ross avenue property. He said that he had no intention of invading Eastern Canada, but would use the C. P. R. and Grand Trunk Pacific.

San Francisco, May 16.—Two hundred and fifty thousand dollars await Mrs. Andres Nelson, a widow, with nine children, who was burned out by the big fire and who is now believed to be in some refuge camp. Her husband a tanner and son of a wealthy father in Sweden, died in July, 1898, leaving the family destitute. They lived on the south side and the woman, too proud to appeal to her wealthy father-in-law, worked hard to support herself and little ones. They lost all when the fire swept the city. Now comes word that the father-in-law in Sweden is dead and that his large estate is to go to the widow and children of his son.

SONS OF BEST FAMILIES CHARGED WITH THEFTS.

Racine, Wis., May 16.—A sensation was caused here yesterday when the police found in a cave several thousand dollars' worth of silverware, clothing and other goods, stolen recently in small quantities at a time from the wealthy Racine Golf club. The cave was fixed up in dime-novel style. It is known as the abode of sons of the best known families in this place. Warrants are out for them, but have not been served, pending settlements.

SAYS SURGEONS LEFT NAPKIN IN HER BODY.

Webster City, Iowa, May 16.—That Drs. Fay and Shoop of Des Moines, sewed a napkin in her abdomen is the charge made by Mrs. C. C. Gillispie of this city, who has brought suit for damages in the sum of $10,000.

SCROFULA AN INHERITED MISFORTUNE

Every one has a hereditary right to a pure blood supply, which insures a strong, healthy body; but how many do we see who have inherited that greatest of all misfortunes, Scrofula, and are struggling under a legacy of disease and suffering? Scrofula is a constitutional trouble handed down from parent to child, a curse from generation to generation as long as the scrofulous matter is allowed to remain in the family blood. As the very foundation of the blood is diseased we see this awful affliction manifested in many ways, such as enlarged glands or tumors about the neck, which often burst and become discharging ulcers, weak eyes, chronic Catarrh of the head, skin diseases, etc. This blighting disease being so firmly intrenched in the blood often attacks the bones, resulting in White Swelling, or hip disease, while a pallid, waxey appearance of the skin, loss of strength, and often lung affections show that the disease is entirely destroying the rich, nutritive qualities of the blood. There is but one way to cure Scrofula and that is to purify the blood and rid it of the germs of disease, and for this purpose nothing equals S. S. S. Its purifying and building-up properties make it the ideal remedy for Scrofula. S. S. S. searches out and destroys all poisons and germs, gives strength, richness and vigor to the weak, polluted blood and cures Scrofula permanently. S. S. S. is a purely vegetable medicine, made from roots, herbs and barks and may be taken with absolute safety by young or old. It so thoroughly removes the poison from the blood that no signs of it are ever seen again and posterity is blessed with a pure blood supply. Book on the blood and any medical advice desired without charge.

READY FOR FIRST GAME

Baseball Season Will Open in Four of League Cities.

The season of the Copper Country and Northern league will open tomorrow at Winnipeg, aFrgo, Calumet and Hancock.

row at Winnipeg, Fargo, Calumet and Forks at Winnipeg, Lake Linden at Calumet, and Houghton and Hancock at the new park on Ripley sands between the two towns.

Krick will do the twirling for Duluth tomorrow, and probably will be opposed by Finnegan. Hanson, Fargo's star twirler, is temporarily laid up, and Dennis Potts of last year's Duluth team, has caught on for a time.

Manager McNeil has overcome great difficulties at Grand Forks, and has finally succeeded in getting a team together. The Tigers will open up with three games at Winnipeg, and if they have fine weather, they should play to big crowds, and come back from the Canadian capital with a nest egg to add to the sum that has been subscribed by the Grand Forks fans. Grand Forks has always been a good ball town, but the club was late in getting away this year, and difficulties regarding a park greatly handicapped the management. These have been overcome, and there is enough money in sight to keep the team going throughout the season, but a good series at Winnipeg at the opening of the season, will make it easier sledding for the club.

Lake Linden will open up at Calumet, and from all appearances it should be a great series. Both teams are strong, and have a bunch of players that can be counted on.

At Houghton and Hancock, the new ball park on the Ripley sands, midway between the two towns, will be opened with great ceremony. The Hancock team will march to Houghton, where it will be joined by the Giants, and the two teams will march to the park, where the mayor of Hancock will throw the first ball across the plate to the mayor of Houghton, who will don the catcher's glove for the occasion.

The prospects for a successful season could not be brighter. The fans are hungry for some good ball, and it looks as if they would get it. The clubs all appear to be on a sound financial basis, and they will show the fans better, cleaner and faster ball than they have witnessed in years.

President Price has declared that no rowdyism will be tolerated for a moment, and that the players must play ball and submit to the rulings of the umpires without protest. If the men on the other teams are of the same class as the White Sox, the orders of the president will be unnecessary. O'Dea's men all appear to be gentlemen on and off the field, and the genial Duluth captain was never known as a chronic kicker.

On the whole, the prospects are rosy for fast, clean ball, a close pennant race and a successful season. Every lover of the game in the eight cities wishes the teams good luck, and may the best team win.

MILLERS LOSE TO LEAGUE TEAM

The White Sox had no difficulty in taking the last practice game to be played on the home grounds, from the Millers yesterday afternoon by the score of 7 to 1.

The game was played on a wet field, and occasional showers made it unpleasant for the players and for the fans who braved the weather conditions to see the Sox take their last work out before leaving for Fargo.

Griebner, the new shortstop, and Barto, the outfielder, were in their positions, and showed up well, taking everything that came their way.

Pool was in the box for the leaguers, and did not have to exert himself. He let the amateurs down with four hits and passed two men. Throughout the game he depended on his support and allowed the batters to connect with his curves, speeding them over only when he found himself in a tight corner.

Larson pitched good ball for the Millers, but the leaguers found him for some timely hits in the eighth, and with the aid of some bad errors, plied up five runs in the one inning. Aside from this one bad session, the game was an interesting exhibition.

Griebner and O'Dea worked in a fast double.

Duluth.....	0	1	1	0	0	0	0	5	0	—7 7 2

Earned runs—Duluth 2. Left on bases—Duluth 4; Millers 7. Hit by pitched ball—by Larson, 2. Bases on balls—off Larson2; off Pool, 2. Struck out—by Larson 3; by Pool, 8. Two-base hit, Barto. Double play—Griebner to O'Dea. Time of game, 1:50.

INTRUSION OF POLITICS BAD

In Any Branch of Municipal Service, Says the President.

Washington, May 16.—President Roosevelt addressed at the White House yesterday afternoon representatives of several state and municipal civil service commissions and of the national civil service reform league who met here yesterday to confer with the federal commissioners on the betterment of civil service throughout the country. The president spoke as follows:

"It is important that the friends of civil service make it evident that they are anxious to see common sense business methods obtain in the handling of the law. The enemies of this movement are always on the watch for imperfections and insist that these are representative of the movement. For that reason it is particularly incumbent upon you who are engaged in the administration of the laws, national, state or municipal, to make it so clear that none can fail to see that you are concerned in securing an effective business administration of the public service. The efficiency of the service, with honesty as the keystone of efficiency, must be the prime test of what you do.

"To the great general rules that you lay down you will find at times that it is necessary to make exceptions. There are many places in which it is possible to follow the rule of a competitive written examination absolutely. But in making promotions the system of written competitive examinations does not always secure the best results. Moreover in the interest of necessary flexibility which will permit you to meet special exigencies, special exceptions have to be made to meet special cases. Sometimes classes of exceptions will have to be made. Do not be afraid to make these exceptions; but be suro you are making the exception for proper reasons. In other words do not believe for one moment that any system of rules can be devised under which it will be possible to shield yourself from the duty of exercising your own judgment, your own independence.

"After considerable experience in almost every kind of governmental work I have never yet found any position or any branch of the service to which the intrusion of political reasons in making appointments does not do damage.

"The result is always bad when the appointment has to be complicated with politics. It is true at present that it is impossible to disassociate certain appointments from such considerations. Yet it remains true that the intrusion of political considerations into the choice of men whose duties are purely ministerial is always detrimental to the service.

"I am now naturally brought into relations with a great number of important offices in different branches of the government and I continually have to consider the efficiency with which they are handled. Practically without exception I find that an office in which there is a laxness in the administration of the civil service law, where there is an effort to circumvert the law, is an office in which the poor service is rendered, the chance for fraud, for speculations, for dishonesty, is always greater in such an office than in the office where the law is well and faithfully observed. And while of course, it is true that the mere observance of the civil service law can never result in a throroughly efficient administration of any office, yet I am inclined more and more to feel that the observance in letter and spirit of the civil service law is the first requisite in obtaining clean, decent, efficient governmental service in any branch or bureau of the government."

SEVERAL KILLED BY LIGHTNING IN GERMANY.

Berlin, May 16.—Terrific thunder storms were reported yesterday from several parts of Western and Southern Germany.

Several persons were killed by lightning, and numerous farm houses were burned and animals killed in the neighborhood of Treves. In parts of the Moselle wine district the year's crop has been destroyed.

The field crops were greatly damaged in the Saar valley through the flooding caused by the heavy storms, which continue.

In the lower Rhine districts, however, the protracted drought continues. In most parts of northern Germany the meadows are drying through lack of rain and the cattle are suffering. Milk is scarce in Berlin. The railroads are taking extra precautions to prevent forest fires.

The party is due to arrive in Christiania on Sunday, May 22. This is some three weeks before King Haakon VII is crowned.

BOSTONIAN VISITS CRATER OF VESUVIUS.

Boston, Mass., May 16.—That it is possible to reduce earthquakes and volcanoes to ordinary risks for insurance and to save numberless human lives by a systematic scientific study of earth physics is the opinion of Prof. Thomas A. Jaggar, Jr., the Harvard geologist, who has just returned from Italy, where he went to study Mount Vesuvius.

Prof. Jaggar's chief object was to collect specimens and notes concerning the eruption. April 25 he climed the edge of the crater with Dr. Tempest Anderson of Great Britain, going inside the rim, despite the steam. The next day he climed Monte Somma, a ridge adjacent to Vesuvius, and the remainder of his time he spent in visiting the ruins of the towns and in making collections of dust and ashes from the microscopic examination of which he expects to gleam many new and important facts.

As a means of forecasting earthquakes, Prof. Jaggar said he would like to see an endowed laboratory for the study of earthquake movements.

"In this way," he said, "we might be able in a few years to make earthquakes and volcanoes ordinary risks for insurance and also succeed in preserving a great many lives that are lost under present conditions."

SAYS THAT HIS WIFE'S LOVE WAS STOLEN.

Grand Forks, N. D., May 16.—J. E. Cooley has brought an action in the district court of Polk county against C. W. Rickerd, secretary and treasurer of the Grand Forks Lumber company, for damages in the sum of $25,000, charging Rickerd with the alienation of his wife's affections.

The papers were served on Mr. Rickerd in East Grand Forks by Deputy Sheriff Hugh Quigley, who also served a writ of attachment on the Grand Forks Lumber company covering any interest that Mr. Rickerd may have in the business.

R. H. McCoy, president of the company, says that Mr. Rickerd has no interest in the business beyond a salary interest. R. G. Brown of Minneapolis and Murphy & Duggan of Grand Forks appear as attorneys for the plaintiff.

BIG WHEEL IS WRECKED

St. Louis, May 16.—The great Ferris wheel, the wonder of two universal expositions, was blown up with dynamite, and now only an immense pile of twisted and broken iron rods and beams marks the place where it stood in Forest park.

Two explosions were required. First, fifty sticks of dynamite were exploded under the supports of the wheel. The concrete blocks were cracked and broken, but the wheel remained upright. Then the second effort was made.

The wheel had been stripped of its cars. The supports had been loosened as far as possible. Several weeks ago the engine and other machinery which turned the wheel were removed, and the wheel was allowed to swing free. A high wind from the west, catching the upper part, caused the wheel to revolve slowly, giving observers from a distance the impression that it was in operation. The wheel was secured later, but one evening recently it broke loose, and the next morning it was swinging back and forth with the wind.

The great bolts had been removed from the boxes which held the axle, and everything had been done to make the fall swift and the wreck complete. In each of the two concrete blocks on which rested the bootlegs which supported the wheel on the east, about twenty-five holes had been drilled. In these were placed 100 sticks of dynamite. A wire led from the caps to the summit of a hill on the south, about 200 feet away, connecting with a dry battery.

The crowd of curious people were told to retire out of danger, and most of them went to the top of the hill. From the tall bleachers of the stadium, where the Washington university athletes were holding a track meet, the crowd, forgetful of 100-yard dashes and hurdle events, watched for the fall of the great wheel.

W. G. Bennett, superintendent of the Chicago house wrecking company, directed operations. When the charge was set off in the forenoon rocks and blocks of concrete were hurled 200 feet. In the afternoon this was guarded against by placing a large muffler of timbers and boards around the base of the wheel.

The charge was set off by an electric battery at 4 o'clock. With the roar of the explosion the great wheel toppled over, turned half around, and as the axle, a piece of iron weighing seventy tons, was thrown from its bearings and crashed down, the wheel broke and collapsed into a mass of twisted scrap iron.

The axle, said to be the largest and heaviest single piece of iron ever forged, being forty-one feet long, fell on end and buried half its length in the earth. The boxes which supported the axle were thrown to one side out of the general wreck, and plunged their full length into the ground.

Although the wheel was 268 feet in diameter, it collapsed in a space less than ninety feet across. It is little more than junk now, and will be cut up and carried away in pieces. The task may be gauged by the fact that it is estimated that four months is the shortest possible time in which the wreckage can be cleared away. The iron rods, two inches thick, by which the outer rim of the wheel was hung on the axle, are twisted and tangled like twine string, and the iron beams of the supports and the rim are bent and twisted like pieces of tin.

The wheel was built for the World's Columbian exposition in Chicago in 1893, and was one of the most popular attractions. The original cost of the wheel was $250,000. It was sold after the Chicago exposition for $1[illegible],000, and $200,000 was spent in finding a location for it, the owners first placing it on the North side in Chicago and finally bringing it to St. Louis and erecting it in Forest park. It carried 6,000,000 passengers during the two expositions. After the St. Louis World's fair the owners were willing to give it to anyone who would cart it away but no takers appeared. It was planned to take it to Coney Island, but the proposal was abandoned.

BEAUTIFYING WEST END.

Peter Johnson, who has just built four fine new houses at the corner of Twenty-fifth avenue west and First street, is beautifying the grounds to a considerable extent. He is sodding the lawns and is otherwise fixing up the houses with a view to making them most attractive.

The work of beautifying the West end is taking on quite a fever heat this spring, and will doubtless make a considerable change in that end of the city in a short time.

The Muscles lose tone, tension, strength, to force the food onward.

And the longer they stay in that state the weaker they become, because the less exercise they get through the slow passage of food.

Cascarets contain the only combination of drugs that acts on the Muscles of the Bowels and Intestines, just as Cold Water, or Exercise, act on a Lazy man.

They act like Exercise.

When you have Heartburn, Colic, Coated Tongue, Suspected Breath, Acid-rising-in-throat, Gas-belching, or an incipient Cold, take a Cascaret.

Remember, all these are not merely Discomforts, but indications of a serious Cause.

They act like Exercise on the Bowel-Muscles that propel Food, and that squeeze the natural Digestive Juices of the body into Food.

Constipation	Bad Breath
Biliousness	Diabetes
Indigestion	Headache
Dyspepsia	Diarrhœa
Torpid Liver	Flatulence
Appendicitis	Hives
Rheumatism	Jaundice
Catarrh	Nausea
Colic	Vertigo
Scrofula	Pimples
Womanly Troubles
Worms	Blotches
Piles	Eczema
Ulcers	Dysentery

In such cases a little Cascaret in time is worth fifty dollars worth of Treatment later on, to say nothing of the suffering, discomfort, loss of Business Energy, and loss of Social Sunshine it saves.

* * *

A coming Headache can be warded off in short order, by a single Cascaret, and the cause removed.

Heartburn, Gas-belching, Acid-risings in the throat, and Colicky feeling are sure signs of bowel trouble from food poisons, and should be dealt with promptly.

One Cascaret will stop the coming trouble, and move on the Bowel load, if taken at the first signs.

WILL NEVER FACE JURY

Frank Van Dyke Passes Away Without Regaining Reason.

Although he killed a man in a manner said to be about as coldblooded as the record of any murder case in St. Louis county, Frank Van Dyke will never face a jury in any earthly court. Word has been received that Van Dyke died a few days in the state insane hospital at Fergus Falls, without regaining the reason the court held was necessary before he could properly understand and conduct his defense.

Van Dyke's crime is almost a matter of ancient history now. One morning of ancient history now. On the morning of Dec. 12, 1904, he suddenly and without apparent reason made an assault on his cellmate, Erick Lindberg, and killed him before assistance could be rendered by the county jail attendants.

Little was known about Van Dyke. He was a 10 or 20-day term prisoner sent up to the jail from the municipal court for vagrancy. Erick Lindberg, a tailor who had also been sent up for ten days for drunkenness, was placed in the same cell with Van Dyke. The latter was noticed to be of a morose disposition, but there was nothing about his actions to indicate that he was of a murderous turn of mind.

As nearly as the jail officials could figure out the assault, Lindberg, on the morning of the murder, was in the act of dressing and had leaned forward to tie his shoe when Van Dyke seized the heavy iron cover to a bucket kept in the cell and with a terrific blow crushed in the back of Lindberg's head. The unfortunate man was removed from the cell immediately and was taken to the hospital, where he died within a short time, never regaining consciousness.

An examination of the other prisoners in the vicinity of the cell where the tragedy occurred failed to develop that there was any unusual noise on the morning of the murder, although several prisoners testified that Van Dyke seemed to be of a quarrelsome disposition and peculiar in his actions.

Following the murder Van Dyke seemed to have little sense of what had happened. He appeared stupified all the time. He would not talk, and scarcely ate anything.

He was charged with murder in the first degree, but the grand jury returned an indictment for manslaughter in the first degree, which is the degree covering a murder where it is believed to have been without deliberation or premeditation.

W. R. Spencer, who was appointed to defend Van Dyke, made application for the court to examine his client for insanity. Mr. Spencer's affidavit stated his belief that Van Dyke was mentally incompetent to realize what had been done or to conduct any defense.

The hearing was had before Judge Cant who, after hearing several witnesses, rendered judgment that Van Dyke should be taken to the insane asylum at Fergus Falls and there cared for until he should so far recover as to be able to understand what he had done and take part in his own defense.

Van Dyke was taken to the asylum in January, 1905, but he never gave signs of an improvement in his mental condition. His health which was poor when he left Duluth, continued to get worse, and a few days ago he died.

Information gained by the county authorities after Van Dyke was indicted showed that he was married and had a family that he left in poor circumstances in some little town in Wisconsin. His family had not heard from him in a year or more when notified of his detention in the county jail. Van Dyke could never be induced to say anything about his family and could remember nothing about his previous movements except that he had been working in the harvest fields in Dakota.

The Chinese Question.

A great deal could be said on the matter of Chinese restriction which is again before congress. Very naturally they, the Chinese come back at this country with the retort: "You admit the scum of every other nation within your borders, and permit them to help make your laws, when thousands of them cannot read their own language let alone English! We Chinamen come to this country, we do not inhabit your pails or lunatic asylums, we attend to our own affairs, but because we work cheap, since we live economically, we are outcasts. In China we are not turned upside down every few years, by strikes, inflated currency and financial ruin to thousands—frauds in public life which pass unnoticed, where we enforce our laws. One hundred and fifty years ago, Great Britain forced her Indian opium trade into our market against the protest of our people; we destroyed at one time some 20,000 cases of it, when England declared war, took Hongkong, fined us $10,000,000 for war expenses and an equal sum to the owners of the destroyed opium—and yet you claim to be followers of Christ, and send over your missionaries, representing a hundred interpretations of the Bible. What we want is to be left alone in our family life which antedates your idea of Christianity 4,000 years, with which we have been satisfied. Keep your missionaries at home, as they have yet a large field to work in, and we will take care of ourselves. Remember one of the quotations in your Bible which, referred to 'Whitened Sepulchures.' There is not a shadow of doubt in the mind of the writer, that the Boxer riots were influenced by over-zealous missionaries—a repetition of the persecution in the early centuries where they fought and burned each other at the stake for opposite religious opinions, yet we are still preaching Christ—it seemed time for His second coming to equalize the vagaries so largely impressed on the public; we will hope that this spirit will soon fasten on the nation and the world, that peace and love may reign.

EUROPE ON EASY STREET

Despite the Shipments of Gold to the United States.

New York, May 16.—Since March 1 the gold imported from Europe, including that in passage at this writing, amounts to more than $60,000,000. Europe, despite this huge exportation, has no financial stress, and, if necessary, could duplicate this sum to us and yet have but little trouble with home financial affairs. Our people should not forget that Africa, Australia and India are producing each and every month fully $16,000,000, and this monthly product is controlled by Europe and at the call or demand of the bankers of that continent.

The United States this present year will produce $100,000,000 in gold and fully $75,000,000 of that goes into new currency, really serves as a basis for new banking currency and bank credits to an extent that increases our circulation fully $500,000,000. These are actual conditions. These are facts that are telling with tremendous effect from Alaska to Maine, and it is this new gold, added to the great stock already on hand, that is making business excellent, collections good and failures few and far between. Let our merchants, manufacturers, bankers and business men generally remember that there is abundant evidence that each crop of new gold for the next ten years will be greater than the crop of the year preceding, and, while the past ten years have witnessed business expansion and development far exceeding that of any other period, there has been no serious financial stringency since January 1, 1897.

It has been the new gold that has produced the trade, induced the development, sustained the volume and rendered secure the tremendous operations in finance, commerce, transportation and trade. That is the open acknowledged record of the business world since the close of 1896. It is the record not only of the United States, but of every important country in the world, save Russia, handicapped by political maelstroms. Large as have been the operations of the decade closing, immense as has been the aggregate of transactions in all lines of trade, commerce and finances in the same period, every record made will be exceeded in the ten years that are next to pass, for the people's purchasing power, the ability of the masses to pay for that which they desire will increase with every month, and the demands for necessities and for luxuries will steadily grow with the increase of the purchasing power.

The products of the iron and steel mills will increase with increased demand for them. The machine shops of the great agricultural implement establishments will turn out their wares in far greater numbers than they are now doing, for the best of all reasons that their customers will increase in numbers and also in ability to purchase the very latest models in machinery. The cotton and woolen mills will run their looms in maximum numbers, upon full time and will employ greater numbers of operators, for the public will be able to purchase more clothing than ever before, and the public will have the cash to pay for the clothing.

So it will go through the entire range of modern life. The world has only commenced to be developed and the peoples of the world are yet scarcely acquainted with the necessities of modern civilization, and as soon as these are understood and acquired the comforts and luxuries follow as swiftly as money can be obtained to purchase with. The money supply is assured now. The demand for the products of the soil and of manufacture will therefore be certain and well sustained. This week has witnessed a marvelous transformation in the sentiment of Wall street, of the bankers and of the general public in the eastern part of the country. There is no doubt that manipulation of funds, declination to make loans and organized bear influences had caused many operators to hesitate, to pause and to fear the future. Everything in the country was going all right except unrest in labor circles and apparent timidity in corporation interests.

These two matters were really the disturbing elements, and upon them was based the declination to make loans. The mining troubles in anthracite regions came to an end for the time being, and the flood of gold from Europe knocked the pins from under those who wished to produce a tight money market.

General business throughout the United States was not affected in the least by these little swirls in the East, and it has been once more demonstrated that under the present wide distribution of money, no two or three banks, however great their capital, can corner the cash of the country so as to produce extended stringency, nor can they depress business sufficiently to effect a general decrease in values.

Under Secretary Shaw's well-timed action, a cablegram from London, Paris or Berlin, of the shipment of gold to the United States makes that gold available here within a few hours, and by that the gold reserves of Europe have become the gold reserves of the United States as well. It was a master stroke for the time and brought excellent results during the past few weeks, but it remains a precedent for still greater work in the future. It stands as a barrier against any attempt at an extended corner of cash to the detriment of the public.

It is a formidable weapon ready for use against those who might seek to organize a temporary panic.

It can best be stated in a few words, as follows:

The secretary has made our credits in Europe available as cash in the United States whenever really needed. It assures steadiness and stability. It sustains confidence and eliminates distrust and danger. The wheat crop has had great influence for good, and the bears of the past three weeks are now difficult to find, and, when you do come across one now, his entire argument is based upon stock manipulation, and he is careful to state that he believes that business prospects in the entire republic were never better than they are at this time. During the whirl of depressed values in the stock exchanges there was not for an hour the slightest let up in the activity of real estate in this city and vicinity. High prices for call money made no difference on mortgage loans, and at no time in the last three years have realty transactions been greater in value or more widely spread throughout Greater New York than they have been in the three months just passed.

They bid fair to continue to be active all this present year. Money is coming from all parts of the country for investments here, in the suburbs especially. Syndicate after syndicate has closed out at an advance, and there seems to be no limit as yet to acreage that is being bought for subdivision, nor to the advance in price of the lots and acres. Thousands are buying and building for actual habitation. Hundreds are buying for investment only. Other thousands are renting new buildings being erected in the suburbs, thus aiding the parties who purchased as investors. The rush to the suburbs will certainly prove to be beneficial to the overcrowded central districts.

JUDGE McKENNA IS CRITICISED

By Porto Ricans Who Say His Resignation Was Demanded.

San Juan, P. R., May 16.—The sudden resignation of Hon. Charles F. McKenna of Pittsburg, Pa., judge of the United States district court for Porto Rico, with the causes and speculation as to his successor, continues to be the leading theme of discussion here, especially as a new judge is needed immediately. Now that Judge McKenna has departed, the lawyers talk more freely, and their statements indicate that his "voluntary" resignation was demanded, the alternative being a prompt request of President Roosevelt to remove him. The facts in brief are these, according to an officer of the bar association of Porto Rico:

Judge McKenna received from Ramon Valdez, a litigant in his court, the sum of $800 as a loan, he having applied to Valdez for the money. A committee of the bar association, with complete evidence of Judge McKenna's indiscretion, went at once to him and demanded his instant resignation. That was on April 21, and he begged leave to wait until the following Monday to give his answer. On Monday he agreed to resign, and on Monday night, the evening before he sailed, he made to the writer the following statement:

"I resigned, because at the end of two years' service in the tropics I found that residence here was weakening to Mrs. McKenna and to me. As the coming month is usually the hottest of the year in Porto Rico, I have decided to take my vacation now to present to the president my resignation, to take effect on June 15 next. I have no knowledge of any charges against me in Porto Rico, or of any action by the bar association. The local lodge of Elks has passed resolutions of regret, and the judges of the supreme court of Porto Rico have united in expressions of farewell. The bar association, at a meeting already called for the purpose, will adopt resolutions of regret, respect and confidence, to be forwarded by the president of the association to Washington."

The evidences are that Judge McKenna was deceived as to the feeling toward him, the bar and many civilians condemning his conduct as unjudicial and extremely indiscreet, and as reflecting upon the integrity of the bench, which has not heretofore been assailed in any of the higher courts of Porto Rico. None of the resolutions named by the judge has been passed. A member of the bar association declares that "in a sense, Judge McKenna fell into a trap which was laid for him in this money matter, because we lawyers were anxious to get rid of him. At first Mr. Valdez was inclined to refuse to loan the money, but finally did so by advice of several members of the bar association. We don't want to say much now, lest the president should send Judge McKenna back. In such an event, few lawyers would take to the federal court any cases which might properly be brought in other courts. To say the least, the feeling against Judge McKenna has been so strong among the lawyers here that his usefulness was impaired long ago. Last year the bar association thought they had everything cocked and primed to insure his recall to the states, but the affair was patched up."

SENATOR ELKINS MAY BE RETIRED

Washington, May 15.—The premonitory symptoms in the active movement to overthrow and retire Stephen B. Elkins from the arena of national politics have appeared in West Virginia. Mr. Elkins will end his present term in the senate in March, 1907, and the next legislature in West Virginia will choose his successor. He has a big fight on his hands. Since the rate regulaton question has been before the senate during the current session he has been trimming his sails to catch the winds of popular favor, but the popular winds were perverse.

News comes from Parkersburg, in Mr. Elkins' state, that at a mass meeting of the Republicans of the county, resolutions indorsing the course of the senior United States senator were turned down, as well as prepared instructions to the delegates to the district senatorial convention to vote for Elkins' candidate for the state senate, Thomas Gartlan.

Particular significance attaches to this action at a Republican mass meeting in one of the principal West Virginia counties from the fact that Parkersburg is the home of United States District Attorney Reese Blizzard and United States Marshal C. D. Elliott, both of whom are appointees of Elkins. These men usually control the politics of their district. What the movement may amount to, in localities where Elkins is not so strongly entrenched with federal patronage, in view of the popular uprising in this instance, is easy to understand. The word that reaches Washington is that anti-Elkins sentiment is rampant all along the line.

Since his entry into the senate following his occupancy of the war portfolio in the Harrison cabinet Mr. Elkins has been one of the prominent figures of the senate combine presided over by Nelson W. Aldrich of Rhode Island. As chairman of the committee on interstate commerce he has exercised a powerful influence on railroad legislation. The monument to his legislative activity is the Elkins law prohibiting rebates, which, according to the Garfield investigation of the Standard Oil company and the more recent proceedings before the interstate commerce commission at Chicago, has not checked the evil to any great extent.

Opponents of Mr. Elkins declare he has been a stumbling block in the path of effective legislation designed to curb the railroads as chairman of the committee having that subject in charge.

When West Virginia arose in protest against the domination and discriminations of the coal roads last winter the Republican governor of the state ignored Senator Elkins and his colleague, Senator Scott, and sent the petitions praying for relief to Senator Tillman, the Democratic leader in charge of the Hepburn bill. Senator Elkins, however, got busy with some radical proposition intended to divorce railroads from coal land ownership. The latest political event in his state indicated that the people there haven't much regard for his sudden posing as their friend on the eve of a campaign that is to determine his continuance in public life.

SON IS SPENDING HOARDED WEALTH

Feels He is Able to Pay $100,000 to Decorators.

Pittsburg, May 15.—James H. Lockhart is getting ready to spend a few of the millions of dollars that were left to him by his father, Charles Lockhart, the Standard Oil magnate and intimate friend and business associate of John D. Rockefeller. The appearance of the interior of Mr. Lockhart's palatial residence at Fifth avenue and Ivy street, which he erected at a cost of $250,000 does not suit him, and the young Mr. Lockhart has given an order to a local firm to have it redecorated at a cost of $100,000.

When old Charles Lockhart was living he would have been horrified at such an expenditure of money. The elder Mr. Lockhart during his lifetime whitewashed the fences about his place in order to save the money he would have paid to some one to do it, and used to push a lawn mower about every evening to save the expense of having the lawn mowed.

Although James H. Lockhart is far from a spendthrift, he believes he can afford to indulge his fancies, for he was his father's favorite and secured a greater part of his father's fortune, which was variously estimated at from $50,000,000 to $150,000,000.

We are the originators of selling whiskey direct from distiller to consumer. Our success has bred many imitators, who call themselves distillers. They are simply dealers who don't distill a drop of whiskey and have no connection with an active distillery. For proof see list of distillers in U. S. Government Reports. You'll find HAYNER in that list, but you won't find any of our imitators.

In Furnishing Cars to Coal Companies Continues to be Heard.

Philadelphia, May 16.—At the interstate commerce hearing here today R. K. Cassatt, son of President Cassatt of the Pennsylvania railroad, was called to testify concerning his connection with the Keystone Coal & Coke company. Mr. Cassatt stated that in addition to being eastern manager of the Keystone Coal & Coke company, he is assistant to the president of the New York, Philadelphia & Norfolk railroad. He was asked if the Keystone company had ever received any special car assignment from the Pennsylvania railroad and replied in the negative.

"During 1902 and 1903 were not frequent orders sent from two Pennsylvania railroad officers to furnish your company with special cars?"

"No. But in 1902 we secured 500 new cars from the Pressed Steel Car company."

"No. The Pennsylvania railroad had placed an order with the Pressed Steel Car company for space for 500 cars. The Keystone company was in need of cars and the Pennsylvania relinquished the space and we made a contract with the Pressed Steel company for the cars."

"Was there a scarcity of cars at that time?"

"There was."

"Then why did the Pennsylvania relinquish its claim for those cars in order to give them to you?"

"We are one of the largest shippers of coal and we had a number of urgent contracts," said Mr. Cassatt, explaining further that the cars were not taken from the Pennsylvania equipment. "They were not under construction," he said, "until after the signing of the contract between the Keystone company and the Pressed Steel Car company."

In answer to further questions, Mr. Cassatt stated that the Keystone Coal & Coke company owns 1,200 cars, but owned none prior to 1902, when the 500 cars were furnished them.

FIREMEN REFUSE TO ACCEPT SCALE

Cleveland, Ohio, May 16.—The conference between the marine firemen and representatives of the Lake Carriers' association, which for two days has been considering wages, ended abruptly late yesterday afternoon, the firemen leaving the conference and refusing to accept the proposed wage scale. As the Longshoremen's, Tugmen's Oilers', Grain Scoopers' and Water Tenders' unions are affiliated, it is believed that the break in negotiations will carry out all of these elements and throw the lake carrying situation back where it was previous to the agreement which resulted in a resumption of traffic. President Keefe and the delegates representing the labor elements in withdrawing yesterday afternoon, declared the men would not accept the scale.

President Livingstone of the Lake Carriers' association said:

"We have offered the men all we can afford to pay by a continuation of the wages of last year. They have refused to accept this. That is the situation."

Mr. Livingstone, when asked if this meant that lake traffic would again be tied up, said he does not think that conclusion follows necessarily, and added:

"I feel sure we can get firemen for the boats. We were anxious to come to terms with the men, and did all we could be reasonably expected to secure them, but the agreement seems impossible," said he.

President Keefe of the Longshoremen's association, when seen last night, declined to discuss the rupture between the labor delegates and the lake carriers.

The opinion is freely expressed now that the breach will not extend to the threatened tying up of freight traffic.

John G. Brown Here.

John G. Brown, formerly of Duluth, but now a resident of Chicago, is visiting in Duluth and on the ranges. He arrived yesterday and today is on the Vermilion range. Mr. Brown was very prominent in Democratic politics during his residence here, but has of late years given his attention very largely to mining. He is a director of the Black Mountain Mining company and has interests on the Vermilion range. He was in San Francisco at the time of the earthquake.

MARINE

WILL BE OFF ROCKS SOON

Crescent City Will Probably be Floated Within a Week.

Stern of Craft Now Afloat —Weather Causes Delay.

Unless bad weather prevents, the stranded steamer Crescent City will probably be off the rocks at Lakewood within a week, so satisfactorily is the wrecking work progressing under the direction of Capt. W. W. Smith.

The stern of the craft is already afloat and the bow is being gradually lifted and pulled toward deep water. It has been necessary to proceed very carefully as the ship was weakened by the storm last fall and it is desired to get her into drydock without further damage.

Giant jacks are being used to raise her off the rocks and steel cables connected with a heavy crib, sunk in the lake, utilized to draw her off to deep water.

Bad weather has considerably delayed work but only one real mishap has menaced the work. When the stern of the boat was floated, part of her hold became filled with water and its weight threatened to cause the hull to crack in the center, where she had been patched. The water was pumped out as fast as possible and before any great damage had been done.

The scene of the Matiaafa has not been one of great activity this week. The heavy wind and big waves kept the wrecking tugs inside of the harbor and operations on the ill-fated craft were temporarily suspended. They will be resumed at once, however.

Considerable ore has been taken from the hold and the craft is much lighter and in better condition to be moved than she has been at any time. It is thought that she will be moved before very long. Either the Matiaafa or the Crescent City will be taken to a lower lake drydock to be repaired and fitted for service once more. The Crescent City will probably be the one sent.

Was No Strike.

The wages of the men employed on the Duluth, Missabe & Northern docks have been raised about 15 cents a day. The new scale went into effect at noon yesterday. The News Tribune stated this morning that there was a strike at the docks for the increase, but W. A. McGonagle, general manager of the road, says that the morning newspaper had done the Missabe road an injustice and that there was not a word of truth in the strike story.

MANY BOATS ARRIVE.

Quite a fleet of boats have arrived in this harbor during the past twenty-four hours, most of them coming light for ore. It is not unlikely that some of these will be sent back to Two Harbors or Ashland to load ore, or at least some of the others still on the way will be turned into these ports, for the rush here is too strong.

According to the reports of the differences over the wage scale which have arisen in the conference between unions and employers at Cleveland, another tie-up of the marine interests is not unexpected here. In fact, a good many of the vesselmen here have been predicting this ever since the other strike was settled.

Th marine unions here are hoping that the matter will be adjusted, for they want no more tie-up, and will be rather opposed to fooling with idleness any more this year.

APPEALS FOR HEARING.

Gawn-Harper Admiralty Case in St. Paul Before Appeals Court.

The appeal in the damage case of the schooner Thomas Gawn against the steamer John H. Harper is to be heard some time today in St. Paul before the United States circuit court of appeals which is holding court there at present. H. R. Spencer and John H. Norton of Duluth, admiralty lawyers of Duluth, left here at 5 o'clock last night to argue the case. In brief, the owners of the schooner Thomas Gawn, which on Nov. 3, 1903, was in tow of the steamer John H. Harper of the Gilchrist company, claimed that the Gawn, which at that time hit the south pier of the Duluth entry and sank after entering the harbor, was so damaged because of the master of the Harper not shortening the tow line as he should have done, and the Gawn having too much leeway swung around and hit the pier.

The owners of the Gawn, M. Sieken & Co., libelled the Harper for and sued for damages against it for $3,350. The case was tried before Judge Morris of the federal court here. Judge Morris held that while the steamer was liable in a measure, so was the crew of the Gawn for not having cut the tow line when they saw they were in danger. He therefore awarded to the owners of the Gawn, half of the damages asked. Both sides appealed.

ASKS FOR SALVAGE.

M. J. Cummings, owners of the steamer Western Star, which went aground at Fourteen-Mile Point during the big storm of last November, is being sued for salvage by the owners, master and crew of the steamer Viking which pulled the Western Star out of her uncomfortable position with her nose on the beach. The taking of testimony in the case has been going on here for a few days at the office of H. R. Spencer, who is attorney for the Viking. Shaw, Warren, Cady & Oakes of Detroit are representing the owner of the Western Star. The suit was filed some days ago in the United States court of Madison, Wis., and will be tried some time this summer before Judge Sanborn of that court. The steamer Viking is owned by Frank Gilchrist of Alpena, Mich., and her master, Capt. Harry Richardson, is part owner.

On Nov. 28, the Western Star was hard aground at Fourteen-Mile Point, about half way between Portage canal and Ontonagon, Mich. She was driven on so hard that she could not work her wheel. The master and first mate of her went ashore to try to get assistance. While they were away the Viking came along, and seeing a steamer in distress went to its assistance. A cable was passed between the two and the Western Star was swung around so that she could use her wheel and the problem of dredging a channel through a shoal between the stranded boat and deep water was solved by the boats standing stern to stern, using their wheels and in this way washing out a channel. Through this the Western Star was again floated and then proceeded to Duluth under her own steam. The Western Star is valued at $250,000, the Viking is valued at $75,000 and the cargo of cement carried by the latter was valued at $11,000. The owners of the Viking charge that she was chartered to load lumber at Duluth at a thousand, but by reason of the delay she suffered while helping out the Western Star and lost the load and had to be contented with a cargo of oats, thereby losing $2,500 on her return cargo.

SHORTAGE OF SAILORS.

Boats arriving from below in Lake Superior ports are suffering from a shortage of all classes of sailors. This is one result of the recent strike. When the men were paid off at the beginning of the strike they scattered, evidently expecting a more protracted tie-up than resulted, and many of them took other employment to fill in their idle time. Just how long it will take to readjust this difficulty is problematical.

Almost every steamer coming from Lake Erie, and in fact all of the lower lake ports, is short from one to four men. Firemen, oilers and ordinary seamen are wanted, and marine union agents seem unable to fill the places offered. Of course green help is not wanted, experienced men being necessary. A number of boats were tied up at Detroit because of this shortage, the tie-up lasting in some cases twenty-four hours.

Another result of the strike is the enormous amount of mail which has accumulated at various ports for sailors on the delayed fleets, comprising about 300 vessels.

MISTOOK THE LIGHT.

Chicago, May 16.—(Special to The Herald.)—As Capt. Sam Thurston stood on the bridge of the steamer Lewiston last night he saw a light, and said unto himself, "That is the light of the waterworks crib." A few minutes later the steamer stopped, as no wheels had been placed on the boat for agricultural navigation. This time the captain knew he had mistaken, in the city's pall of smoke over the surface of the lake, a light on shore for the one on the crib. Then he awoke the residents of the pious suburb of Rogers Park with his distress signals. This morning it was found that the Lewiston had landed to nearly her entire length, as she was running at full speed. The steamer was released at 11 o'clock and came into port.

Stops Drink Craving.

Nothing is responsible for more suffering and misery both to the afflicted one and to his friends and relatives than drunkenness. It will be good news to many in this town that the Kugler Drug Co. is selling a cure called Orrine for which they are authorized to sell under a positive guarantee if it does not stop the drink craving and absolutely cure the drunkard, the money will be refunded.

Orrine is in two forms; No. 1 to be given without the patient's knowledge, and No. 2 for those who desire to be cured. The remedy costs but $1.00 a package. Mail orders filled. The Orrine Co., Washington, D. C., or ask Kugler Drug Co., 108 West Superior street, Duluth, to tell you what they know about this remarkable remedy.

CONCERNING WOMEN

Publicity is the keynote of at least one department of civic improvement undertaken by the Women's Council of this city. In fact, if the Council could afford it a press agent would be employed, similar to the one recently taken on by the Standard Oil company, in spite of the kind offices of Miss Ida Tarbell. The Council, however, has not yet reached the place when money can be expended in this manner. Many of the departments of work are such that definite things can be done, but the work undertaken by the committee on the preservation of natural beauty is working at a rather intangible thing, and the more widespread interest in this department is the more efficient will be the work. The committee has been working for the removal of all printed signs from the rocks about the city and the planting of vines to creep over the rather bare places. A second series of hanging gardens is rather the ideal toward which the Council is working.

At the beginning of the work a list of advertisers, whose names were blazoned inartistically and screamingly upon the rocks about the city was carefully made, and members of the Council called upon them and explained the work which the Council hoped to do for the improvement of the appearance of Duluth in the line of removing such signs from the portion of the city, which was one of its most individual marks. A uniform and courteous cooperation was extended by the advertisers in the work which the Council had undertaken. Some money was appropriated for the erasure of signs already upon the rocks, and the planting of vines to luxuriate and travel gracefully about the crags to emphasize their rugged strength through contrast. And then an enterprising druggist saw that space of seemingly pristine freshness of gray brown rock at a place where the cars went daily by, and in his mind's eye he saw a sign with a background of black paint, with orange letter, announcing his own particular brand of hair tonic, or freckle remover, or rheumatism destroyer ,or some other luxury of life, and he didn't stop with the sign in his mind's eye, he put it on the rock. The members of the Council were really quite put out. They talked to him. There was scarcely any need. Contrite humbleness itself was he. "A progressive chump," he labeled himself, when the matter was explained to him. And he not only would never do it again, but he would supply chemicals for the removal of the sign he had put on.

Lack of knowledge of the work which the organization was trying to do was the cause of his offense. That the progressive business men of the city have but to know of the work to become cooperators is a fact which the members of the Council realize, and makes the lack of knowledge of advertisers doubly hard to bear.

Another case in point may be of interest to many. A business man of the city, who is in sympathy with this work of the Council, wrote to his tailor that his patronage would be withdrawn from any man who was using the advertising methods employed by that tailor, which involved disfiguring the city. Legitimate Herald advertising must take its place.

"If every member of the Commercial club would give us that much assistance," said one of the members of the preservation of natural beauty committee, "we wouldn't need circulars to tell the business people of the town what we are trying to do. Everybody would know within a very short time. And all the time it would take is about ten minutes concentrated attention, and a postage stamp."

The different organizations of the city interested in a larger, more beautiful and praiseworthy Duluth will give the support which this committee of the Women's Council ask.

ST. CLAIR-WARNER.

Announcements were issued today by Mr. and Mrs. G. A. St. Clair of this city of the marriage of their daughter, Miss Grace St. Clair and Ernest J. Warner of New York. The wedding took place Wednesday March 28, at the Church of the Transfiguration in New York City and Mr. and Mrs. Warner will be at home in New York. Miss St. Clair went East last fall to continue her musical studies and the announcement of her marriage comes as a surprise to her many friends in this city. Mr. and Mrs. St. Clair were East at the time of the wedding, but were not in New York and the announcement to their friends in this city was postponed until their return. Mr. and Mrs. Warner will spend the summer as the guests of Mr. and Mrs. St. Clair.

Receives Silk Flag.

The entertainment known as a camp fire, typical of the G. A. R. organizations was held last evening at Kalamazoo hall by Willis A. Gorman post of this city. An army supper of hard tack, pork and beans and coffee was served to more than two hundred people and a pleasing program followed. Music was furnished by the drum corps, readings by Miss Effie Brotherton and Miss Ketchum and songs by Miss Minnie Schultz and S. Bailey. There was an address also by Capt. F. S. White. The most interesting feature of the evening was the presentation of a beautiful silk flag to the post by the members of Garfield circle. The gift came as a surprise to the members of the post and was acknowledged by Commander John Randall. The evening was a most pleasing one.

Rehearsals.

Last evening the first general rehearsal of "The Reformation of the 16th Century" was held under the direction of Miss Heller at St. John's English Lutheran church. Much enthusiasm is being shown in the affair. Rehearsals will be held every evening this week. At 7 o'clock the chorus of nuns and novices will meet for practice and at 8 o'clock the general rehearsal will take place.

WHAT RETAIL MARKETS OFFER.

Spinach, 30 cents a peck.
Apples, 90 cents a peck.
Fresh salmon, 20 cents a pound.
Fresh halibut, 18 cents a pound.
Fresh cod, 18 cents a pound.

Grapefruit is scarce, oranges are not as good as they were, strawberries are nice but really quite common and the only real exclusive fruit is measly little apples. The apples are scarce, they are also undesirable but they are 90 cents a peck and if nothing else will prove your superiority, eating scrubby Baldwin apples at that price will.

Spinach is good for one's health. Although that is enough to queer the apologetic green stuff for most people, still it has a few adherents even with the handicap of wholesomeness and it is a good change. The fish market is fine and the person who can not get a delicious breakfast fish and an appetizing dinner fish from the variety offered is the person who doesn't like the finny things.

Women Bank by Mail Now to Save Time and Mistakes

Now that women can bank by mail many of them prefer doing all their business that way, instead of going to the bank, says a New York writer. They say there is less chance of their making mistakes in filling out blanks at home than when they get into big institutions, where they feel that they have to write and think in a hurry.

"It is so much simpler filling out blanks that are plainly made so that there can be no mistake about where to write and sign," said one woman, "that I do all my business by mail. Then, too, it is cheaper than paying 10 cents carfare just to make a deposit and saves the time of going to the bank. I have always to remember to send my passbook in the same envelope with my deposit, and also postage for its return. In sending the money I either register the letter to insure its safe delivery or get a postoffice order, payable to the bank, and the beauty of it is I can send any amount from $1 up to $1,000.

"When I want to draw money, I fill out and sign a blank order, which is very simply worded, so it is impossible to make a mistake, and mail it with my passbook. As a rule I send a short note stating whether I want the money in bills or a check and of course stamps for the return.

"Even opening an account is simple. All I had to do was to write a letter stating that I wished to become a depositor and immediately I received a signature card and slip and a lot of data showing the financial standing of the institution.

"On the top of the signature card I wrote my name and filled out the test questions, about age, birth, former and present places of residence, nearest relatives, their names, ages, etc. Then I filled out a signature slip for their future use, which I believe was to be kept on their books for reference. I then returned both to the bank with my first deposit, which was a $10 express money order.

"On the following day I received my passbook showing that $10 had been deposited to my credit."

For persons living out of town, where there is no bank, or they have to travel several miles to reach one, depositing money by mail is a decided advantage, and saves carrying large sums of money about in a wallet or purse with the likelihood of losing it.

Accounts opened jointly in the name of a man and his wife can be arranged so that either can draw if signature slips from both are filed in the bank. In getting out an account in trust for some member of a depositor's family, the funds are under the direct control of the trustee during his or her lifetime, and in the event of the depositor's death is paid direct to the beneficiary. In such case the signature card should contain all the necessary details about the individual to be benefited by the account.

Delicious Fillings and Icing for Layer Cakes Made at Home

By MRS. EMMA PADDOCK TELFORD.

Maple Filling.

My Dear Mrs. Telford:

Would like to ask you to give a recipe for maple filling for layer cake.

S. A. P.

Maple Cream Filling.

Put into a saucepan a cupful of grated maple sugar and a half cup of milk; cook until thick; add a tablespoonful of butter, then cool and beat. At first it may look as if it was going to curdle, but it will grow smooth in the beating. Do not let it boil long enough to candy, but only until it forms a soft thick mass when a spoonful is dropped in cold water.

Plain Maple Filling.

Boil one cup maple sugar and a quarter cup water until it threads, then add a very little butter, and stir until the right consistency for spreading. If preferred, instead of the butter, the hot syrup can be poured over the white of an egg that has been well beaten, then stirred until smooth. Another good filling is simply whipped cream, sweetened with fine shavings of maple sugar. Hickory nuts, chopped fine, make a pleasing variation when added to the maple cream filling.

Maple Fudge Filling With Butternuts.

To make a soft maple sugar fudge, boil one pound of shaved maple sugar with one cupful cream or milk, until it hardens when dropped in cold water; add a cupful of butternut meats; stir in lightly and spread.

Special Recipes.

My Dear Mrs. Telford:

Am making a reference book of recipes and want one for fried oysters, to know how to arrange them for serving; also, how to prepare gelatine with whipped cream. Gratefully, H. C.

Philadelphia Fried Oysters.

Select the largest, finest oysters that the market affords. Rinse quickly with cold water and lay carefully in a collander to drain. Spread each one in turn on the baking board, and pat quickly and gently with an old soft napkin until dry, handling as little as possible. Take a steel fork, catch it in the eye of the oyster, so as not to pierce the body, dip in beaten egg and then in fine cracker dust, back and forth, until the oyster is completely covered. Use two eggs for a dozen and a half oysters. Beat up together, add a pinch of salt and a tablespoonful of hot water. Have ready a frying pan, not too deep, with plenty of smoking hot olive oil, or sweet lard. In case you use the lard add a tablespoonful of butter to aid in making the oysters crisp and brown. All butter burns too quickly and is not advisable. Put in only oysters enough to cover the bottom of the pan without crowding. When brown on one side turn to the other, always with the fork in the hard portion of the oyster. Cooked in this way the oysters will be perfectly free from fat, plump and a dream of deliciousness. Do not use too much cracker dust, as that tends to disguise the flavor of the oyster.

Bavarian Creams.

By preparing "gelatine with whipped cream," I think you have reference to one of the forms of Bavarian cream. All these creams are wholesome, easily made, and can be varied according to circumstances, using either fresh or preserved fruits or jellies. The proportions usually remain about the same; that is, a half box of gelatine will solidify one quart of liquid, this being all cream, or part cream and part milk or cream and fruit juice. If fresh fruits are used they must be stewed and sweetened. If canned or preserved they will have to be pressed through a sieve. The first thing to do is to put the gelatine soaking in cold water. For a half box a half cup of water will be needed. Let it soak at least half an hour, then set over boiling water and stir until dissolved. Add this gelatine to a pint of fruit juice, with six tablespoonfuls of sugar, and strain into a pan. Set in a larger pan with chipped ice and stir until it begins to thicken. Whip the cream to which a pinch of salt has been added, and add to the fruit and gelatine mixture. Continue beating and stirring from the bottom toward the top until when a spoonful is turned on top it holds its shape. Pour into a mould and set aside to harden. When a part of the cream is whipped and the rest used without whipping, the latter should be scalded and the sugar added to it. If milk is used thicken with egg, allowing one to a cup of milk.

Washington Pie.

My Dear Mrs. Telford:

Will you kindly publish recipes for old-fashioned Washington pie and doughnuts, and oblige?

Yours very truly, R. L. S.

Washington pie is really nothing but a creamcake. To make it, beat three eggs with a cup of sugar until light. Add two sups sifted flour that has again been sifted with half a teaspoonful of soda and a teaspoonful of cream of tartar. Add a half cup of milk. Bake in layer or Washington pie tins. When cold spread one of the cakes with a custard made in this way, and put the other layer over it. Cream filling. Put into the double boiler one pint of milk. When hot stir into the milk a scant half cup of flour mixed with half a cup of sugar, one beaten egg and a little salt. Cook, stirring all the time, until thickened like a custard. Flavor with any flavoring desired. After the cake is spread, sprinkle the top with powdered sugar.

Raised Doughnuts.

Allow to one quart raised milk bread dough, two cups sugar, four eggs, two tablespoonfusl melted butter, a half teaspoonful salt, cinnamon and nutmeg to flavor. Beat well together, cover and set in a warm place to rise. In half or three-quarters of an hour it will come up nicely. Now add enough flour (slightly warmed) to make stiff enough to roll out. Let rise again until very light, turn out on moulding board, handling as little as possible. Pat th esponge down lightly, cut out like small biscuit about the size of a dollar, or in small squares and fry in a kettle of hot lard or lard and good beef suet in equal quantities. Test the heat first with a bit of dough. If it rises at once and is a good brown, the fat is right. Do not crowd the kettle. As you lift out the doughnuts powder freely with powdered sugar. When cold pack in a stone jar and sit where it is cool and moist. English housekeepers use a little rose water in the flavoring. This is a matter of choice.

Children's hats are as varied and as of distinctive designs this season as those worn by the grownups, and a little miss whose mother believes in strictly observing the fashions will have as many different hats for her daughter as she has changes in costume. So that a simple hat or sunbonnet used in the morning can be laid aside for a more elaborate afternoon, carriage or dress style.

There is something fetching about all the shapes shown this spring, from the revival of the old time sunbonnet such as our grandmothers used to wear to the very latest model, the Peter Pan cap. And there are so many patterns that a becoming style can easily be selected for any shape face and features.

Sunbonnets in bright colored chambray, made exactly like the old-fashioned ones worn fifty and a hundred years ago, are bound to be favorites, for morning wear, and will be particularly useful as a protection against the sun, in the country or at the seashore. Then, too, they are made on such lines that an ingenious woman can easily fashion them at home.

To begin with the front piece in dainty blue or soft pink material, light weight of course, is stiffened with canvas, etc., so that it will not be flapping down over the eyes. Around the edge, for a finish, fluted ruffles of the same cloth, or of fine white lawn, with embroidery are pretty. A piece of featherbone concealed in the ruffles, holds them in shape and strengthens the whole bonnet. The back is the simple old mob cap form. Two broad, plain hemmed strings are attached to either side and tied in a huge bow knot under the little wearer's chin, a trifle to the right or left, to avoid a set appearance.

The Peter Pan cap, that is smart and becoming to round-faced children who have long curls, is already popular with both little girls and their mothers, for it is unlike any other shape that has been in vogue for several seasons. In appearance it is more like a Scotch cap than anything that we are familiar with. Made in straw, it has a cord running completely around the crown, and a huge rosette of velvet with sharp ends placed a trifle to the front on the right side. Through this, there are two long quills in black, white, or brown, to harmonize with the shade of the straw. There is no brim, and it is worn comfortably on the head well set back from the face.

Lingerie hats, in linen or sheer lawn will be worn by little girls, too, and for both morning and afternoon use will be as popular as they are with the grown persons. The simpler the models in these patterns the better, for unlike those adopted by society women, there is very little embroidery or trimming on either crown or brim. The English eyelet is about the only stitch appropriate for a childish face, though a daintily hand worked design in lilies of the valley, forget-me-nots, or wild roses in small patterns is permissible. A band of ribbon tied around the crown to make the separation between it and the crown both distinctive and secure is considered ornamental enough for carriage wear.

There are pretty flat or plateau shapes in crin, with undulating brims that are effective for children with thin faces, and incidentally are excellent sun shades, for they bob up and down over the forehead and entirely protect the eyes and even the lower part of the face. The material is plaited into a flat crown and the brim is treated in the same manner, being fulled onto the former. For trimmings use fluted facings of fine white batiste with miniature flowers made from ribbons.

For dress, leghorn flats in natural shapes edged with a narrow lace braid and trimmed with bunches of ribbon bows, or bright colored flowers are attractive and always in good taste for little folk.

THE EVENING STORY.

LOVE AMONG THE ROSES

By Herbert Holt.

(Copyright, 1906, by Joseph B. Bowles.)

It was a veritable garden of roses. There were roses everywhere. Great yellow roses climbing up the latticed windows; rich red clusters creeping along the mossy garden wall; and blush-roses, more modest, hiding away in nook and cranny.

In the garden I first saw her. She moved among the roses tall and fair, the spirit of the flowers. She was wearing a dress all white, which fell in gracious folds about her, giving a touch of dignity to the girlish figure. One hand held a basket, and with a pair of scissors she was busily snipping off dead leaves and tending, almost caressingly, the newly-opened buds of her favorite flowers.

"You love roses," I said involuntarily.

"Yes, I love them. I could not live without them." Her smile robbed the remark of extravagance.

"You see," she continued, raising her eyes to my face, "I have lived in the country all my life, and my flowers are almost my sole companions."

"Inarticulate, and for that reason desirable."

"Oh, no," she said gaily, "the flowers have a language of their own, although we gross mortals fail to understand it. Do you see that tall yellow bending down to exchange confidences with his companion?"

"A clear representation," I answered, gravely, "of love among the roses."

"And yet," said I, presently, "life has compensations, even for the absence of flowers."

She shook her head wisely.

"The things that men strive for—are they equal to these? I have heard that life is full of disappointments, but there are no disappointments in Nature. I doubt the value of your compensations, Mr. Durnford."

"Then I am thrice blessed," she said, quickly, "for I have my roses for companions, you for a friend and mother to love. There, I have finished, so we will not keep her waiting any longer for tea."

Her mother was a sweet-faced woman with a low voice and a settled look of sorrow in her tired eyes. Life had given her of its best, but stern Death, in taking the husband, dearly loved, had broken for her the mainspring of existence. Her daughter remained, the only root that held her to the earth.

Tea and quiet conversation followed—a revelation to the homeless man, weary of the society of men and hungry for womanly ministrations and the touch of soft caressing hands.

Then out into the rose garden again. An elfin spirit possessed her. "She must give me one of her favorite flowers for my button-hole." She flitted from tree to tree, smiling back at me with innocent witchery.

"This bud was much too large; that one was far too small, and besides, not at all suitable for my complexion." Finally she selected one and pinned it to my coat. (I have it still.) In doing so she saw my face.

"How very solemn we look this morning."

"I am beginning to realize that happiness has its price."

"Does that account for your gloom, Mr. Durnford?"

"I have been very happy here."

"Yes?" The tone was questioning.

"And now," I said, quietly, "my work here is finished. I must go back to New York."

Her face twitched, and she turned away for a moment and bent over a flower. When she looked at me again she had regained her composure and spoke gently.

"I am glad you have enjoyed your visit," she said.

"If," I said "if—" and then I stopped. A vision of two dingy rooms in a little street rose before my eyes. Dare I ask any tenderly-nurtured woman to share with me the hopeless struggle for existence in a great city? I clenched my teeth and was silent.

"Shall I see you again before you go?" she asked.

"No, I think not." I said steadily. "In fact, I came round this afternoon for the purpose of saying good-by." I could not look at her as I spoke.

"Good-by" she said, monotonously, as one repeating a lesson.

I took her hand in mine; she seemed turned to marble.

"Some day you will perhaps understand, and in understanding pity me." I raised her hand to my lips.

Three years later, and a hot, stuffy morning in mid-June. I walked from my rooms near the park, thinking deeply of a critical article I was writing.

I started, and for an instant my heart stopped beating, and then went on at racing speed. She came towards me along the sunlit path as it were, out of the land of dreams. She was graver and more womanly than of old, and walked slowly and with downcast eyes. Two children were with her, their shrill trebles reaching me while yet a long way off.

She looked up and saw me. A wave of color swept from her brow to chin, leaving her pale. She paused for an instant and then came slowly on.

"At last!" I said, and was silent.

I held her hand and gazed hungrily into her face. She was beautiful, but more than beauty upon her face was written—courage, steadfastness and high resolve. The two children, after a period of embarrassing scrutiny, were on in front arguing some childish dispute.

"I've heard of you often," she said, with quickly recovered composure. "You have achieved fame."

"I date what little measure of success I possess from that summer three years ago." She recoiled a little; I went on hurriedly.

"Some studies I wrote then were favorably received and commented upon. Since that time I have not looked back." I paused and continued slowly: "When I saw a little light through the darkness, more than two years ago, scarcely daring to hope, I went down to the village. I found the rose garden, but the rose I looked for was gone, and the garden was desolate."

"My mother died," she answered quietly, "and all her money, sunk in an annuity died with her. So there was very little left. But friends were kind and got me a situation, as governess to the two little girls you see."

"And you have been fighting the battle of life alone ever since."

"It was not much of a battle," she said, smiling.

"And I—I imagined you snug and warm in some little nest. I never connected the storm and stress of life with you."

"It was a bitter blow to lose my mother," she said, her lips quivering, "and I was not brave."

"I am sorry." The words sounding dull, commonplace and inadequate fell from me; but my brain was in a whirl and I could think of nothing, save that after three long years, she was once again by my side.

We walked slowly, the rumble of traffic sounding faintly in the ear. Suddenly, it seemed as though a veil were dropped and we stood in the rose garden. I turned to her.

"Do you remember that last evening?"

She nodded in some distress.

"And have you thought about it since—and understood?"

She made no reply.

"I loved you then," I said, softly.

"Why have you come again into my life?" she broke out at last, a little wildly. "I have fought the pain and conquered. Now it is all to do over again."

"I loved you." I said again.

"But you left me."

"Do you not understand? I had nothing but hopeless, sordid poverty then to offer you."

"Oh, it was cruel—cruel—to leave me without a word, if you loved me," she said at last in a passionate undertone. "It is a never ceasing joy to the woman to know she is loved. She hugs the knowledge to her heart and it consoles her though a thousand obstacles—even death itself—intervene to separate them. But to feel she has wasted the treasure of her life in return for cool friendship, is agony. Oh, it was cruel—cruel!" she repeated.

"I acted for the best, dear—you were so young—I thought you would forget—I was wrong, I see it now. But I loved you all through."

Presently I said, softly:

"You care for me?"

"You know," she said, "you know," and the day took on an added brightness.

"Then," I cried, exultantly, "I will fill your path with roses—not the gray roses of disappointment, but the rich red roses of the joy of life."

And she whispered back, half-smiling, half-tears:

"Dear, you planted in my heart the flower of life. It has grown and been watered in my tears. Now it has blossomed, and the flowers will never die."

Seventeenth of May,

Norway's independence day, will be celebrated at Lester Park with a big dance in the evening.

To spend 30 minutes a day in reading Herald want ads. may prove to be the most profitable "side-line" of business you ever undertook.

Business Woman's Mistaken Etiquette

"It never would have happened if I had known anything about society," said the New York business woman as she punched hat pins viciously into her new bonnet. "And I would have been in all that cab hire, too, but I though the affair was for only half an hour.

"Oh, yes, I did the thing up in my best manner, even if I did take the 'L' to Seventy-second street and then engage a carriage to take me around to the number in the next block, to save money. But it didn't work.

"I told the cabby to wait, thinking I would not stay more than half an hour. Oh, but it is horrible to contemplate!" with a shudder.

"When I entered the house I was immediately ushered upstairs, where two attentive maids proceeded to take off my coat and arrange my hair. One gave me a parting dab on the nose with a powder puff and hustled me downstairs to greet my hostess.

"After saying polite things for fifteen or twenty minutes I endeavored to leave, thinking of the cabby waiting outside, and realizing every moment I stayed meant a larger bill. Before I could even make a move to go the floors were cleared for dancing and I was being whisked around the room like a real society bud. At the end of the first waltz I tried to attract the attention of a butler to send him out to dismiss the carriage, but every motion I made he studiously failed to see, and there wasn't a friend present to whom I could, with dignity, confide my embarrassing predicament.

"I acted deliriously happy and was so gay that I believe not a person in the house knew the actual agony I was enduring at the thought of my expense for a cab going up in the air.

"It was just exactly 2:30 the next morning when I stepped into the cab, after having viciously prodded the driver to waken him.

"My bill—well, I shall have to work the rest of my life to make up for it—think of keeping a carriage from 8 until 2 the next morning."

FREE CIRCUS WON.

Democratic Stratagem Saved the Day When Things Looked Bad.

"This," said the southerner over the dinner table, according to the New York Post, "is a story of how a circus once saved an election for the Democrats in Halifax, N. C.

"For a long time the colored men didn't try to vote in Halifax, but in this particular year the Republicans announced that they were going to see that the black ballots were counted. And they seemed to mean what they said. Things looked bad in Halifax county. Three days before election Col. Bob W., our candidate for sheriff, told me he expected to be beaten by a young Republican lawyer who had come from the North several years before.

"I was thinkin' what advice to give him when I looked out of the window and saw a man pasting a circus advertisement on a fence. The sign said the show would reach Halifax town, the county seat, on Nov. 3, the day before election. 'I've got it, colonel!' I said. 'We'll lick 'em yet.'

"We got into a buggy and drove across country to the town where the show was appearing at the time. The manager's name was Smith.

"'Now, Smith,' I said, 'we want you to help us win an election over Halifax way.'

"'What has a circus got to do with elections?' he said.

"'It's got this much to do,' I replied. 'We Democrats are licked to a finish unless you will help us out. My plan is this: You put up a new advertisement sayin' that registration tickets will admit holders to the circus. Print handbills—plenty of 'em. Don't be stingy about it; have 'em scattered all through the county. Every colored man in Halifax loves a circus. And we Democrats want every one to see your show.

"'You're on,' said Smith.

"'I woke up next mornin' and just outside my window I heard two negroes talking.

"'Y-s, suh,' one of 'em was sayin', 'this a fact—gwine to let us in free. Just read dat if you don't believe me.'

"The Republican candidate was making his last stump speeches in the backwoods and didn't know anything about it until he got home that night. Gentlemen, he was wild. There was nothin' doin' for Bill. The colored folks wouldn't listen to him.

"On circus day Main street resounded with the rattle of vehicles of every description. Since sun-up they had been pourin' into town. Whole families came in their wagons, the elders on the front seats and the children on the rear ones. Every conveyance contained fried chicken and cider. The previous night had been a Bartholomew for the hen roosts in Halifax.

"The courthouse yard was used for unhitchin'. Mules and horses stood stampin' and kickin', and switchin' their tails to keep the flies away. Most of 'em had little bunches of green leaves tucked around the ears in honor of the gala occasion. Such a crowd I never saw in Halifax. As Bob and I were walking down the street, we saw a lonely figure on a barrel, shriekin' and screechin'. Colored folks would stop a minute and then walk on. When we got nearer we saw it was Bill tryin' to tell the voters what he would do for them if they wouldn't go to that circus. He might as well have saved his breath, for none of them would listen to him after they got the drift of his remarks.

"Well, sir, it was a regular landslide for us Democrats. Poor Bill disappeared, and election night his friends found him asleep on the bar in Tom Harley's gin mill. That night there was another circus, for we Democrats had a torchlight procession, the like of which had never been seen in Halifax county. All the boys wore white aprons, big hats, and all of 'em were singin'. They kept up the celebration until after midnight. One of the circus spectators said to me next day: 'Boss, us colored folks would lak for you to 'range it so us could have a circus every 'lection time. I sho did lak dat circus.'"

NEAR TO NATURE.

Newark News: A $75,000 automobile rolled through the $60,000 bronze gates and up the $35,000 winding avenue to the $20,000 marble steps.

Across the $90,000 lawn a $125,000 silver lake lay sleeping in the shades of early evening, and beyond it rose a lordly $80,000 hill, whose crest cloaked with forest at an expense of $200,000, glowed in the last golden rays of the setting sun.

"It is pleasant," he observed, "to get back to nature once in a while. After the cares and worries of the business days I certainly love to run out to this quiet little $60,000,000 country club of ours and taste a bit of simple life. It is good to keep in touch with the soil; for what is man but dust, after all!"

Feeling restored he passed in through the $400,000 doorway to his $1,500 dinner.

IMPROVING HIGHWAYS

St. Louis County Good Roads Association is Organized.

The committee on resolutions, appointed at the morning session of the good roads convention, this afternoon, recommended that the local good roads organization that is to be formed attempt to prevail upon the state to provide for suitable legislation for the use of convict labor for the preparation of road material for free delivery to the different counties in the state; ask the national government to provide for government co-operation in the construction of good roads; that cash payments be substituted for the state labor tax, and also recommended that the St. Louis County Good Roads association go on record as favoring a state highway between Duluth and the Twin Cities and between Duluth and the ranges.

At the opening of the afternoon session, J. E. Green of Carlton gave a talk on the laws of the state pertaining to highways. He read extensive extracts from the state laws, showing what the county could expect in the way of state aid, and what laws there were governing the construction and maintenance of roads. He said one of the leading questions to be considered by the good roads organization was how to make the least money go the farthest. He asserted that good roads associations should be organized at once in all the counties, and suggested that they unite in a general movement to bring about the construction and maintenance of better roads. Mr. Green remarked that local politics often entered largely into good roads, for road overseer is a political appointment.

"The people of the different counties would have twice as much money to spend on their roads if they didn't spend so much for men to look after this expenditure," said Hon. Gustave Scholle, chairman of the state highway commission. "Fifty per cent more money is spent in this manner than is necessary. One man could do the work of the three overseers that are employed in each township, meaning a big saving to the county. If these operating expenses were cut down it would be unnecessary for us to ask the state or nation for a single cent for the building and improvement of good roads. It is the same in other states. Too much money goes for supervision, and not enough for actual work. As soon as public sentiment is worked up sufficiently there will be no difficulty whatever in getting the legislature to pass laws providing for the better maintenance and improvement of public highways. We must first carry on a campaign, so to speak, and as soon as the public is convinced of the need of better roads, the laws necessary for their building and control will be readily secured."

Another speaking along the same line was Charles Halverson, also a member of the highway commission. He said that the good roads associations should proceed carefully and slowly, and get the confidence of the people before trying too much in a money way. Once get the confidence of the people, he said, and there would be no difficulty in raising all the money desired, provided no extravagant use is made of it.

"As soon as we can convince the people that we are putting their money to a good use," he said, "and not spending it extravagantly, they will not hesitate in giving us authority to go ahead, and in furnishing the money."

The formal organization of the St. Louis County Good Roads association took place during the afternoon session. A constitution was adopted and officers chosen. W. E. Culkin was chosen president, H. R. Patterson of West Duluth, vice-president, and Edward Hazen, secretary and treasurer. An executive committee will be appointed by the president. Another meeting will be held June 12, when county vice-presidents will be elected. In the meantime an active canvass for members throughout the county will be made. The annual meeting will be held in December.

CIGAR TALKS.

"You want me to talk about cigars?" said Mr. Boyce to a Herald reporter.

"I think the better way is to let our cigars talk for themselves," he continued. "There is one cigar in our case, the 'Wadsworth Bros.' Chico,' which is doing a lot of talking, even shouting. I consider myself fortunate in getting the agency for it, as it is in reality equal to any 10c cigar, and it costs only 5c.

"You see I buy it direct from the maker, and the middleman does not get any profit. At anyrate, it is becoming the best seller in my case, and people who heretofore would have nothing but a 10c or even 15c cigar, ask for a Chico, and say they like it. Better try one yourself and see how good it is."

CHALLENGED THE COURT.

Boston Herald: Charles H. Hudson was a lawyer of remarkable keenness and ability, and well known also as a student of Shakespeare, but he was not a strict and offensive teetotaller at all hours of the day.

One day he appeared before Judge Ladd of the police court of Cambridge, in a case involving no difficult questions of law, but as Mr. Hudson had little confidence in the judge's legal acquirements, he criticised his rulings very sharply, and in a manner easily understood by all present.

The judge, with a judicial look of sternness, raised himself from his chair and said: "Mr. Hudson, if you do not speak more respectfully of the decisions of this court I shall at once commit you for contempt of court."

Hudson arose, with a great assumption of dignity, and, raising his voice and head, said: "Your honor says you will commit me to jail for contempt of your court. I'll bet $5 and put the money up, that your honor cannot make out the papers correctly in three weeks."

COULDN'T GIVE IT.

Boston Herald: Dr. John Rogers, one of the earliest and most prominent physicians of Plymouth, N. H., was noted for his ready retorts and cutting sarcasm in dealing with an opponent. He was postmaster during the administration of John Adams, but was removed on the advent of Thomas Jefferson and Dr. Robbins, a rival, professionally and politically, and a man of quick temper, but of pompous manner, succeeded him.

In due time he came to Dr. Rogers, demanding the postoffice paraphernalia, and saying: "I want all that belongs to me, quick!"

"What's that?" vehemently demanded Robbins.

"Common sense, you dashed fool," coolly retorted Rogers.

SPIDER EATS BIRDS.

London Graphic: There has just been deposited in the insect house at the Zoo, a specimen of the bird-eating spider, which earns its name by occasionally including in its menu some of the brilliantly hued humming birds and varicolored finches of the South American tropics.

It is doubtful whether the silken threads which he spins in profusion constitute his most effective tackle for securing his prey; indeed, it is more probable that the little birds get caught through alighting upon the banana and other leaves, in the twisted folds of which the spider makes his home. The similarity of his coloring to the bark of trees, to which he attaches himself, is also a powerful factor in enabling him to approach his prey.

The silken threads which help to ensnare so many beautiful birds are a serious annoyance to the traveler when riding or driving through the less frequented forests. As they continually strike the face one is reminded of some fiendish motor trap on the Surrey roads.

The bird-eating spider is much smaller, although not less ferocious in appearance, than the famous tarantula. The body of a full-grown tarantula is as big as a hen's egg, and on an average it gives from twenty to forty yards of silk, the weaving of which was expected at one time to prove a very considerable industry in some of the Australian colonies. The silken output of the bird-eating spider is greater in proportion.

Carlyle said: "Make yourself an honest man, and then you may be sure that there is one rascal less in the world." Also—read The Herald ads, and you may be sure that there is one less "easy mark" in the world.

THE CHICAGO MARKET.

Wheat Opens Firm Notwithstanding Rains and Steady Cables.

Chicago, May 16.—The wheat market opened firm today, notwithstanding rains in the Southwest and steady cables. Liverpool failing to respond to yesterday's decline in the local market. Grain Gossip.

Logan & Bryan, Chicago: Wheat—shorts are having their own troubles today. The rumor which was in circulation at the close yesterday that some important settlement has been made in May contracts was disproved this morning by the action of the market. The scattered rains over some of the winter wheat states yesterday, which induced a renewal of bear tactics, were reported today as entirely too light to be of much benefit. There are direst advices from Oklahoma and Texas of the appearance of rust, as a result of the recent rains. The Southwest bought some wheat here. It will take important private settlements to relieve the present strain in the market. There are some very well advised interests in the corn trade which are losing faith in the promise of an immediate run of receipts. The best bidders are not getting the country offerings they expected. Local shipments continue at a good rate. The cash market is firm and higher. A decided increase in country offerings of corn will change sentiment to the selling side. The bull leader in oats continued to market quite freely on May contracts at the advance, selling considerable at 34c. The buying was well distributed between cash and elevator people and commission houses with outside orders. The market followed the advance in the leaders. Prices for the near future must depend on whether or not the country gets good general rains. There was a good stiff market in provisions most of the day, with late prices at a little advance for pork and lard, and ribs at a good advance, at the top. The situation is healthy and the products should be bought on any back set in prices.

WOMEN'S SENSES LESS ACUTE.

New York Press: The man, when his tooth was pulled, yelled hoarsely. The next patient, a woman, bore the pain of three extractions with silent fortitude.

"Yes," said the dentist, "women endure the pangs of tooth pulling better than men, but they deserve no praise on this account. They feel the pain less. Experiments have frequently been made to test the acuteness of the masculine and feminine senses. The last experiments were made in this city, and they were interesting and conclusive.

"First, taste was tried. The male subjects could detect in water the presence of the sixtieth part of a grain of gall. The women couldn't distinguish the gall in a smaller quantity than the twentieth of a grain. The men's taste was three times keener than the women's.

"Next, smell. The men smelt the presence of the hundredth part of a grain of prussic acid. The women were unconscious of the acid till a quantity five times greater was set before them. In smell the men were five times the women's superiors.

"Men heard a watch ticking at a distance of ten yards; women could only hear it at a distance of two yards. The males again, you see, were five times the better. It was the same thing with sight and with touch. The men saw five times better. They felt five times more keenly and delicately.

"These experiments explain in a way the apparent anomaly of woman's wondrous fortitude to pain. Woman's senses being less acute, she is less affected by pain than man."

GOV. HUBBARD'S JOKE.

Boston Herald: When Richard D. Hubbard was governor of Connecticut his company was eagerly sought for in all places he frequented, not excepting the privacy of his home, by many office-seekers. One invidual in particular, who was very persistent in pelas for an appointment, but not so in his neatness nor cleanliness of costume, continually sought Mr. Hubbard.

One day this man called at the state house with a very much soiled shirt front and grease-covered vest and frock coat, but a beautiful buttonhole bouquet was placed on the lapel of his coat.

"Good morning, governor," said he; "fine morning."

"Beautiful morning," replied the governor.

"There what do you think of this?" said the visitor, pointing to the bouquet. "Where do you think I got it?"

"Don't know," said Mr. Hubbard; "perhaps it grew there."

FAIRBANKS' ODDITIES.

Kansas City Journal: Vice President Fairbanks, when in the senate, always wears a long Prince Albert, dark gray trousers and a plain black silk tie. Before taking his seat he dusts his chair, and he never leaves his shining top hat in the lobby, but brings it into the senate and places it with extreme caution on the top of his desk.

"Some men can never state an ordinary fact in ordinary terms. All their geese are swans, till you see the birds." By Herald want advertising you can sell both geese and swans—but not geese masquerading as swans.

STRENGTH EXHIBITED

By the Stock Market and the Close is Higher.

New York, May 16.—Opening prices in the stock market today were higher than last night, the principal gains being in the class of specialties. Dealings were light and the changes generally were restricted to moderate fractions. Minneapolis, St. Paul & Soo preferred rose 2; Anaconda, 1⅜; Smelting, ⅝; the preferred, 1¼, and Brooklyn Transit and American Ice, large fractions.

Opening gains were not increased very much before profit taking sales began, which soon wiped out the fractional advances in the more active features. A few of the high priced railroads and some of the minor industrials made large advances, but the general marked moved within exceedingly narrow limits. Lackawanna improved 5; Beet Sugar, 4; Minneapolis, St. Paul & Soo preferred, 4¼; Anaconda, 3¼; Great Northern preferred, 3½; Sugar, 2; Republic Steel preferred and Pacific Coast, 1½, and Brooklyn Transit, 1.

Fluctuations in prices became very irregular, and the recession carried the average level a fraction below last night. A brisk rally followed, with some show of animation. The rise of 3⅜ in Sugar was an influencing factor in the rally. Amalgamated Copper gained nearly a point; Delaware & Hudson and 1Alantic Coast Line, 1½, and Toledo Railways, 2¼. International Pump rose 1¼; Canada Southern, Westinghouse Electric, 2, and International Power, 6. Anaconda fell to 2 points below last night and rallied to 6 points over. Buying subsided before noon and there were fractional recessions. Bonds were steady.

The market was not allowed to ease off much, bull operators successfully advancing St. Paul and Reading a point and again turning the list upward. The general demand was small, the chief strength having been derived from the concentrated buying of selected stocks, but prices touched a slightly higher and generally than before. Delaware & Hudson extended its rise to 2⅛.

Business fell off gradually during the late afternoon and the market became heavy. Aside from a fractional reduction in the advances established, the pressure had no very general effect and there was a later recovery to above the best previous prices. Lackawanna jumped 10. The market moved irregularly to a higher level in the final hour. Lackawanna sold up 20 to 560, a record price. The gains in St. Paul and Northwestern reached 2, Union Pacific and Louisville & Nashville 1½ and New York Central, Colorado & Southern, Smelting, Colorado Fuel and International Pump preferred a point. United States Reduction gained 5 and the preferred 4½. The demand subsided again but the closing was firm and at about the top.

Stock Gossip.

Logan & Bryan to Paine, Webber & Co.: Stocks closed strong and higher in all departments. Strength was well distributed, but activity seemed to be centered in Amalgamated. Sugar and stocks of that character. Many formerly inactive stocks were taken in hand and advanced sharply, notably Beet Sugar and United States Reduction, common and preferred. Gossip on the latter stock is that some deal, presumably consolidation, is on between the United States company and the American Smelters. In making Amalgamated and Sugar the leaders, good judgment is shown. Both stocks have a large speculative following. We look to see the market do better.

Walker Brothers to Paine, Webber & Co.: Market today had great deal of strength, although it was rather weak at the opening. The trading was mostly by professionals and when they found that there was good support they changed tactics and bid prices up. The strength continued until the close and the feeling was generally bullish. We look for a traders' market for the rest of the week.

Prices eased o ffa couple of points during the middle of the morning under realizing, but shorts acted rather nervous and the undertone of the market continued steady.

Copper Gossip.

Butte to Paine, Webber & Co.: At the annual meeting of the Anaconda Copper Mining company, held at Anaconda today, John D. Ryan, president of the company, submitted a report of operations for the year 1905. He says the mines were developed during the year to greater depth than has been reached heretofore in the Butte district, and increased developments assure the life of the mines and grade of ore for many years to come; that mining properties owned by the company outside of working mines have been developed during the year with satisfactory results, and that the policy of the management is to continue active development of all the company's property. Concerning the abandonment and dismantlement of the Anaconda old works and the lease of the Washoe Smelter from the Washoe company, he says that the Washoe works were leased for a long term of years on a reasonable rental basis, rental covering only interest on the cost of the plant, with usual allowance for decreases; that the Washoe works show an additional profit on every ton of ore treated for the company of $168.86 as against the cost and savings at the old works.

THE PRODUCE MARKETS.

The following prices, with the exception of those on hay, feed and meats, are the official quotations of the Duluth Produce exchange, and shippers can rely upon them as being correct. The list is corrected daily by the secretary, and it shows accurately the market condition up to 12 o'clock on the date of issue. The weekly market letter, published on Fridays, is not an official statement of the exchange, but the information is gathered personally from the different dealers.

ITS FIRST BANQUET

Longfellow Alumni Association to Feast on Friday Evening.

Good Program of Toasts —To Fix Roads in City.

The first annual banquet of the Longfellow School Alumni association will be held at the school next Friday night. President Freeman Randall of the association will act as toastmaster, and among the speakers will be Humane Agent H. C. Withrow, who is very popular with the members of the school. He will respond to a toast. The banquet itself is promised to be a good one. A dance will follow the feast. It is expected that the affair will be of considerable interest. The association was formed only recently, and was helped in the work of organization by the Irving school alumni. The toasts follow:

"The American Youth" .. ..
H. C. Withrow.
"Our Teachers" .. ..
Curtis Sliger.
"The Girls" .. ..
Robert Weddell.
"The Boys" .. ..
Miss Louise Richards.
"Our Graduating Classes" .. ..
Miss McArthur.
"Our Friends" .. ..
Miss Nellie Sullivan.
Subject yet to be selected.. .. .. ..
Miss Esther Murray.

Pleasant Masonic Party.

The dance and card party given last evening by Euclid lodge, No. 198, A. F. & A. M. in Wade's hall, was one of the most delightful social affairs so far given in West Duluth. Fiaaten's orchestra furnished the music which was excellent and up-to-date. There was a good turnout of members and their wives and best girls; and quite a number of members from the uptown lodges were in attendance. The dance lasted until midnight.

To Fix the Roads.

At the council meeting on Monday night, Alderman J. E. Foubister of West Duluth introduced a resolution appropriating $200 to be used for the purpose of fixing up the city approaches to the Hermantown and Proctor roads, provided the county board will do its part of the work. This resolution was adopted and it is now up to the county. These repairs have been much needed and the farmers on these two roads and all others who have had occasion to travel over them have been urging such a measure.

W. C. T. U. Thursday.

The West Duluth W. C. T. U. will not meet with Mrs. Merritt, as was previously announced, but will meet tomorrow afternoon with Mrs. Potter of 471 Grand avenue east, not west, as some suppose. The subject of the day will be "Women of Note and What They Are Doing." Mrs. W. F. Bailey will be the leader.

West Duluth Briefs.

TO UPSET A MERGER.

Providence, R. I., May 16.—A bill of complaint has been filed in the United States circuit court by George W. Sabre, of this city, which attacks the legality of the transfer of stock, franchises, etc., of the United Traction & Electric company to the Rhode Island Securities company. The capital stock of the Traction company is $8,000,000 and the complainant owns 490 shares. The same company owned and held the stock of the entire street railway system of this city and Pawtucket.

The Rhode Island Securities company consists of Marsden J. Perry, United States Senator Nelson W. Aldrich and others in this state, as well as New York and Philadelphia capitalists, the United Gas & Improvement company of Philadelphia, owning a majority of the stock. The entire system was in 1902 leased to the operating company for a term of ninety-nine years, and dividends of 5 per cent per annum guaranteed to the stockholders of the United Traction company.

The plaintiff complains that the lease has never been recorded, that he has been unable to ascertain the terms specified, and that the stockholders were not consulted. He asks that the court direct the present controlling interests to make a full accounting.

ALL READY IN MICHIGAN

Preparations Are Complete for Opening of Baseball Season.

Some Lightning Changes Are Being Made in Hancock Team.

Houghton, Mich., May 16.—(Special to The Herald.)—Preparations are complete for the opening of the Northern-Copper Country league baseball season in the Copper country tomorrow, when the Houghton and Hancock teams will meet at the new Ripley park and the Lake Linden and Calumet teams will open at Calumet.

Lake Linden is seriously handicapped for the opening game, Schubert, the regular shortstop, being laid up with an affection of the throat, and Burke, the regular catcher, not yet having put in his appearance. But, all things considered, the Lakes have a good outfit, and should be able to give the fast Calumet team a run in the opening series.

Wegman, the catcher, who affected a mysterious disappearance from Houghton about ten days ago, has come back to the fold again and will work alternately with Smith, the regular catcher. It has developed that the pitcher, whom Manager Cassbone sprung on the local fans as one Frank Eddy, is none other than Barry, the old Decatur Pitcher, who has quite a record in the Three I league. He will pitch the opening game against Hancock.

Manager Wreath has been signing and releasing men with lightning rapidity. Three new men, who came to Hancock last week, have already proved that they will not do. Manager Wreath has ordered Stevens, the star fielder of last year's Hancock team to report, and he will arrive tonight. He has also succeeded in signing George Paige, who is on Manager Watkin's Indianapolis list. Paige has been the terror of Copper country teams for two years, as he is a whirlwind in the box and a line batter. He came here with Joe Ganzel's Lake Linden team two years ago and he was with Calumet last year, going to Indianapolis the latter part of the season.

AN UNHEALTHY SIGN.

Los Angeles Times: Miss Olga Nethersole, at a reception given in Philadelphia in her honor, told a quaint little story about actresses.

"There was a country girl," she began, "who laid down her knitting with a sigh one night, and said:

"'Ah, mother, how I'd like to be one of those great actresses or singers on the stage.'

"'Would you?' said the mother, uneasily. 'I don't know. It's an unhealthy business, ain't it?'

"'Why? Is it?' asked the daughter.

"'It must be,' said the mother. 'Don't you always see their names in the papers, telling how they've been taking tonics and patent medicines, and so on.'"

GREAT EARTHQUAKE IN CALIFORNIA WAS CAUSE OF DECISION ON CANAL

Majority of Committee Makes Its Report to the Senate.

Says the Sea Level Would be Safer Than Locks.

Washington, May 17.—That the California earthquake was an important factor in determining the senate committee on interoceanic canals in favor of a sea level type is apparent from the fact that a feature of the majority report is a discussion of the effect such an earth wave might have on locks and dams. The majority report in favor of a sea level canal was submitted today by Senator Kittredge. It says in part:

"That the isthmus of Panama is not exempt from earthquakes conclusively appears and we can have no guaranty that the canal zone will in the future be exempt from such disaster.

"The canal structures that would be most exposed to injury by the passing of an earth wave or violent movement of the earth's surface are the locks proposed by the minority, whose walls, perhaps two or three thousand feet long at Gatun, would be more than seventy-five feet high in places and entirely unsupported on one side, save for a part of the height by water. If these walls should be pushed the natural and probable result would be leaks, preventing the closing of the gates—an injury for which extra gates would be useless, for no one could guess the extent of the movement. But the most likely effect of such a shock would be the fracture of these locks, in repairing of which much time—months or years—might be required, and thus cause interruption of traffic or the abandonment of the canal.

"The minority suggests that the dam at Gamboa would be as likely to sustain injury. This is not the fact. The Gamboa dam would be built on a solid rock foundation, reinforced with strong walls and buressed at either end with walls of rock. No record is found of any similar structure being permanently injured under similar circumstances. The side slopes of the Culebra cut would be more likely to be disturbed than are the nearly verticle slopes near the divide.

"An earth dam on an alluvial base, as proposed by the minority, might be lissured if the earthquake passed the locality, and if a crack in the dam or its base should open, the dam would go out, the lock would drain and the canal be ruined."

After reviewing the legislation and the messages of the president on the canal, the report says that the uncertainties confronting the president as to his powers should be settled once and for all, by the national legislature.

Regarding the division among experts as to the best type of canal, the report says that the conclusion has been reached that the following propositions are irrefutable; that the ideal canal is one at sea level; that its construction would be attended with no more, and probably with less hazard than one with locks and dams on doubtful foundations; that the sea level canal is safer and more convenient than one with locks; that it would take but little longer time to build; that it is the simpler and the more economical in operation and maintenance and would not require more than two or three years more in construction than the lock type.

A chapter of the report is devoted to the locks and dams as proposed by the minority report of the consulting engineers, and these are asserted to be an element of danger. The report asserts that these hazards can be avoided by the small sacrifice of time necessary to the construction of the sea level canal.

The cost of annual maintenance is estimated at $1,840,000 for the sea level, and $2,330,000 for the lock type.

Discussing the advantages of the sea level canal to the country controlling it, in time of war, the report says that one hundred warships could be passed from ocean to ocean in less than a day.

The majority argues that an enemy could destoy a lock canal much easier than a sea level canal with explosives.

The ultimate final cost of the sea level canal is estimated at $250,000,000. The minority of the board of consulting engineers estimated the cost of a lock canal at $128,795,200, and to this the majority says should be added the interest on the extra cost of maintenance and the expense of clearing title to 118,000 acres of land that would be submerged by the central lake proposed by the lock plan. These, it is estimated, would make the total cost $190,000,000.

In conclusion the majority says:

"Your committee feels entirely confident that the board of consulting engineers selected to study this problem has submitted a plan that responds in every respect to the conditions stated above and that the sea level canal can be realized in ten or eleven years at a cost not to exceed $60,000,000 above that required for the construction of the multi-lock canal proposed by the minority."

RIVER BRETHREN MAY HAVE PICTURES TAKEN.

Des Moines, May 17.—The River Brethren, in national conference here will probably abolish the rule which for years has prohibited members of the church being photographed, this being considered a sign of vanity. A committee was appointed today to report upon the elimination of the old rule.

MORMONS TO SELL

The Vast Business Interests of the Church to Syndicate.

A Commercial Revolution is in Progress in Utah.

Salt Lake, May 17.—The Mormon church is going out of business, according to a morning paper. Its principal holding in Salt Lake, the Utah Light & Railway company, is to be taken over by a $25,000,000 corporation, composed of English and American capitalists. The new company will also acquire the Ogden street railway, and build an electric line from Juab county, Utah, to Oneda county, Idaho. It will be known as the Intermountain Consolidated Railroad company, and will be incorporated both in Utah and Idaho. The board of directors will include H. H. Vreeland, New York city; Baron D'Ossel, Paris; Sir Thomas Jackson, London; William G. Rathbone, Manchester, England; Alex McKenzie, Ottawa, Can.; Henry Dupont, Paris; Beresford Hope, London, and a number of Utah men, among them Governor John C. Cutler. The enterprise will be financed through the Intermountain Trust company, incorporated in Utah and Idaho, a few days ago.

Simultaneously the announcement is made that the Salt Lake & Los Angeles railroad, another church property, has been sold to a local syndicate for $500,000. This road is thirteen miles in length, and runs from the city to the lake. President Joseph F. Smith of the Mormon church is quoted as saying that the divorce of religion from business is made on account of the fact that the Mormons, whom the church sought to protect years ago, no longer need the protection of the church in business affairs. The church entered business to assist converts and strangers belonging to the church, but as they are now on a firm footing, the church withdraws from business entirely.

If this policy is completely carried out, the sale of the traction interests will be followed by the sale of stocks in banks, sugar factories, the great department store, and many smaller enterprises. It will be nothing less than a commercial revolution, which will profoundly affect the political and social life of the state.

SECOND RUFFIAN IS ASSASSINATED

Tamboff, Russia, May 17.—Zhanoff, a police officer, who participated in the brutal maltreatment of Maria Spiridonovo, was shot and killed on the streets here today by an unknown person. The avengers of the young revolutionist recently meted out the same fate at Borissoglliebsk to Abramoff, the Cossack officer who boasted of his cruelty to her while she was in prison.

Maria Spiridonovo, the young daughter of a Russian general, shot and killed Chief of Police Luzhenoffsky of Tamboff. She was condemned to be hanged, but her sentence was commuted to twenty years' imprisonment. The girl was terribly treated in prison, immediately after committing the crime, by Abramoff and another Cossack officer.

TO REPLACE FOREIGNERS

Chinese to Fill Customs Service Entirely With Celestials.

Pekin, May 17.—The ministers of the powers are considering the question of taking joint action on the customs question. While the Chinese assurances are plausible there are strong evidences that the authorities fully intend to replace the foreigners in the service by Chinese when they are in a position to do so. In conversation between foreign ministers and the Chinese officials, the latter maintain an independent attitude, intimating that it is a question with which foreigners have no right to interfere. It is considered significant that the edict was issued without any previous consultation with Sir Robert Hart and immediately after the departure from Pekin of the ministers of three of the leading powers.

AGAIN POSTPONED.

Chicago, May 17.—The hearing of Will J. Davis, who is charged with manslaughter in connection with the fire in the Iroquois theater, was postponed today for the third time. The hearing was set for tomorrow at 2 o'clock.

MRS. JEFF DAVIS IS FAILING FAST

MRS JEFERSON DAVIS.

New York, May 17.—There was a slight improvement in the condition of Mrs. Jefferson Davis during the forenoon today. Dr. Robert H. Wylie, who is attending Mrs. Davis said today that she is now suffering from pneumonia. After a sinking spell early today, she revived and slept for several hours, but owing to her advanced age hopes of her recovery are faint. Mrs. J. Addison Hayes, her daughter, said today that her mother was more comfortable than yesterday but was not out of danger.

MISSING HEAD IS DISCOVERED

Madison, Ill., May 17.—After draining the cesspool in which the headless body of a man was found yesterday, the head was found. An inquest was held, which developed that the body had been packed in lime when placed in the cesspool. The verdict returned by the coroner's jury today was that an unknown man had come to his death from an unknown cause, and recommended a rigid investigation. A man named Joe Nellis, whose description tallies somewhat with that of the body found, has been missing, and it is believed he was murdered and his body thrown into the pool.

SUSPENSION

Memphis, May 17.—Two days have already been consumed by the convention of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, in committee of the whole considering the Chicago & Great Western suspension, but nothing of a final nature has been accomplished. The opinion is expressed by delegates that the convention will vote in favor of a continuation of the suspension. The recommendation of Grand Chief Engineer Stone, that another grand assistant chief engineer be elected will be taken up today.

STRIKERS ARE UGLY

Further Trouble is Looked for at Coeymans, N. Y.

Coeymans, N. Y., May 17.—This village slept under military guard last night for the first time in its history. The second battalion of the Tenth regiment, called out yesterday by the request of Sheriff Pitts of Albany county, is encamped on the bluffs overlooking the brick yards of Sutton & Sudderly. It was upon these yards that the striking Italian brickmakers, five hundred strong, yesterday made an armed attack, which resulted in the wounding of three men, one of whom was seriously hurt. The soldiers are guarding the houses of the employers and every approach to the scene of the trouble, and the villagers last night had the novel experience of being halted in the streets and required to account for themselves at the point of the bayonet. The night was uneventful, but trouble was looked for today, when it was the intention to serve a number of warrants upon men charged with participation in yesterday's shooting. It is evident that the troops must be here two or three days at least. The strikers are in an ugly mood, and the people of the town are fearful of acts of reprisal. After the riots yesterday two parties of Italians tried to purchase ammunition in the village, and upon being refused, threatened violence.

MISSIONARIES TELL STORIES OF THEIR WORK.

Kansas City, May 17.—Missionaries from far and near, at the last sessions here today of the missionary conference of the Methodist Episcopal church told of their work in various fields. Several of those on the program for addresses today are men and women of note in the churches' work of evangelization. They included Rev. Robert Ward of India, who told of the famine relief in the Baroda camp in that country; Mrs. F. D. Gamewell, a missionary stationed at Pekin, China; J. L. McLaughlin of Manila, and Dr. William Edgar Geil of Doylestown, Pa., author and explorer. Dr. Geil, who has in the past five years explored portions of Africa and other wild countries, traveling 125,000 miles, announced that next October he would go to China and explore the country along the great wall, taking in the great Gobi desert in Central Asia. He will also extend his travels into the Lake Baikal district, in an endeavor to settle some of the disputed facts as to the character of that part of the East.

WOMAN FOUND DROWNED.

Aitkin, Minn., May 17.—Mrs. Emma L. Clark was found dead in the cellar of her home by her daughter Nellie, who is employed in the First National bank. The body was found in about a foot of water, and it is feared she met death by her own hand. Coroner Belcheim will hold an inquest.

BARN STRUCK BY LIGHTNING

Near Aitkin and is Destroyed by Fire—A Horse Killed.

Aitkin, Minn., May 17.—(Special to The Herald.)—During a sharp thunder shower this morning the fine barn of John Lembke, a dairyman near town, was struck by lightning and entirely consumed by fire. Mr. Lembke was standing between two of his horses when the bolt struck and he and both horses were knocked down and one horse was killed. He soon recovered and succeeded in getting all of the stock out of the barn before it burned. The village fire department responded to the call, but could give no assistance.

"IDEAL OF GOD"

Philadelphia, May 17.—The church congress, composed of Episcopal clergy and laity, devoted today to the reading and discussion of papers. "Ideal of God" was the topic dwelt on in papers read by the Rev. Dr. R. A. Holland of St. Louis and the Rev. Dr. R. W. Micou of Alexandria, Va.

Addresses by Bishop Thomas F. Garlow of Memphis and the Rev. Stewart Means of New Haven, Conn., followed the reading of the papers.

SIX BURNED BY EXPLOSION.

Scranton, Pa., May 17.—An explosion of gas in the Diamond mine of the Lackawanna Coal company today burned six men, three of them probably fatally. The men were engaged in placing carriage fans in position when the gas became ignited and the explosion occurred.

SITUATION IN RUSSIA RAPIDLY GROWING MORE AND MORE COMPLICATED

The Greatest Anxiety Prevails for the Immediate Future.

Attitude of Lower House Continues to be Defiant.

St. Petersburg, May 17.—Public opinion is greatly excited as to how the emperor and the government will meet the defiant attitude of the lower house of parliament. Many Constitutional Democrats are not yet convinced that the government will seek a compromise. They see indications that the bureaucracy is preparing for a desperate fight. The Rech, their organ, still considers it possible that an attempt may be made to disperse parliament and also prints a rumor that Count Witte is trying to bring about a coup d'etat which would result in his being appointed a dictator, backed by the council of the empire. The Novoe Vremya thinks the Constitutional Democrats are going mad and are playing into the hands of the Social Democrats. "The Constitutional Democrats," the paper says, "are digging their own graves in paving the way to a dictatorship of the proletariat."

As a matter of fact the Constitutional Democrats are unable any longer to hold the extreme radicals in parliaments who are breaking away and forming about the Social Democratic workmen group and establishing a distinct party of the Extreme Left which wants not parliamentarism but a revolution. Some of the Polish delegates are flirting with this group on the basis of complete autonomy for Poland. In other words the situation in both parliament and the government is growing more complicated and more chaotic and the greatest anxiety prevails as to what the immediate future may bring forth.

The scheme most favored by the bureaucracy is to allow parliament to formulate its demands, and ventilate its grievance for two months and then dissolve parliament. Notwithstanding this reactionary talk, the far-sighted realize that such a step, in view of the great agitation in the country, would be fatal, and that the cabinet's only chance is to compromise with parliament. This certainly is the emperor's present intention. The cabinet, however, made a bad start in this direction. Had its members immediately begun participating in the debate, and manifested a disposition to meet parliament in a conciliatory spirit, they might already be on the road to a rapprochement.

As soon as the reply to the speech from the throne is adopted by the lower house of parliament, the leaders of the Constitutional Democrats will introduce a bill providing for the establishment of civil liberties, and demand its immediate consideration.

The debate on the reply to the speech from the throne was resumed when parliament met today. Some of the members are already showing signs of impatience, as a result of the endless stream of talk. Paragraphs demanding the removal of martial and other exceptional laws, and the abolition of the council of the empire, were passed without debate.

Count Heyden, a prominent member of the Right, took the first occasion today to declare that the Right did not oppose in principle the substance of the reply to the speech from the throne, although it regarded some of the paragraphs as unfortunate and unnecessarily offensive to the emperor.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY

Des Moines, May 17.—Promptly at 11 o'clock today the moderator, Dr. James D. Moffat, dropped the gavel, calling to order the one hundred and eighteenth session of the general assembly of the Presbyterian church in America. Nearly the entire body of commissioners, numbering 750, and their alternates of equal number, together with many more interested, filled the auditorium when Moderator Moffat announced the body convened.

Rev. Dr. J. D. Moffat, the retiring moderator, preached about "The Mission of the Presbyterean Church," taking as his text, "To Every Man His Work," Mark 13:35.

This being the two hundredth anniversary of the formation of the First Presbytery of the United States, Dr. Moffat defined "The Mission of the Presbyterian Church" as the work of doing its full share toward the evangelization of the world, of developing among its own members the highest type of Christian character, and of maintaining and improving its own agencies for this work, in particular its educational agencies, which, he said, have been overlooked.

He intimated that doctrinal discussions and controversies had at times withdrawn the attention of the church from its supreme duty, and, therefore, that some other churches had outgrown it in numbers.

Co-operation was dwelt upon, and the position taken that the possibility of increasing an efficiency of the churches in their common work of evangelization should determine the extent of co-operation. In all cases in which there was harmony in doctrine and polity, he said, the churches were in duty bound to unite, when convinced that union would increase their efficiency.

He argued from their popular representative government, the elaborate creed required only of the minister, and the fact that the church has always required the minister to have the best education attainable, that it had been the purpose of the church to promote an intelligent type of Christian life in its membership, and that it has ever been committed to the vital union of evangelization and education.

In advocating the fostering of Presbyterian colleges, he maintained that they were more than ever before needed, because the great universalists cannot do the kind of work that the classical colleges have always done. "What we need," he said, "is what the universalists do not furnish: colleges with prescribed courses of study, in which classical training occupies a prominent place; in which the professors teach mostly and lecture rarely; and in which the students must study and study daily and recite and submit to daily criticism."

There is a good-natured contest on for the honor of moderator, which will be determined this afternoon, at 3 o'clock. Des Moines is making a campaign in the interest of Dr. A. B. Marshall of Minneapolis, formerly of Des Moines, but none will hazard a guess as to who will be selected, as there are seven in the field. Hunter Corbett, a returned missionary from China, seems to be a favorite thus far.

TO ATTEND THE CORONATION

Of King Haakon, United States Will Send Special Minister.

Washington, May 17.—The state department is confronted with the question as to whether or not it will be obliged to name a special representative of the government and people of the United States to attend the approaching coronation of Haakon as king of Norway. In the ordinary course, the American minister to Norway would be charged under a special commission to undertake this representation, but so far there is no such official. Provision is made in the pending diplomatic and consular appropriation bill for the creation of a ministry and legation at Christiania and it has been formally announced that as soon as the office is created Mr. H. H. F. Pierce, at present third assistant secretary of state, will be nominated for the post. But the date for the ceremony is near at hand, and it is doubtful whether or not this enactment and the necessary confirmation of the nomination can be had before the middle of June which would be too late. Therefore the department has been canvassing some names and it is understood that a special appointment as minister for this occasion has been tendered to one person tentatively.

IS FOUND INSANE.

Havre, Mont., May 17.—Charles Emery, a prominent contractor of this place, who disappeared mysteriously four days ago, has been found, hopelessly insane, endeavoring to wander to his home. Family bereavement and the loss of several lawsuits are believed to be responsible for his condition.

SUPPLY OF COTTON

For Great Britain Must be Increased, Say Manufacturers.

London, May 17.—A large and important deputation interested in the cotton industry of Lancashire interviewed Premier Campbell-Bannerman at the foreign office today, relative to the necessity of opening new sources of supply. The members of the deputation emphasized the fact that the cotton trade is in a dangerous position. They pointed out that Great Britain is dependent on America for seventy-five per cent of her supply of raw material and therefore it was absolutely necessary to broaden the sources of supply. The only possible salvation, it was declared, lay in North Nigeria, but railways were indispensable.

The premier was very sympathetic, but said he could not commit the government to any promises. He was ready, however, to favorably consider any scheme for railroad construction involving reasonable governmental assistance.

CIVIL SERVICE

Commissions Throughout the Country Form an Organization.

Washington, May 17.—A permanent organization of the civil service commissions of the country was formed as a result of the meeting of representatives of state and municipal civil service commissions with that of the general government, which came to a close yesterday. Its object is the promotion of civil service reform throughout the country by supplying information to national, state and municipal civil service commissions. These officers were elected: President, Charles S. Fowler, New York city; first vice president, Dr. C. J. Mason, New York; second vice president, Henry Sherwin, and secretary-treasurer, John T. Doyle, of the United States civil service commission.

DEFENDS HIMSELF

Correspondent Answers the Charges Made by Senator Bailey.

Says Dispatch Was Sent Without the President's Knowledge.

Chicago, May 16.—The Tribune this morning publishes the following from "Raymond," its Washington correspondent, in answer to the attack made upon his veracity by Senator Bailey of Texas.

"Washington, May 16.—When the Hon. John W. Bailey, senator from Texas, struck at the president of the United States over my humble shoulders, for that is all he did on the floor of the senate today, he apparently was unaware that there was documentary evidence in existence both in the official Congressional Record and in the form of written memorandum by Former Senator William E. Chandler, absolutely proving that he was an object of suspicion to the real friends of the president's railroad policy.

"This is not to say that Mr. Bailey deserves the suspicion, but that his motives and his acts in the Democratic conferences in the Democratic caucus, on the floor of the senate and in conference between Tillman and Moody and though Mr. Chandler, with the president, gave rise to the suspicion that he was not true to the principle of railroad rate legislation is clear from the Record itself and cannot be successfully denied.

Mr. Bailey may be as innocent as a babe unborn, and he says he is, but the suspicions did exist, they have existed for weeks, they have been talked of in the cloak rooms of the senate, on the streets, at the White House and elsewhere. They have been mentioned in many newspapers, and if they have not been justified, Mr. Bailey is unfortunate and his character should be relieved from aspersions.

"First of all, let me quote William E. Chandler, formerly a senator from New Hampshire, now the president of the Spanish claim commission. He is the personal friend of Senator Tillman, he was the intermediary between Tillman and the president. Whichever of the two originated the negotiations, Chandler certainly conducted them. It was his evidence which has twice been cited by Mr. Tillman on the floor of the senate, and it is Chandler who, in effect, has given the lie direct to the president.

"In the dispatch sent by me on Monday to the Tribune, which aroused such a tempest in the senate this afternoon, and which provoked Senator Bailey to declare it to be a malicious lie and to insinuate it was directly inspired by the president himself, I stated facts on the authority of Chandler himself. It was he who conveyed to the White House the intimation that Bailey was a traitor, and if the Texas senator has anyone to blame it must be Tillman's friend, William E. Chandler.

"In the very outset of the negotiations he was conducting, Chandler prepared and left at the White House a written memorandum for the benefit of the president. I have not the text of that memorandum before me, but quoting from memory, it says:

"'The railroad senators want the Bailey amendment, but Tillman is for the president's court review amendment and will block their game.'

"This is nearly a literal quotation, but no one could have the text probably without the permission of the president.

"The dispatch I sent to the Tribune was telegraphed on my own authority and without the knowledge or consent of the president, against whom Bailey trained his batteries today, and no against me. I have not seen the president since the dispatch was written and I have not asked him for the text of this memorandum of William E. Chandler, because the text could at best add only a few words to the quotation I have given. I know that in the statement that during the course of the negotiations William E. Chandler, who since has accused the president of falsehood, made an oral report either to the president himself, or to some one representing him, which was much more specific. During this talk, Chandler in explaining the difficulties in securing united action by the Democrats, stated in so many words that he and Tillman were suspicions of Bailey, believing he was in an alliance with Aldrich and associating with the Standard Oil and railroad crowd in the senate, but that Tillman was watching his maneuvers and expected to be able to prevent any evil effects.

"These words were the suspicions to which I alluded in the previous dispatch as having constantly existed and as having influenced the administration beyond all doubt in dropping the negotiations with Tillman, through Chandler and renewing the efforts to unite the Republicans on a reasonable basis of compromise."

New York, May 17.—The Washington correspondent of the New York Tribune, commenting on the senate incident, gives the memorandum mentioned by the correspondent of the Chicago Tribune. The text follows:

"To the President: The game of the railroad senators is to support Bailey's amendment and induce him to agree to a broad right of review. What that is to be is not certain, but the principal object is 'to beat him,' meaning the president. Mr. Tillman, however, considered himself as acting with the president to pass the review clause, with the minimum amount of court power, and will not enter into any such game.

The Tribune's correspondent continues:

"Mr. Bailey drew from the fact that the Chicago Tribune and the New York Tribune had published these rumors the wholly erroneous conclusion that they emanated from the White House. The fact is, the writer of the morning's dispatch had not seen or communicated with the president, or with anyone connected with the White House for more than a week.

"The report, of course, was in circulation on the Democratic side of the senate yesterday, precisely as was stated by the Tribune's correspondent, and it is surprising, to put it mildly, that Mr. Bailey did not hear it. It is noteworthy, however, that Mr. Bailey did not deny any part of the Tribune's dispatch, but contented himself with hurling the fearful epithet, 'cuckoo,' at the Tribune's correspondent.

"It is a further fact that a copy of the memorandum alleged to have been signed by Mr. Chandler, which is printed above, has been circulated among Democrats in the senate, and it was on this copy that the Tribune correspondent's assertions were based.

"The attempt on the part of Mr. Bailey, in his fulminations of yesterday, to convey the impression that the president, or some one close to him, was responsible for the rumors which reflect on the senator's good faith, or Mr. Chandler's veracity, is generally accepted in the senate as merely an ebullition of that bad temper, which is the most unfortunate characteristic of the senator from Texas, and an evidence of his chagrin over the fact he failed utterly to obtain for himself any credit for rate legislation. It is probable, therefore, that Republican senators will completely ignore it."

PRIMARY ELECTION LAW

Passed by the Illinois Legislature by a Bare Majority.

Springfield, Ill., May 17.—After a sensational speech by Lieutenant Governor Sherman, the special session of the Illinois legislature, which was called by Governor Deneen to enact a new primary election law, resulted yesterday in the adoption of a bill framed by Speaker Joe D. Shurtleff. The measure had a close call, receiving only a bare majority in the house. It is understood that Governor Deneen will sign the bill, making it a law July 1. The passage of the bill is considered a victory for Governor Deneen, as an effort was made to bring about a final adjournment without the enactment of any sort of a primary law. Lieutenant Governor Sherman's speech was made after he had announced the vote in the senate. He denounced the bill as a humiliating failure, saying:

"There is not one line in it you may point to and say that it gives the people a right to say whom they shall nominate. It puts a premium on gerrymandering and future deadlocks in convention. It portrays great and painful motion, without one inch of progress. It seems to me that it was conceived in a refrigerator and born in a frost."

MISS MARLOWE LEAVES.

New York, May 17.—Miss Julia Marlowe, who was on a tour with E. H. Sothern in Shakespearean repertoire, has unexpectedly returned to her home on Riverside Drive.

None of the managers of Charles Frohman's interests would discuss her sudden move. They professed not to know that she had suddenly broke off from the company in Ottawa, Can., and taken a late train for New York.

"She is merely too nervous to continue on the road," said the physician, "and has come here to rest."

Miss Marlowe has signed, together with Mr. Sothern, to play next season with the Shuberts. Mr. Shubert did not know that she had returned.

A. MURPHY IS ELECTED

Printers Will Send Him to the International Meeting.

Session Will be at Colorado Springs—Is Local Secretary.

Typographical union, No. 136 of Duluth, held its annual election yesterday to choose a delegate from this local to the annual convention of the International Typographical union, and also to express its wish as to who shall be officers of the international union for the ensuing years.

The International Typographical union chooses all of its officers by a referendum vote, the convention having nothing to do with this except to review the vote of the different unions. President James Lynch of Syracuse, N. Y., was unopposed for re election, and will be re-elected as will be John W. Hays of Minneapolis for vice president, and J. W. Branwood of Denver, Colo., for secretary-treasurer.

The most important to the local union of Duluth, however, was the election of delegate to the I. T. U. convention which, this year will be held at Colorado Springs, Colo. Augustine Murphy, secretary of the local union, and one of The Herald linotype force, was elected over G. A. Bergstrom, foreman of the News Tribune composing room, by a vote of 77 to 30. The election was brisk and friendly. It was held from 4 o'clock yesterday afternoon to 7 o'clock last evening, at which time the vote was counted.

The convention will be held in August and the delegate from the union will have an interesting trip in many ways. Colorado Springs is the location of the hospital and home for members of the International union, which is always an object of solicitude for the unions and this institution will be an object of much interest naturally.

Mr. Murphy is well known in Duluth generally and is very popular. Mr. Bergstrom is also popular with the craft as was shown by the vote which he received.

DOING NO WORK ON NEW STATION

Lighthouse Department Has Not Started Its Supply Depot.

No steps have been taken thus far this season by the lighthouse department on the Great Lakes to make the improvements planned for the government reservation on the lower end of Minnesota Point, and there is some speculation as to whether the department intends to go ahead with the work this year.

The improvements contemplated an oil house and one or two other buildings used in connection with lighthouse supply stations, and a dock on the bayside for the convenience of the lighthouse tender Lake Superior, which it was expected would be stationed at this point. About a year ago the department is said to have taken bids for the construction work, but these were regarded as too high, and they were all rejected, with the understanding that the department would go ahead and do its own work, employing the labor necessary by the day. The site for the buildings was surveyed but since that time the several storms that have raged at this end of the lake have materially changed the topography of the lower end of the Point, where not protected by trees, and the surveying, it is claimed, will have to be done a second time.

The engineering department, which is in charge of the canal and pier improvements at Superior entry, a branch of the service entirely separate from that of the lighthouse department, is pushing the improvement work at the entry with all speed as the weather will permit. For the last week there has been little opportunity for the piledriver to work outside the bay with any degree of safety, and the protection dike necessary before the pier work can go on in the lake is being delayed.

TURRISH WINS.

Washington State Court Gives Favorable Decision in Land Deal.

Henry Turrish of Duluth has received a telegram telling him that the Western Timber company, of which he is a member, has won a victory in a suit involving 2,000 acres of timber land in the state of Washington, over the Kalama River Lumber company of Oregon. The suit was tried in the district court of Astoria, Wash., and the Western Timber company lost on a technicality. The suit was appealed to the supreme court of the state and that tribunal has now reversed the lower court.

Some time ago Mr. Turrish, representing the Western Timber company, negotiated for the purchase of this land with Hesdan Tripp, representing the Kalama River Lumber company. It was agreed that the Western Timber company should purchase the land for $50,000, half cash and the balance in notes. This sale was confirmed by the Kalama company according to certificates of the records of the meeting of the latter company delivered to Mr. Turrish.

However, after that, Mr. Turrish found he could not close the sale for the reason that the Kalama company would hold no meeting to take over any cash. In reply to Mr. Turrish's queries on the matter, he was informed that as no cash had been passed, the sale was off. Mr. Turrish then filed suit, with the result stated. It transpired afterward that the reason the Kalama River Lumber company did not wish to consummate the sale was because it had been offered $20,000 more for the land than Mr. Turrish and his company had agreed to pay. The land is a very valuable tract and it is considered that the Western Timber company has made an advantageous deal.

SAME AS OTHER CREDITORS.

An order was issued yesterday by Judge Morris in bankruptcy court directing the United States marshal to deliver over to Receiver Fred Reynolds the tug Edna, belonging to T. R. Hancock of the Marline meat market.

A few days ago the Marine meat market was made an involuntary petitioner for bankruptcy by certain creditors and Fred Reynolds was appointed receiver.

A few days after that John Place, a machinist, libelled the tug Edna, which was used for delivering meat to boats for the market. Place alleged that Hancock owed him some $300 for fixing up the tug in January and February and that he was unable to get the money for the work, so he exercised his rights in such matters and libelled the craft.

The order issued by Judge Morris is practically a dismissal of the action in admiralty court and places the tug among the other assets of the insolvent firm. Place will have to take his chances along with other creditors of the Marine meat market.

Municipal Court Jurors.

Cass Lake, Minn., May 17.—At a largely attended meeting of the Commercial club here the offer of Gifford Pinchot, chief of the forestry bureau, to release and open up 38,000 acres of land in the vicinity of Cass Lake, at present included within the national forest reserve, was unanimously rejected. Not a single member of the organization urged the acceptance of the offer.

The Commercial club also voted unanimously to notify its Washington representatives of its action in the matter and that rather than accept so small an area the citizens of Cass Lake prefer to continue the fight against the forest reserve with a view to opening up the whole of the forest reserve.

MUCH PINE DESTROYED.

Between Five and Six Million Feet Burned at Cass Lake.

Brainerd, Minn., May 17.—Word has reached here of one of the most disastrous fires of its class ever recorded in Northern Minnesota. At Cross lake, between five and six million feet of logs, nearly all white pine of high grade, were destroyed Saturday night and Sunday. The loss is estimated at from $100,000 to $120,000. The logs were owned by the Northland Pine company.

A hundred men fought the flames for nearly twenty-four hours, conquering it at about 5 p. m. Sunday afternoon. The logs were in the roll-way on the lake, and it is supposed the fire started in the dry moss and bark at the bottom of the rollway. The extreme heat of the past few weeks has brought large quantities of pitch to the ends of the logs, and for this reason the fire burned with added fury.

The fire is thought to have originated from sparks from the unloader, a large hauler used in the woods in winter and remodeled to run on steel rails during the summer.

CAT, DOG AND HORSE MAD, GIRL IN PERIL.

West Nyack, N. Y., May 17.—A mad dog's bite has caused the destruction of a building in this village. The tale is progressive, like the "house that Jack built," but here the house or stable is being torn down, not built.

Miss Carrie Powell's fox terrier, Jack, bit her and her pet cat. The cat or the dog bit her horse, Dewey. The dog and cat were shot immediately. Miss Powell went to the Pasteur institute in New York and has just been discharged beyond danger of hydrophobia. Dewey developed the disease and was shot. Now, lest the infection spread to her other horses, Miss Powell's granddaughter, Mrs. S. M. Vanderbilt, is having the stable pulled down.

LOST PEARL FOUND IN BUTCHERSHOP CHICKEN.

Jersey City, N. J., May 17.—Much stranger than fiction is the story of a pearl that was found and lost and found again by John Williams of this city.

Williams is an oyster dealer. In an oyster he found a large, oval-shaped peal with a peculiar little red spot in one end. Its value was estimated to be about $200. A week later he went to visit his father at the old home in Weston. He lost the pearl in the yard.

Last night Williams entered the butcher shop of Henry Liefer. He ordered two chickens and as the butcher dressed them a large pearl fell out on the block. Williams at a glance recognized the jewel he had lost in Maryland. Liefer scouted the idea and refused to give it up. When the crate in which the chickens had been shipped was brought up it bore the name and address of Williams' father in Weston, Md.

Liefer claims that as Williams had not yet paid for the chickens, the pearl is his property. Williams declares that he will go to law with the question unless the butcher restores the pearl to him.

THE OLD FOLKS AT HOME

Are Never Without Pe-ru-na in the Home for Catarrhal Diseases.

MR. S. D. FOSS, 116 S. 6th street, Minneapolis, Minn., writes:

"I wish to congratulate you on your medicine, Peruna. I have been a sufferer with catarrh of the stomach for over two years, but since I have commenced to take your remedy I have been steadily improving until now I can safely say I feel no more of my old trouble, and as a matter of course, I will always have a good word for Peruna.

A GOOD WORD FOR PE-RU-NA.

"I recommend it to all my friends."

Mrs. Magdalena Winkler, Route 4, Westminster, Md., writes:

"I thank you very much for your advice. I can safely say that Peruna and Manalin have saved my life.

"When I wrote to you the first time, asking your advice, my condition was so poor that I did not expect to live through the winter, but now I am perfectly healthy. I cannot praise your medicine enough and I recommend it to others."

PRAISE FOR PE-RU-NA.

"I find that in my case Peruna is a flesh builder. I am now at work every day, and have gained ten pounds. I took your Peruna according to directions, and the result was more than I expected.

GAINED 10 LBS. IN WEIGHT.

"I can now breathe with ease, and also my cough is stopped. I had it for six months before I took down with the grip.

"I took no other medicine but Peruna and it accomplished all. You told me in your first letter that Peruna would cure me and it has.

"I am seventy-three years old and can attend to my work and business as usual."

Mrs. Theone Mikkelson, Brigham City, Utah, writes:

"I wish to thank you for all the good Peruna has done me. I am entirely free from the cough which used to bother me so much every winter.

"My kidneys are also in good condition, and I feel stronger and better all over. For all these I give the credit to your excellent medicine, Peruna. I am pleased to recommend it to everybody."

GIVES PE-RU-NA CREDIT.

Revised Formula.

"For a number of years requests have come to me from a multitude of grateful friends, urging that Peruna be given a slight laxative quality. I have been experimenting with a laxative addition for quite a length of time, and now feel gratified to announce to the friends of Peruna that I have incorporated such a quality in the medicine which, in my opinion, can only enhance its well-known beneficial character.

"On receipt of the returns from Sioux Falls, Senator Kittredge's home, and Minnehaha county, showing that the county had gone overwhelmingly insurgent and would send eighty-six delegates to the state convention, the anti-machine leaders claim absolutely that they have won the fight in the state.

"The anti-machine leaders say that the claim of the machine that it has 719 votes is a 'bluff' and that it is putting up straw contests and making preparations to control the temporary organization by this same means and will then unseat enough anti-machine delegates to force the nomination of its candidates. The anti-machine leaders are exposing this scheme. They say an attempt to steal the convention through bogus delegates cannot succeed."

SIX DARING CRACKSMEN BREAK FROM IOWA JAIL.

Marshalltown, Iowa, May 17.—A daring jail delivery took place here some time between midnight and early yesterday.

The six safecrackers who were captured after blowing up the safe of the Marshall Vinegar works, and one of whom was shot, succeded in digging their way out of the county jail. They are the same men for whose capture the citizens presented Officer Hans with a handsome present. They were also wanted at Austin and Albert Lea, Minn.

TIED TO TREE IN CEMETERY

Boy's Rivals Take Drastic Measures, But Are Arrested.

Sioux City, Iowa, May 17.—Bound to a tree in a cemetery at dead of night by three jealous rivals for the affections of a girl of 15, Ballard Carey of Shenandoah, Iowa, aged 11 years, is in serious condition, caused by the resultant nervous shock. His tormentors were arrested and two are in jail.

Young Carey, after taking a popular young girl home from church, was waylaid by Edward Stags, Hans Nelson and Albert Nelson, who informed him of an awful fate in store for him. They exhibited a rope and intimated hanging was about what he deserved. They finally declared that he would first be tormented by the ghosts which stalked through the cemetery at night. He was then bound to a tree in the graveyard and deserted. He was held a terror-stricken prisoner for three hours, when he managed to wriggle out of the ropes. When he reached home he was too much overcome to give a coherent account of his experience, but finally told what had happened.

The boys were arrested. Hans Nelson was given thirty days in jail. Stagg's twenty days, and Albert Nelson was let off with a severe lecture because of his extreme youth.

DOUBLE DEALING

Never Charged to Him, Says Senator Bailey of Texas.

Would Brand Man a "Liar" Who Ever Did So.

Washington, May 17.—Senator Bailey in the senate today revived the scene of yesterday, by having read a letter he had written to ex-Senator Chandler, asking him for anything that he had written the president concerning himself and replies from Chandler, including a copy of Chandler's diary, giving a history of his movements on the day when a certain memorandum was sent to the president.

He referred to the report that the memorandum was circulated among Democratic senators. This he denied, but he charged that the president showed the memorandum to a Republican senator and to a Republican member of the house. He said that the Chandler memorandum impugned no bad faith to him, nor even to the other senator. Senator Bailey declared that the president did not doubt his (Bailey's) good faith, because three days after the memorandum the president, through Chandler, asked him to confer with the attorney general on the subject. Mr. Bailey took up the reply of the Chicago Tribune correspondent to his denunciation yesterday and said that it did not meet the situation. He quoted from it and intimated that the assertions the correspondent made were based on information obtained from the president or some one near him.

Mr. Bailey said that he had been charged with being impetuous, rash and dictatorial, but no one had or could charge him with double dealing. When such a charge was made he would brand across the forehead of the man making the charge, the word "Liar," in order "that he might be known and shunned of all men."

When the senate met today it promptly entered upon the consideration of the rate bill, as reported by the committee of the whole.

Beginning with the first amendment, Senator Beveridge moved to strike out the words "excepting gas lines, natural and artificial," from the operation of the provision making pipe lines common carriers. The suggestion was sharply antagonized by Senator Foraker, who charged that the change is desired to "meet the whims of somebody who wants to influence legislation."

Senator Lodge said, in reply: "My object is to bring the pipe lines of the Standard Oil company under the jurisdiction of the interstate commerce commission. I don't see why that corporation is exempted from the operations of the law; there is no reason why it should escape. As matters now stand it holds the entire oil industry by the throat, and I think it should be regulated. If nothing is wrong the company will not suffer."

Senator Beveridge contended that the provision should apply to gas as well as to oil. Senators Scott, Gallinger and Nelson opposed the change. After further debate, Mr. Beveridge withdrew his amendment, in order to permit Senator Tallaferro to present a provision, excluding only natural gas for municipal purposes.

Mr. Tallaferro declared that the senate had twice taken a position against Mr. Foraker's "pet line," and yet, he added, as the bill now stands it appears to have been inserted.

"There is no excuse whatever for that remark," said Mr. Foraker in response, and he then outlined the course of the legislation by which the amendment was adopted, in defence of his contention. "The change was not due to me," he said, "I do not do anything in a surreptitious manner."

Mr. Tallaferro's motion was rejected and the amendment left as it stood before the controversy began.

The provision including express companies and sleeping car companies as common carriers was also left undisturbed.

IN THE HOUSE.

Washington, May 17.—In the house today the amendments to the naval appropriation bill having been disposed of, the bill was passed.

WILL DRILL AND DANCE

Companies A and C to Appear in New Uniforms.

Battallion Drill Wednesday Night to be Brilliant Affair.

Wednesday evening, the members of the local companies of the national guard will make their first real appearance in their handsome new dress uniforms. The occasion will be a battalion drill and Maj. Rosche will put his soldiers through their paces.

The drill will assume larger proportions than usual, in view of the new uniforms, and the gallery will probably be crowded with friends of the soldiers. The uniforms are similar to those adopted for the regular army. The trousers are of the regulation light blue and the coats of dark blue, with light blue trimmings. The caps are the latest shape approved by the War department and are decorated with light blue bands.

Incidentally the regimental band will probably be on hand in uniform and dispense martial music while the two companies drill. Following the example of the Naval Reserves, the drill may terminate with a dance, in which event the friends of the guardsmen will be invited to come down from their perches in the lofts.

The recently elected officers of Company C have returned from St. Paul, where they took examinations in military tactics. This is largely a matter of form but at the same time the promoted ones had been studying their regulation books with ardor during the few weeks prior to the "exam." They knew it was to be held and prepared for it. The results of the examination have not been made public as yet.

It was the desire of the adjutant general to have the officers regularly listed as such before the regiment goes into camp at Lake City, which will be in July this year.

Sjoselius Loses His Suit.

Mrs. Maria Louisa LaPanta, who owns a lot at First street and Eleventh avenue west, on which Adolph Sjosellius built a portion of his store in 1891, has been awarded a verdict in the adverse possession case that she instituted, and which has been under trial for several days. Sjosellius claimed that when his store was built, overlapping the La Panta lot by about ten feet, he occupied, and has continued to occupy the land, with the intention of claiming it, and with the full knowledge of the owner. He claimed title to the 10-foot strip by reason of long possession.

MORE FROM GARFIELD

Full Report of His Investigation is Sent to Congress.

Washington, May 17. — President Roosevelt today transmitted to congress the complete report of James R. Garfield, commissioner of corporations, of the investigation which he made into the operations of the alleged oil trust. A full synopsis of the report, accompanied by a message from the president dealing with facts developed by the inquiry was sent to congress on Friday, the 4th instant.

The publication of the message and the synopsis of the report attracted widespread attention. Comments on the message and the report were made by officials of the Standard Oil company and by officials of several systems of railroads. In submitting to the president the report of his inquiry, Commissioner Garfield wrote a letter to him inviting his attention to some of the published comments on the oil report attributed to certain railway officials and representatives of the oil trust. That letter was made public today, by direction of the president, although it was not sent to congress with Mr. Garfield's report. It is peculiarly interesting, because it contains Commissioner Garfield's answer by directing attention to certain parts of his complete report to the comments which have been made.

An epitome of Commissioner Garfield's letter is as follows:

Mr. Tuttle, president of the Boston & Maine, is reported to have said: "The Boston & Maine railroad for years, except in certain sparsely settled sections of the country, has joined with roads of which oil traffic originates in through rates, and every shipper and receiver of oil has been treated alike."

As shown in Chapter III of the report, the Boston & Maine states, in a letter to the bureau, that road does not prorate on a portion of its system, giving a list of 394 stations affected. Some of the cities to which that road does not prorate are Lowell, Lynn, Lawrence and Haverhill, Mass., Portland, Me., and Portsmouth, N. H. These cannot properly be termed "the sparsely settled sections."

Mr. Thayer, vice president of the Pennsylvania road, is reported to have said regarding the special rate from Olean to Rochester, that the traffic to be transported under such rate was "crude oil and unfinished products moving from one refinery to another, belonging to the same owners, and the rate has not been withdrawn," that perhaps the rate was applied on refined oil in a few instances, insignificant as compared with the total traffic and that the wording of the tariff was corrected; that it is no secret rate and never has been secret.

The rate of 9 cents a barrel was issued some years ago, was reissued and approved by J. B. Thayer, Jr., on March 10, 1902, and applied to "petroleum products." This tariff did not confine the shipments to crude oil or unfinished products. More than 1,000 cars of illuminating oil, gasoline, and other finished oil products were shipped in 1904 on this rate from Olean to Rochester or on the corresponding rate of 10 cents per barrel to Buffalo. A large portion of the states of New York and Vermont were supplied in this way. This rate was unknown to independent shippers and there were printed at the top of the rate order in capital letters and underscored words: "Not to be posted."

Mr. Garfield says that in view of Mr. Thayer's statement that blind billing is not a secret device, the statement of Mr. Everest, first vice president of the Vacuum Oil company, a corporation subsidiary to the Standard Oil company, which operates refineries at Olean and Rochester, N. Y., is interesting. Mr. Everest says that if "the railroad company sees fit to grant a company special rates on the goods handled over its lines, I know of no reason why they should not be accepted," although he recognizes that rebates between states are now illegal.

Continuing, Mr. Garfield says:

George Crosby, freight traffic manager of the Chicago-Burlington & Quincy railroad is quoted as saying of the East St. Louis rate:

"The rate which the commissioner complains of is a state rate, and does not have to be filed with the interstate commission. They were, and are today, open rates, and all shippers of oil are conversant with them. This company has never paid a rebate to the Standard Oil company so far as I know."

As shown in Chapter VII of the report the records of the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy show that the 6-cent rate was applied on hundreds of cars which moved from Whiting, Ind., to East St. Louis, and St. Louis, as shown directly on the waybills. The rate did not appear in the regular tariffs of the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy, but in what were known as billing orders. After the rate had been raised to 10 cents, and had been filed with the interstate commerce commission, and an independent shipper at Chicago telephoned the office of the Burlington for the rate from Chicago to St. Louis, and was quoted the regular 18-cent rate.

A similar quotation was given by the Alton at the same time. No independent shipper interviewed by the bureau of corporations was ever aware of this rate, except one who had formerly been in the employ of the Standard Oil company and who used the knowledge he obtained there to force the railroads to make him a correspondingly low rate, which was also secret, from Kankakee, Ill., to St. Louis; and the refinery of that one shipper was soon thereafter purchased as he believed by Standard Oil interests and immediately dismantled.

The report of Mr. Garfield is a comprehensive one, and covers 500 printed pages. In support of the various allegations made by him, he prints bodily in the report copies of waybills, letters of railroad officials bearing on transactions with agents of the Standard Oil company and independent oil companies, special oil tariffs of various railroads, bills of lading, blind bills of lading and secret understandings and agreements of the several railroad companies named with the Standard Oil company. In many instances, according to the copies of the waybills, the rate paid by the Standard Oil company was only 33 1-3 per cent of the amount stated in the bill. The testimony of employes of railways is given in confirmation of the bureau charges that there was a concealment of rates granted to the Standard Oil company.

INTRICACIES OF INSURANCE

In Regard to Dividends Explained by Northwestern's Actuary.

Milwaukee, May 17.—Actuary C. A. Loveland of the Northwestern Mutual Life Insurance company today continued his testimony of yesterday before the Wisconsin legislative committee. Asked if the general counsel of the company had ever rendered an opinion that the company had a right to improve its deferred dividend fund at a less rate than the interest rate which the company earns on its assets, Mr. Loveland said he did not know if the late Judge Dyer who was general counsel of the company, ever rendered such an opinion on the subject but that the executive committee had considered the matter. Mr. Loveland stated that there was no way a policyholder who was not an actuary could find from the books of the company that there was a discrimination between the dividend paid on annual dividend policies and the deferred dividend policies in favor of the former. There was no such discrimination, Mr. Loveland stated.

Correspondence was read into the record between M. C. Phillips, an Oshkosh attorney, whose deferred dividend policies did not mature up to the estimates given by the agent many years ago, in which Mr. Phillips used some harsh terms against the company because of the failure of the company to mature according to the general agent's estimates.

One of the reasons given by the company for the lessening of the credits on the deferred dividend policies which occurred some years ago, is the fact that in early years too high credits were given to the tontine fund for its improvement and that to remedy this the company had to lessen the improved interest rate on such fund in later years.

Assistant Actuary Crawford fully explained the methods of the company in improving its tontine fund.

FLAATEN TO CANADA.

Services of Third Regiment Band Urgently Wanted in Winnipeg.

The fame of Flaaten's Third Regiment band is spreading even into Canada. Director Flaaten is now considering an offer to play at the Western Canada Great Industrial exposition, to be held at Winnipeg in July, the biggest event of its kind in the Dominion. It is something on the order of the Minnesota state fair.

Another offer from Canada is to play for two weeks at the "Happyland Park," at Winnipeg, a "White City" amusement place. Both of these engagements will probably be accepted, and the band will return from the Canadian metropolis in time to be on hand for the opening of Oatka Park in Duluth. Flaaten's band will furnish music at the latter park during the summer.

DAY SETTLED HIS OWN CASE

The unexpected happened for Mart Monaghan, attorney for Edwin M. Day, in his personal injury case against the Oliver Mining company, when the case was resumed for trial this morning, and Mr. Baldwin, counsel for the mining company, notified the court that a dismissal had been filed with the clerk by Mr. Day, and asking for an order of dismissal of the suit.

Mr. Monaghan protested against the dismissal, on the ground that he knew nothing about any such action on the part of his client, and the court directed the clerk of court to produce the files with the stipulation of dismissal.

The action was one in which Mr. Day sued for $20,000 for the loss of his leg, due to an accident while coupling cars in an ore train, last October. He claimed the company's employes were negligent. The testimony given by the witnesses, who were supposed to be favorable to Mr. Day, is said to have been somewhat different than he had been led to expect, and last evening he expected a settlement with the claim agent for the Oliver Mining company, and stipulated for a dismissal of the action, without notifying his attorney.

SULPHUR AND OIL.

S. A. Thompson Associates Himself With a Southern Company.

S. A. Thompson, who has been with Little & Nolte for a number of months, will leave next week for Louisiana, having associated himself with an oil and sulphur mining company there. The company has about 1,500 acres, part of which is in the midst of the Jennings field which has many fine oil wells. One well has been gushing steadily for four years. The oil is sold for fuel and there is a steadily growing consumption of it for that purpose.

The company also has a sulphur property near St. Charles and very close to the Union Sulphur company's property. Sulphur so pure as to require no refining is taken out of the latter. So strong are the fumes that men cannot work in the mine and it is taken out by means of pipes sunk down into the sulphur, hot water and supre-heated steam being carried down to the sulphur and reducing it to a molten state. It is then brought to the surface and allowed to cool and harden. It costs about $1.50 a ton to produce and is worth $22 when loaded on cars. About 35 cars a day are being shipped from the property. The company with which Mr. Thompson is associated has found a body of sulphur fourteen feet thick on its property but the extent of it has not yet been determined.

Mr. Thompson regrets to again leave Duluth but feels that this opening is one of such promise that he cannot afford to decline it.

CUMBERLAND PRESBYTERIANS

Decatur, Ill., May 17.—The seventy-sixth annual meeting of the Cumberland Presbyterian general assembly was called to order here today by the state's clerk, Rev. J. M. Hubbert of Marshall, Mo., who presided because of the absence of the moderator. Dr. Hubbert is himself an ex-moderator.

The anti-unionists called a secretary meeting yesterday. It is learned that they discussed a proposition to withdraw their injunction suit, but several opposed such a movement. It was unanimously decided that they owed it to their constituents to press the suit. Judge Russell was selected to nominate an anti-union candidate for moderator, but the name of the candidate was not divulged. The anti-unionists admit that they have no hope of electing a moderator, but as a prominent leader said: "We are banking everything on the injunction suit. We will appeal it to a higher court if Judge Johnson is adverse."

FUNERAL OF CARL SCHURZ

New York, May 17.—The funeral of Carl Schurz took place today. Private services at his late home were conducted by the Rev. Dr. H. B. Metz, Germany, May 17.—It is recalled in connection with the telegram of condolence which Emperor William sent to the family of the late Carl Schurz that the emperor had long regarded Mr. Schurz with respect and was aware that his grandfather desired him to return to Germany and enter the public service. Prince Bismarck invited Mr. Schurz to do so and the latter in reply said in substance:

"I am afraid I shall always be a non-conformist and could never adapt myself to the Prussian system. No, it is better for me to stay where I am."

DOCTORS TESTIFY.

Expert medical testimony was taken this afternoon in the personal injury case of Wilfred Berneche against John W. Hilliard, the contractor. Berneche has sued for $10,000 damages, claiming injuries that will permanently cripple him and prevent his doing any work, received in being knocked from a foundation wall against some timber. The medical testimony is being taken to determine the extent of the injuries alleged.

Mr. Berneche claims that while he was adjusting a hose to a steam pipe, a stone that was being elevated by derrick and tackle by workmen employed by the contractor struck him and knocked him from the wall. Mr. Hilliard disclaims all responsibility for the accident, and alleges that Berneche did not observe ordinary precaution against danger.

There was no trial today in Judge Cant's room, none of the other jury cases being ready. The jurors have been excused until tomorrow morning.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from ten drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials.

HORSEMANSHIP.

Perhaps the most wonderful long distance riding feat ever performed, was that of a well known American rough rider, Maj. Barbour, who some years ago undertook to ride from New York to Paris, via Vancouver, Alaska and Siberia, a total distance of 16,000 miles, which he covered in 1,000 days on a single horse, says London Tit-Bits.

For combined speed and endurance, however, it is probable that two riding feats of some centuries ago have never been eclipsed. When Queen Elizabeth died Robert Cary set forth on the long journey to Edinburgh to carry the news to her successor on the throne, James VI. of Scotland. Riding out of Whitehall between 9 and 10 o'clock on Thursday morning, he reached Doncaster, 155 miles away, the same night. On the following day he traveled as far as his own house, at Witherington, where he spent some time in transacting business, and, starting early the next morning, he could have reached Edinburgh by midnight had not an accident by the way delayed him. As it was, he completed the whole journey of 400 miles within three days.

To find anything like a match for these feats we must come down to the last century, when South Africa was the scene of two astonishing performances. In one Sir Harry Smith, just after the outbreak of the Kaffir war, seventy years ago, carried the news from Cape Town to Grahamstown in six days, riding a distance of 600 miles over a wild and almost trackless country. And, again, Richard King is credited with a notable feat of endurance in riding 600 miles, from Durban to Grahamstown, in ten days, through a country infested with enemies, over a multitude of swollen and bridgeless rivers, every one of which his horse had to swim.

In recent years the most famous of long distance riders was that inaugurated by the German emperor thirteen years ago, when 200 officers essayed to ride from Berlin to Vienna, a distance of 600 kilometers. The winner was Count Starhemberg, who completed the long distance in seventy-one hours and twenty minutes, thus securing a silver bust of the kaiser, in addition to a money prize of £1,000. His unfortunate horse did not survive the contest. A little later Capt. Spillberg covered the 810 miles between Saarbrucken, on the frontier of Lorraine, and Rome in thirteen days, crossing the St. Gothard Pass and spending twenty hours each day on horseback.

A few years since five lieutenants of the Twelfth Hussar regiment of France accomplished a wonderful feat Leaving Gray, at 3 o'clock in the morning, they rode seventy-two miles to Belfort, arriving at 4 in the afternoon. They then dismounted, put on civilian clothes, and walked to a town twenty-four miles away, here they dined, then walked back to Belfort, saddled their horses, and completed the journey to Gray, which they reached the following afternoon at 3 o'clock, having covered 192 miles in thirty-six hours on horseback and on foot.

A very memorable performance was that of Mr. Cowper Thornhill, host of the Bell Inn, at Stilton, in Huntingdonshire, who made three journeys between his house at Stilton and Shoreditch Church—a total distance of 213 miles—in twelve hours and seventeen minutes, thus winning a wager of 500 guineas; as was also that ride of Bernard Calvert of Andover, who, leaving Shoreditch at 3 o'clock in the morning, rode to Dover, crossed to Calais and back, and, remounting his horse, arrived at Shoreditch at 8 o'clock the same evening, after covering 142 miles on horseback alone.

VOICE OF A WOMAN.

The clear tones of a feminine voice startled the guests of the Lankershim hotel as they sat around in the lobby after the dinner hour the other night.

The guests looked about, trying to find the woman who was entertaining them, and were surprised to find a young man seated at the piano in the orchestra loft playing his own accompaniments and singing without the slightest effort in clear soprano tones.

The young man is William Davidson of 121 Wood street, Bristol, R. I. He is visiting in Los Angeles and is a guest at the Lankershim hotel. His profession is not that of a vocalist, but a private secretary to a well-known capitalist, whose name he refuses to divulge in fear that he will be discharged.

Mr. Davidson's voice when speaking suggests that if he were to sing it would be in a pronounced barytone. When he sings his voice is not a falsetto, but a clear crystal soprano. He says that it is no particular intention of his to sing soprano, but it comes natural for him to do so.

When the audience in the Lankershim lobby had recovered from its surprise, Davidson was enthusiastically encored. The song he was singing was Roger's "At Parting."

As it was useless to refuse to sing further, Mr. Davidson went through Nevin's "Rosary," Lyon's "Sweetheart" and Mallard's "Ave Verum," the latter one of the old religious chants that have formed a part of the musical service of many denominations for ages.

In the same sweet, clear soprano tones Mr. Davidson sang them all. There was absolutely no effort apparent in his voice. He took the high notes as easily as the low ones. One of the guests, who is prominently connected with local circles, expressed it thus:

"His singing was the most superb that I have heard for a long time. That man does not belong in the ordinary role of life, but upon the vaudeville stage as one with a wonderful woman's voice. He took his high notes with no more effort than it required when he turned the pages of his music. When he had placed his tones, he seemed to handle them as a magician when he deftly flips the cards from the deck out into the audience."

Mr. Davidson, when pressed for further history regarding himself, admitted that he had studied under a Miss Clark of Cambridge, Mass., and under a well-known French tutor named Marceau. At one time he sang for a week in Keith's in New York city, but this was contrary to the wishes of his parents, and to keep his secret he was forced to give up professional singing.

He declares that he would not undertake singing in public owing to the objection of his parents. He admits in a pleasing and modest manner that his voice is not unworthy of praise, and that he knows he could make a neat sum of money should he desire. Several friends have tried to induce him to book himself with the Orpheum circuit, but Mr. Davidson has so far declined.

HAIL WAS AS BIG AS EGGS

Much Damage Done—Horses Run Away—None in Superior.

Duluth and vicinity had the biggest hail storm probably in its history this morning.

It seems that the storm was exclusively Minnesotan, for Superior did not get it. Superior got a little rain and a few small hailstones of insignificant size, but for the real simon-pure-hail-as-large-as-eggs size, Duluth had the call. Of course everything is bigger in Duluth than in Superior except the city debt and taxes, so the hail merely followed suit.

It is said that in Superior they could hear the roar of the hail falling on Duluth and thought a cyclone had broken loose over here. Many telephoned to friends to find out what was the matter.

The weather all morning was a puzzle. At times the clouds became so heavy that one could scarcely read on the street and then it would brighten up. A good many were alarmed over this and were even more alarmed when the hail came. The hail storm burst at exactly 10 o'clock and the down-pour lasted for about fifteen or twenty minutes. And it came some.

The largest hailstones which have ever been seen in this vicinity fell and a great many of them were literally as large as hen's eggs. Marble size was too common for mentioning and there were plenty between the two sizes. One stone was brought into The Herald office which measured seven inches in circumference. In West Duluth a stone was found which measured slightly over seven inches and was almost perfectly round. Another taken into the Armour Packing company's office weighed a little over an ounce and a quarter.

Horses on the streets were panic-stricken and several runaways are reported. One of the most spectacular was a team belonging to the Geyser Bottling works. The team rushed up Superior street blind with fear and dragging a heavy hitching weight with them. It is considered rather remarkable that the horses were not injured for the weight was flying and wrapping the attached strap around their legs and then spinning out again.

The smashing of windows was common. Probably the principal damage of this kind was to greenhouses and skylights on buildings of all kinds. Seventy panes of glass in the greenhouse of Seekins & Leberious were smashed, a few were smashed in Lindsay's greenhouse at Lakeside, and it is expected that the greenhouse of Eiselen, the florist, near the poor farm, was pretty badly damaged, although word has not yet been received from there.

Skylights in all parts of the city were smashed and nearly every photograph gallery in the city suffered more or less. At West Duluth all of the skylights in the Graham hospital were smashed, and those in the Woodward block were also put out of business.

During the hail storm Mrs. Zaik, an elderly woman residing on Seventeenth avenue east below London road, slipped on a hailstone, fell on the sidewalk on Seventeenth avenue near Superior street and fractured her wrist.

At the county courthouse a number of windows were smashed, and the hammering of the hail on the roof and windows was so loud that a district court had to suspend proceedings until the storm had passed.

Found $5,000.

The owner returned in a great state of excitement and after proving his claim the satchel was returned to him. The finder received a handsome reward for his honesty. Have you lost your good health? FAMOUS IN A MINUTE.

When a trotting horse man goes into the running horse business on the moderate scale of one yearling purchased for a song, and in a short four months pulls off a $20,000 betting coup the first time he starts the youngster, that trotting horse man must certainly stand away up in the affections of that fickle jade, Dame Fortune, says the Washington Star. Dr. M. J. Cromwell of Baltimore achieved this feat at Pimlico on Thursday, and naturally the occurrence formed one of the sensations of the week in turf circles.

Late last fall Owner Cromwell, a veterinary surgeon, who has for years been well known in trotting circles of the Monumental City, purchased on an impulse the bay yearling filly by Woolthrope, out of Gretchen, a mare by Luke Blackburn. He only gave $150 for the young miss, who was small and undersized, and what trainers call "crazy headed" and flighty, few small owners or boys believed could do anything with her, for she would bolt and carry them when and where she pleased.

But her practical minded owner conceived the idea of subduing her erratic disposition by putting her in harness between the shafts of a road cart and see what that would do toward making her more level-headed. Early this spring, at the track of the Gentlemen's Driving club, Dr. Cromwell first put his experiment into practice, his friends prophesying that the filly would kick everything to pieces, including the veterinary surgeon himself. But, held down by kicking straps, which covered nearly every inch of her back and hips, the filly at the first attempt made a virtue of necessity, and her owner controlled her fairly well as he drove her a mile and repeat at a slow jig.

This went on until the last of March, when a saddle was put on and her education as a runner began. The harness work had curbed her flightiness to a degree and she showed great speed—quarters in 0:33 and 0:33½. Doctor Cromwell made up his mind to race the filly at Pimlico and take a chance with her. His assistant trainer, John Wright, meanwhile, was sending her along at the Gentlemen's Driving park, and few outside of the trotting horse circle there knew aught of her great promise.

Katrinoa, as the filly was named, had never seen a barrier starting machine before they were put up by Starter McGinnis at Pimlico, but she took to it like a duck does to the water, breaking away like a shot to the admiration of all witnesses. Her work, however, went on over at the other track—the driving park.

Wednesday morning last U. Z. DeArman, the well-known Western owner, who hails from the Lone Star State, was visited at his stable by Dr. Cromwell, while behind the latter came Trainer Wright leading the filly Katriona. Briefly the Baltimorean asked the Texan if he would let his (De Arman's) boy Farrar ride the filly in a trial, and if that was satisfactory that he should ride her in the race tomorrow, first on the card, for which she had been entered.

As DeArman had nothing in that race he readily consented, and Farrar got up on the filly and rode her three furlongs in 0:36. This was hurricane work, and many of the other trainers at the track who saw the mare lost no time in trying to find out the identity of the youngster. But as she was quickly taken back to the driving park, few succeeded in locating her. But the trial showed Cromwell and his friends that with luck at the barrier Katriona had a good chance to land them big money for little money.

Quite a delegation of trotting horse men came over with Cromwell, Wright and the filly shortly after noon on Thursday. She was temporarily housed in the DeArman barn, and in her ante-post gallop showed that she had her speed. Twenty-four bookmakers, six more than in the first showing, had up their slates, and as the winners, Lady Vere, Wrestler and Moceasin looked the form of the race few paid much consideration to the filly Katriona.

When Bookmakers Slofel, Hammerschlaugh and Johnson put up 40 to 1 on Katriona, most of the fellows who "copy" followed suit with 30 or 40 to 1. But as fives and tens went on Katriona the odds soon dropped to 20 to 1. Then the money came in twenties, and as the odds were chopped large amounts were offered the layers until the price dropped to 10 to 1; and at post time fives were the ruling quotation, with every book in the ring loaded up with Katriona money.

But the layers could not believe that any green filly could beat all of the three winners engaged and as the youngsters lined up at the post across the track they were still laying odds that the trotting horse colony would not pull off their carefully planned coup. Meanwhile, as the ring was fixing up its books, the youngsters were lining up at the barrier.

Katriona was No. 11 on the extreme outside, which, while not the best post position, had its advantages, as she was not bothered by her sidling buckling, and, in Lady Vere's case, kicking neighbors. The latter is a terror at the post, as, like Ornament, Ormonde's Right and other horses, she will pick out a horse to kick and follow that unfortunate object of her spleen across the track. Finally the barrier rose with over half the lot off slowly, and Katriona, breaking like a shot, half a dozen lengths in front before the rearguard got well under way.

For the next fifty-odd seconds backers of the filly and those layers who had been loaded up to 30 and 40 to 1 had all sorts of emotions, the former fearing that she would quit in the homestretch and the latter hoping that she would fall down. But Katriona did neither, and kept the gap open each time, winning by four lengths. The Benning performers, Mary Custis and Manana, fought out the place duel as named, with the favorites, Wrestler and Lady Vere, in the muck.

As the winner came back to the scales, she was more closely scrutinized than when she went to the post unknown to the general public. A well-proportioned filly, the first feeling of the trainers was amazement that she had shown so well, when any novice could see that she was "hog fat." In other words, she had from fifty to sixty pounds of superfluous flesh on her ribs, that, when taken off, should enable her to show a much better performance than this one.

Fully $30,000 was paid out by the bookmakers to Katriona's lucky backers, of which fully two-thirds went to Dr. Cromwell and his close friends. Owner De Arman, who loaned them his jockey, Farrar, won $2,000 on the race, while Charles Primrose, Robert Walden and others landed smaller amounts.

The ring, however, did not lose all this money, as a first glance would seem to indicate. Fully $10,000 went in on each of the favorites, Lady Vere and the Wrestler. The latter's owner, E. C. La Montagne, of New York, was on hand from the Empire City, and his commission made itself felt in the ring. For a new beginner Doctor Cromwell has become famous in just 0:55⅘, the time made by his speedy 2-year-old.

DISPOSING OF THEM.

Boston Herald: In the autumn of 1901 Mrs. W. of Roxbury spent a few weeks with her daughter in Nova Scotia, returning home shortly before President McKinley was shot, bringing her niece, Bessie B., aged 6 years, home with her. Of course the child heard a good deal of talk in the house about the shooting of the president.

One day Bessie said to her aunt: "Aunt Minnie, who is king of the United States?" Her aunt replied: "We have no kings in the United States like you do in your British country. We have presidents. We have an election every four years and elect a new one."

"Oh, yes," the child replied; "and then they shoot the old ones, don't they?"

To spend 30 minutes a day in reading Herald want ads. may prove to be the most profitable "side-line" of business you ever undertook.

ailroad Enforced Car Ownership to Suit Its Own Ends.

Further Testimony Showing Discriminations to Coal Operators.

Philadelphia, May 17.—The interstate commerce commission resumed its investigation today into the alleged discrimination in the distribution of coal cars. The sensational testimony of yesterday in which officials of the Pennsylvania railroad connected with the distributing department were shown to have received gifts of stocks and money from coal companies increased the attendance.

The most important witness at the early session was Michael Trump, general superintendent of transportation. The previous witnesses who had testified concerning the distribution of cars informed the commission that they had acted under orders from Mr. Trump. The latter will be required by the commission to explain the telegraphic orders sending special assignments of cars to certain coal companies. This will be especially so in the case of the Berwind-White company, a special order for 500 cars daily having been received by Superintendent Creighton at Altoona for that company.

William A. Patton, assistant to President Cassatt, has been subpoenaed and will probably be called during the day.

Mr. Trump was asked to explain the method of distribution between 1900 and 1903. He stated that the rating of the coal companies was fixed by taking the tonnage of the various regions for several years and endeavoring to strike an average.

The tonnage system, he said, was used until 1903. He was asked if he could furnish the tonnage allotment for the period named and said he would do so.

Mr. Trump was closely questioned covering individual cars. He was asked if the Berwind-White company and the Keystone Coal company did not have enough private or individual cars to carry all their tonnage. He said that was the case.

"Is a rule of the railroad company, that no coal company shall have less than 500 individual cars?" Attorney Glasgow asked.

"That was a rule adopted by the company to discourage the use of individual cars."

"Don't you know," said Mr. Glasgow, "that during the Pennsylvania railroad's most strenuous period of freight congestion the company sold 1,000 cars to the Berwind-White and 500 to the Keystone Coal company? You don't call that discouraging use of individual cars do you? Isn't it a fact that the rule was adopted for the purpose of discouraging only small operators?"

"We thought it would discourage everybody," Mr. Trump replied.

"Was the rule enforced?"

"Well, exceptions were made. In some cases we varied the rule, allowing 100 cars in one year and 200 within three years."

He was asked if he recalled the case of Mr. Ellsworth, who, complaining, that he was unable to secure individual cars went to the president of the road and on the order of the president secured 1,000 cars.

Mr. Trump said he knew Mr. Ellsworth had secured the cars but he was not familiar with the circumstances.

PRINCE AND PRINCESS OF WALES ENTERTAINED.

London, May 17.—The lord mayor and corporation today entertained the prince and princess of Wales at the Guild hall and presented them with a congratulatory address in commemoration of their Indian tour. Exactly thirty years have elapsed since King Edward, then prince of Wales, was the central figure of a similar welcome on his return from his eastern tour. Today's reception was preceded by the usual procession through decorated streets. About 3,000 persons sat down to luncheon in the Guild hall.

Piles Cured

Trial Package Mailed Free.

The agony and suffering in piles is so great, that if a surgical operation was a certain cure (which it isn't), and there was no other means of relief, some persons might be willing to take the chance of blood poisoning or lockjaw.

But, now that the Pyramid Pile Cure has been discovered and has been proven to be a quick and certain means of relief and lasting cure, there is no excuse for risking your life.

Does Pyramid Pile Cure give immediate relief? Does it cure? Try it and prove it to yourself as thousands have done before you. Then go to your druggist and get a 50 cent box and complete the cure.

Take, for example, the case of Mr. Benjamin Shaw, Postmaster of Bland. We quote his own words in his letter of Oct. 31, 1905: "I was in great agony of mind and body. In the meantime, a gentleman told me of the virtue of your Pyramid remedy. I fortunately found it at a drug store, and by the next morning I did not feel that any operation was necessary, and in three days I was able to return home, and a complete cure was accomplished, to my great satisfaction and the surprise of the physician."

AUCTIONS FOR HIGH SOCIETY

A. Z. Boyer Looking for the Patronage of Duluth Women.

"It will be my special endeavor to interest the society ladies of Duluth in my auction sales," said Alfred Z. Boyer today. "The methods I will employ in disposing of articles will be entirely new to Duluth, but as soon as they become known, I believe that the prejudice which now exists in the city against auctioneers, as the result of cheap-John ways used here in the past, will be overcome, and that the auction sales I intend to conduct will be patronized by the best people of the city, as sales of the same class are patronized in leading cities of the East.

"I expect to open up opposite the postoffice, in the McKay hotel building, the latter part of next week, probably Thursday or Friday. I have been in Duluth long enough now to become a resident of the city, and intend to remain here permanently, so you see it will be necessary for me to have the full confidence of the people, and to treat them right. For this reason I dug up an old law, unknown to the county commissioners, even, which compels me to put up a $1,000 bond, which is to be forfeited unless I refund money on any goods that prove to be otherwise than as represented. Under this bond every one is positively guaranteed square treatment.

"I realize it will be rather hard at the start to overcome the prejudice that naturally exists here, but think I will be able to do it. In the East an auctioneer has just as good a standing as a tradesman. At the Waldorf Astoria in New York, for instance, auction sales of pictures are held occasionally. The auctioneer attends in full dress, as do the patrons. I attended one recently at which individual sales amounted to from $1,000 to $69,000. My methods will be of as high a class as those employed by the men conducting these sales."

Mr. Boyer is the only person who has ever secured an auctioneer's license from St. Louis county.

Iron River—Miss Emma Wiedenmeier of Iron River has received news of her father's death by drowning in the Taguig river, Philippine Islands. Wiedenmeier attempted to swim the river, which is not a very large stream, and when half way across disappeared from sight. His companions were unable to rescue him. He was an artificer in the Fifth battery, field artillery, and had been in the service for two years.

Menominee—Trainmaster Brendler of the Lake Superior division of the St. Paul road, says that during the winter 75,000,000 feet of logs were hauled by his road to the mills at Marinette, Menominee, Oconto, Green Bay, Kiel and Menasha. He also says that extensive log shipments will continue during the summer. One contract calls for the transportation of 6,000,000 feet of pine from Ontonagon to Oconto and a second of 7,000,000 feet to Green Bay. Mr. Brendler estimates that a total of 25,000,000 feet will be handled during the summer, about half going to the woodenware factories at Kiel and Menasha.

Calumet—Orders have been placed for the necessary timbers and machinery for the mill which will be erected by the Ishpeming Gold Mines company this summer at the old Michigan gold mine, in the serpentine rock district northwest of Ishpeming. The structure will be erected near the main shaft, with which it will be connected by a tramway. It will be a No. 5 Huntington mill, with a capacity for handling ten tons of quartz daily. The quartz will be reduced to No. 80 mesh.

Mining operations at the Michigan mine may not be started until the mill is completed, as there is not enough ore on the surface to supply the mill day and night for six months.

Sault Ste. Marie—Superintendent Marks of the Soo hatchery, plans to plant 10,000 land-locked salmon in St. Mary's river in August or September. Salmon planted in the river in past years have thrived well, and last year twenty-two fish of this species were caught in the rapids, the largest weighing two pounds. "Until this fish was introduced in the waters of St. Mary's river," says Mr. Marks, "it was found only in the St. John's country, Quebec, Maine and Norway. They grow to weigh ten pounds or more and are similar to salt water salmon. Experiments already made indicate that the salmon will do well in any of the waters of this northern country."

Marquette—The supreme court has denied the petition of former Mayor Ward for another writ of mandamus in the Marquette municipal election case. This, it is believed, practically ends the fight.

It was on Ward's petition that the supreme court ordered a recount, which increased Rush Culver's majority for mayor from seven to thirty. Ward then alleged irregularities and asked the court to throw out certain disputed ballots.

This the court has now refused, which in effect determines the legality of the recount.

CELEBRATE THE FOURTH

Excursions Will be Run in From All Surrrounding Towns.

Already arrangements are being made by Mayor Cullum for a big demonstration of some kind, and all the patriotic bodies in the city will be asked to co-operate.

The exact form of the celebration has not yet been determined, but it will include a parade in the afternoon, a program of band music and speeches, and a monster display of fireworks in the evening.

Excursions will be run in from all the surrounding towns, and an effort will be made to secure special, low rates from the railroad companies. All of the railroads running into the city will be asked to co-operate, and special excursion trains will probably be run in over every line of railroad touching the Head of the Lakes. The celebration will be advertised throughout the Copper country, through the small towns in Wisconsin and southern Minnesota, west as far as Grand Forks and Fargo, and in all the Range towns and cities.

Excursions will also be brought in by boat from Fort William and Port Arthur, and all the towns along both shores of the lake.

In short an effort will be made to eclipse anything in the line of a Fourth of July celebration ever held in Duluth, and to make this city the most attractive place to spend the holiday of any place in the Northwest.

The G. A. R., the Sons of Veterans, the militia companies, the naval reserves, the labor unions, the scores of secret societies, and all the organizations of every kind in the city will be asked to co-operate to make the parade and the celebration a success.

In the evening a big display of fireworks will be given, at some central part of the city, and the money will be raised by popular subscription.

"There is hardly a man in town who won't spend from $1 upward on the holiday on fireworks of some kind," said the mayor, this morning, "and if they will donate just a part of that to the fund, we can easily raise $1,000 or more, and get a display that will be worth while.

"I would like to see 5,000 to 10,000 visitors brought to the city for the holiday, and a first-class celebration of the old-fashioned kind.

"If the weather will only behave itself, we ought to have the best and biggest celebration Duluth ever saw."

FRANCIS TO PRESENT HIS CREDENTIALS.

Vienna, May 17.—The American ambassador, Mr. Francis, will visit Foreign Minister Goluchowsky officially tomorrow and request an audience of Emperor Francis Joseph, at which he will present both his own credentials and Mr. Storer's letters of recall. As the emperor goes to Budapest, May 20, the audience will take place either at the end of May or during the first week in June.

The emperor received Director Conreid of the Metropolitan Opera company today, and at his request Mr. Conreid detailed the experiences of the opera company at San Francisco during the recent disaster there. The emperor expressed warm sympathy with the sufferers of San Francisco, and said he hoped the city and people would soon be restored to prosperity.

MASHER IS SMASHED

Young Girl Puts His Nose Out of Beauty Class.

A well-known "man about town," as the society papers usually put it, "got his" last night at West Duluth, and the person who handed him the package was a girl of about 17 years of age. It seems that she was standing at the corner of Ramsey and Central, about 7 o'clock last evening, waiting for a car, when the man indicated, who had been imbibing a little too freely, which seems to have been his occupation for some years, stepped up and began to talk to her. It is not known what he said, but she resented it.

The man's nose was badly scratched up, and blood flowed freely, not only from the scratch, but from the nostrils, so badly that he had to go to a drug store to have it stopped. Should the name of the young woman be learned in West Duluth this morning, she would probably be the recipient of a present, for the business men of Central avenue are glad to see this man get roughly handled, as he is considered to be in the "fresh" class.

He does not belong in West Duluth, but came up from the center of the city during the afternoon.

IS GREAT SUCCESS.

Kirmess Well Patronized and Greatly Enjoyed.

The kirmess which was given last evening at Great Eastern hall, under the auspices of the ladies of Holy Apostles Episcopal church, was an unstinted success, and it will be repeated tonight. Last evening the hall was crowded to the doors, and the applause was almost continuous. Some of the dances were dazzling, and all of them were good. The costumes were pretty and tasty. Each person taking part did his or her work as the case happened to be with promptness and a finish that was considered remarkable. The children did surprisingly well, and won a lot of glory for their part of the performance. Those who took part in the various dances were as follows, numbering in all 100 people:

TURNED THE JOKE.

Two prominent West Duluth business men came nearly being arrested yesterday afternoon as the result of a joke which they tried to play on Archie Ferguson, who keeps a saloon on Central avenue. They had been sitting in the front part of the saloon in the afternoon, where Mr. Ferguson had laid his coat and vest. For a joke they took the watch and chain out of the vest.

Some hours afterward when Mr. Ferguson went to get his clothing he discovered the filching. He went to the two men and asked them if they had the watch and chain, but they denied it. Then Ferguson complained to the police and detectives were put on the case.

When approached by the detectives, one of the men, realizing that the affair had gone beyond the joke stage told all about it. Then, to throw a scare into the other one, an officer went to him and arrested him on a warrant which he had obtained. The arrest was only a fake one, but it had both men pretty badly scared for a time.

PUNCHED THE JACK.

Joseph Cochrane Refuses to Stand Abuse From a Bum.

A lumberjack who attempted last night to "bum" a meal at Joseph Cochrane's lunch room on Central avenue, near Bristol street, will have cause to remember the attempt. After he had eaten his meal he refused to pay the waitress and Mrs. Cochrane attempted to get the money, but all she got was abuse. At the height of this torrent of invective, Mr. Cochrane, who had been out for a few minutes, entered.

Hearing his wife abused, he waded into the lumberjack and knocked him out in approved style. After the jack came to he did not seem to have enough and started to abuse Mr. Cochrane. The latter handed the jack another sleep producer and again sent him to the land of dreams. In the meantime, Patrolman Johnson arrived and arrested the trouble hunter and put him in jail.

THE GOOD ROADS FIGHT.

St. Louis county now has a good roads association, and it should be made a strong and effective factor in the campaign for good roads. Within the county it should take a live and active interest in county, city and township work, and in the state at large it should join hands with other county associations and with the state organization to bring about a sentiment that will compel proper state appropriations for road purposes.

Yesterday's good roads convention, which resulted in the organization of the local association, was a very interesting and instructive affair. The sum of its teachings might be said to be this: That there is quite as much trouble from improper disposal of available road funds as there is from lack of money for road-building. What is needed is the spread of a knowledge of scientific road-building methods, and organized, coherent, systematic effort toward the end that the state may have good roads.

Nothing more aimless and extravagant than the present methods of road-building could be imagined. State, county, city, village and township all do something, but instead of joining their efforts and bending them to a single definite end, the creation of a state system of good roads, there is no relation between the work of one and the work of another. The result is that half the available money is wasted in disposing of the half that goes into road-making.

Obviously, there is much to be done in an educational way, much also to be done in a legislative way, in making laws that will compel economical and systematic disposition of road funds, and very much to be done in the way of awakening a public sentiment that will bring about proper liberality in appropriations by state, county and local subdivisions for road purposes.

The interests of city and country are in common in this matter. It cannot be said that it is a city affair because good roads enable the farmers to bring their produce to the city, and thus help build it up and enrich it, any more than it can be said to be a country matter because good roads make it possible for the farmer to market his stuff. Both sides benefit, and neither could do without the other. While the city buys the farmer's products and gives him his living thereby, the farmer builds up the city by his patronage of its factories, jobbing houses and shops. Good roads benefit the farming communities, and they benefit the city. Therefore each should be willing to pay its share and to do its part in the work of fighting for good roads.

Clearly, money judiciously spent in making good roads is an excellent investment for the whole state. It cheapens the cost of bringing goods to market, and this gain is divided between the city and country, the city consumer getting part in increased business and cheaper supplies, the farmer getting part in increased profits. Therefore, every dollar that can be put into good roads by the state so as to yield returns is an investment, and it is good business, not extravagance, to so expend it.

Minnesota, so far ahead in other ways, is far behind in road work. She must wake up, educate herself, and make good roads upon which the chariot wheels of prosperity will find no ruts or stumbling blocks.

RATE DISCRIMINATION.

While the public has become generally familiar with the subject of railroad rate discrimination since it has become evident that it is the most fruitful source of monopoly and commercial oppression, the average citizen probably believes the field has been covered when rebates are discussed. As a matter of fact, this is but one of a horde of discriminatory methods, though it is true that a large proportion of these methods are nothing but more or less skillfully disguised rebates.

Frank Parsons, in his book, "The Heart of the Railway Problem," gives a list of forms in which railroads give preference to part of their customers over the rest of their patrons. This list numbers no less than seventy such methods, and the writer adds: "Even this long list does not cover the whole field. The cases on record do not exhaust the possibilities of discrimination."

For instance, the free pass, recognized as an evil of itself, may be made a means of discrimination. If a large shipper gets passes for his traveling men, as the case has often been, he eliminates an expense that places him in a better position than the man who has to pay fare for his employes. Instances have been proved where favored shippers were given commissions, as though they were agents of the road, to secure for it their own freight. Salaries have been paid to favored persons as nominal employes, or shippers have been paid fees for nominal services. Cash contributions have been made to shippers in the guise of payments to encourage new industries.

A stealthy method, involving no cash rebate, is that where the railroad gives some of its favored shippers inside information about the business of other shippers. Also, it is easy for a road to be more lax in the inspection of the shipments of one firm than it is in that of another, thereby enabling the favored shipper to get low rates on mixed goods in carload lots billed at the rate appropriate to the lowest product in the mass.

Again, payments have been made of fictitious claims for damages, delays or overcharges; fictitious entries have been made in the "prepaid" column of the freight bill; false billings have been made, and false weights have permitted underbilling; favoritism has been shown in switching and demurrage charges; unfavored shippers have been annoyed and injured by withholding cars and by deliberately-created delays in carriage and delivery; direct overcharges have been made, causing loss through delay and expensive litigation, or through excessive payments.

These are but a few of the numerous ways in which a railroad may favor a large shipper at the expense of a small one. The large shipper, by threatening to divert his business, can insure greater consideration, and practically force the railroad to exercise in his favor one or more of the methods of discrimination.

It is necessary to prevent discrimination in railroad rates and services in order to bring about commercial equality, freedom of trade and fairness of competition; but the multitude of cunning ways that have been devised to extend favoritism shows what a hard task it is going to be.

NORWAY'S BIRTHDAY.

Today, for possibly the last time, the Norwegians of Duluth are celebrating the birthday of Norway as a nation. The seventeenth of May is the ninety-second anniversary of the proud day when Norway threw off the yoke of Denmark, and entered into an alliance with Sweden.

Last year that alliance was broken, and Norway, free and independent, took her place among the sisterhood of nations. Very likely in future years, therefore, it will be June 7 instead of May 17 that will be celebrated, though the custom of years will be hard to break, and May 17 will always continue to have a significance that will set it apart from other days in the minds of all Norwegians, even if the date is not officially and universally celebrated.

May 17 has always been the Norwegian Fourth of July, and Americans who were called upon to transfer the affection they hold for their national holiday to some other day of the calendar would appreciate the situation that Norwegians now find themselves in. While it may be pleasant, it will hardly be convenient to have two national holidays, and one must take precedence. It will naturally be the day that commemorates the occasion when Norway threw off the last fetter that bound her to another nation, and became a strong, free country with her own government and her own ruler.

It is a peculiarly fitting thing that in the program for the day's observance of Duluth Norwegians, first place is given to the national hymn of the adopted country, "America" has the leading place on the program, and these sturdy sons and daughters of Norway will sing it with as much devotion as any other American citizens can show, whether they are native born or not, and with an affection that will equal that which they feel for the Norwegian songs and folk melodies that come later on the program.

A liberty-loving people such as the Norwegians make the best American citizens, and we of Minnesota who have been associated with them in daily life for years have come to appreciate their sterling patriotism, and to realize that their commendable love of their own country does not detract in the least from their love of and loyalty to the land of their adoption, but rather intensifies the instincts of fealty.

CAN THIS BE?

Gifford Pinchot, the head of the United States forestry bureau and the most active conversationalist in the country on the subject of forest preservation and reforestration, has been openly and definitely accused of being "actually engaged in discouraging corporations and individuals from planting trees," and of "subverting the purposes of the people."

This charge is important if true, and Northern Minnesota will be particularly interested in hearing the reply of Forester Pinchot to the accusations made against him in the May issue of Arboriculture, the official organ of the International Society of Arboriculture. He has been largely instrumental in holding up large areas of Northern Minnesota, ostensibly for forestry purposes. While having no objection to the forestry cause, the people of this section of the state have insisted that he should stick to his purpose, and not seek to tie up land fit only for agriculture, for the purpose of experiments that are doomed to failure from the start. If he picks out land that is not good for farming, and actually plants trees on it and actually produces a re-creation of the vanished forests, he will be doing good work, and everybody up here will be tickled to death over it.

But if it is true that forest-planting is the smallest consideration of his bureau, and that the lands he has tied up in this section are merely going to remain uselessly idle, opposition to his plans would be much greater than it is now.

Arboriculture says: "The bureau plants no trees of consequence, and what few it has planted have cost the government enormous sums of money. It neither plants trees nor encourages others to do so." So far, this is true of Northern Minnesota. The forestry bureau has actively sought land for forestry purposes, but it has planted no trees. Maybe it is going to, and may be Mr. Pinchot will be able to explain that Arboriculture is mistaken. Anyway, it will be interesting to hear about it.

This International Society of Arboriculture claims to have planted millions of trees around the world, and yet its organ claims that forestry bureau officials have tried to persuade railroad companies that have employed it not to follow the society's advice, but to turn the work over to the United States forestry bureau. This may give the attack a color of professional jealousy, but nevertheless the charge is definitely made that so far the forestry bureau, under Mr. Pinchot, has planted no trees, though the government is spending large sums to enable it to plant trees and grow new forests.

Mr. Pinchot will please take the witness stand in his own defense.

HOTEL GOSSIP.

"Marquette is enjoying an era of prosperity," said N. P. Flodin of Marquette, Mich., at the Spalding. "Business appears to be good in all lines, and in the Lake Shore Engine works, of which I am superintendent, a full force of men is kept busy.

"All the towns through Northern Michigan, I believe, are in a prosperous condition, with plenty of activity in a business way. Labor is plentiful, and the men receive good wages, and are not afraid to spend it."

"The hotel clerk has a great chance to study human nature, and in his daily work often encounters an interesting character, whose actions are worth observing," said A. Z. Boyer, formerly of New York, but now a resident of Duluth, at the Spalding. Some men are always in a hurry, and some always seem to have a lot of time. The hurry kind are the most trouble to the man behind the desk.

"I remember one of the latter class who stopped at a hotel down in Louisville, Ky., where I made my headquarters at the time. He was always in a rush when he entered the lobby. He would stride rapidly up to the register, put his name down with almost a single scratch of his pen, reaching for his mail with the other hand, and then would turn on his heel and swing across the lobby, opening his letters as he walked. The young fellow behind the desk got so he would reach for the mail as soon as the hurried guest entered the door.

"The clerk finally grew tired of dropping everything else just so the man could save a few seconds. The next time the man stopped at the hotel the clerk made his usual quick grab for the mail as the other entered the door. The guest strode up to the register, scratched his name down, and, as he reached for the mail, the clerk violently rang the bell and a boy who had been posted how to proceed sprang up to the desk and seized the suit case before its owner knew what was about.

"'T. G. U. S.,' shouted the clerk, so that all in the lobby could hear, and threw the key of the room at the boy, who was already running across the lobby at top speed, in the direction of the elevator.

The man turned quickly on his heel and started to follow, but at the end of a few rapid spaces he halted and returned to the desk.

"'What did you mean by those letters, T. G. U. S., if I may ask?' he said.

"The clerk smiled, and said: 'Why, you see we are always in such a hurry here that we have to abbreviate our orders. That means: Take gent up stairs.'

"All is not pleasure in the circus business," said A. Cable of New York, at the Lenox. "I was with Gollmar Bros.' circus a few years ago, and had some interesting experiences. Some of them were of an exciting nature, and I did not come out of all of them with a whole skin. One of the warmest times I ever had was in Hibbing, when two companions and myself got into a fight with a bunch of fellows from a Wild West show.

"We were running pretty close on the heels of the Wild West aggregation, and it was my duty to reach the several towns along the route the day before the Wild West was to open, and cover all the other fellow's circus bills with those telling of the wonders of Gollmar Bros.' circus. I had been doing this at several towns, and naturally the other side did not regard me with any great favor.

"We arrived in Hibbing Saturday, my assistant billers and myself, I mean, and as we could not work on Sunday, decidede to run the risk and cover the Wild West bills two days ahead instead of one. We did the work on Saturday, and Sunday morning the Wild West people arrived. The deuce was to pay then. Several of the men started to scour the town for the offenders, which were us. They found us, and a battle royal began right away. They were too many for us, however, and we received an unmerciful drubbing. I had to be taken to a hospital, and there several stitches were taken in my scalp. One of the three of us was not badly hurt, but he got drunk on the strength of his escape, and missed the truth. The Wild Westers got hold of him next day, however, and trimmed him up till he could hardly walk."

Wouldn't it have been charming to have been out on a trout stream this morning? To stand under the ineffectual alders and find the back of your neck turned into a conduit for the receipt of rain water; to have your unprotected pate beaten and battered by hailstones as big as the traditional hen's egg; to travel miles on foot over heavy, muddy roads; to find the streams swollen so that the fish refuse to come out and play. For a few minutes Duluth had about as smart a rain and hail storm as she had seen in some time. It is no exaggeration to say that some of the hailstones were as large as hen's eggs, and the average was about English walnut size. But the wind is gone from the northeast for a time and that covers a multitude of sins. The weather man expects showery conditions to continue tonight and possibly Friday, with warmer weather tonight and a shift of the wind to southerly. Last night's lowest temperature was 44 degs., and yesterday's highest was 58. Says Mr. Richardson of conditions:

"The various storm areas central Wednesday morning in the Northwest have apparently joined forces, the center of the disturbance being over Eastern South Dakota. This condition is responsible for continued rains throughout the Northwest. The Pacific coast high pressure area has advanced to the Rocky mountains, attended by lower temperature over the Eastern slopes and Red River valley. Barometric pressures remain high over Southeastern states. The Dakota storm area will doubtless move well into the lake region tonight and Friday, attended by showery weather in this locality and a shift to southwesterly winds."

"Well, I guess yes," replied the chauffeur. "The next copper to catch me will have to go a mile-a-minute clip."

No More at Present.

Philadelphia Telegraph: It is an ungracious task to discourage enterprise, and particularly in any public-spirited undertaking promising general advantage, it is the American way to help rather than to hinder its promotion; but when Minnesota proposes to hold a world's fair to celebrate the fiftieth anniversary of the state's birthday, the first thought generated in conservative minds will be to say, "Don't do it!" In 1908 Minnesota will be fifty years old as a state, and some of her progressive young men want to hold an exposition on a grand scale to commemorate the event. They profess to be confident of beating the Lewis and Clark affair at Portland, Or., all to pieces and are sure they can get up a show that will attract the attention of all creation to their magnificent country, its limitless resources and its wonderful development. Well, Minnesota is certainly a marvelous, well-known young commonwealth, and her people have reason to be proud of her progress, but, all the same, we wish they would not attempt to organize another universal exposition.

One of their first moves, of course, will be to apply for a congressional appropriation; and they will probably get it. Indeed, after granting appropriations to all the expositions ever held in this country—except the centennial—congress could not consistently refuse to extend the same favor to Minnesota. The constitution of this nation and the practice of the national government forbid discrimination in favor of one state rather than another, and if Minnesota demands a grant similar to the grants made to eight or ten other states, she can fairly claim to be entitled to it. So far as financing the undertaking is concerned, it may be conceded that the proposition is not altogether chimerical; but, really now, on serious consideration, will it not be admitted that we in America have seen all the world's fairs we care to look at for at least ten years to come?

It's easy to be content with what we have; it's what we haven't that worries us.

The man who attends to his own affairs has no time to laugh at the mistakes of others.

After a girl gets to be about so old, she tries to forget that she once wanted to marry a poet.

Even the lines of the poor poet are likely to be cast in pleasant places—when he goes fishing.

When a girl begins to appear anxious about the state of a young man's health, he can take his choice between the parson and the undertaker.

Reflections of a Bachelor.

New York Press: Boys would have a lot of fun getting scrubbed in the bathtub if their mothers wouldn't let them.

When she dresses like a rainbow and looks like a faded bouquet, it is a sign she is on her honeymoon.

A pretty sure way not to get rich is to make easy money at the start so as to think you can go on doing it.

A man would have to know an awful lot about constitutional history to make up for not understanding baseball rules.

If a woman is jealous about her husband it makes him madder than a hatter; and if she isn't, he's terribly suspicious.

They Never Sleep.

Princeton Union: The Minneapolis Journal appears to be unduly worried over the hotel accommodations for the insurgent delegation which will attend the Duluth convention from Hennepin. It aims to cast odium upon the fair city of Duluth by insinuating that its hotels are but second grade and that these are far from being capacious enough to provide rooms for the delegates. The stories in the Journal should be taken with at least a pound of salt. Duluth has finer hotels and better accommodation than can be found anywhere in Minneapolis; but, so far as the members of the Hennepin delegation are concerned,—if they live up to their record,—they will hardly need any sleeping apartments.

His Objection.

Chicago Record-Herald: "Why," asked the girl, who took an interest in political affairs, "do you object to being elected by the direct votes of the people?"

"I don't," replied the senator; "the trouble is that the foolish people would probably object to electing me by their direct votes, if they had the chance."

A Clear Statement.

Longmont, Colo., Ledger: Saturday a mare with broken shafts landed on her side against the Ledger office building. We found it was one of Harry Tallman's horses, and the buggy had a lady in it by the name of Mrs. De Long, who was thrown out before the buggy broke. The runaway broke a spring wagon on Main street owned by Mr. Sloop, who occupies the old Dickson place. The damage was principally in the axles and wheels.

DULUTH AND THE HERALD.

Walker Pilot: The Duluth Herald made a hit with the state when it showed its progressiveness and secured Naughton, the cartoonist.

Stillwater Gazette: E. B. Hawkins has withdrawn as a Republican candidate for lieutenant governor. This leaves the Eighth district without a candidate for a place on the state ticket, but there is yet considerable time before the state convention and there may be something doing long before June—in Duluth and adjacent territory.

Walker Pilot: Duluth added 1,746 telephones to her exchange list during the past seventeen months. 'Phones in the Zenith City are getting almost as plentiful as cub bears.

Sandstone Courier: The Duluth papers are doing good work in informing some of the papers in the southern part of the state to see that it is to the interest of the whole state to have Northern Minnesota drained and developed. It seems hard for some of these papers to understand that the whole state does not extend south from the Twin Cities.

Mankato Free Press: "Heinze is going to be senator from Montana, so the powers decree. Have they no people out there to vote and pick their own officers?" is the inquiry of The Duluth Herald. It is evident from the tone of that paragraph the writer never has lived in Montana.

Minneapolis Telegram: Duluth has already begun to make extensive preparations for the convention to be held there June 12.—Littlefork Times.

Gracious! Duluth has been practicing up on that kind of thing for the past quarter of a century. Away back in 1889, when we were up there on a visit, they had open-air gymnasiums where they were drilling in giving the glad hand.

Anoka Herald: The Duluth school board has given Duluth school teachers a raise in salary. It is well. There are few workers so underpaid as the teachers in our public schools.

Pine City Pioneer: The Duluth Herald has published a guide for auto owners to make the run from the Twin Cities to Duluth. It states there is a bad stretch of road near Rutledge; a worse one from Hinckley north; a rough one from Mission Creek to Beroun, and an improvement when Pine City is reached. It ought to be good roads all along the line.

Bemidji Pioneer: Duluth has so many candidates for sheriff that she has to keep the list in alphabetical order to keep track of them. Poor job up there in Duluth, eh?

Two Harbors Iron Trade Journal: We thoroughly agree with The Duluth Herald that Northern Minnesota needs strong men as representatives in the state legislature, not alone for the reasons given that this part of the state needs able men just at present, but because this territory deserves to be rightly represented.

Respect for Misfortune.

New York Sun: A prominent Wall street man was hurrying out of his office at the noon hour when he suddenly stopped upon noticing a man across the street and tipped his hat very respectfully. The man was carrying a sandwich board emblazoning the merits of a nearby quick lunch parlor and looked altogether seedy. A friend of the Wall street man who had observed the momentary performance started to guy him.

"Who's your friend?" he asked.

"He is a man I have considerable respect for," was the reply. "He was once a prosperous citizen down here and worth several hundred thousand. He lost everything, and finally had to come to this. Even the best of us are liable to go the same way, you know, and that's why I am not afraid to be respectful to a once brilliant man."

Chocolate Eclairs and Other Tempting Recipes for Cooks

By EMMA PADDOCK TELFORD.

My Dear Mrs. Telford:

Would you kindly publish a recepie for making eclairs? Also let me know how to make coffee cake with bread dough. Should the eggs be added before letting it raise or after? Thanking you, I remain yours truly.

A BROOKLYNITE.

Eclairs.

Put into a saucepan a cup of milk, two generous tablespoonfuls of butter and a tablespoonful of sugar. When this boils up, add a cup of dry sifted flour and stir and beat well for two minutes. At the end of this time it should be smooth and velvety. Set away to cool. When quite cold, beat in four eggs, one at a time, beating vigorously for fifteen or twenty minutes. This is such a stiff mixture that many prefer to beat with the hand. Now try a small bit of the paste in the oven. If it raises quickly in a hollow ball, it has been beaten sufficiently. Have ready buttered baking pans, and drop the batter in tablespoonfuls some distance apart. A great convenience is a tapering tin tube, such as confectioners use. The small opening of this, which is about three-fourths of an inch in diameter, is placed in the small end of a conical cotton pastry bag, and the mixture pressed through it, making each about three inches in length. Bake in a moderately hot oven twenty or thirty minutes, until brown and well puffed. Cool, then split and fill with either of these creams.

Cream No. 1.

Put a cup of milk in a double boiler and place over the fire. When it boils, stir into a level tablespoonful of flour, beaten with one egg and a half cup sugar. Cook fifteen minutes, stirring often. When cold, flavor with vanilla.

Cream No. 2.

Put into a bowl one cup rich cream, four tablespoonfuls of sugar and a teaspoonful of vanilla. Set in a pan of cracked ice and whip until stiff.

Chocolate Eclairs.

These are made in the same way, only while the eclairs are still hot they should be brushed over with melted chocolate.

Either filling may be used for the eclairs, after which they are iced with a good chocolate icing. Put into a small pan a cup of sugar and five tablespoonfuls of ice water; stir until the sugar is dissolved; then remove the spoon immediately; as soon as the syrup boils take at once from the fire and pour into a shallow dish; have ready one ounce of chocolate melted and kept hot in a cup of water; as the icing cools, which will be in about eight minutes, begin beating and continue until it grows white and thick; add the melted chocolate and stir until very thick; now set in a dish of hot water and stir until it softens to a pouring consistency; dip the top of each eclair into this hot frosting, place on a plate and continue until all are glaced.

Coffee Cake.

Take enough risen bread dough to make one loaf of bread, add to it one-quarter cup softened butter, one-half cup sugar, one well beaten egg, and a few gratings of nutmeg. Mix well, then knead thoroughly, roll in sheets three-fourths of an inch thick, put in shallow pans and let it rise. Beat two eggs with enough sugar to make consistency of thin batter, make cuts in the raised dough with the edge of the spoon so that it will take up the dressing. Pour on, sprinkle generously with cinnamon and bake.

Black Bean Soup.

My Dear Mrs. Telford:

Kindly give me a recipie for black bean soup, the one served clear with slices of lemon in; also just what kind of beans I must ask for. Thanking you in advance, I remain yours truly.

YOUNG HOUSEWIFE.

Philadelphia Black Bean Soup.

To make this delicious soup you will require one pint of the black turtle beans. Wash thoroughly, cover with cold water and let them soak over night. In the morning put over the fire in the soup kettle, with five quarts of cold water, a half pound of salt pork cut in fine pieces and a quarter pound of lean fresh beef; cook slowly over a moderate fire; chop fine one carrot, one small turnip and an onion; add to the other ingredients and cook slowly for two or three hours. Half an hour before serving, season with salt, pepper, a dash of mace and a tiny bit of ground cloves, strain through a colander, then add half gill of cherry or port wine. Have ready in a hot tureen two or three hard boiled eggs, sliced, and one lemon, cut in thin slices; pour the soup over them and serve with croutons.

Croutons.

Cut slices of stale bread in tiny cubes or diamonds, lay on a bright tin dripping pan and set in the oven. Keep close watch on them, and as they begin to take on color, shake the pan frequently, until all are toasted a golden brown. These may be kept on hand in a tight glass or tin receptacle, and will be found a great convenience when serving clear and cream soups.

WHAT RETAIL MARKETS OFFER.

Cabbage, 5 cents a pound.

Strawberries, fine ones, 10 cents a box.

When you were small and had vacations of three months, you undoubtedly remember going out "to play" summer mornings to find that all your friends were digging dandelions for dinner. They probably were going to get a cent for ten and they tried in true Tom Sawyer fashion to induce you into thinking that digging dandelions was the thing nearest complete happiness that one could find on an early June morning. You didn't have a mother lacking preverted taste for nothing. If the inducement could have been 10 cents for a hundred dandelions, you might have fallen, but ten for 1 cent! You regretted the absence of your front tooth, because you couldn't snap your gum, shrugged your shoulders and enunciated with difficulty because of the absence of the aforementioned front tooth "Pooh! Who carthes for 1 thent?"

The presence of dandelions in the market sends one off on all sorts of prehistoric rambles. Dandelions boiled are good for one's liver because they have taraxacum in them. We knew they tasted bad, but one never dreamed of them having such a poisonous sounding thing as taraxacum in them. However, you can have Minnesota-grown dandelion greens for 25 cents a peck.

Boas of Maline Liked by Women

Smart fluffy Boa for Summer

Full fluffy boas and neck pieces of a moisture proof material are distinctly a fashion of the season. One reason for their popularity is that in spite of their fragile appearance they are extremely serviceable, for this material is sold to stand any amount of damp air or even a smart shower, and will shake dry and fluffy.

It isn't only boas that are being made up in this material, but hats as well. The hat shown in the illustration is a variation from the regular shape of the season, being somewhat of the poke order. Full ruchings of the material set with tiny pink button roses fill the front. At the left side is a cluster of fluffy white ostrich plumes. Broad ribbon ties, white with a rose pattern in pink, tie under the left ear. The boa, which is round in shape, is also set with tiny clusters of button roses at intervals. Boas are worn in a shade harmonizing with the general tone of the costume.

The EVENING STORY.

A SAN FRANCISCO HATCHET MAN

By Philip Verrill Mighels.

(Copyright, 1906, by Joseph B. Bowles.)

A singular nose Ned Hummel's seemed to me, for he held it elevated oddly, and the nostrils moved with a delicate mobility.

"Old man," said he, still scenting in the air, "I smell opium."

"Oh," said I, quite relieved, "very likely."

"That smell, you know," said he, "reminds me a trifle strongly of a deal I had in California."

"Does it?"

"Yes. Three years ago I had been a reporter on the San Francisco Chronicle a little more than half a year. There I met a splendid lot of fellows, but the jolliest and liveliest crowd was composed of the boys of the internal revenue department, who did nothing at all but watch the Chinese opium thieves, smugglers and 'factories.' Their duty was to spy on these crafty devils and to raid their dens as often as suspicion required.

"All factories, you must understand, were illicit, for no one could afford to pay the exorbitant and purposely prohibitory tax or license which the government levied on all such concerns.

"Many a night we forced the door of some foul abode that reeked with the overpowering fumes of the cooking 'dope'—aglow with the light from the ruddy fires.

"Generally the coolies escaped into mazes of tortuous corridors, for Chinatown is incomplete without a score of crooked passages, leading from every room of the slightest importance.

"In the midst of this career I met a Chinese interpreter, who told me an inside story which he had overheard, and parts of which had escaped even the vigilant officers of the government.

"A Chinese ring, represented by a smuggler and a single Chinese merchant, also in shady business, were concerned.

"A certain steamer from the Orient contained a consignment of stuff, waybilled to the ring, and when it was nearly due at the port, the ring played a winning stroke and a 'double cross,' in which, by seeming to play in the hands of the government, they really betrayed their partner, the merchant, Ah Fong, and brought their opium safely through. Ah Fong was powerless to complain to the government, being himself concerned, and besides, he found it out too late. But he nursed his grievance.

"The interpretor told me the name of the chief conspirator, or representative of the ring, and asked me to keep it a secret. Later, when this same interpreter succumbed to an overdose of opium—for he was sadly addicted to nights in the 'joint'—I alone possessed a knowledge that extended behind the scenes.

"On a Sunday morning, months after my last official visit to Chinatown, I strayed along Dupont street north till I found myself in the quaint and many-colored quarter of the yellow men.

"Rounding a corner, I looked below to Waverly place, where I saw a crowd of whites and Chinese running into a pinched and filthy alley. Using all my well-learned 'push' I got to the front and saw what occasioned the gathering.

"Jammed in a corner at the bottom of a damp, squalid flight of steps, that led to a fishy and horrible basement, was the corpse of a Chinese man, doubled up, contorted, covered with blood. Not a sign of a struggle was there. The man had evidently been butchered by a 'hatchet-man.'

"Behind me, suddenly, I heard the voice of Bert Thomas. 'Here, Tommy,' I said, and pulled him bodily through the crowd.

"For a moment he looked in horror. 'My God!' he cried, 'Ah Fong! No wonder he didn't come. Highbinders win!'

"'Who is he?' I said.

"'Why,' said Tommy, 'that man was in the office yesterday and agreed to lead us to the biggest factory, he said, on the coast. He didn't dare to give us the names, for fear the men might escape and later take their revenge on himself, and he couldn't deseribe the way to get there precisely.

"'He said if they found him out informing, the Highbinders would kill him sure—and we knew they would. Well, he never came; we thought him a regular liar, but this—this explains it all—the Highbinders win the trick. Poor old Fong!'

"'Ah Fong?' I said. 'Ah Fong—seems to me I have heard that name before. Why, Tommy, wasn't he mixed up in a smuggling racket once, when the stuff turned out to belong to a ring, and all you fellows got taken in on a big consignment of tea?'

"'He's the man—the very same,' he said.

"I told him at once the story I had heard from the dead interpreter. I was able to recall the dates and the name of the steamer, but the name of the chief conspirator—that pseudo partner of Fong's—had escaped me completely.

"My brain refused to conjure up that name, and soon, in my daily routine, I forgot the whole transaction.

"It was fully six months after the Highbinder murder of Fong that both Thomas and I found ourselves at a mining camp called Carbuoy. During our leisure hours, left after duly inspecting the famous mine, we wandered about the camp.

"We walked after dinner and smoked up all the cigars old Tommy had. Then we went for more to the postoffice. In a glass sort of case affair, used for displaying letters uncalled for, where their owners could point them out and claim them whenever they happened to come along, were several envelopes. I leaned above them listlessly, gazing, through the smoke of my tobacco.

"One of the letters was covered with Chinese characters, and had the owner's name in English, done in a weird and wonderful chirography. I spelled it out.

"'Wan Hop Lee.'

"Suddenly a light broke in upon me.

"'Tommy, Tommy,' I cried, 'look here. Do you see that letter—that name—Wan Hop Lee? That's the name of the fellow who was partner once with old Ah Fong—the name I've been trying to think of ever since that morning of the murder. And I've always thought he was at the bottom of that bloody deed.'

"'Whew!' said Tommy. 'If Wan Hop Lee is here, there is something rotten afoot, I'll bet a mint.'

"We got out at once to talk and think it over. The town offered no retreat we cared to occupy; and we therefore took to the hills beyond.

"Stopping abruptly, Tommy whirled half around, and drew a long, deep breath through his nostrils.

"'I—(sniff)—smell—(sniff)—a factory,' said he.

"I asked him what he intended to do.

"'Track it!' he answered.

"Rounding a hillside we found ourselves almost falling against a rocky dump, where the diggings from a mining tunnel, a trifle above, had been heaped by the miners.

"Whispering, Tommy turned to me:

"'Wait,' he said, and disappeared.

"In half an hour Thomas came back with the square-jawed sheriff and six of the toughest-looking hair-trigger experts I have ever had the honor to meet.

"Moving cautiously ahead we glided noiselessly into the mouth of the tunnel. The vapors that were vomited by the whole belching corridor were nearly stifling.

"At a turn the whole lurid picture burst upon our view. Half a dozen coolies, naked to the waist and glistening with perspiration, hurried about with fuel or to stir the seething black messes that boiled and bubbled over four roasting fires.

"One huge Chinaman stood a little apart, watching his companions, with leering and direful eyes. Ferocity was fairly embossed on his brutally horrible visage. Mentally I marked him for a dangerous beast, adept in murder. With a sullen roar the mountain men dashed precipitately forward.

"Alarmed at the wholly unexpected suddenness of this attack, the coolies jumped to the rear, grasping iron pokers and tools, and shading their blinded eyes to peer in the gloom that engulfed us.

"Backward most of them fell, yelling in wild dismay, and most would have died at once but the giant Chinaman hurled them forward with a monstrous swing of his powerful arm. Reaching forward to one of the rashest of the posse, he wrenched the man's revolver from his hand and nearly batted his head from his shoulders with his terrible fist. Over went the man and on came the fiend, with murder and malice twitching and lining every inch of his hideous countenance.

"Once he fired the weapon he held. The bullet plowed along the under side of the arm of one of us, making a deep and burning flesh-wound, enraging to feel. The one who got it instantly discharged a brain-spattering shung of metal, squarely at the demon, striking him straight between the eyes and laying him low forever."

The ex-reporter suddenly ceased, as if his tale were done.

"Well, but—the other Chinese," I said. "What became of them?"

"They ran too far and blindly into the tunnel when their chief went down," said he. "An abondoned shaft, dark and deep was at the end. They were never buried elsewhere."

He reached a little forward for a match, and I, sitting on a step of the porch below, could hardly help observing a long, purple scar, that began near his wrist and ran up taoward his elbow, covered, for the most part, by his shirt.

DRAINAGE BILL FAVORED.

Washington, May 17.—A favorable report on the Steenerson drainage bill was assured at yesterday's hearing before the committee on public lands of the house. The committee would have reported the measure out yesterday if Representative Gronna of North Dakota, had been present. Tams Bixby appeared as favoring the general proposition of drainage.

Adjt. Gen. Wood will receive for the batteries of the Minnesota national guard one of the first new field guns to be issued. Gen. Wood had the state claim up yesterday with the war department.

The hearing on behalf of the White Earth half-bloods, which was scheduled to take place yesterday in Senator Clapp's committee room, was adjourned without any action being taken owing to the illness of Senator Dubois of Idaho, one of the conferees. Several attorneys, both for and against allowing the White Earth lands to be sold, were on hand.

WILL MEAN GOOD ROADS

Wednesday's Meeting Will Result Beneficially to County.

Addresses at Afternoon Session Were of an Interesting Nature.

The good roads convention at the Commercial club yesterday was a big success. At the conclusion of the meeting, Hon. T. W. Huge, who presided, remarked upon the interest and enthusiasm manifested, and expressed the belief that the gathering would be productive of good results, and that, with organizations like the St. Louis County Good Roads association working in conjunction all over the state, it would be only a matter of a little time before good roads would be the common thing.

It was decided at the afternoon session to add two members to the executive committee of five, making a total of seven. Three of these will be from the ranges. The five already appointed are: L. P. Arnold, Edward Patterson, David Sang, Neil McInnes and W. G. Crosby.

The leading address of the afternoon was made by G. W. Cooley, state engineer. He said a country's civilization was judged by the condition of its roads, and gave a review of the road work in Europe.

"It isn't the farmer alone who is benefited by good roads," said Mr. Cooley. "Good roads would cut in two the cost of getting farm produce to market. As is always the case, the consumer pays the freight. So you seethe city man is just as much interested in the matter as the resident of the country. The question is of equal importance to everybody, whether one lives in the city or on a farm.

"It is not an expensive proposition to keep roads in good condition, once they have ben properly built. Under the present system of poll tax labor, it is impossible for the taxpayer to get his money's worth out of the highways constructed. At the next session of the legislature a bill will be introduced providing for the preparation of road material by convict labor. After the stone is broken, I believe the railroads will haul it anywhere in the state at actual cost. J. J. Hill has already promised as much for his road. In the past he has hauled such material in large quantities entirely free of charge. Under this system different sections of the state will be furnished with road-building material by paying the freight charges alone.

"It is our own fault if we do not have good roads. Our interests lie in the extension and improvement of the roads we already have, and in the building of new. We need the help of the legislature in passing the proper legislation in this connection. We want everybody's assistance, farmer and city man alike."

W. E. Culkin, president of the association, spoke enthusiastically of the movement, and the prospects for the future development of northern Minnesota. He was strongly in favor of the proposed Tri-City road between the Twin Cities and Duluth, and said that much of the way roads already constructed could be followed, although some of them would need quite a lot in the way of improvements. He spoke of the beauty of the drive up the St. Louis river, and said that nowhere in the state could as pretty a ride be found. Mr. Culkin said wonders could be accomplished if good roads associations in all the counties interested would work together toward a common end.

"The Relation of Farmers to Good Roads," was the topic assigned A. J. McGuire. "In a district where grain is the entire product, the farmer has to visit town only during the winter months for supplies, and all his crop is hauled to market in the fall of the year, when the roads are in excellent condition. During the spring he does not have to use the roads hardly at all. In a section where the farming is diversified, it is a different matter, and the farmer has to use the roads more.

"I am a strong advocate of the dairy industry in northern Minnesota. Everything is just right for dairying up here, particularly in the northeastern part of the state, except for the roads. The argument of bad roads is used against me wherever I go, and with strong effect. The Northeastern Minnesota roads are in a deplorable condition. It is mainly because of this fact that immigration is passing us by in favor of Canada, for the land we have to offer the farmer is as good as any in the United States, with natural conditions just as favorable to agriculture as they are anywhere.

"Northeastern Minnesota is entitled to the aid of the state in road-building. We need the assistance, and it is no more than just and right that we should be given it. I hope the prejudice of the legislature, known to exist against us, can be overcome in some way. The region of which I speak will in time develop into one of the finest farming districts in the state. All we need is good roads."

Gustave Scholle was to have spoken on "The Objects of the State Highway Commission," but as he wished to catch the afternoon train he was excused, and his place on the program was filled by Charles Halverson, another member of the commission. He spoke briefly, saying the whole object was good roads, and more of them.

F. B. McLaren of Wrenshall, spoke on "Drainage of Highways." At least that was the subject assigned him, but he preferred to talk of a proposed road between Wrenshall and Duluth. He said that now farmers of the little town, in order to reach Duluth by team had to travel over a rough and roundabout road a distance of thirty miles. It is proposed to build a direct road to Fond du Lac, there to connect by bridge with the Duluth road, shortening the distance to twenty miles.

Wrenshall will see that the road is built, said Mr. McLaren, just as soon as a bridge across the St. Louis river at Fond du Lac is assured. There would be very few hills along the route, which would be ideal as a part of the Duluth-St. Paul road. Superior is after Wrenshall to build the road into the city across the bay, but the Wrenshall farmers would much rather come to Duluth.

F. A. Watkins of Carlton spoke on "Co-operation of Good Roads Associations." Mr. Watkins' main argument was that "Every little bit helps." He promised Carlton county as a unit to work in conjunction with other counties for good roads. He said that a public sentiment should be worked up in favor of the movement wherever possible.

"The state," he said, "cannot make a better investment than to build common roads for the common people, and it is absolutely essential that this be done. We are losing settlers through our poor roads. Good roads are the main factors in the building up and development of any section of the country. We must organize, cooperate, working as a unit. If we do this, we can get anything along this line that we go after."

George F. Goodell of Barnum, who was down for a paper on "Proper Materials for Highway Construction," was not present. G. W. Cooley made a few remarks in his stead, saying that Northern Minnesota, with its mixture of iron and gravel, had the finest material in the world right at home for the building of county roads.

George T. McKay of Holyoke was not on hand, but his paper on "How to Build Roads in the Timber," was read in brief by the chairman. Good drainage was the solution of the whole problem, said Mr. McKay.

L. B. Arnold, assistant land commissioner of the Duluth & Iron Range road, was to have spoken on "Roads and Road Making," but he was not present.

RESERVOIRS OF THE MISSISSIPPI

Bede and Stevens Reach Agreement and Will Prepare Bill.

Washington, May 17.—Congressmen Bede and Stevens have reported an understanding regarding the operation of the reservoirs at the head waters of the Mississippi river and will at once begin the work of framing a bill which will permit the use of dams primarily for the prevention of floods and in the interest of commercial enterprises rather than as an aid to navigation.

The bill will take the place of Mr. Bede's resolution and he and Mr. Stevens are certain that they will have little trouble in securing a favorable report on it from the house committee on rivers and harbors. It will not be an easy task to frame the bill, as it will be necessary to juggle with language in order to attain the result desired. Under the constitution, congress cannot vote money for the assistance of private interests, and public works cannot be used primarily for those. Money can be voted to assist commerce and it was for the purpose of improving navigation that the dams were constructed.

It is held that surplus water not needed for navigation can be used for the benefit of private interests. Under this construction, Mr. Bede and Mr. Stevens hope to frame a bill that will enable the dams to be operated for the purpose of preventing floods and maintaining a regular flow for the benefit of commercial interests using water power. If there is no navigation it is argued all the water is therefore surplus water and can be used in any way deemed best.

Messrs. Bede and Stevens had little difficulty in getting together on the matter. Mr. Bede wants the reservoirs emptied during the winter months so that they can be used to catch the spring freshets and prevent the disastrous floods which have caused such immense damage in Aitkin county.

Mr. Stevens wants a regular flow at all seasons of the year.

The natural flow of the river is light during the winter and the emptying of the reservoirs during the winter months will provide a sufficient flow to keep the power plants running, while at the same time affording protection from spring floods. They hope to get the bill up before the committee within the next week or ten days.

ROBBERY AT ROSEBUD.

Rosebud, Mont., May 17.—Burglars entered the postoffice here, cracking the safe and securing more than $500 and several checks and jewelry. A nearby hardware and grocery store was first entered, tools and dynamite being taken, also several sacks of coffee, which were used to muffle the sound of the explosion. One arrest has been made.

CAPTURED IN DAKOTA.

Supposed Murderer of a Homesteader in Roseau County.

Greenbush, Minn., May 17.—Sheriff Richmond of Roseau county returned on Monday from North Dakota, where he went in search of McKenzie, the alleged murderer of Stewart at Wannaska last January. He found his man at Mickinnok, where he had been leading a swift life with several old acquaintances.

McKenzie denied all knowledge of the crime, or of ever being in Roseau county, but after being questioned by Sheriff Richmond, admitted that he was staying with Stewart last fall and winter.

He was taken to Roseau and lodged in the county jail, where he will await a hearing. He appeared to enjoy the prospect of a long wait in the county jail.

HAT, HIS BANK, BLOWS AWAY WITH SAVINGS.

Chicago, May 17.—Charles Koskal placed his savings, amounting to several thousand dollars, in his hat while his household goods were being moved.

A few minutes later a gust of wind blew his hat off and there was a scramble among the boys who were playing ball near by to see who could gather up the most of the money before Koskal's cries brought the police from the stockyards station. When the officers arrived all the boys and most of the money were gone. The policemen chased the lads several blocks, but none of them were caught.

Koskal spent several hours looking in the grass for his money, but found only a few torn pieces of bills.

BEATS OUT HIS BRAINS AGAINST SIDE OF CELL.

Butte, Mont., May 17.—Clancy Spencer, a laborer, insane from the effects of liquor, committed suicide Tuesday night at Gardiner, deliberately beating out his brains against the side of a cell in which he had been placed to sober up.

Spencer's blood was crushed in several places and blood was scattered in every direction. How he managed to continue beating his head to fracture it in several places is puzzling the physicians, as the natural conclusion is that the first fracture must have made him unconscious. Spencer's home is in Bozeman.

KENNA'S BODY BLOWN TO BITS

Pieces of Flesh Found Over Area of Two Acres.

Pine City, Minn., May 17.—Hiram Kenna was literally blown to pieces by an explosion of dynamite yesterday. He was clearing stumps from his land two miles south of this place, and it is supposed that he went to see why a charge which he had placed under a stump did not explode.

The entire upper portion of his body was distributed over an area of two acres. His legs were blown about a hundred yards and were not mutilated, but otherwise only scraps of bones and flesh were found.

Coroner Wiseman was at the scene shortly after the accident. The scene was gruesome in the extreme, and Kenna's wife is nearly crazed. He has resided in this county for thirty years, and was highly respected. He was a member of the A. O. U. W. lodge of Pine City. A wife and five children survive.

USE ACIDS ON MEATS.

The state pure food department of Wisconsin is making matters exceedingly warm for retail meat dealers of Superior who have been doping meats that they sold the public.

Several butchers have pleaded guilty to the use of either sulphuric acid or boric acid to preserve hamburger steak or bologna sausage that was getting too old to be salable, and have been fined in the municipal court. The fine imposed in each case was $25, but the butchers who have pleaded guilty have received advertising that is likely to cost them more than their fines.

One butcher who was the last week fined for using acids to preserve steaks, has been arrested again and fined $25 for selling renovated butter.

One or two other cases against butchers are still pending until the pure food department gets its evidence ready.

The Democratic state convention for the adoption of a platform of principles will be held in Milwaukee June 27 and 28. This announcement was made from Wausau, Wis., Wednesday by H. H. Manson, chairman of the state central committee, La Crosse and Madison were also candidates for the gathering.

Ebridge T. Jordan of Eau Claire, Wis., who was in federal service on the United States gunboat Pontiac during the civil war, received notice from the treasury department that he had been allowed $1.89 as his share of prize money for the capture of a confederate gunboat on the Savannah river in 1865.

SEASON IS UNDER WAY

Opening Games Being Played in Four Cities on Circuit.

Secretary Glass Says Umpires Will be Given Complete Control.

Play ball!

In four cities of the Copper Country and Northern league, the welcome call of the umpire will be heard again this afternoon.

Duluth is opening the season at Fargo. The White Sox, thirteen strong, left Duluth last evening at 7 o'clock, for the West, and were due to arrive at Fargo early this morning. The following men were taken along on the trip: Pitchers, Treadway, Pool, Krick, Ferguson and Morton; catcher, Adams; first base, O'Dea; second base, Livingstone; short stop, Griebner; third base, Lovett; outfielders, McCormick, Ludwig and Barto.

Krick is slated to pitch the opening game this afternoon, and he will be opposed by either Finnegan or Hanson of the Fargo team.

The White Sox will play four games at Fargo, today, tomorrow, Saturday and Sunday. From Fargo they will jump to Grand Forks for three games, and then to Winnipeg for a series of four games, playing two games there on May 24, the great Canadian holiday.

Returning to Duluth, they will open the season here with Fargo on Monday, May 28. Fargo will remain until Decoration day, and then the Copper country teams will be seen. Lake Linden will come first, followed by Calumet, Houghton and Hancock. These games will keep the White Sox at home until June 13, when they take a trip to the Copper country.

The other three games being played today are at Calumet, Winnipeg and Houghton-Hancock. Grand Forks is playing at Winnipeg, Lake Linden at Calumet and the Houghton and Hancock teams are fighting it out at Ripley Park, midway between the two cities.

"This year, the officials of the Northern-Copper Country league will run the league through the umpires. The umpires will step on the field Thursday, to have absolute and positive control of the field. We, as the league, are going to give the public a fair, square, clean game of baseball and any ball player that thinks he can run the game will be brought to account from the very jump.

"This season, the umpires will be vested with every authority under the national agreement. In case he has to call police protection to enforce this rule, he will do so and in all his decisions he will be backed up thoroughly by the secretary and president of the league."

TWENTY-ONE CARNEGIE MEDALS ARE AWARDED.

Pittsburg, May 17.—Twenty-one awards of medals and money were made by the Carnegie hero fund commission yesterday. To fill vacancies caused by William Scott's death and the resignation of E. H. Anderson, Taylor Allerdice and Albert J. Barr were elected.

It is expected the medals will be ready for distribution about July 1.

Among the awards are: A silver medal and $1,200 to liquidate indebtedness of his property was awarded Timothy E. Heagerty, lake pilot of Ashtabula, Ohio., who in April, 1905, rescued the captain and crew of the schooner Yukon in a gale on Lake Erie. A bronze medal and $500, was given to Robert W. Simpson, the engineer of the tug of which Heagerty was pilot. This award is made in connection with the same rescue. Michael Sasso, the fireman, also of Ashtabula, Ohio, is given a bronze medal and $500.

GAME GOES TO SENIORS

Faculty of High School Loses Exciting Twelve Inning Contest.

Teachers and Students Put Up Fast Article of Ball.

Yesterday afternoon the high school seniors succeeded in defeating the faculty at baseball by a score of 11 to 10, but it required twelve innings to do it, and the game was as exciting, close, and as wonderfully played as any contest that ever took place on the local diamond. Never before has the faculty been able to get together a bunch of as expert ball chasers as they did yesterday, and the over-confident seniors were given some very bad scares, the game being won and lost several times in the last three innings.

The pitchers, Phillips, for the faculty, and Forsyth for the seniors, divided honors very evenly, the former having ten strikeouts and two bases on balls charged up to him, while Forspth made the teachers fan the air thirteen times, passed five men, and hit one.

The teachers came to bat first and made a very ambitious beginning. Joyce getting four balls, stealing second, and coming home on Phillips' single. Brennehan, the West Duluth catcher, laced the ball to Shortstop Amundson and succeeded in reaching first, but Phillip was retired at second. Brace and Ferguson then showed that they knew what was wanted of them and each landed on Forsyth for neat singles, bringing Brennehan home. Culmer and Townsend fanned.

The first two seniors, who came to bat were retired in short order and it looked like a goose egg for '06, but Crassweller drew a single which he stretched into a two-bagger on an error and came home on Park's single. Park made second and third on errors and Forsyth's single brought him home, tying the score. There was nothing doing in the second for either side. Neal found the ball but failed to reach first, and Gregory and Joyce famed. Mr. Gregory wanted another chance, but was turned down. In the third the seniors succeeded in shutting out the faculty and in their half of the inning put Crassweller and Parks over the plate making the score 4 to 2.

The next inning the faculty woke up in earnest. That lead of 2 seemed to stir them up as nothing else could have done and they played gilt-edged ball. Culmer drew four balls, was advanced to second by Townsend's single, went to third on a hit by Neal, and all badly handled bunt by Gregory enabled him to score. Joyce then showed himself equal to the occasion and swatted the leather for two bases, bringing Neal home. Phillips knocked a difficult fly to Holmberg, who made a brilliant catch, but Brennehan found Forsyth for another two-bagger and Gregory and Joyce raced home. Forsyth passed Brace and a hit by Culmer brought Brennehan home and advanced Brace to third. There he died, however, when Townsend fanned and Ober got a high four from Neal. This revenge did not satisfy the pedagogues, however, and the way they retired the seniors was a caution. Abraham pasted a hot one to Joyce, who made a fine stop and got it to first in time to retire the runner. Amundson got to first, attempted to steal second and was cut off five feet from the base by a fine throw from Brenneham to Brace. Ober fanned out, leaving the score, faculty, 7; seniors, 4.

The fifth was not so fortunate for the teachers and Gregory, Joyce and Phillips were retired in one-two-three order. In the seniors' half of the inning, though Bowen and Crassweller went out on pop flies to the infield, a bunch of singles brought Parks, Forsyth and Kindy home, overcoming the lead gained in the fourth. The sixth resulted in a goose-egg for both teams. In the seventh Neal drew a base on balls, went to third on a single by Joyce that was converted into a two-bagger by an error, and came home on Phillips' fly to left field, which was missed. Gregory and Townsend fanned and Joyce was put out at the plate. For the seniors, Forsyth got a two-bagger and came home on Abraham's single, again tying the score.

This performance was practically repeated for two innings, each team scoring one, and the ninth closed with the score of 10 to 9. Both teams played perfect ball for the next two innings. In the tenth the faculty sent up three flies, all of which weer gathered in. Ober got a single, Bowen fanned out, Crassweller got a single and Ober was put out at home plate by Phillips. Parks sent a pop fly to Brace.

In the eleventh, two flies and a foul retired the faculty and though the seniors got two hits, no one scored. When the twelfth opened, the crowd had left the bleachers and formed along the base lines, yelling like mad. Brennecham, for the first time during the contest, failed to find the ball, and ingloriously fanned out. Brace found the leather, but failed to beat it to first, and Ferguson met a like fate, retiring the side. Amundsen for the seniors got a single. Ober sent a difficult fly to left field, where Ferguson made a brilliant catch, and when Bowen drew two strikes things looked good for another inning. Meanwhile Amundson stole second and third and then Bowen found the ball for a short hit that brought Amundson in with the winning tally.

The faculty color, cardinal red, was much in evidence, every one but members of '06 being enthusiastic supporters of the teachers. The faculty yell goes as follows:

"We'll root for the tutors that toot,
We'll toot for the rooters that root.
And we'll root for the tutors that tutor us rooters,

It was tried on several occasions, but proved to be such a tongue-twister that it was not very effective. Miss Trufant's work as mascot was highly effective until the fatal twelfth, and sustaining the luck of a team for nine innings is about all that can be required of any one in this capacity. Elmer Mellevitt's umpiring was highly appreciated by the faculty, though the seniors accuse him of trying to "win a home" with the teachers. The line-up:

Brennehan	c	Ober
Brace	2b	Bowen

Insurance Commissioner of Wisconsin to Influence Decision

Milwaukee, May 17.—The most sensational testimony which has been presented to the special insurance investigation committee of the Wisconsin legislature was given yesterday afternoon when Insurance Commissioner Host of the Wisconsin department of insurance testified before the committee that on June 16, 1903, the day on which the hearing in the case of the state of Wisconsin against the Equitable Life Insurance society of the United States for compulsory distribution of the surplus of that company to its policyholders was to be held by him, Secretary of State Walter L. Houser, entered the insurance commissioner's office and said that if Mr. Host would render a decision in accordance with a slip handed by Mr. Houser to Mr. Host, which would have been a decision favorable to the Equitable company, that the Equitable Life Assurance society would give $2,000 toward a campaign fund for a renomination of the state officers in the next campaign.

The slip which Insurance Commissioner Host testified Secretary of State Houser handed to him, was presented to the committees and contained on it these words:

"Petition is denied and same is dismissed for the reason that a determination of the subject therefor required the exercise of judicial function that cannot be exercised by the defendant.

"It is further announced as a rule of this department that no similar proceedings be entertained until a final adjudication of the same is had in the courts of the state."

Mr. Host testified that he told Mr. Houser that he would think the matter over. His decision was against the Equitable Life Assurance society, which afterwards took the case into the courts and there obtained a rule adverse to Mr. Host's order for a cumpulsory distribution of the surplus on deferred dividend policies at least once in five years. Insurance Commissioner Host further testified that Robert Luscomb, a lobyist, who had for years represented Eastern insurance companies before various legislatures, telephoned to him three times from Chicago, between June 16 and July 31, 1903, the latter having been the day on which Mr. Host rendered his decision, and asked Mr. Host to come to Chicago, saying he thought he had an argument which would convince Mr. Host that the statute in question was not compulsory.

Secretary of State Houser took the stand in his own defense and admitted that he and Luscombe were friends and declared that Luscombe had handed him the written slip of paper which he had handed to Mr. Host and requested that he give it to the insurance commissioner. Mr. Houser, however, emphatically denied that any mention was made of a campaign fund contribution at the time of his handing the slip of paper on which the Equitable decision was written, to the insurance commissioner.

Mr. Houser admitted that he had asked Mr. Host to request contributions from insurance companies for a political campaign fund against Congressman J. W. Babcock in the Third Wisconsin district and said Mr. Host had not taken unkindly to the suggestion, but said he would think the matter over.

This suggestion in regard to the Babcock campaign fund was, however, not made at the time of the handing of the slip in regard to the Equitable decision.

Both Secretary of State Houser and Insurance Commissioner Host have been among the most prominent La Follette men of this state. Secretary Houser is running for a third term and in his testimony he intimated strongly that he considered the charges a campaign move against him.

In rebuttal, after Mr. Houser's testimony, Insurance Commissioner Host declared Mr. Houser had never approached him in regard to obtaining insurance campaign funds against Mr. Babcock. Once Mr. Host said, someone around the capitol, he could not say whom, asked if contributions to the campaign funds could not be obtained from the insurance companies and that he had promptly said he would not be a party to any such requests for funds.

Correspondence was read into the records showing that Mr. Host had informed Attorney General O'Connor, who is his private attorney, of this Houser incident many months ago and that Mr. O'Connor had brought Mr. Host before the committee to testify in the case.

Because of the prominence of the parties politically, the testimony of Mr. Host is an immense political sensation as well as an insurance sensation in this state.

Frank Bryant, a clerk in the office of the insurance commissioner, was also sworn. He testified in corroboration of Mr. Houser that on June 16, 1903, he entered the office of Mr. Host just as Secretary of State Houser was leaving and that Mr. Houser appeared very much excited. Upon entering the office, Mr. Bryant said Mr. Host showed him the Equitable slip introduced in evidence and told him of the offer which the secretary of state had made.

Insurance Commissioner Host testified that when the bill was pending last winter before the legislature, which had for its purpose the making of the five year distribution of deferred dividends compulsory, Secretary of State Houser asked him for a copy of a brief which Mr. Host had prepared when the Equitable case was pending before the courts, saying that he desired the brief for Senator Frear. Later, Mr. Host said he asked Mr. Frear in regard to the brief and was told that the senator had never asked Mr. Houser for the brief nor had the brief ever been given to Mr. Frear.

Intimation was given in the questions of Attorney O'Connor to Mr. Houser that perhaps this brief was obtained for the use of some opponent of the five year distribution bill. Mr. Houser said he did not remember the incident, but said that if any opponent of the bill had desired to see the brief, and he had it in his possession, he would have allowed the opponent of the bill to look it over. Mr. Houser claimed to have always been a friend of stringent insurance legislation before the legislature.

Chairman Frear corroborated Mr. Host to the extent that he had never asked Mr. Houser for the brief. Owing to the fact that Senator Frear is a candidate for secretary of state, he is taking no part in this Host-Houser incident.

CHURCH FOR PARK POINT

New Building Will be Erected at Twenty-Eighth Street.

Will be Run on Broad Lines for All Denominations.

The first church building erected on Park Point will be constructed this summer, and the 2,000 residents of that locality will have a convenient place of worship for the first time in the history of the point.

The plans for the church are the outcome of the mission established on the point last summer by Rev. Arthur H. Wurtele of Trinity mission.

Mr. Wurtele organized a Sunday school with an original membership of about twelve scholars and also held Sunday afternoon services for campers. The Sunday school now has a total membership of about 140, and the Sunday afternoon services are well attended.

Those who have taken an active part in aiding Mr. Wurtele have decided that it is time the point had a church building of some kind, and a meeting will be held this evening, either in the school building at Thirtieth street or in one of the houses opposite, for the purpose of discussing the plans.

"Such a church," said Mr. Wurtele this morning, "need necessarily be run on very broad lines, as it will be used by people of almost every denomination.

"It is our intention to build a church that will seat from 160 to 200 people, the size and cost depending on the donations we receive.

"We hope to make the church a religious and social center for that part of the city. The building will not be consecrated, so that it can be used for lectures and entertainments.

"We propose to extend an invitation to ministers of all denominations to speak there during the summer, and we hope we can appeal, through this church, to every person on the point.

"I have never met a broader-minded class of people than there is living on the point, and they are giving this project their hearty support.

"While the church itself will not be consecrated, there may be a chancel in connection with it, that will be used exclusively for church services."

HEAVY ORDERS BY RAILROADS

Show That Liberal Buying of Rails is to Continue.

Cleveland, Ohio, May 17.—The Iron Trade Review says: The very great prosperity of the railroads, so closely connected with that of the iron and steel business has been reflected for many months in unprecedentedly heavy purchases of rails, and that the supplies of liberal buying is not to be abandoned is clearly shown by the heavy orders already placed, and others pending. It is estimated that 1,000,000 tons of steel rails for 1907 delivery has been under negotiation, and that fully half of this tonnage has been placed.

The Illinois Steel company, which has already been patronized liberally by Western railroads, will probably book orders for 1907 considerably in excess of its present capacity, with the exception that the new mill at Gary, Ind., will be completed in time to assist in filling orders.

The strike of moulders in a number of leading manufacturing cities has had a depressing effect on foundry grades of pig iron, and causes a tendency toward weakness in some places, especially in the Chicago district, where Southern iron has been bought from 25 to 50 cents per ton lower than recent quotations. Ohio furnaces have shown considerable eagerness for business. The very high price of tin is expected to have effect on the tin plate market. Tin has this week reached the highest quotation on record.

The demand for structural material shows some diminution, but mills are very busy on old orders. The San Francisco demand has not been heard from to any appreciable extent.

TOOK CARBOLIC ACID.

Bemidji, Minn. May 17.—(Special to The Herald.)—Word comes from Kelliher that Mrs. James Story of that place made a sensational attempt at suicide, early Wednesday morning. While particulars of the rash attempt at self-destruction are meager, it is known that the woman swallowed a quantity of carbolic acid. A physician was summoned, and at last accounts there were hopes of saving her life. James Story, wife of the woman, owns a saloon at Kelliher and is a man of considerable means, having made a good sum in mining in Nevada. Jealousy of her husband is said to have been the cause of the attempted suicide.

EXPERIMENT IS FAILURE

Concrete Foundations in Sand Have Proven Unstable.

Government Will Hereafter Lay Concrete on Piling.

The damage that has been done the concrete sea walls laid in the sand without a foundation of piling during the past year has discouraged the government from attempting any more of that class of construction. Experience has demonstrated that concrete laid in the sand without a more substantial foundation is not only unsatisfactory, but is far from being an economical proposition in the long run.

Last year was one of severe storms and the concrete work the government had completed at the Duluth ship canal was given a severe test. All the concrete work resting on rock filled crib work in the water, or on piling in the sand, successfully withstood the elements, but in a number of places where the wall was laid in the sand without pile foundation the water washed the sand from under and the walls have been destroyed. The government is making preparation at the present time to rebuild a considerable amount of concrete sea wall so constructed with the last few years and which was destroyed during the past winter.

Although an expensive experiment, the destruction of the sea walls will be a valuable object lesson to the government or private individuals or corporations. That such walls must have a firm foundation in order to meet the expectations of the builder is pretty well established and the mistakes of the past will, it is claimed by the engineers, prevent a repetition in the future.

The extensive use that has been made of concrete at the Head of the Lakes has already brought to this place a large number of engineers from all parts of the country and some foreign countries, to study the conditions under which the concrete has been laid and the effects of the climate, water and fire on the material.

Last summer, in particular, there were several visitors here from outside points for the purpose of studying the concrete pier blocks laid in the water at Superior entry. This work, it is said, is the first of any consequence where concrete was laid under water, the usual custom having been to build a cofferdam or some sort of protection to keep out the water while the construction work was under way. The success had by the government engineers in building the inner portion of the new pier at Superior entry has caused a great deal of favorable comment in the engineering world and it is believed that the old cofferdam style of construction will be abandoned hereafter. It will mean a large saving in the expense of putting down concrete foundations for all sorts of piers and bridge rests.

This spring there have been several engineers here to inspect and make a report on the condition of the concrete elevator on Rice's Point, which withstood the terrific heat to which it was exposed in the big elevator fire a few months ago. The test is said to have been a very severe one and the engineering interests who have to do with concrete construction have gained an excellent idea of the fire resisting qualities of cement.

Attention is slowly but surely turning to concrete construction for houses and already the city has a number of buildings constructed entirely out of cement blocks. The success of these experiments are being carefully watched. When, in the next year or two, it is demonstrated that concrete block houses withstand the climate without deterioration or the gathering of moisture on the inside, the cement market at the Head of the Lakes is likely to receive a decided boost.

THE WORLD'S COMMERCE

Will Aggregate Fully Twenty-Five Billion Dollars in 1906.

Washington, May 17.—(Special to The Herald.)—The world's international commerce will aggregate fully $25,000,000,000 in the year 1906. In 1900 it aggregated, in round terms, $20,000,000,000; in 1890, $17,500,000,000; in 1880, $14,750,000,000; in 1870, $10,500,000,000; in 1860, $7,250,000,000, and in 1850, $4,000,000,000. By the term "world's international commerce" is meant the imports plus the exports of all countries of the world from which statistical trade reports were available at the dates named.

These figures, which show an enormous increase and indicate that the trade between nations in the present year will be six times as much as in 1850, two and one-half times as much as in 1870, and 25 per cent more than in 1900, are based upon careful aggregations of the imports and exports of the various countries of the world made by the department of commerce and labor through its bureau of statistics.

The aggregation covers the latest available year. In some cases the figures are those of 1905; in others, 1904, and in a few cases those of 1903. This aggregation, recently made, gives a grand total of a little more than $24,000,000,000. Later figures are, however, being accumulated constantly by the bureau of statistics, and these are so adjusted that it is possible to compare the monthly average of the imports and exports of the principal countries down to and including part of 1906. A comparison of these monthly averages of imports and exports with those of the corresponding periods of the preceding year justifies the assertion that the total international commerce of the year 1906 will be fully $25,000,000,000.

An examination of these figures of imports and exports of the principal countries of the world and the monthly average of their exports and imports gives some interesting facts. This monthly average is necessarily adopted as a method of comparison of trade conditions among the various countries, because their fiscal years end at such varying dates that it is quite impossible to compare the totals for complete years and bring the calculation down to the present moment. By taking the monthly average for that part of the fiscal year already completed, however, a comparison of the trade of the various countries with their own trade in a corresponding period of last year is possible, and it is also practicable to compare the monthly average of one country with any other of the thirty countries included in this list which the bureau of statistics publishes each month in its monthly summary of commerce and finance.

An examination of this table with the purpose of comparing the world's commerce at the present moment with that of a year ago shows that the average monthly exports of Argentina have increased from $21,500,000 to practically $26,000,000; those of Austria-Hungary from $27,000,000 to $37,000,000 per month; those of Belgium from $30,750,000 to $34,750,000, those of Canada from $16,750,000 to $20,500,000, those of France from $64,500,000 to $72,333,000, those of Germany from $103,500,000 to $110,750,000, those of China from $11,500,000 to practically $14,000,000, those of Cuba from $7,500,000 to $9,250,000, those of Mexico from $6,750,000 to practically $10,000,000, those of European Russia from $41,000,000 to $43,500,000, those of the United Kingdom from $127,000,000 to $143,500,000, and those of the United States from $125,000,000 to $147,000,000 per month.

These comparisons, it should be understood, relate to the monthly average exportation in the accumulated months of the fiscal year of each country named, compared with the monthly average of the corresponding months of the preceding year, and, as the dozen countries above named are the principal exporting countries of the world, it is quite fair to assume that the world's total of exports will aggregate in the present year considerably more than that of the preceding year.

The fact that the total exports have increased as above indicated makes it quite apparent that the imports must have also increased, and this conclusion is justified by the import figures, which show that the monthly average of Argentina's imports have increased from $15,000,000 to $16,500,000; Austria-Hungary's from $35,750,000 to $43,750,000; Belgium's from $41,250,000 to $51,500,000; Canada's from $19,500,000 to over $22,000,000, China's from $17,750,000 to $20,000,000, Cuba's from $6,500,000 to nearly $8,000,000; that of France from $78,000,000 to $85,500,000, Germany from $126,150,000 to $133,500,000; Italy from $28,150,000 to over $32,500,000, Netherlands from $76,000,000 to $80,500,000, United Kingdom from $226,150,000 to $241,500,000, and the United States from $93,150,000 to $101,500,000.

The only countries in the list which show a falling off in monthly average in exports being Bulgaria, Greece, Portugal and Sweden, and in each of these cases the reduction is slight, while the countries which show a reduction in monthly average of imports are Bulgaria, Cape of Good Hope, Greece, Japan, Norway, European Russia and Uruguay. These reductions in both the imports and exports are small, and relate in most cases to countries having a comparatively small trade, and this will not offer any material offset to the enlargement of the total international commerce indicated by the monthly increases of the more important commercial countries.

One interesting fact which an examination of these figures of average monthly trade of the principal countries of the world develops is that the United States now stands clearly at the head of the world's great exporting nations. The average monthly exportation from the United States in nine months ending with March is shown by the bureau of statistics at $147,208,973; the monthly average from the United Kingdom for the same period, $143,574,912; the average from Germany during the twelve months ending with December, 1905, $110,717,800; the monthly average from France for the twelve-month period ending with February, $72,370,400; that from Netherlands for the twelve months ending December, 1904, $66,426,224; from European Russia for the twelve months ending December, 1905, $43,699,800; British India, the average for the ten months ending with January, 1906, $41,667,524; Canada, for the eight months ending February, 1906, $20,403,753; China, monthly average for the twelve months ending December, 1904, $13,930,142, and Japan, for the month of January, 1906, $12,316,707.

An examination of the import column shows that the United States, which ranks first as an exporter, stands third among the nations as an importer, the monthly average of importation into the United States for the nine months ending with March, being $101,506,417; the monthly average into the United Kingdom in the same period, $241,390,911; into Germany during the twelve months ending with December, 1905, $133,478,333; France, $85,423,650; Netherlands, $80,470,686, and Belgium, $51,682,300, while in all others of the countries named the average of imports falls below the $50,000,000 line.

Danderine

GREW THIS HAIR AND WE CAN PROVE IT.

MISS MARMARA HENRY,
5036 Forrestville Ave., CHICAGO.

"Miss Henry says: "Before I began using Danderine my hair was falling out in great handfuls, and I am pleased to say that Danderine not only stopped it at once, but has made my hair grow more than twice as long as it ever was."

Mrs. Eloise Atherton, Little Rock, Ark., says: "It is surely remarkable the way Danderine improves the hair. It has made my hair grow ten inches longer in five months and it is getting thicker and longer all the time. I believe in giving praise where it is due, and you can use my name as reference if you so desire."

FLORENCE RUSSELL,
Age 6 years,
215 Mohawk Street, CHICAGO.

Since it has become generally known that Danderine causes hair to grow just as abundantly on the heads of children as it does on those of matured persons, many truly marvelous cases are coming to our notice. Little Miss Russell, whose photograph appears above, is certainly one of the remarkable ones. Her beautiful hair is over thirty inches long and her mother says that "DANDERINE GREW EVERY BIT OF IT."

MISS SELMA HASSELL,

Miss Hassel says: "My hair would not reach below my waist when I began using your Danderine. It was also faded and splitting at the ends. Now it is over 2½ feet longer than it ever was and it has regained its original rich blond color. I used the tonic about four months all together."

DANDERINE is to the hair what fresh showers of rain and sunshine are to vegetation. It goes right to the roots, invigorates and strengthens them. Its exhilarating, fertilizing and life-producing properties cause the hair to grow abundantly long, strong and beautiful. IT IS THE NATURAL FOOD OF THE HAIR, SCIENTIFICALLY CHARGED WITH NEW AND GENUINE LIFE-PRODUCING ESSENCES UNHEARD OF BY OTHER MAKERS OF HAIR TONIC. NOW at all druggists in three sizes, 25 cents, 50 cents and $1.00 per bottle.

PROPOSAL FOR GARBAGE COLLECTION MODIFIED

Seven Important Changes Made in Proposal of John M. Root.

Will Collect Hard Coal Ashes in April and May.

Seven important changes have been made by John M. Root in his proposal to collect the garbage and refuse of the city, and it will be a greatly modified bid that will be considered at the citizens' meeting next Monday afternoon.

One of the amendments provides for the collection of hard coal ashes during the months of April and May. This will allow all citizens who have their ashes taken away but once a year, to have them removed in the spring without cost.

1. "That the word 'exclusive' be stricken out."

2. That in no case shall the charge for removal of garbage, etc., from any residence be more than $1.25 per month from May 1 to Nov. 1, nor more than $1 per month from Nov. 1 to May 1, of each year.

3. That in figuring rates for buildings used for residence purposes, halls, attics and basements shall not be considered in figuring floor space under my bid.

4. "That in determining rates for commission houses under said bid, only the ground or first floor thereof shall be considered in figuring floor space.

5. "That although the advertisement for bids does not mention ashes, I will further agree to remove from all residences or flat buildings for which service is being rendered by me under my contract, all accumulations of hard coal ashes, such removal to be made during the months of April and May of each year during the term of the contract.

6. "That the council or health commissioner shall at all times have the right to make demands of me for improvement or betterments in the service to be rendered, provided I be given sixty days notice in writing by the health commissioner or the city council of any such demands, or of any default in the performance of the contract on my part, before such contract can be annulled or my bond forfeited.

7. "That the city shall have the privilege of purchasing the entire equipment, at the end of five years, according to the provisions of chapter 25 of the city charter, or in such other manner as may be mutually agreed upon between the parties to said contract; provided, that I shall be given written notice of such intention to purchase at least six months before the expiration of such five-years period."

The amendments remove some of the chief objections to the bid. The ashes were one point on which many found fault, but the change made Mr. Root will quiet the protests of at least those who have their ashes removed but once a year. Cutting out the halls, attics and basements will greatly reduce the average cost to the householders, and the commission men will benefit by the amendment figuring only one floor of their buildings.

Following is the schedule of rates, which is subject to the foregoing amendments:

Hospitals not to exceed 3 cents per 100 square feet of floor space per month.

Meat markets not to exceed 6 cents per 100 square feet of floor space per month.

Grocery stores not to exceed 5 cents per 100 square feet of floor space per month.

Fish markets not to exceed 10 cents per 100 square feet of floor space per month.

Rooming houses not to exceed 3 cents per 100 square feet of floor space per month.

Department stores not to exceed 2 cents per 100 square feet of floor space per month.

All other stores of various kinds not mentioned not to exceed 3 cents per 100 square feet of floor space per month.

DEMANDS OF THE UNIONS

Firemen Ask Carriers for Seven Fifty More a Month.

They Also Want Earlier Fall Schedule—Tug Conference.

The trouble between the Lake Carriers' association and the marine firemen, oilers and water tenders, over which a chance for another marine strike exists, seems to be solely a question of wage scale. Last year the men were paid at the rate of $55 a month from the opening of navigation to Oct. 1 and $55 a month from Oct. 1 to the close of the season. This year they have made a demand for $57.50 a month, an advance of $7.50 for the summer schedule, and they want the fall schedule to start on Sept. 1 instead of Oct. 1. Agreement has been reached on almost all other points.

In the conference between the Great Lakes Towing company and the Licensed Tugmens' Protective association, the officials of the tug company are making a new demand. They want the licensed men on the tugs to hire the firemen and the firemen and be responsible for them. President Smith of the tug company claims that last season the firemen violated their agreement with the tug company several times and he does not want to make another contract with them unless he has some guarantee that it will be carried out.

At the conferences this year, the proposition of time contracts will be discussed. The coal and ore handlers have already made contracts covering this season and next and are much pleased with them, as trouble is out of the way for two years anyway.

FOR ROCK OF AGES.

Washington, May 17.—The house committee on interstate and foreign commerce yesterday authorized a favorable report on an omnibus bill carrying between twenty and twenty-five projects as "aids to navigation," and authorizing an appropriation of something in excess of $1,300,000. The bill provides as follows:

Light and fog signal station on the south end of the breakwater, harbor of refuge, Milwaukee, Wis., $100,000; light-keeper's dwelling at Sheboygan light station, Sheboygan, Wis., $6,000; light-keeper's dwelling at Menominee harbor, Mich., $5,000; two range lights, Isle Aux Peches, Lake St. Clair, Mich., $18,000; light vessel to be placed off Martin's reef, northwest end of Lake Huron, Mich., $4,000; light and fog general station on Rock of Ages, Lake Superior, $100,000, in addition to $25,000 heretofore appropriated.

REFERENDUM VOTE

Of Union Will Decide Whether Marine Workers Shall Strike.

Cleveland, May 17.—Upon the result of the referendum vote of the members of the Marine Firemen, Oilers' and Water Tenders' union will depend whether another strike is to interfere with lake shipping, following the one which recently resulted in a victory for the vesselmen. After withdrawing from the conference with the representatives of the Lake Carriers' association, the delegates of the Firemen's union yesterday decided to let the members of the union vote on the proposition made by the lake carriers for a continuation of last year's wage schedule. It is not known what recommendation the union delegates will make, but the general opinion is that the offer of the vessel owners will be accepted and that no strike will follow.

The Buffalo members of the lake carriers' executive committee went home Tuesday night, and the conference with the grain scoopers was postponed until today, when a settlement will be made. Officials of the Great Lakes Towing company and delegates from the Tugmen's union were in conference all day yesterday, but no agreement was reached and they will meet again today. The delegates are standing pat on their demand for every Saturday and every other Sunday off. With that point settled, an agreement will soon be reached.

ARE CLEANING IT UP.

Blockade in Cleveland is Being Relieved Very Rapidly.

Word comes from Cleveland that the big fleet that was hung up there by the strike has been taken care of in good shape and by the end of the week the jam will be pretty well cleaned up. When the strike was called off, all the berths at the different docks were taken and twenty-five or thirty big carriers were held out in Lake Erie.

The rule adopted by the shippers to have the vessels take their turns on the basis of their passage at Detroit worked well and a jam was prevented in the harbor.

Spot ore carriers are said to be scarce, but the shippers report that they are having no trouble getting tonnage for the latter part of the week. The movement of grain is light all around and most of the freighters are coming to Lake Superior for ore.

Coal is coming forward more freely, and there will be a fair movement from Ohio ports this week. The hard coal shippers are not taking much tonnage and many boats that trade to Buffalo are going to Cleveland for cargoes. The indications are that there will be plenty of business for all the boats and that carrying charges will hold steady for some time.

Marine Notes.

The dock managers at Lake Erie ports have fixed the unloading charge to vessels on ore at 20 cents a ton, which is the same as last season.

Capt. C. E. Benham has arranged to have a light placed on the wreck of the schooner Algeria every night.

After waiting more than twenty-four hours, the steamer Superior City got over the Lime Kiln crossing Sunday with her load of ore. She drew 18 feet 11 inches of water and had been loaded for South Chicago and then diverted when the strike came to a quick conclusion.

Bids have been opened for dredging Round Island shoals, St. Mary's river. The lowest bidders were: Shoal 1, M. Sullivan, Detroit, 21½ cents cubic yard; 2, Lake Erie Dredging company, 49 cents yard. The sum of $58,000 is available for the work.

The deck load of lumber and ties on the sunken schooner Williams, at Amherstburg, will be taken off, and it is hoped that she will then float without much trouble. If this is successful, she will be taken to Detroit for repairs.

Assistant United States Engineer Dixon of Detroit scouts the idea that there is an obstruction in the channel, and thinks boats are hitting on the west bank instead. The captains of the City of Cleveland and of the Williams insist they were in the channel.

Mr. Harry Woodthorpe and Miss Edith Henderson will announce their engagement at Flaaten's conservatory tomorrow night.

STANDS BY BROTHER

Claims That Steve Was Stabbed by Marco Bukovich.

Supporting his brother's plea of self-defense in the Bukovich murder trial, Dan Bukovich gave testimony, relating the fatal quarrel at the Morris mine location last Easter Sunday, that made the situation appear in a more favorable light for Steve Bukovich, the fratracide, than at any previous period during the trial.

Dan Bukovich, who seems to be the youngest of the five Bukovich brothers mixed in the trouble that resulted in the shooting of Marco Bukovich, testified that early in the evening of the tragedy Steve Bukovich left his boarding camp and went to another close by, followed by Marco Bukovich, who had been discharged from his position as cook by Steve a few days previous. Dan stated that Steve returned to the camp a little later and that the quarrel was started by Marco striking Steve in the face and knocking him down. The witness claimed that when Steve got up Marco clinched with him, and he and Mike Bukovich separated them. Marco is alleged to have made the remark that he wanted everybody else to keep out; that he had business to settle with his brother Steve, and would "fix him."

Dan says that Marco and Nicco Bukovich, another brother, attacked Steve, Nicco seizing Steve around the body and arms from behind while he stuck a knife into him with his left hand. The witness claimed that Marco had Steve by the throat with his right hand, while he struck him in the stomach with a knife held in his left hand.

Steve is alleged to have cried out that his brothers had stabbed him, when Nicco ran out the door saying he had done no cutting. Dan further testified that Steve started toward the bed, followed by Marco, and seized his revolver from under the mattress and hastily leveling it at Marco fired, the shot striking Marco in the breast and killing him.

According to Dan's story, he and Mike disarmed Steve and put him in bed, while they laid Marco out on a table. Following the shooting, Steve is claimed to have expressed his belief that he was dying from his knife wound and called his brother Dan to get some things from his trunk that he wished to send to his wife before he died.

In contrast to the story told by Dan Bukovich were the conflicting statements of Mike Bukovich, who yesterday testified that he saw no knives or stabbing and this morning claimed that he saw knives in the hands of both Marco and Nicco and saw them stab Steve.

At noon the testimony of Dan Bukovich was just being completed. This afternoon he was to undergo cross-examination by County Attorney McClintock, and Steve Bukovich was to go on the stand in his own behalf.

The testimony so far shows that Steve Bukovich was a sort of a camp foreman and that his four brothers had subordinate positions and acted under his orders. Of the brothers thus far produced in court, the accused is the most intelligent and best dressed.

SUPERIOR TO BE ABANDONED

Commander Mill People Decide Not to Rebuild in Wisconsin.

The Commander flour mill in Superior, which burned some weeks ago, will not be rebuilt. Gregory, Cook & Company, proprietors of the mill, have decided not to re-enter the manufacturing field on the other side of the bay and the Wisconsin grain inspection law is the cause for such a decision.

After the fire grave doubts were expressed as to whether the company would rebuilt or not. The Superiorites hoped that business would be resumed in a reconstructed mill, but a statement from J. H. Cook, treasurer of the Commander Milling company, puts an end to their hopes.

Mr. Cook said today that it was the desire of the officers to continue in business at Superior despite the fire, but that they did not consider it advisable to do so under the present grain law which one obtains under the state of Wisconsin.

Like the big elevator interests which have warehouses in Superior, the Commander people have been chafing under the inspection law which has provoked so many suits and irritations, and now that fire has destroyed their property and put them temporarily out of business, they do not propose to re-enter while the present law holds good.

W. H. Bliss, who has been connected with Gregory, Cook & Company for a long time, will take charge of a mill at Royalton, Minn., which has a daily capacity of 500 barrels.

SHARP BULGE IN WHEAT DUE TO VARIOUS CAUSES

Unfavorable Weather, Short Interest and New Speculation.

East Buying Some Wheat —Flax Trade Light, Prices Unchanged.

Duluth Board of Trade, May 17.—Wheat had a strong advance today and throughout the session was buoyant and much new interest came into the market. The failure of rains that were predicted and a large number of damage reports, together with the presence of a considerable short interest, caught the market at the right moment for an advance and the bulls made the most of it. Some strong interests have arrayed themselves on the bull side within the past few days, interests that always have a large following and this brought much new buying in the market. Liverpool was ½ to ½d higher, Paris unchanged to ⅛c higher, Antwerp unchanged to ⅝c lower, and Berlin ¼c higher. The Eastern demand for Duluth wheat is improving somewhat and sales of from 75,000 to 100,000 bus. are made daily.

The Duluth market was firm as any, although there was not much initiative here. The May option closed 1½c higher in Duluth, 1⅝c higher in Chicago, 1⅜c higher in Minneapolis, 1c higher in New York and St. Louis and 1⅛-1¼c higher in Kansas City. The July option closed 1⅝-⅝ higher in Duluth, 1⅝-⅞c in Chicago, 1⅝-¼c in Minneapolis and St. Louis, 1½c in New York and 1⅛-1¼c in Kansas City.

Coarse grains were also strong. Corn in Liverpool was ⅜d higher and the July option in Chicago advanced ⅞c. July oats in Chicago gained ⅝-1c.

Primary receipts of wheat were 192,000 bus., last year 152,000 bus. Shipments 318,000 bus., last year 375,000 bus. Clearances of wheat and flour aggregated 284,000 bus.

Primary receipts of corn were 319,000 bus., last year 136,000 bus. Shipments 277,000 bus., last year 310,000 bus. Clearances of corn were 223,000 bus.

Wheat was active in the Duluth market, with stronger prices. May wheat opened ⅞c higher at 83c, was bid up actively in the session and closed at 83¾c, a gain of 1¼c over yesterday. July wheat opened ½c higher at 82⅝c, advanced to 83⅝c at 10, declined to 83⅜-½c at 12:20, rallied to 83¾c at 12:23, fell off to 83c at 12:36 and rallied to 84c at 1:08, closing at that price, a gain of 1⅝c over yesterday. September wheat was also strong and active, opening ⅜c higher at 80¾c and advancing steadily to the close, which was 81½c, a gain of 1¼c over yesterday. Cash wheat was higher, selling on a basis of ¼c over Duluth July for No. 1 northern.

Flax was dull during the entire session, closing unchanged. Flax was ⅝c lower in Antwerp and unchanged in London. The May option was inactive at the opening and closed unchanged at $1.16½. July flax opened ¼c higher at $1.18, declined to $1.17¾ and closed at that price, unchanged from yesterday. September flax opened ⅛c higher at $1.18, declined to the close, which was $1.17½, a loss of ¼c from yesterday. October flax opened ¼c higher at $1.16¼, declined to $1.16 and closed at that price, unchanged from yesterday.

THE CHICAGO MARKET.

Wheat Active and Strong on Failure of Predicted Rain.

Chicago, May 17.—The wheat market today opened active and strong. The failure of predicted rain in the southwest, the unseasonably high temperature and the number of damage reports from various parts of the Southwest were responsible for the strong feeling. The buying was general, all traders, shorts and commission houses all being anxious for wheat. The selling was by local longs. July opened 1⅝@1¾c to 1½@⅝c higher at 81½c to 81⅝c and sold up to 82⅝c. Minneapolis, Duluth and Chicago reported receipts of 117 cars against 168 cars last week and 101 cars a year ago.

The corn market was strong. Local receipts were smaller, decreased stocks were reported in Chicago, and these facts, with the strength of wheat, strongly favored the bulls. The principal buying was by shorts and commission houses. July opened ⅛c up at 47¾c and advanced to 47¾@⅞c. Local receipts 56 cars, with 19 of contract grade.

The oats market, like wheat and corn, was active and strong. Commission houses and cash interests were active bidders. There were a number of damage reports from Southern Illinois and the weather was considered unfavorable to the crop. July opened ¼@⅜c to ⅜@½c up at 32⅝c to 32⅞c and advanced to 33½c. Local receipts were 90 cars.

Prices were steady in the provisions market, but trading was slack. There was a strong tone to the hog market. July pork opened unchanged at $15.62½. Lard was down 2½c at $8.62½. Ribs were unchanged to 2½@5c higher at $8.85 to $8.97½@9.

Grain Gossip.

Logan & Bryan, Chicago: Wheat—It is decidedly a weather situation for the whole grain list, but especially for wheat. The mutterings about dry weather and crop damage which have come from many sections in the Southwest for a few days past were shown today by the discovery that the map for the greater part was clear and hot and dry. The Southwest points showed strength and reported the country somewhat excited over the crop situation. The prediction for showers tonight and cooler weather tomorrow had little effect in checking the bullish feeling, because for a day or two the predictions have failed. Additional rust reports came from Oklahoma. While the Southwest has drouth, the Red River country has excessive rains, and some of the wheat lands not yet seeded. Shorts, local bull leaders, buying orders from the public on the less favorable crop outlook, combined with decreasing stocks, to create a very strong speculative situation. There was conspicuous buying of July wheat by a leading house just at the close which forced the price up to 83 cents. Net gains for the day are about 1¾ cents, and the market for tomorrow is certain to be regulated by the absence or presence of good rain fall.

Corn, as in wheat, the general volume of trade in corn was greatly enlarged for the day. Commission people had a fine volume of buying orders at the opening. Speculative offerings were light during the morning, and in the market scored straight 1 cent advance for July and September, with only ¼c reaction from best point at close. Any increased movement of corn cannot now be experienced before next week and the small stocks and light receipts may possibly result in further gains.

Cincinnati Price Current: Winter wheat continues in a highly promising position. Dry weather promoting apprehension of interference with crop favorableness of corn and oats. Early rains would give needed relief.

FOSTER'S SPEECH.

Boston Herald: This story is told of Congressman Foster of Vermont, who, during the McKinley campaign, was called upon to speak before a gathering of Italians. He protested, but this had been assigned for him to do, so he looked up Italian history and got a few pointers about one of their prominent men which he proposed to bring into his address by comparing him with McKinley, and thus make it more interesting for his listeners.

Thus encouraged, he went to the hall. He found an insignificant looking Italian, who could talk English, in charge of the meeting. This man spoke briefly to the audience in his own tongue, and then introduced the congressman.

During Foster's speech they encored him and cheered for McKinley at just the right time, which surprised Foster, because he had no idea that they understood him well enough for that. He was quite enthusiastic over his success, and prolonged his speech nearly an hour.

After it was over he turned to the man in charge, who had taken a seat back of him, and spoke to him about the interest they had manifested in his speech, the intelligence they had shown, etc.

"Humph!" the Italian said, "They no understand. Speech no worth d—n to them."

"Why," said Foster, a little taken back, "they encored and cheered for McKinley, and seemed very interested."

"Oh, yes," was the Italian's reply, "but dat was me. I get up and tellie them after you come when I put up one finger to clap de han'; two finger, clap de han' and stomp de feet, and three finger, clap de han', stomp de feet and holler McKinley, McKinley, lika hellee."

"Self-help" will come to mean more to you than a pair of words, yoked together, if you get into the habit of reading The Herald want ads.

DECLINES IN STOCKS

Closing of Market Was Irregular, But Generally Lower.

The Declines Were Due to Selling for Both Accounts.

New York, May 17.—Opening prices in the stock market today moved sluggishly and for the most part to a higher level. Some of the Pennsylvania group and Amalgamated Copper were slightly depressed. United States Reduction preferred rose 1½, Pacific Mail a point and Atlantic Coast Line and Kansas & Texas large fractions.

Buoyancy developed among the anthracite coal stocks which in the bituminous shares were dull and heavy. Elsewhere the movement of prices was of limited proportions outside of the Southern group. Prices yielded a bit after the first half hour's trading, but the anthracite group was showing strength again at 11 o'clock. Lackawanna added 20 points to its extensive gain of yesterday, selling at 530 on less than a dozen 100-share transactions. Other material advances were: Central of Jersey 7½; Delaware & Hudson 3¼; Reading 2⅜; Erie second preferred 2; Pacific Mail 1⅜; Linseed preferred 1½ and Erie, the first preferred, Louisville & Nashville, Atlantic Coast Line, Kansas & Texas, Illinois Central and Tennessee Coal 1 to 1¼. Butterick Publishing fell 3.

The anthracite coalers were supported but their sustaining effect was used to sell stocks which were strong yesterday, including the Coppers, Union Pacific, St. Paul, Sugar, Brooklyn Transit, which receded below last night. The Pennsylvania group was depressed, that stock itself losing 1⅜. Anaconda fell 2½. Lead and Interborough Metropolitan 2, the preferred 1. Smelting 1⅝ and St. Paul, International Pump and Union Pacific preferred, Delaware & Hudson preferred, Colorado & Southern preferred second, St. Louis & San Francisco second preferred and Republic Steel preferred 1 to 1¼. The market was heavy all around at noon. Bonds were dull.

Heavy liquidation of National Lead followed the announcement of the dividend on that stock and it dropped 5⅜ to 75½. This break and afurther extension to 2 points of the loss in Pennsylvania caused profit taking throughout the list and the market reacted sharply.

Support to Lead which resulted in a recovery of 3 points contributed to the better tone in the general market, but speculation became very quiet when prices began to improve.

There were some advances in the last hour, but there was also some renewed reactions and further declines. International Pump lost 2 and Louisville & Nashville and Great Northern preferred 1. Consolidated Gas rose 1½. Locomotive 2, and Adams Express 5. Prices ran off sharply in the final dealings and the closing was weak.

Stock Gossip.

Logan & Bryan to Paine, Webber & Co.: The market closed irregular but generally lower. There was undoubtedly much realizing all through the list, but such sales were well taken, the market showing quite a little rallying power at times. At the moment we are inclined to look for a trading market, one with good swings, but do not see anything on the financial horizon to warrant taking a bearish attitude in stocks at this time. It is just possible Wall street paid more attention to crop damage complaints today than they have been paying in the past, and the advance in the wheat market may have brought out some liquidation. The wheat crop is not killed yet, neither has it passed the danger mark. We would buy stocks on the reactions.

Dick Bros. to Paine, Webber & Co.: The market has been erratic and feverish today, with most stocks showing reactionary tendency and closing with net losses. The declines were due to selling for both accounts, and in some shares there was evidence of profit taking by interests which have recently been very active on the bull side. It was noteworthy, however, that the selling was not at all urgent and that stocks were always well taken on the dips. Much of the late selling was for the short account. The market closed rather heavy in tone, with most of the representative shares not far from their low prices.

Walker Brothers to Paine, Webber & Co.: The market today at the opening was steady and strong. Copper was the feature and had a sharp advance. The market early was well supported, later it lapsed into dullness and there was little doing. We look for a traders' market for the rest of the week and one for sharp, quick turns.

The Cotton Market.

New York, May 17.—The cotton market opend steady at an advance of 3 to 5 points and soon after the call showed net gains of 5@6 points on the general list, in response to the continued firmness of the English market and the large English spot sales which again reached 15,000 bales at an advance of 5 points. Prices cased off later to within two or three points of last night's final, but good buying orders were encountered on the part of reaction and the market ruled steady.

WAY OF ROOTERS.

Optimists and Pessimists Who Insist on Voicing Their Ideas.

There are more different species of the fannus baseballicus than there are varieties of curves in a seasoned pitcher's repertoire, says the Washington Star.

In Washington the optimistic fan predominates. So far as baseball is concerned, we've been the down-and-out tribe of sIrael here for such a long streteh of years that we'd never have survived at all had it not been for the possession of a serene and unbroken optimism, an indomitable hope that some old day or another we'd get hold of a team that would connect with something or other. The influence of this wistful hope has been reflected in the conduct and manner of rooting of the majority of the fans who regularly attend the games here, and this includes the sun gods as well as the grandstandites.

There is, of course, as there always must be, a scattering of those weak-souled and weak-kneed brothers who can never see any light ahead nor find any balm in Gilead. These are the pessimists, the grouches of the fan species, and they've got to be shown at any and all stages of the games. They are such determined and invincible nonbelievers that when the score at the beginning of the ninth inning stands at something like 11 to 3 in favor of the home nine they are full of dark and dismal prognostications that the local club is going to take a fine, large slump for itself while the other fellows roll up a dozen or so of runs during their half of the final inning. If the Stahl band should by some miracle stand at the top of the heap a month before the close of the season now on these heavy-spirited "show-me's" would go about shaking their heads gloomily and predicting that the team wouldn't cop another game during the season.

It's fun to watch the methods, manners and observations of these two diametrically opposed species of fan at a Washington game of ball.

"Well, we're going to cover 'em up and put 'em away today, boys," he announces in a tone of the most deeply imbedded conviction. "Nothing to it. Don't care what flinger the other fellows put in; this is our eat-'em-alive day. Pepo. Ye-eh, I know the other fellows are getting pretty strong, but that's the way they'll need to be going to get anything today. Skinch. We're already in and the red board's down. We're just goin' to get so far in front of those fellows today that they'll think we've gone off and hid. You watch; that's all."

And this is the tone of the undiscouraged and unsquelchable Mark Tapley throughout the game, no matter how persistently the Lady Fortune frowns upon the efforts of the home nine in the joust.

The visiting team piles up three or four runs in its half of the first inning.

"All the bummest kind of scratches," emphatically declares the inextinguishable optimist. "Rawest kind of flukes. Break came their way, that's all. Never saw such bull-headed luck. Those fellows look like a lot of shoemakers trying to play tennis, and they run bases like a bunch of cook stoves climbing a hill. They're a swell mob of spud-peelers to clean up for four runs. But you watch the Jakeys take a load in those quarter horses right now. You watch em."

The local nine fails to take the lead confidently looked for by the optimist, but that doesn't daunt him a little bit.

"Haven't got warmed up yet, that's all," he observes with the greatest imaginable blandness. "Wait'll they get into their stride. Our fellows are not bum front-runners that curl up a mile or so before the finish. They go to the null cup distance and they're stretch finishers; that's what they are. They won't do a thing to those four-flushing boguses from now on—not a thing! Just you keep your binoculars on 'em and they'll show you."

And that's the optimist, right down to the very finish. He's plugging all the time, right in the teeth of hope and reason. Nothing can break his spirit. He's a charter member of the Never Say Die chapter. The prospect of certain defeat for the home nine only causes him to square his jaws and to chew the harder on his gum or to break his peanut shells with a little extra viciousness. He isn't there to cave, crawfish, recede or renig. And when the game is over and he's hustling for a car to make the cold dinner ling for a car to make the cold dinner that he knews awaits him he's right there with the cheer-up ointment, the ungent of tomorrow.

"Ba'll right," he declares, unsubdued. "We didn't get a break, that's all. And I guess that umpire didn't break it off in us, either, hey? Pooty punk arbitration, I call it. We got robbed of three runs that I know of. But s'all right. Tomorrow's another day, and what we'll do to 'em tomorrow—"

And the optimist hops on his car with the aureole of hope fluttering around him like a nimbus.

Shortage of Labor Causes Genuine Alarm Among Farmers.

NORTH DAKOTA.

Fargo—There is a great demand for labor in North Dakota. There is scarcely enough to get the seeding done and genuine alarm is felt over the possibilities when the haying and threshing season comes. Builders and contractors report a scarcity of both skilled workmen and laborers.

State Dairy Inspector Flint has started a plan among the creamery owners for grading all cream. He cites the success with which the plan has met in other states and believes it would meet with the approval of all interested here.

Fargoans are enjoying the best of health, despite the presence of the leading medics of the state, who are here to attend the annual session of the North Dakota State Medical association. The program is said to be the most interesting ever arranged for an annual session. It includes several addresses by well known physicians and specialists outside the state.

The social side of the convention is to be developed and the banquet this evening will be one of the features.

Mayor Johnson welcomed the doctors this morning after prayer by Rev. H. G. Leonard. Dr. Rankin of Jamestown responded and Dr. Sorkness of Fargo, president of the association, read his annual address. "Scarlet Fever" was the subject of a paper by Dr. Countryman of Grafton; "Cesarian Operations" by Dr. Campbell of Grand Forks; "Health Resorts in North Dakota," by Dr. Moeller of Devils Lake.

Director D. E. Willard of the department of geology at the North Dakota agricultural college has returned from Ransom county, where he succeeded in getting the soil survey work for this summer started in a satisfactory manner. The state has the co-operation of the department at Washington in the work. Charles W. Ely represents Washington and the agricultural college representatives are Rev. E. Willard and Dr. Bell.

Director Willard started the work in Williams county recently with Thomas D. Rice representing the government and M. B. Erickson and John D. Weaver looking after the work for the college. It is planned to continue the work until every county in the state has been covered. Work has been carried on in several counties in former years.

A Wild West show will be added to the state fair attractions. P. J. Pelissier, ranchman and sheriff in Billings county, an old friend of President Roosevelt, will bring his show here. He and the president had ranches near each other in the early history of what is now North Dakota and among the features of the show is an old broncho which once threw "Teddy." Pelissier also has a cart that formerly transported the foodstuff that those "terrible teeth" were wont to masticate while their famous owner enjoyed life on the North Dakota prairies.

Deadwood—The Business club of this city is working on a plan for the construction of an aerial tramway from this city to Bald Mountain for the purpose of transporting ores from that district cheaper than can be done by the railroads.

Until a few years ago, this minimum price for ore when hauled by the railroads was 75 cents a ton; then upon a request from the mining men, this was reduced to 50 cents to $1.10 a ton. As several large companies operating in Bald Mountain have their mills in Deadwood there for some time has been talk of finding some cheaper method of transportation. The plan as now outlined includes the organization of a company with sufficient capital to construct this aerial tramway, the building of a central station, and the running of side lines to all properties interested.

As the difference in altitude between this city and Bald Mountain is over 1,800 feet, it readily will be seen that the fall is almost great enough to furnish by gravitation all of the power needed. No less than 1,000 tons of ore could be handled daily, and the cost of the road would be $12,000 to $14,000 a mile. It is estimated that the cost of handling the ore will not exceed 20 cents a ton, which will insure a great saving to many companies. A corps of engineers will be engaged at once to make the preliminary surveys and to lay before the club exact information in regard to this enterprise.

Geddes—An important business transaction took place this week when D. Heaton and W. E. Heaton, owners and proprietors of the Charles Mix County bank of Geddes sold it to Johnson Brothers. This was the first bank started in this city, its founders being Johnson Brothers, who four years ago sold the bank to the Heatons and yesterday repurchased it from them.

The offices under the new management will be F. H. Johnson, president; V. A. Welcher, cashier, and J. A. Nelson, assistant cashier.

Racine, Wis., May 17.—Emanuel Dvoracek's wife disappeared yesterday and it is said that she had eloped with a boarder. It then developed that she is not the legal wife of Dvoracek, but that he left a wife and three children in Bohemia eighteen years ago, when he came to America with his servant girl, since living with her. A daughter, aged 16, is the result. Dvoracek says that he and the woman own property jointly. His insurance is made out to her benefit. He is a prominent trunk manufacturer.

JOKED WITH AUNT, THEN WENT TO HER DEATH.

Marshalltown, Iowa, May 17.—Ten minutes after she had been joking with her aunt, with whom she lived, Viola Hockett, aged 18, went to her room and committed suicide. She had been a sufferer with inflammatory rheumatism, but was recovering.

Mrs. Marion Miller smelled the acid and, rushing upstairs, found her niece writhing in agony on the floor. She summoned a physician, but before he arrived the girl was dead. Miss Hockett left no note explaining her action, and so far as known she had no love affair.

Sciatica Cured After Twenty Years of Torture.

For more than twenty years Mr. J. B. Massey of 3322 Clinton street, Minneapolis, Minn., was tortured by sciatica. The pain and suffering which he endured during this time is beyond comprehension. Nothing gave him any permanent relief until he used Chamberlain's Pain Balm. One application of that liniment relieved the pain and made sleep and rest possible, and less than one bottle has effected a permanent cure. If troubled with sciatica or rheumatism, why not try a 25-cent bottle of Pain Balm, and see for yourself how quickly it relieves the pain. For sale by all the leading druggists.

INCREASE IN EARNINGS

April Gains 11.64 Per Cent Over Those of Last Year.

Railroad gross earnings for April, as compiled by the Financial Chronicle, show an increase that is remarkable in view of the suspension of coal mining and the consequent heavy decrease in both anthracite and bituminous coal traffic.

The compilation comprises fifty-six roads and the aggregate earnings are $52,409,705, as compared with $46,946,012 for the same roads in 1905. The increase is $5,463,693, or 11.64 per cent. Last year the same roads showed an increase in gross over April, 1904, of $4,103,262, or 8.7 per cent.

The northern transcontinental roads made the greatest gains, these roads being little affected by the mining difficulties. Canadian Pacific led the list with an increase of $1,266,000, and Great Northern followed with an increase of $952,065. A portion of these increases, as in the case of Western roads, may have been due to an increase in the grain movement for Western grain receipts aggregated 36,331,458 bushels, as compared with 31,689,598 bushels in April, 1905.

New York Central must have lost heavily from the decrease in coal traffic, yet the system made a gain of $131,972 over the gross earnings for April last year. However, this gain is much smaller than the gains made in January, February and March, which averaged over $900,000 a month.

The Southern roads, considered collectively, carried much less cotton than in April, 1905, overland shipments being 9,784 bales, as compared with 173,551 bales in the same month last year. Nevertheless, these roads showed marked improvement. The Southern railway made the third greatest gain on the list; Louisville & Nashville is next in line with a gain of $337,501; and Illinois Central follows closely with a gain of $318,028.

Three of the fifty-six roads reported losses. Buffalo, Rochester & Pittsburg, on account of the stoppage of mining in the soft coal fields, fell $354,326 behind its gross for April, 1905. Probably for the same reason Wheeling & Lake Erie sustained a loss of $75,439. The other road reporting a loss was Missouri, Kansas & Texas, which ran $30,819.

The compilation does not include the Union Pacific system, which was affected by the San Francisco disaster, nor does it contain earnings of Reading, Delaware, Lackawanna & Western, Delaware and Hudson, Baltimore & Ohio, Erie, Lehigh Valley or Pennsylvania, the roads undoubtedly most affected by the suspension of mining.

San Francisco Skyscraper.

"I had a talk yesterday with our San Francisco traveling passenger agent," said Harry L. Wyand of St. Paul, traveling passenger agent of the Chicago Great Western road, who is in the city today. "He says the reports of the horrors following the earthquake and fire in San Francisco were exaggerated in many instances in the newspaper dispatches.

"We have received advices that the Western metropolis will be entirely rebuilt, and made more beautiful than ever. One twenty-story building already is planned, and other skyscrapers will go up. It is believed they can be made earthquake proof.

"The tourist business this fall and summer should be heavy to the West. Many will want to see San Francisco, to see it in the process of reconstruction."

May Run to Chicago.

Officials of the Great Northern are said to be considering the advisability of changing the terminus of the Oriental Limited train from St. Paul to Chicago. The train at present arrives in the Saintly City daily from Seattle, but such a change would probably mean that it would run through to Chicago over the Bourlington tracks.

Shortens the Time.

With the most up-to-date equipment, much of it ordered for the special purpose, the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul road has cut the time on the two trains each way between Chicago and Milwaukee from two hours to one hour and forty-five minutes. This makes the schedule of the four trains the same as that of the fast mail.

NEW CHURCHES AT AURORA.

Catholics and Methodists Preparing to Erect Fine Edifices.

Aurora, Minn., May 17.—(Special to The Herald.)—Work was started this week on a new church building to be erected by the Catholic denomination to cost when completed $4,000. A portion of the building will be erected this year and the remainder as more room is needed and funds are available.

The Methodist Episcopal church society will also soon begin construction of their building, having already raised nearly $1,000 for the purpose. Rev. C. E. Adams of Biwabik was here yesterday, accompanied by his wife, arranging for the beginning of building operations.

G. J. Roop has contracted to erect a building 18x30 feet in size opposite the depot for the accommodation of Charley San, a Chinese laundryman from Biwabik.

J. W. Lang, former village treasurer, has finally decided to turn over the books of the office to P. M. Johnson, cashier of the State Bank of Aurora, who was elected treasurer at the recent election, and the latter is now attending to the duties of the office.

POOR WIDOW

With Nine Children is Sought as Heir to $250,000.

San Francisco, May 17.—A fortune of $250,000 awaits Mrs. Andrea Neilson, a widow with nine children, who lost all her belongings in the fire and is now believed to be in some refuge camp about the city. The money was left by her father-in-law, in Sweden. Mrs. Neilson's husband died in 1898, leaving her destitute. Since then she has supported her little ones by hard work, being too proud to appeal to their father's rich relatives.

TO AILING WOMEN

No woman can be healthy and well if the kidneys are sick. Poisons that pass off in the urine when the kidneys are well are retained in the body when the kidneys are sick. Kidneys and bladder get inflamed and swollen, crowding the delicate female organs nearby and sometimes displacing them. This is the true cause of many bearing-down pains, lameness, backache, sideache, etc. Uric poisoning, also causes headaches, dizzy spells, languor, nervousness and rheumatic pain.

When suffering so, try Doan's Kidney Pills, the remedy that cures sick kidneys. You will get better as the kidneys get better, and health will return when the kidneys are well. Let a Duluth woman tell you about Doan's Kidney Pills.

Mrs. Lettitie Cole, of 467 Mesaba Ave., Duluth, Minn., says: "I am pleased to repeat what I have said again and again recommending Doan's Kidney Pills. Five or six years ago, when suffering from disorders of the kidneys which had become aggravated by overexertion and severe colds, I looked about in vain for a long time for relief, trying many different remedies which were recommended to me, but not until I got Doan's Kidney Pills did I find the long sought for benefit. The first dose or two helped me, and I continued taking them until the heavy aching through my back and kidneys was gone and the kidney secretions had become natural. The treatment improved my health in every way, and the results have been permanent."

Remember the name—Doan's—and take no other.

NEW HIGH SCHOOL FOR BIWABIK

School Board Has Engaged Architect to Draw Plans.

Biwabik, Minn., May 17.—(Special to The Herald.)—The school board of the Biwabik district has engaged Architect Bray of Duluth to draw the plans for the proposed new high school building here. The building will be located on the vacant forty just north of the village, if a favorable lease can be secured. It will probably be built of brick and contain eight rooms, although neither of these matters has been definitely determined. The board has also selected a site for the building at the Miller-Mohawk location in the village of Aurora. It is a plot of ground 200 by 300 feet in size, half located on the northeast half of the Mohawk property and half on the northwest corner of the Miller. It will be a frame building containing three rooms. Architect F. L. Young of Duluth, who designed the Aurora school, will draw the plans.

George Burt of Superior, deputy for the Independent Order of Foresters, organized a court here Tuesday evening with a charter membership of twenty. The following officers were chosen for the ensuing term: Joseph Papic, chief ranger; Floyd Porter, vice ranger; Thomas McKenna, treasurer; A. Penedue, secretary; J. Kolesar, chief archer; William Cameron, inner woodward; B. Turnbull, outer woodward; C. W. Bray and W. Heisel, trustees. The court will meet on the first and third Tuesdays of each month in the Finnish Temperance hall, and a number of candidates will be initiated at the next meeting.

Frank Babich, a young man, was arrested yesterday charged with striking his mother. He was fined $10 and costs by Justice Keeler.

On Sunday last the Biwabik ball club again defeated the Eveleths by a score of 10 to 14.

PASTORS LOSE AT BASEBALL.

Bankers Beat Preachers, Aided by Two Brewery Men.

La Crosse, Wis., May 17.—Mammon triumphed over religion in La Crosse when the bankers of the city defeated the ministers in a game of baseball by a score of 16 to 2 and left two of the reverend players so badly hurt that it will be several days before they will be able to attend to their duties again. Rev. Charles Wentworth, pastor of the Caledonia Street Methodist church, was struck on the head by a pitched ball and badly hurt, and Rev. J. S. Lowe, pastor of St. Paul's Universalist church, sprained his ankle sliding for second base. Before the game the bankers gave the preachers a handicap by allowing them to hire a semi-professional battery, and the ministers, without knowing it, procured the services of two members of a brewery team.

REDWOOD FALLS SUED.

Redwood Falls, Minn., May 17.—Fred V. Hotchkiss, a former mayor of this city, has filed with the city recorder formal notice that he will commence an action against the city to recover $2,500 damage on account of the lake flowing on his land. The dam creating the lake was constructed four years ago, and the claim for damages is not seriously considered by city officials and attorneys. Hotchkiss returned to the city last winter after about fifteen years' absence in the West.

THE advertisement is part of the news of a paper. Through specialization the art of composing and printing it compels the attention of men and women whether or not they need the things written about. The successful merchant knows it is read and reread, and when he advertises he throws out a seine which gathers in the buyer and the non-buyer, taking his chance of converting the non-buyer into a buyer. Every man whose business languishes has this opportunity. Let him experiment with "The Evening Herald" as a helper.

COAL STOCK IS DONATED

To Various Railroad Officials by the Mining Companies.

Philadelphia, May 18.—Additional evidence of stock presentation by coal companies to railroad officials was adduced at today's session of the interstate commerce commission. E. J. Cleave of Cresson, Pa., superintendent of the Cambria & Clearfield division of the Pennsylvania road, was the first witness. He was asked if he held stock in any coal companies. He said he had 250 shares in the Cochran Coal company which he received in partial payment for land to the company.

"Had you ever been offered stock in any coal companies?" inquired Attorney Glasgow.

"Is it necessary to answer that question?" asked the witness.

"It is."

"I was offered stock, but declined to accept it."

F. L. Shepard of New York, general superintendent of the United Railways of New Jersey, when questioned by Mr. Glasgow, said he owned stock in several mining companies. He could not recall the names of some of these companies. The stock in one, which is a subsidiary company of the Berwind company, witness said, he received from Edward Berwind. It was paying dividends, but he did not remember the amount. Mr. Shepard said he owned 50 or 100 shares in the Pine Run Coal company. He received this, he said, from Frank Patton. He had invested $2,500 in another company, which failed. This money was returned to him, and he was given the Pine Run company stock. He was also given, he said, 60 or 70 shares in the Pittsburg Coal company for his work in negotiating the sale of the stock.

ARSON CASE GOES TO JURY

Teare Denies That He Advised Children to Set Fire.

Stillwater, Minn., May 18.—(Special to The Herald.)—The taking of evidence in the James L. Teare arson case was concluded last evening. This morning the arguments were heard and, after the charge to the jury, the case was submitted.

A considerable number of witnesses were called by the defense to relate conversations with the son Ellery and daughter Mildred, with the object of contradicting them. Both the boy and girl admitted that they had denied knowledge of the cause of the fire until a recent time before the arrests. They denied such knowledge to Attorney Searles, whom their father engaged after rumors as to its origin had connected his name with the burning. They did that, they said, on the advice of their father, who stated that they were not on oath and could tell any story they pleased. It was the talk of the son and the daughter that led to the investigation of the cause of the fire. They had told friends about it and the authorities cornered them and then they decided to tell the truth.

Several witnesses were summoned to testify to the good reputation of Mr. Teare and the county attorney shortened that subject by admitting that his reputation was good up to the time of the fire. Mr. Teare went on the witness stand and denied advising either of his children to set fire to the building. He denied in particular the truth of their stories in that respect.

JOINT PROTEST

To be Presented to Turkey for Violation of Corporation Rights.

Constantinople, May 18.—The embassies and legations are preparing a joint note for presentation to the Turkish government tomorrow, protesting against the violation of the rights conferred by the capitulations by the new regulations, dealing with joint stock and insurance companies.

The London Standard this morning published a dispatch from Constantinople, saying that the Turkish government had disregarded the capitulations by the promulgation, under an imperial irade, without previous reference to the embassies of a law dealing with foreign joint stock and insurance companies doing business in Constantinople. Many provisions of the new law, it was added, hamper foreign enterprise. Local guarantees by deposits invested in Ottoman funds are demanded, and only Ottoman subjects will be allowed to act as commercial travelers in the provinces, while numerous opportunities are afforded for constant official meddling.

SUBPOENAED WITNESS ABSENT IN MEXICO.

Racine, Wis., May 18.—Dr. C. I. Shoop of the C. I. Shoop Medicine company, has been subpoenaed by the government as a witness in the action recently instituted in the federal courts of Indiana against the alleged drug combine. United States Marshal Reid, who came here to serve the summons yesterday, found that Mr. Shoop was away on a six-weeks' trip to New Mexico.

MILES FULLER HANGED.

Butte, Mont., May 18.—Miles Fuller was hanged in this city at 5:30 o'clock this morning for the murder of H. J. Gallahan on October 24, 1904.

ITALIAN CABINET

Defeated in House of Deputies and Promptly Resigns.

Impatience of the Opposition Brings About Dissolution.

Rome, May 18.—Premier Sonnino, in the chamber of deputies today, officially announced the resignation of the cabinet. The Sonnino ministry was defeated yesterday by a majority of twenty-seven as the result of the impatience of opposition which, contrary to advice of Former Premier Giolitti, who was not present at yesterday's sitting, would not wait for the development of the whole Sonnino program, but attacked the cabinet, on a question of procedure, regarding the order of parliamentary work. In ordinary cases his would not have been sufficient for the cabinet to resign, but yesterday's vote, it was understood, showed unexpected strength on the part of the opposition and the premier concluded that he was called upon to retire.

STEALS $10,000 AUTOMOBILE

New York, May 18—A $10,000 automobile, containing $2,400 worth of bonds, scrip and other valuable papers, was stolen early today by a daring thief, who jumped into the machine while it stood unoccupied on Broadway, near Forty-second street. Its owner, J. H. Clark, an automobile manufacturer, stepped into a restaurant nearby. He heard the automobile puffing as it started away, and although he rushed immediately to the street, the thief sped the machine around the corner and escaped.

TORTURED TO GET HIS MONEY

Wilkesbarre, Pa., May 18.—Henry Blackman Plumb, the 77-year-old lawyer and historian of Warrior Run, who was tortured by burglars in the effort to force him to reveal the supposed hiding place of his money, is recovering.

Two of his ribs were broken and the soles of his feet were burned, while his wife, bound and helpless, was compelled to lie on the floor near and see him tortured. Despite the efforts of several detectives, no clew of the five masked men who committed the outrage has been found.

The house is some distance from the nearest neighbor, and the burglars broke in the back door. Plumb and his wife were aroused by the crash. He seized an old musket which had not been discharged in thirty-five years, and reached the top of the stairs as the five burglars appeared at the bottom.

"You halt, or I'll shoot!" he shouted. Without answering, the men sprang up the steps, evidently not seeing the musket. Plumb aiming full at them, twice pulled the trigger, but the charge failed to explode, and the next moment he had been overpowered and hurled to the floor, the fall breaking two ribs.

Two of the burglars held him and the other three overpowered, gagged and bound Mrs. Plumb with the strips into which they tore the bed sheets.

The burglars found a gold watch and $35, all the money that Plumb had in the house, but they were not satisfied. Thinking he had more hudden, they threatened to kill him if he did not tell where it was. He assured them they had all.

"We'll make you tell," one of them cried, and the old man was thrown upon a chair, bound to it, and then a lamp flame was applied to his feet. It scorched the flesh and caused excruciating agony.

He protested that he had no more money, and that they might torture him until he was dead, but they would find no more. But they were heartless. Both feet were burned, and they did not desist until the old man swooned.

As they were leaving, one of the burglars, with some little compassion, bent over Mrs. Plumb and said: "I'll telephone for a doctor to come," but no medical man showed up.

It was two hours before Plumb regained consciousness and was able to undo his bonds. Then he released his wife and they summoned help.

MRS. POTTER BEGINS STAGE LIFE ANEW.

London, May 18.—In spite of the disastrous failure which attended her last theatrical venture, Mrs. James Brown Potter refuses to acknowledge that she has lost her power over English audiences.

She has just accepted a play by a new dramatist, in which she will appear as Mary Queen of Scots. At present Mrs. Potter has decided to try the new play on the provinces before bringing it to London. She has been living very quietly and saving money ever week out of the large salary she earns at the music halls.

Mrs. Langtry, on the other hand, confesses that while she can succeed in the colonies, she can never succeed to the same extent in London, so she is about to make a daring experiment. About six weeks hence the "Jersey Lily" will transport her entire English company to Paris, where she will give Shakespeare's "As You Like It," at one of the smaller theaters.

THE WRECKING CREW ON STEAMER CRESCENT CITY KNOCKED OUT BY POISON

All Practically Unable to Work and Superintendent Smith and Several Others Are Seriously Ill.

Cause of Sickness Shrouded in Mystery But the Men Seem to be Suffering From Ptomaine Poisoning.

Every member of the Pittsburg Steamship company's wrecking crew at work on the stranded steamer Crescent City, at Lakewood, is suffering from what appears to be ptomaine poisoning. None is dangerously ill, but all are practically unable to work and several are confined to their beds.

Those most seriously ill are Capt. W. W. Smith, marine superintendent for the Pittsburg company, and the head of the wrecking crew at Lakewood, and J. T. Johnson and John Proulx, members of the crew.

The cause of the epidemic of illness among the wreckers has not been determined yet. It seems to be shrouded with mystery. The sick ones have been under the care of physicians for several days, but no one is sure yet what caused the trouble.

Harris Bennett, deputy state dairy and food commissioner, visited the Crescent City and examined the meat, canned goods and milk in the wrecking camp. Samples have been sent to St. Paul, where they will be analyzed.

Most of the sick men and the chef of the outfit think that they were poisoned either by the milk or the meat. The crew has been eating fresh meat of all kinds and has been securing milk every day at Lester Park. They noted nothing peculiar about the taste of either.

The first symptoms of poisoning that the men showed was sickness at the stomach, accompanied by vomiting and extreme lassitude. Little work has been accomplished at the scene of the wreck this week. The illness incapacitates the men for work and some of them have been forced to take to their beds. Those who are able to be up and about are not doing much.

The men first became ill several days ago and they thought nothing of it at first. But as they gradually became worse and more came down with the complaint, physicians were called in. The latter say, however, that the victims of the poisoning are in no real danger and that their recovery will be rapid and permanent.

If tainted food was sold to the camp, those who did the selling will be asked to explain, as the state dairy and food department now has samples of the entire supply.

There are about forty-five men in the crew but Capt. Smith and the other two men mentioned are the most seriously ill. The indisposition of the others hardly confines them to their beds.

No reports have been heard as yet of any one except the members of the Crescent City wrecking crew being ill. Lester Park is apparently free from poisoned citizens, and as yet no one residing in the vicinity of the beached boat has been stricken.

Little was said of the epidemic until today, when Harris Bennett was notified to visit Lakewood for the purpose of looking over the camp's food supply. There were some wild rumors concerning the situation afloat around town this morning. In some quarters it was reported that Capt. Smith and his men were at the point of death, and others were to the effect that one man had already died, but these were found to be without foundation.

Aside from upsetting their stomachs and filling them with an aversion to work, the illness has not seriously inconvenienced most of the men.

WINS MILLION WITH $1,750

An Australian Legislator Buys Wreck and Rescues Valuable Cargo.

Melbourne, May 18.—A million dollars made from a wreck purchased for $1,750 is the romantic piece of luck that has befallen the Hon. J. G. Aikman, member of the legislative council of Victoria.

Two years ago, on a June night, the magnificent P. & O. steamship Australia, which cost nearly $3,000,000 to build, went ashore at the entrance to Port Phillip Bay, a short distance from Melbourne. The vessel was subsequently put up to auction and knocked down to Mr. Aikman for $1,000. Afterward the auctioneer offered the cargo, which was purchased by Mr. Aikman for $750.

Soon divers went to work and the cargo was rescued. Dry goods, hardware and electro-plated ware were recovered in good condition. A valuable cargo of Muntz metal was also found, realizing $3,700. Nine hundred tons of tar iron, bar steel, tool steel and shear steel were recovered from the wreck and sold for an average of $50 a ton. Seven hundred and forty tons of galvanized iron and forty tons of steel were recovered during the first operations. After six months' operations it was decided to abandon the work, when an engineer suggested that the copper pipes, the brass fittings and other metal of the ship itself would be worth salving.

Operations were renewed, and 219 tons of brass copper and gun metal were obtained from the engine and other castings aboard. Five tandem and four tangye engines and a large quantitiy of pig iron were also got from the wreck. The four propeller blades which consisted of phosphor or manganese bronze, and which weighed fourteen tons, realized $5,000 as old metal.

Half of the hull of the Australia still remains above water, and quantities of brass copper and gun metal have still to be recovered. It is estimated that Mr. Aikman's profits from the wreck are over $1,000,000. Why the underwriters never removed the valuable cargo, or failed to realize its value, is a mystery.

KING IS GRACIOUS TO SNUBBED DIVORCEE.

London, May 18.—The divorce question now being discussed in the United States is interesting Americans in London immensely, and all sorts of speculations are being made on the subject.

The case of Mrs. Flora Dodge, who married the Hon. Lionel Guest, the younger son of Lord Wimborne, after getting her divorce in Dakota, is attracting unusual attention. The Wimborne family were not hospitable to Mrs. Guest when she visited England.

In fact they ignored her so completely that Mrs. George Keppel, who is a queen of tact and a personal friend of Mrs. Lionel Guest, intervened and spoke to the king about it. The result was that King Edward sent for Lionel Guest and his American wife before he left for the Mediterranean and spoke very kindly to them at Buckingham palace.

This is a hint which Lord and Lady Wimborne cannot fail to take, and it is certain that when Mr. and Mrs. Lionel Guest again visit England, no matter what the new divorce laws may be, they will be received in a very different manner.

SON'S PRODIGALITY WORRIES ROSEBERY.

London, May 18.—Lord Dalmeny, the son and heir of Lord Rosebery, is causing his distinguished father some anxiety owing to the prodigal manner in which he is scattering money, more especially on the turf.

During the past few months Lord Dalmeny has spent many thousands of pounds on buying or betting on horse races, but fortunately his luck has so far been remarkable. He won a very large sum on one of his father's horses the other day and promptly sent part of his winnings to a hospital.

Besides being a member of parliament—a rather silent member—Lord Dalmeny is captain of the Surrey Cricket club. Lately, however, he has found his time so occupied that he has appointed an "understudy" as captain of the cricket team.

CALL FOR CAVALRY

The Critical Day of the Big Strike is at Hand.

Coeymans, N. Y., May 18.—Col. Charles E. Davis, commanding the troops on guard here on account of the brickyards' strike, today, after a conference with Sheriff Pitts, requested Brig. Gen. Lloyd, commanding the Third brigade, to order cavalry troop B of Albany to report here immediately for service with the troops. The troop is expected here this afternoon. That this would be a critical day in the brickyards' strike was evident at the outset of the day. An early hour found the employers in conference with Sheriff Pitts and later Col. Davis, commanding the batallion of national guardsmen, joined the council. At that hour the prospects of a peaceful settlement were not so good as they seemed last evening. The men sent word to President Suderly that they would return to work on the terms offered by the employers if the latter would sign an agreement covering their proposition. This the employers refused to do on the ground that they could not bind themselves to any fixed scale of wages, owing to the frequent fluctuations in the brick market. The men also demanded the release of the six men arrested yesterday, charged with the leadership of Wednesday's riot. The one point which the employers say they will not yield in any circumstance is that of recognizing the union. Col. Davis later said the request for reinforcement was not made of any alarming developments in the situation, but was chiefly with the view to not unnecessarily taxing the endurance of the troops now on the ground. These men, he said, had practically been on continuous duty ever since their arrival here Wednesday. It was evident, he added, that the strike will continue under practically the present conditions. The amount of ground to be covered and the distance to which patrols must be sent was so great that the present force was inadequate.

RELEASED AFTER FOURTEEN YEARS

Pittsburg, May 18.—Alexander Beckman, who made an attempt on the life of Henry Clay Frick during the great steel strike at Homestead, in 1892, was released from prison today, having served thirteen years in the Western penitentiary and one year in the Allegheny workhouse. Beckman will go to St. Louis. It is said that he will be constantly shadowed by private detectives.

During his imprisonment Beckman has studied English literature and the classics. He has caused to be announced that he will go to St. Louis, where he will negotiate an offer to take charge of the labor department of a daily newspaper.

RED CROSS

Just as Necessary in Peace as it is in War.

Washington May 18.—"The San Francisco disaster, the Japanese famine, the eruption of Vesuvius and the recent typhoon in he Philippines have given the Red Cross an opporunity to show its usefulness and have demonstrated to the public that a relief organization is just as necessary in peace as it is in war," said Miss Mabel T. Boardman, of the executive council of the American Red Cross who has just returned from the three weeks' trip through New England, where she addressed many meetings in the interest of the Red Cross movement.

"In Connecticut the interest in the Red Cross is especially great," Miss Boardman continued. "Six months ago we had only 300 members in the state and now the membership is 864. There are 400 members in the city of Norwich alone. Maine is also showing much enthusiasm and Massachusetts and Rhode Island are developing good state organizations."

GERMAN STEAMER GROUNDS IN JAPAN.

The bows of the Roon are stove in, but it is hoped that the efforts being made to refloat her will prove successful.

THE VICE PRESIDENT ATTENDS CONFERENCE.

Birmingham, Ala., May 18.—Vice President Charles W. Fairbanks arrived here today to attend the general conference of the Methodist Episcopal church, South, as a fraternal delegate from the Methodist Episcopal church. He was met by the citizens' committee at the union station and driven to the home of Col. T. G. Bush, president of the Alabama Consolidated Coal & Iron company, whose guest he will be while here.

CRITICAL TIME NEAR

When the Question of Peace or War Must be Decided.

The Reply of Parliament Forwarded to the Czar.

St. Petersburg, May 18.—The critical moment which will decide whether there will be peace or war between the crown and the people apparently arrived with the adoption by the lower house of parliament, last night, of its reply to the speech from the throne. President Mouromtzeff has gone to Peterhoff to present the reply to the emperor, and his majesty's response is awaited with great anxiety. Popular opinion considers that the government has no option between surrender or war. Nevertheless, while events during the past week followed each other with extreme rapidity, the issue now raised is not likely to be decided quickly. The Russians generally believe that the emperor, court and government undoubtedly have been dazed by the blunt, direct fashion with which parliament has spoken out, and their policy naturally will be to gain time. The emperor, personally, is in a beneficent frame of mind, and for the present will not listen to the counsels of those who advise him to dissolve parliament and fight. Nevertheless, he is resolved not to yield anything like all that parliament demands. It safely can be predicted, therefore, that he will pursue a temporizing policy, with partial amnesty as the first sop thrown to the country. The Constitutional Democratic leaders, whose program would be upset by the dissolution of parliament, are quite as anxious as the emperor to avoid the precipitation of a conflict. They would regard the failure of the government to declare war as a big preliminary victory, of which they would take advantage by forcing through the agrarian project, upon which they count to strengthen themselves in the country before the final battle opens.

That the court reactionists headed by Gen. Trepoff, are seeking in every way possible to influence the emperor to fight is apparent by the discovery made by the Reich of a secret circular sent to the governors instructing them to have the "Black Hundred" organizations immediately dispatch to the emperor protests against amnesty and the abolition of the death penalty. These have been flowing into Peterhof from all directions, over fifty being printed in the Official Messenger today.

Dispatches from the interior report demonstrations in front of the prisons in all parts of Russia in favor of the release of the political prisoners. At Simferopol troops surrounded the prison where the political prisoners were making a demonstration and fired at them through the windows.

In St. Petersburg the political prisoners awaiting transportation at the deporting prison hung out red flags from the windows and sang the "Marseillaise" throughout the night while crowds outside joined in the revolutionary song.

LOSES HUSBAND AND HER SISTER

Mrs. Harbig of Fergus Falls Says They Have Eloped.

Fergus Falls, Minn., May 18.—A story of what appears to be the desertion of a wife and elopement with her sister came to light in the probate court here yesterday.

Louis Harbig, a young farmer of this vicinity, left home several weeks ago, stating that he was going to North Dakota to purchase land, and his sister-in-law, Miss Clara Koramoe, an attractive girl of 15, accompanied him, going ostensibly to Breckenridge, where she was to visit her other relatives.

Both were to write from time to time, but no letters arrived, and Mrs. Harbig finally became suspicious and telephoned the person whom her sister was to visit in Breckenridge, only to find that they had neither seen or heard anything of her. Mr. Harbig left his wife in destitute circumstances, and she has come to the unwelcome conclusion that he has eloped.

Mr. Harbig has been acting as guardian for Miss Koramoe, and she, has made her home with him and his wife since the death of her mother, about two years ago. Mrs. Harbig has suspected for some time that he was becoming infatuated with his ward, but disliked to create family discord, and made no protests. He was also acting as administrator of her mother's estate, and his disappearance has created a tangle in their probate affairs.

WALL STREET IN DOUBT.

Does Not Know Who Tin Plate Magnate Has Wed.

New York, May 18.—Who is the new Mrs. Daniel G. Reid? That question has been asked generally in the Wall street district since the announcement reached here that Mr. and Mrs. Daniel G. Reid had sailed from Liverpool for New York. While it is not known certainly who the head of the tin plate trust has married there is an impression that the third Mrs. Reid was Iss Mabel Carrier, a former member of the "Florodora" sextette. Within the last year it had been reported that Mr. Reid was engaged to Miss Carrier.

Mr. Reid, as head of the tin plate trust, is a prominent figure in the business world. He is a native of Indiana, and still holds a legal residence there, although most of his time is spent in New York. He was a candidate to succeed Vice President Fairbanks in the United States senate. This is his third marriage.

His second wife was Clarice Agnew, a California girl, whom he met while she was playing in the Madison Square theater. He was then a widower. He was in a box and she was on the stage and he sought an introduction.

They were married in a short time and he established her in a splendid city house and also bought a villa on the Hudson. When her health broke down he expended a fortune trying to effect a cure, but in vain.

It was reported several months ago that he had married Miss Winchester, but he issued a denial.

HANGING IN THE BALANCE

Sometimes Victim of Diplomatic Illness, But Not This Time.

Constantinople, May 18.—For some weeks past, more or less circumstantial stories have been current in the chanceries that the health of the sultan of Turkey is seriously impaired, and that his condition is so precarious that news of his death may arrive at any moment.

Of course an official dementi was at once issued by the Turkish embassy, acting on instructions from the ports, and it is undoubtedly true that the original statement was exaggerated and premature. So long as the sultan attends the selamlik on Friday—as his tenure of the throne compels him to do—it would be extravagant to say that he was likely to die within a few days. But at the same time there is so general a belief in well informed quarters that his majesty is seriously declining in health that it would be idle to treat such a statement published by a responsible newspaper as unfounded.

Abdul Hamid has frequently been the victim of "diplomatic indispositions," which have spared him the embarrassment of seeing ambassadors from friendly powers who have come on unfriendly errands at a critical moment. Just such an occasion has occurred with regard to the relations between Turkey and Egypt. The sultan has been pressing claims in his shadowy capacity as suzerain upon the khedive with regard to the Siniatic peninsula which Egypt would not recognize if she could, and which Great Britain would forbid her to acknowledge were she so disposed. It is even reported that the British garrison in Egypt is to be increased. It is also suggested that this news caused the sultan's indisposition, for there is not the slightest possible doubt that fi he does not yield of his own accord on the Tabah question he will be made to yield. Nobody appears to be offering him the slightest encouragement to resist and as there is every reason to believe that in insisting upon the indisputable rights of Egypt the English government will have the support of France, Italy, Russia and probably Austria, there is not much chance for the incident really causing European friction. The demise of the sultan would, however, be a different matter. At no time for the last 99 years, perhaps at no time since the capture of Constantinople has the Ottoman empire been so completely a "one man concern," as the Americans would say, as it has been under the rule of Abdul Hamid. If a thorough command of all of the tricks, devices and intrigues of the diplomatic game were the secret of statecraft, Abdul Hamid would certainly rank among the very first of modern statesmen. Not only does he know the game, but he has played it, and still plays it, with exquisite skill.

In the use of "finesse" and of "false cards" he is without a rival, and as a friendly ambassador recently said of him, "If the sultan had devoted his magnificent talents to playing bridge on the grand scale he would have cleaned out every millionaire in the world." But his peculiar gifts will die with him, and when another caliph has succeeded there may easily arise most serious European complications. Abdul Hamid might even say with Madame De Pompadour, "After me the deluge." He has rid himself of all his ablest advisers; those now around him have big ears only in the sense that prompts the reply, "Pasha, to hear is to obey; what more can slave to despot say."

Many there are who believe that the sultan hopes by his latest moves to open the entire question of the British occupation of Egypt, and some there are who even go so far as to intimate that he is backed in his schemes by the kaiser. For Egypt is by no means an independent country. She is a vassal state, bound by her obligations to her suzerain, the sultan of Turkey. Moreover, her finances are more or less administered by an international commission called the Caisse de la Dette. And Egypt being part of the Ottoman empire, her powers are supposed to have their source from the power of the sultan. The great firman (the sultan's official decree) of June, 1873, gives the khedive a species of sovereignty, subject to the annual payment of $3,-400,000.

The present trouble between Great Britain and the sultan in delineating the Egyptian boundary lies in these so-called firmans. In the firmans of Feb. 13 and June 1, 1841, by which the sultan, Abdul Medjid, specified Egypt as a province of the Ottoman empire, reference was made to a certain official map. This map now seems to have mysteriously been mislaid. But the sultan now claims that the Sinai peninsula was marked on this map, and is not regarded as being part of Egypt because of a reference made to the disputed territory in a telegram to the khedive from the grand vizier in 1892.

No useful purpose can longer be served by a denial of the fact that the relations between the Egyptian government and the ports are at present somewhat strained, or that the policy of the sovereign towards his vassal state during the past twelve months has been calculated to arouse a certain uneasiness in Egyptian circles. The situation might just as well be faced first as well as last, although it is exaggerating things to say that it is in reality dangerous.

RENTERS TO BE OWNERS

Organized Movement for Beautifying Property to be Begun.

Just at present there is a great deal of activity in real estate in the West end. Many inquiries are being made for property. While some of this is asked for business locations, the greater part of the property likely to be acquired is for residence purposes. People employed in the West end or in other parts of the city and living there or contemplating moving there seem anxious to acquire homes, and a good many sales are being made just at this time. Many others are still "in the air," as real estate men say, but most of them are likely to be closed before long. It is believed that before the summer is well along an enormous number of renters will have changed over to the property owning class.

Those who are acquiring property are taking steps to beautify their homes, and the result, it is believed, will be a much handsomer West end. An effort will be made to make it a garden spot, and it is more than likely that an organized movement for the beautifying of lawns and curbways will start soon.

SOUTH WAKING UP.

T. A. Pinto Returns From Old Home in Maryland.

T. A. Pinto, the West end jeweler, has just returned from a visit to his old home in Maryland. While away he spent a good deal of his time in and around Salisbury, on Chesapeake bay, looking over some old plantations for the sale of which he is agent in this part of the country. These plantations cover as much as 1,000 acres each, and belong to descendants of the Southern aristocrats of ante-bellum days, who, because of the enormous expense of carrying on the business in the way they did it, have now decided to sell the plantations, cutting them up in various sizes, if necessary.

Mr. Pinto, who has not been back to Maryland in nineteen years until this trip took place, says that he is astonished at the progress which has been made in that part of the country. He says those of the Southerners who still retain their plantations have profited by the example of Northerners who have bought property there, and have made vast improvements and brought their plantations up to date and placed them in a condition where they can now make money out of them. In short, that part of Maryland at least, says Mr. Pinto, is being restored to its old-time prosperity and activity. Many Northerners have gone in there, he says, and have remade the country. He says all of these Northerners like the country and are immensely pleased with the productiveness of the land.

On the plantations, he says, the owners for the most part have installed windmills, and in some instances gasoline engines, to pump their water, and have established a regular system of waterworks about the properties. On some of the plantations he noticed so fine a system of waterworks that hydrants are to be seen at all points where there are buildings, with lengths of hose close by to use in case of fire, and regular fire drills are held among the employes of the farms.

It is in this vicinity that Howard Chandler Christy, the artist, and other prominent Northeastern people have purchased plantations and are residing.

PRENOVOST-NORGARDEN.

The wedding of Miss May Prenovost and Carl H. Norgarden took place on the evening of last Wednesday, and the affair was quite largely attended by friends of both parties. The ceremony took place at the residence of the officiating clergyman, Rev. J. W. Robinson, pastor of Grace M. E. church, on Twenty-second avenue west and Third street. Following the ceremony, refreshments were served for about twenty guests. The rooms were decorated with palms and roses, and the affair proved a very pretty and interesting one. Miss Mabel Burt was bridesmaid and Arthur Anderson was best man. Mr. and Mrs. Norgarden are now at their new home, 415 Twenty-fourth avenue west. The following guests were present at the wedding ceremony:

Messrs. and Mesdames Hooker and Joseph O'Neill, Mrs. C. A. Whitney, Misses Rose O'Neill, Frances O'Neill, Bercher and May Jones, and Messrs. John O'Neil, John Stronik, Pat Holliday, C. Yerkes, L. Johnson, E. Olson, Kenneth Whitney and Will O'Neill.

TO VISIT OLD SCENES.

West Enders Going to Norway to See Their Parents.

Several residents of the West end, who first saw the light of day among the fjords and hills of Norway, are planning to visit their native heaths this summer. Among these is Rev. H. K. Madsen of the Norwegian-Danish M. E. church. Mr. Madsen's father, who lives about eighty miles from Christiana, is 82 years of age and the Duluth pastor is anxious to see the old gentleman again. He will leave here during the first week in June and while on the other side expects to tour Norway from one end to the other. His congregation has given him a three-months' absence and has also presented him with a well-filled purse, with which to pay his expenses.

Mr. and Mrs. P. George Hanson and daughter Ruth will leave soon for Norway and will be gone several months. Mr. Hanson's mother is still living in the old country and he wishes to visit with her.

FEDJE TO GO FARMING.

Well Known Clothier Goes Out of Business for Health.

M. A. Fedje, the well known West end clothier, is about to quit business. He has closed out his up-town store and is now about to do the same with his West end store. Mr. Fedje was taken down last fall with a severe attack of rheumatism and was in bed for quite a while, after which he was removed to Mount Clemens for treatment.

He was put back to a practically painless basis after that, but is still suffering from ill health and has been advised to give up his present line of business because of the necessary confinement which it causes. As soon as he will have closed out the business he will probably buy a farm and besides operating that will deal in farm lands.

Funeral is Held.

The funeral of William John St. George was held yesterday morning from St. Jean de Baptiste church at the West end. It was very largely attended by the many friends of the young man and of his family. Many of them followed the remains to the grave and witnessed the interment in Calvary cemetery.

Mr. St. George was still a youth. He was a quick maker of friends and his life was believed to be full of promise. But he fell a victim of the white plague and after a considerable period of suffering the end came. Much regret is felt among his friends and great sympathy is offered his parents and surviving relatives.

Mork a Young Giant.

Gust Mork, a brother of Alderman Charles Mork of the Sixth ward, arrived a week ago from Sweden. He is a young giant and is still growing. He is 19 years of age and stands 6 feet 4 inches in his socks. He is not through yet and there is no telling when he will quit growing. He is a fine specimen of manhood. The arrival of young Mork makes the representation of that family in Duluth, one sister and eight brothers. Two brothers still remain in Sweden with the parents.

Mrs. Alexander Sharpe expects to leave soon for the west to join her husband, who is now located at Grant's Pass, Or.

We desire to extend our sincerest thanks to our friends, and particularly the Royal Neighbors of West Duluth and the barbers of the West end, for their sympathy and floral offerings during the illness and after the death of our son and brother, John W. LONGWORTHS TO BE PRESENTED IN JUNE.

London, May 18.—London is anticipating a record rush of Americans this summer. The hotels are preparing for a bumper season, while the house agents report an unprecedented number of inquiries from Americans with social ambitions who wish to take houses for the London season.

The first court, which will be held at Buckingham palace on May 25, will be notable for many American presentations. Mrs. Whitelaw Reid will present a number of her own compatriots, and her own daughter on that date will be formally received by their majesties.

Miss Gladys Grace, the last unmarried daughter of M. P. Grace, of Battle Abbey, will be presented by her sister, Lady Donoughmore.

Although an American girl, Miss Grace has many distinguished English relatives to entertain her. Mrs. Jay Phipps, her sister, has a house in Grosvenor Square, while her sister-in-law, Mrs. Bradley Martin, Jr., will entertain at No. 4 Chesterfield Gardens, where Lord Donoughmore rents the adjoining house.

In June the most important presentation for many years will be that of President Roosevelt's daughter, Mrs. Longworth, who will be a guest of the Whitelaw Reids at Dorchester House in June.

BUKOVICH ACQUITTED

Jury Finds He Killed His Brother in Self Defense.

Austrian Fratricide Expresses His Gratitude to the Jurors.

Steve Bukovich is acquitted of the murder of his brother, Marco Bukovich, at the Morris mine location, near Hibbing. The verdict that gave Steve his freedom was brought in at 12 o'clock this noon, after the jury had deliberated about half an hour.

As soon as it was interpreted to Steve that he had been found innocent of killing his brother with murderous intent, and was free to go where he liked without danger of further arrest or detention, his gratitude was excessive. He shook hands with the jurors and every person in the court room that he could reach, chattering his thanks and wishing everybody good-bye. After he had gone once around, Steve forgot where he left off in his handshaking, and started in again. He shook hands with one of the jurors four times. After all his farewells were spoken, he started away from the courthouse with two of his brothers, the trio seeming to be in a happy mood.

Steve Bukovich was indicted for manslaughter in the first degree, the maximum penalty for which is twenty years' imprisonment. The information against him was that he shot and killed his brother, Marco, during a quarrel at a boarding camp, on the evening of Easter Sunday.

The state claimed that Steve shot his brother, Marco, in the heat of passion, after an interval had elapsed from the time that his brothers, Marco and Niccolo, had cut him with a knife. Steve claimed that his brother, Niccolo held him while Marco cut and gouged him with a knife. He claimed that in their struggles the three men were crowded against his bed when he, believing his life to be in danger, seized a revolver from under the mattress and shot Marco.

Alexander Marshall, who with L. H. Corcoran conducted the defense, laid great stress on the claim of justifiable homicide. There was so much testimony corroborative of the main points in Steve's story of the fight that it seemed a foregone conclusion before the case reached the jury that Steve stood an excellent chance for an acquittal.

Marco, the dead man, was the oldest and the strongest of the five Bukovich boys. He was single and, as the evidence tended to show, of a quarrelsome disposition. Steve, the brother who did the shooting, is a married man, his family residing in the old country. He is one of the camp foremen at the Morris mine location and has about thirty-five or forty Austrians under his direction.

One of the peculiar features of the whole affair is that nobody else but the five brothers were mixed into it in any way. In the fight that led up to the killing Marco and Niccolo were arrayed against Steve, while Dan and Mike Bukovich separated the combatants once, and disarmed and put Steve in his bed after the shooting.

THREADS NEEDLE AT A HUNDRED AND SIX.

Indianapolis, May 18.—Mrs. Phoebe Redmond, who had lived in good health for more than 106 years, died at the home of her son, Thomas, No. 128 West McCarty street. Mrs. Redmond celebrated her 106th birthday Jan. 18, and was in good health up to the time she was stricken with paralysis, which caused her death.

Mrs. Redmond came from a Kentucky family that produced two other members who lived beyond the century mark. Her mother was 103 years old when she died. She had a brother, James Moore, who, it is said, died at the age of 118 years.

Mrs. Redmond was born in Bowling Green, Ky. She moved North in 1854, and settled at Drift Springs, west of Lafayette. A few years ago she came to Indianapolis with her children. Mrs. Redmond's husband died three years ago.

Eleven children survive her—James, George, Thomas, Nicholas, Aaron, William and John and Mrs. Nancy Manfield, Mrs. Margaret Monroe, Mrs. Bettie Moore and Mrs. Anna Van Pert.

Mrs. Redmond's wonderful health, despite her advanced age, was the wonder of all who knew her. Her relatives say that only once, to their knowledge, she had the assistance of a physician. Her eyesight at all times was considered good, they say, and only a few days before her death she threaded a needle without the aid of glasses while she was sewing.

A HEARING NEXT WEEK

Private Car Line Case Up in the Court of Appeals.

Knudsen-Ferguson Seek to Recover an Alleged Overcharge.

The case of the Knudsen-Ferguson Fruit company against the Michigan Central Railroad company, in which the plaintiff seeks to recover an alleged overcharge for refrigeration of a shipment of fruit, will come up in the United States court of appeals in St. Paul next Wednesday, May 23. It is an appeal from a decision handed down in the federal court a year ago, which was against the local concern.

The Knudsen-Ferguson company claims that charges for refrigeration should be included in the freight charges, and seek to recover of the defendant the $27 charge collected and demanded of them as a charge for refrigerating the fruit in transit, on the ground that the charge was not shown on or computable from the rate schedules applicable to the shipment, and was just that much in excess of what the charge should have been.

The shipment was of grapes, and came from Mattawan, Mich., in September, 1903, to Duluth, via the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul and Michigan Central railways. The total charges were $159.72, which included $27 for refigeration.

The case has attracted widespread attention, and has been and will further be bitterly fought in the courts. The action started by the Knudsen-Ferguson company really was the beginning of the fight against the private car line companies. It was shown in the evidence submitted that the Michigan Central had entered into contract with the Armour car lines, engaging to furnish to shippers and to haul only Armour refigerator cars, allowing the Armour company to look after the refrigeration, and to have the benefit of refrigeration charges, which were to be fixed by themselves.

It is the intention of the plaintiff that it is not only the duty of the railroad to furnish the carrying vehicle, but also the necessary attention and care in transit. Refrigeration is beyond the power of the shipper to perform, at least beyond the initial icing. At the former trial an attempt was made to show that it would be working at entirely cross purposes with itself for the law to say that it is the duty of the carrier to furnish the refrigerator car and then to say that it was not the carrier's duty to so operate the car as to effect the very purpose for which the refrigerator car is designed.

FACE NEW PROBLEM.

Electricity May Put Many Locomotive Engineers Out of Employment.

A new problem now facing the railroads, that of what disposition shall be made of the engineer when the various lines carry out plans for the electrification of the roads which have been mapped out, is worrying the Cleveland Plain Dealer, which says:

"A conference between operating officers of the big roads will take place shortly to discuss the question.

"With the Pennsylvania the matter is urgent. The electrification of the West Shore & Seashore line is being pushed with all possible speed, and it is the hope of the company that electric trains will be running across the state on or about July 1.

"The Pennsylvania does not desire to conflict with the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, and announcement that that body, at its annual convention now on in Memphis, will take up the attitude of their organization on the substitution of electric motors for steam power has served as a signal to the Pennsylvania and other roads that this matter will stand careful consideration and diplomatic adjustment.

"The Pennsylvania will require, it is said, from 200 to 300 engineers or motormen (whatever name they may be given) to operate their electric trains on the Jersey lines. The rank these men shall be given, their wages and the arrangements for making motormen out of engineers have all to be threshed out. It is expected that at the conference of railroad managers a uniform plan of action will be mapped out and adhered to.

"Leading members of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers believe that when the roads put motors in operation on suburban or other lines, enginemen who have contracts will be made motormen at the same wages. They hope that the same will be done for all enginemen.

"The process of changing enginemen to motormen is another matter for consideration, as the operation of electrically propelled cars or locomotives will be new to the locomotive engineers."

A. Brostedt Sees Ball Game.

A. Brostedt, Northern passenger agent of the Great Northern, has returned from the Michigan Copper country, where he yesterday witnessed the opening of the baseball season at Houghton.

"The day was generally observed in both Houghton and Hancock," said Mr. Brostedt, "for it was teams from these two towns that were playing. Stores, banks and all other places of business remained closed from 3 to 6 o'clock in the afternoon, and a crowd of about 4,000 people flocked to the ball park.

"There was a procession, led by a brass band, and appropriate addresses, after the grounds were reached. A bottle of champagne was broken over the home plate. The mayor of Houghton pitched the first ball, which was caught by the mayor of Hancock. Houghton won the game."

GEOLOGISTS AMAZED

By a Well on High Hill at Cherryvale, Kansas.

Cherryvale, Kan., May 18.—One of the biggest water wells ever drilled in this part of the country is in the vicinity of the smelter here. The location of it was purely an accident. The smelter people were looking for a supply of water for the horses, and decided that it would be better to go to the top of a hill and run a gravity line down to the works than to drill on the flat and install pumps. The drill had not been working more than three hours when the water came with a great rush and nearly blew the tools out of the hole. A six-inch pipe was put in and this is barely sufficient to contain the volume.

The pressure is so great that the tank over the fire engine house is filled without pumping, and then the well is not working more than one-fourth of the time. If it were to work all the time it would not only supply all the departments of the smelter, but the entire town of Cherryvale in addition.

The capacity of the well is a matter of guess, because it has never been allowed to run all day, but it is said to be at least 4,000,000 gallons a day. The drilling of the well has been the talk of the farmers around in the neighborhood, and more wells be drilled in the hope of finding the same vein.

The big well is another of the freaks which have been the bane of geologists since the discovery of oil and gas in this part of the state. If there was any other range of hills around here, the presence of the water so near the surface of the ground on top of the hill to the northwest might be explained, but how it happens that the water is within twelve feet of the highest hill in the whole country, and with no hill at all within reach, is something the people who think they know something of geology have been unable to explain.

DRAMATIC INSTINCT

London, May 18.—The land of Shakespeare, Congreve, Sheridan and Pinero has no reserve of good playwrights—writers of pieces acceptable to West end audiences. That is the conclusion arrived at by the committee of the Playgoers' club, which invited aspiring darmatists to send in their masterpieces, on the understanding that if one was found worthy of that honor it would be produced by Philip Carr at a West end theater.

The plays sent in numbered 250, and were of all kinds, except the kind that is once more the most popular and successful on the London stage—musical comedy. After eliminating all impossible and mediocre plays, the committee reduced the competitors to two, but even then they finally decided that both of them lacked the qualities that make for success on the boards.

All this seems to prove that, while there are plenty of excellent writers of novels and stories in England, the dramatic instinct is in the twentieth century extremely rare among Englishmen—much rarer than it was in Elizabethian England or than it is now in modern France.

The theatrical situation in London has turned a complete somersault within a year. Twelve months ago the music halls were booming and the theaters were playing to empty houses. Now the theaters are prospering, while the music halls want patronage.

The Lyceum never prospered since it was devoted to variety. The Empire had to put its house in order because of the falling off in its receipts.

The Collseum is in a precarious condition and is calling on its stockholders for more money. The Hippodrome has suffered severely from the competition of its gigantic neighbor.

There are too many music halls, but the real explanation for their emptiness is that their programs are infinitely dull and that they are lacking in the variety which was the first cause of their success.

Night by night, week by week, year by year the same performers appear, sing the same kind of songs, turn the same somersaults, train the same dogs or cats and crack the same jokes.

Audiences have become bored and now fly to the light operatic theaters for change and variety.

EVEN WITH CONDUCTOR.

Boston Herald: Fred Jones, a man of no small dimensions, was a popular conductor on the Boston & Maine railroad, making daily trips between Boston and Plymouth. One day, several years ago, while collecting fares, he encountered a man under the influence of liquor who would not show a ticket.

After reasoning in vain with this passenger, Mr. Jones said: "Now, see here, you'll have to do one of three things: give me a ticket, pay your fare, or get off and walk."

SAY CHINA IS DOCILE

No Cause for Excitement as to the Attitude There.

Disposed to Peace—Nobody in Kingdom is Belligerent.

Pekin, May 18.—Your correspondent has just interviewed Viceroy Tsen Chun-Shuan and he can find no reason for the exaggerated fears with which the world has been regarding China for some time past.

In this vast empire, with its crude methods of police, its deplorable administration of justice, its national ignorance and the credulity of its people, local disturbances may occur at any time, but there is no reason for apprehension that the position of foreigners in China is more insecure than at any time during the past fifty years. In each of the four disturbances occurring in the past year at Lien-Chau, Chang-pu, Shanghai and Nan-Chang the causes were purely local. In the first case enmity had existed for years, and the district is notoriously unfriendly and infested with smugglers and bandits.

In Chang-pu the cause was an indiscreet action on the part of two Spanish priests. No lives were lost and the officials, both military and civil, acted well, and have since been thanked by the British authorities, while full reparation has already been made. In the Nan-Chang case, the governor of the province was dismissed from office and the provincial judge was suspended immediately on the receipt of the throne of the report of Lian Tun-yen, the customs tattai at Tientsin, who was sent to investigate the circumstances of the outbreak.

The general condition of the country is not unsatisfactory. Kwang-si province, which formerly was the seat of perennial rebellion, is more peaceful and prosperous than it has been for many years. Trade is satisfactory, the customs revenue last year was by far the largest on record, whether it be estimated in silver or gold, and the postal service is working uninterruptedly throughout the entire empire. European papers condemn the cry of "China for the Chinese," but surely, betokening as it does the awakening of a conscientious nationality, the movement is one requiring guidance and encouragement and not unmeasured condemnation. One need only recall the severity with which the foreign powers devastated this province in 1900 to bring one's judgment to a more correct balance, and one need only remember the gross injustice of so many of the indemnity claims which China is now paying, especially the outrageous claims for railway damage, to consider it not unreasonable that China should desire to purchase her own railways.

There is no point of comparison between the present situation in China and that preceding the Boxer outbreak, for the Chinese government cannot conceivably have any sympathy with the anti-foreign movement. China has everything to gain by keeping at peace with foreigners, and this she knows. The slightest disturbance causes her profound embarrassment and alarm. A whole army of missionaries and travelers is on the watch for the smallest symptom pronouncitory of danger. Before the Boxer trouble the tendency was to disregard evidence and to minimize insecurity; now the tendency, quite natural, is to exaggerate suspicion. Travelers are moving all over the empire with a sense of security that disproves the stories about unrest in the interior. The agents of the American and British Bible societies and missionaries of the China Inland mission all send favorable reports. Col. Wingate, the able director of our excellent intelligence department, has just concluded an extensive journey of some months' duration in He-Nan and Hu-Pei and has everywhere been well treated. Most favorable also are the reports from the postal couriers who conduct now a wonderfully celebrated service throughout even the most distant provinces.

While the attitude of the government shows no sympathy with any anti-foreign movement, it would be idle to deny that some features of the present situation the most unsatisfactory. Foremost is the unbridled nature of the newborn native press, the journals of which are mostly published in the treaty ports and guided largely by the students with a smattering of education from Japan, assisted by irresponsible Japanese. Several of the worst inflammatory papers are registered under Japanese protection. There is an urgent necessity that the powers should concert with Japan to assist China to draft and enforce press laws. Not all the papers, however, are bad. Some of them are good and have had a beneficial effect in contributing to the growth of a reasonable public opinion, but the general tone is anti-foreign, and even the best are remarkably inaccurate. The publication in the native papers of the anti-slavery South African election charges has had a deplorable effect, while the publication of English cartoons, showing Chinese driven with whips in chains to labor, Englishmen shooting Chinese in sport, and Englishmen torturing Chinese at the mines, can only make Englishmen living in China wonder why retaliation is so infrequent.

Another unsatisfactory feature, due to the weakness of the central government, is its failure to forbid the holding of inflammatory meetings in the Central and Southern provinces. Control is enforced by the viceroy in this province. Another failure of the government is in not punishing local notables implicated in promoting such meetings. Yet another is the frequent interference of Catholic missionaries in the interior in native law suits, leading sooner or later to breaches of the peace and attacks upon the innocent.

However, the position of affairs in the mixed court, the reconstitution of which since the December riots had been in the hands of the diplomatic body at Pekin, is gradually becoming untenable, and the administration of the settlement is seriously prejudiced. The only satisfactory solution, in accordance with precedence, is that the powers concerned should entrust the question in the first instance to a committee of the consuls, who are familiar with the local news in practice.

In the existing conditions the Chinese officials are systematically obstructing the good government of the large native population of the settlement, and by limiting the terms of imprisonment to sixty days, are encouraging the criminal class. The seriousness of the situation is shown by the fact that over fifty criminal cases are now remanded.

Some of these unsatisfactory conditions are counterpoised by the spread of Western knowledge, accompanying which is an extraordinary desire throughout the empire for a knowledge of English. Since the abolition of the old methods of examination the demand for Western literature has increased enormously. Literature, modern, healthy and instructive, is being brought into China by the ton. There is immense activity in the publishing houses in Chang-pei and Japan, and altogether great changes are in operation.

Qualification Law Shuts Out One Candidate for Superintendent.

NORTH DAKOTA.

Fargo—There will be one less candidate for county superintendent of schools as a result of the qualification law in this state. The measure makes a distinction in counties where the salary is over $1,000 and in those where it is less. The additional requirements are that in counties where the salary is larger the candidate must have taught three years within the state. Prof. Conn wanted to be a candidate against Mrs. Mattie M. Davis for superintendent. He has taught seventeen years in other states, but none in North Dakota, though he has resided here some time. The conditions are not required in many counties nor for superintendents of city schools. The indications are that Mrs. Davis will have no opposition.

Visited by the stork while on her way to a physician's office was the experience of Mrs. Kedrick this morning. Her child was born in a stairway and was dead when the unconscious mother was found some time afterwards by a policeman.

The Fargo street railway will build a loop in the sixth ward on the north side to take the place of the stub line line to Oak Grove. From this extension a line to the state fair grounds will also be constructed. The city council passed the franchise on its first reading.

A telephone message from Casselton reported the theft of a grip, containing $1,300 in mortgages and notes. It was said the loser was a Fargo machinery collector, but his identity was unknown.

Minot—The eyes of most politicians of North Dakota are turned toward Ward county, which will have the largest number of delegates in the Republican state convention at Jamestown. Both the insurgents and the machine men are making elaborate preparations for a strenuous fight.

The campaign preceding the primary election, which will be held June 19, will be formally opened next week. The anti-machine men, or insurgents as they are called, have already decided on a list of delegates to the state conention, and a selection will be made by the machine men in a few days.

There promises to be a lively skirmish in the fight for county offices, and this, too, will be made to some extent on machine and anti-machine lines. Most of the present county officers are machine men, but as "they have troubles of their own," they will not be able to do much effectie work for the machine.

A. V. Swanson, chairman of the board of county commissioners of Ward county, and a strong anti-machine man, is a candidate against Sheriff Lee. Attorney James Johnson, another anti-machine man, will run against Judge Davis for county judge. The anti-machine men have candidates for most of the other county offices and for the legislature.

Aberdeen—Despite the fact that a majority of the city council is in favor of passing the ordinance providing for an issue of electric light bonds in the amount of $35,000, it seems probable that the issue will not be made—at least for some time to come.

A strong protest to the issue has been made by George N. Williamson, who as a citizen and as city attorney, sent a communication to the council stating that the proposed bond issue is illegal for the reason that the city is already in debt to the amount of $113,000, and that the law requires a majority vote on a bond issue question, which provision in this case has not been complied with.

The ordinance has passed its first reading, and it is said it will pass the second without difficulty. If this proves to be the case, it is more than likely that suit will be instituted to restrain the city from proceeding further in the matter on the grounds already mentioned. The assessed valuation of the city is $2,000,000, and the city's authorized indebtedness on this amounts to $100,000.

There is already a bonded and floating indebtedness outstanding of $113,000, and until that is paid it is proposed by those opposed to the electric light bond issue to prevent the city from incurring any further liability.

Yankton—An interesting reminder of old pioneer days was in Yankton in the person of John Wiseman, son of Hension Wiseman, who in the sixties, while he and his wife were shopping in Yankton, lost five children by Indians, who killed and mutilated them in a terrible manner. Hension Wiseman on his return home devoted his life for years to killing every Indian on sight. He was dubbed "Bad Man" by them, and was held in great terror. John and a sister, Mrs. Chris Larsen, both living with their father, are all that are now left of this historic family.

Company M has been ordered to prepare for the fall drills with regular troops, either at Fort Russell, Wyo., or at Fort Riley, Kan. Capt. Russell will devote his time until August in bringing his men up to a good standard of efficiency.

Deadwood—Work has at last begun on the remodeling of the Kildonan mill at Pluma for the Horseshoe Mining company. It has been known for some time that the reorganization of this company was about to be successfully consummated, but now that the actual work on the mill has begun, people are confident of the future success of the company.

Manager McLaughlin is authority for the statement that the company never had so much ore ready for treatment as at the present time. Old claims are producing steadily and the work of opening up the new ground is going ahead well. The mill, which was formerly a chlorination plant, will be changed into a wet cyanide mill, with a capacity of 300 tons a day.

Former Escanaba Alderman Arrested, Charged With Malfeasance.

Escanaba—Ex-Alderman Edward Smith, who was defeated in the last mayoralty campaign for mayor, was arrested Thursday charged with malefasance in office. It is alleged that while serving as alderman and while chairman of the street committee of the council, Smith contracted for the entire crushed stone output of a certain quarry and then sold it to the city at a profit of from 10 to 20 cents a yard. It is alleged that he cleaned up $5,000 in this manner. Smith admits the existence of the contract through which he controlled the only available stone supply for the city, but claims that it was entered into on the advice of his attorney. He is out on $500 bail.

Houghton—The officials of the Tamarack are hopeful that the operations at the mine will be resumed, at least in No. 5 shaft, early next week. The hoisting of water from No. 2 began Tuesday. There are no indications of fire in any of the shafts. No. 5 suffered less than the others, and the work of preparing the shafts and timbering is progressing so rapidly there that it is believed the first of next week will see the resumption of hoisting at least in that shaft.

Dynamiting and other nefarious methods are being resorted to by unscrupulous fishermen in the various trout streams in Houghton county and guards have been placed at several of the most popular rivers. Thousands of fish are annually destroyed in this manner here, especially in the Pilgrim river, which is close to Houghton, and the good sportsmen are organizing as a vilignance committee in an endeavor to stop the practice. Fishing is now at its best in Houghton county, the warm weather of the past week having brought hundreds of fishermen to the various streams. During the past several years millions of trout fry have been planted in the Houghton county streams and inland lakes by the state fish commission, so that good results are now being attained by the Copper country anglers.

Sault Ste. Marie—The first raft of pulpwood is to be taken over the St. Mary's rapids this year went over this week, bound for Green Bay, Wis., from Grand Marais. The raft began to go over about noon, and at 2:30 every stick had been rounded up inside the booms that were waiting at the foot of the rapids. It was as clean a run as could have been made. There were about 3,000 cords of wood in the raft.

Menominee—Carl Nelson, 12-year-old son of Gus Nelson, engineer at the waterworks pumping station at Menominee, narrowly escaped drowning in the bay, being saved as he was going down for the last time through the heroism of Charles Anderson, who dove in and rescued him at the risk of his own life. Young Nelson, in company with a number of other boys, was fishing off the old Donovan & O'Connor docks. He was sitting on an old log near the end of the pier, when suddenly the timber slipped and fell into the bay carrying the bay with it. The lad was unable to save himself and went down twice. The third time he grasped a floating piece of wood and started to drift out into the bay. However, Charles Auderson, 18-year-old son of Andrew Anderson, had reached the spot and sprang boldly in, finally succeeding in dragging the drowning boy to safety. Young Anderson is employed at the boiler works and is the young man who recovered the bodies of the Devoe and Anderson boys, who were drowned off the Donovan & O'Connor docks last summer.

LOVESICK YOUTH.

Marshalltown, Iowa, May 18.—Walter Howard, a youth of 14, made an attempt to commit suicide at Grinnell, Wednesday because he was in love with a kitchen maid at the Hotel Monroe at that place. He appears to have come to the conclusion that he could not live without her and purchasing an ounce of chloroform went to the rear of the hotel and calling the girl, to witness his act, swallowed the poison. A doctor was summoned and the prompt use of a stomach pump revived the lovesick lad.

An Unlucky Circumstance Delays the Wash Goods Sale.

We're not running this business on "luck," nor do we depend on "may be's" or "seem so's" for any degree of success. When we announced in last night's paper that the wash goods sale would be ready Saturday morning we fully expected that it would be. But, occasionally, in every walk of life, and line of business, conditions develop that are unavoidable, and disappointing as well. Things that really seem like a streak of "bad luck." That's the case just now, and as a result we are compelled to Postpone this Sale Till Monday Morning.

AND WE PROMISE THIS:—The sale will be ready at 8 o'clock, Monday morning, when the doors open—no disappointment—no delay—and prices will be still more determinedly cut down. We'll make you lower prices than you expect, or even imagine and provide plenty of salespeople to attend to your wants.

Tailored Suits Worth $35.00 to $45.00 Tomorrow $32.50

And lucky the woman—and wise—who secures one of the lot. We might make a long tale about it, but here is

The story in a nutshell:

We anticipated a very heavy suit business, bought more heavily than ever before—especially in 36 and 38 sizes—taking all of these we could get, in many of the very smartest creations.

Naturally a few of these styles remain. We'd have no trouble disposing of these sizes if we held them, at the regular prices, but we want to sell them all now—and will.

Saturday morning we will offer all such suits—a select assortment of the season's smartest effects—at one price, $32.50.

Nearly all are Bolero or Eton models—a few have 22-inch fitted jackets. Styles are so varied we cannot detail them, further than to say that every good style feature in jackets is shown and that the skirts are circular and circular gored models.

There are Chiffon Panamas in Alice and navy blue, reseda green, choral, French gray and black, and some of the very swellest suits in beautiful checked suitings, shadow plaids and handsome mixtures.

VALUES—These suits bought in any other store in Duluth would range in price from $35 to $45. Many of them sold for $37.50, but for Saturday the price will be $32.50.

Covert Coats $6.50

Attention please, to this tight-fitting collarless covert jacket! Two rows of self covered buttons in front, finished with finely tailored seams and trimming effect of small buttons. Look at this, then try to get anything like it under $8 and you'll be back for this one—that's been the case several times. It's jaunty, stylish—a litle gem.

BERRIES ARE PLENTIFUL

Fine Weather in the South Causes Increase in Shipments.

Some Eggs Are Being Stored—Fish Prices Go Higher.

Strawberries are easily the feature of the produce market this week.

The rains, which have been interfering with the picking and shipping of the berries in the Southern states, have let up, and fair weather is now reported from the strawberry country. As a result, the receipts of berries during the week have been very heavy, and the price has dropped down to about $2 or $2.25 for a case of twenty-four quarts.

If the receipts continue as heavy during the remainder of the week as they have been during the early part of the week, the price may go under the $2 mark by Monday.

The berries are the finest that have been received this season, being large and fully ripened. Most of them are coming from Arkansas, with a few shipments from Mississippi and Texas.

Next week, if the weather continues fine, the Missouri berries should be on the market.

There has been a big demand for poultry during the week, in spite of the fact that at this season of the year business is generally dull in the poultry line.

Most of the poultry now coming in is live stock. The cold storage poultry is cleaned up pretty well, and there is little dressed stock on the market. The weather is becoming so warm that the dressed stock is difficult to keep for any length of time.

Some eggs are going into cold storage this week. The receipts have been very heavy, and the price has fallen off a trifle, fresh eggs being quoted today at 16 and 16½ cents. Some eggs were placed in cold storage two or three weeks ago at as high a figure as 17 cents a dozen, but at this price they are not likely, in ordinary years, to prove a good investment. At 16 cents a dozen they are more attractive to the cold storage dealers, but the experience of last winter has made the dealers wary, and many of them are holding off in hopes of still lower prices. It is hoped that with warmer weather the price will get down to 15 cents, which is considered a fair figure at which to store.

The demand for eggs continues brisk.

It has been very difficult to secure fish this week.

All week the lake has been swept by northeasters, and the fishermen have had no opportunity to go out. The local market is cleaned up, almost completely, and yesterday afternoon it was almost impossible to secure fresh fish of any kind.

Several consignments were expected in this morning, however, and there will be fish on the market today.

The prices are higher than last week. The market appeared to have touched rock bottom, with trout quoted at 6 cents a pound at wholesale. At this figure there was no profit for the dealers, and a reaction was inevitable. Trout are quoted this week at 7 cents, and white fish at from 12½ to 15 cents.

Prices on fruits and vegetables remain about the same as last week. Potatoes are somewhat lower, selling at from 35 to 65 cents a bushel, with the new potatoes quoted at $2.50 per bushel.

* * *

The cold weather has had an injurious effect on trade during the week, and the prospect of the strike not being finally settled has also cut some figure. The dealers on the ranges hesitated about laying in any large stocks until the labor clouds had entirely cleared away, and they have been running along on the goods the had on hand. The result has been a lull in business during the week, but it is not looked upon as permanent, and fine weather and the news of the final settlement of the lake strike, would bring a brisk revival in trade.

RUN OVER BY A TRAIN.

Body is Supposed to be That of Ben Hendrickson.

Eveleth, Minn., May 18.—The body of a man, supposed to be that of Ben Hendrickson, was found in the Missabe yards. The man evidently was run over by a train while he lay on the track. The trainmen heard no outcry, and this raised a suspicion of murder, but Deputy Coroner Gleason is inclined to the theory that while the man was probably unconscious when the train passed over him, it is likely that he was suffering from epilepsy or was intoxicated.

The only mark of identification found was a receipt showing that Ben Hendrickson had forwarded $74 to the old country some days ago. The victim was dressed as a laborer. A watch in the victim's pocket was crushed flat, and the finding of what remained of the timepiece to some extent contradicted the theory of the railroad men that Hendrickson had been murdered and placed on the track.

Food Cure

NATURE'S WAY

See Diet List Below.

HEALTH REGAINED VIA FOOD.

A man may try all sorts of drugs to help him to get well, but, after all, the "food cure" is the method intended by Nature.

Anyone can prove the efficacy of the food cure by making use of the following breakfast each morning for fifteen or twenty days:

A dish containing not more than four heaping teaspoonfuls of Grape-Nuts food, enough good, rich cream to go with it, some raw or cooked fruit, not more than two slices of entire wheat bread, and not more than one cup of Postum Food Coffee, to be sipped, not drank hurriedly. Let this suffice for the breakfast.

Let one meal in the day consist of an abundance of good meat, potato and one other vegetable.

This method will quickly prove the value of the selection of the right kind of food to rebuild the body and replace the loss tissue which is destroyed every day and must be made up, or disease of some sort enters it This is an age of specialists, and the above suggestions are given by a specialist in food values, dietics and hygiene.

Friged Facts!

We received a message from H. Cohn & Sons, Chicago, manufacturers of H. Cohn & Son's Clothing, stating they had some 1,500 Suits left over from this season's manufacture, which they would close out at a price. As they were forced to have the room that this line of clothing covered, and they also change their styles every season, they considered they would rather take a half loss and clear their house all at once.. The lot was entirely too large for us, but we are now fully convinced that the enterprising Duluthian is awake to his opportunity, and as these goods keep coming in the values are getting better, and every day our sales are increasing.

These big Bargains bring smiling customers. Alert readers will at once see this opportunity.

NORWEGIANS CELEBRATE

Rev. Falk Gjertsen of Minneapolis Talks to His Countrymen.

A Large Audience Present at Norwegian Independence Exercises.

Five hundred sons and daughters of Norway and their children assembled in Flaaten's auditorium last evening to celebrate the Norwegian independence day, the seventeenth of May.

An intresting program was given which recalled life across the seas and at the same time inspired those present with a great love for their adopted land, the United States of America.

The principal address of the evening was given by Rev. Falk Gejersen of Minneapolis. He is an accomplished orator and his speech proved a great treat to those present. The well known clergyman spoke in the Norwegian language.

He explained the significance of the seventeenth of May in Norwegian history, reciting some of the struggles the nation has had to reach the goal tried for by every nation under the sun, independence. He made reference to the recent events which resulted in the retirement of Norway from an alliance with Sweden and which culminated with the selection of a king of their own by the Norwegian people.

The speaker pointed out the honors which the Norwegians had received in this country and in Minnesota particularly. He gave some figures which conveyed to the mind of his hearers some idea of the activity of Norwegians in public life.

He also compared the amount of land owned by Norwegians in the United States and the amount owned in their own country. He also urged his hearers to be Americans first in everything.

"Norwegians must learn to march together, to keep time to the music," said Rev. Mr. Gjertsen. "On account of the strong individuality of our people, some have advanced the theory that this cannot be done, but it must be done. When this stage is reached, they will become political factors and for this they are well adapted."

Short addresses were made by P. Munkeby and O. Stenson. Miss Olga Prytz and the Zenith quartet sang and Flaaten's orchestra contributed several delightful musical numbers.

The hall was decorated with American and Norwegian colors and the entertainment was given under the auspices of the Sons of Norway.

HE WEARIES OF CIVILIZATION

Dr. Nicholas Senn of Chicago Will Live With Savages.

Chicago, May 18.—Penetrating the walls of his offices in a Chicago skyscraper, invading the exclusive precincts of his palatial home on the North side, the call of the jungle has come with irresistible force to Dr. Nicholas Senn, one of the world's most famous surgeons.

To make his home by the trails of the primitive men, to sleep in forest fastnesses and awake in the solitude of the wilderness—that is the command that came to him irresistibly, day by day, until at last he yielded to its insistent call and prepared for a journey to the center of the Dark continent.

"I am going away," he announced to his astonished friends. "I am going to visit the savages in the jungles.

"Yes, I am weary of civilization—I see enough of civilized people in Chicago. It is my desire to get into the Zambesi district before it becomes too civilized. The savages will give me a good vacation."

With the possible exception of the Andaman Islanders and the bushmen of Australia, the equatorial peoples of Africa are said to represent the lowest scale of civilization in the world. There are some curious races of dwarfs in Central Africa. It is such peoples that Dr. Senn proposes to study.

Some shooting at big game is also on the distinguished surgeon's program. Altogether, he is not likely to suffer from ennui on the trip.

With Dr. Senn this is no new idea. For many years he has had recurrence of the jungle fever. More than once the compelling call of the wild has lured him from his home.

Once it led him to Alaska, at another time to Samoa, and again, at various times, to the different wild sections of America.

LAST BRITISH SOLDIER IS LEAVING CANADA.

Winnipeg, Man., May 18.—Advices have been received at the local offices of the Canadian Pacific that the British government special, carrying the relieved imperial garrison from Esquimault on the Pacific coast, left Vancouver for the east yesterday afternoon. It is expected to reach Winnipeg on Sunday.

The party consists of nine officers, two hundred men, fifty children and twenty-three women. Members of the relieved garrison, except forty who have taken service under the Canadian government, will return to England.

The evacuation of the Esquimault military station by the imperial troops is of special interest, as henceforth all military stations in Canada will be garrisoned solely by Canadian troops.

SIXTH FATAL EXPLOSION.

Fuse Hung Fire and Charge Exploded When Men Investigated.

Kenora, Ont., May 18.—The sixth fatal dynamite accident occurred Wednesday in Farrywood, thirty-five miles from here. One man lost his life and two others were badly injured. It was the old story of a fuse hanging fire and the men investigating.

The face and eyes of Frank Videen, foreman and brother of the contractor, were injured, and he may lose his life. Charles Berg received only slight injuries, but John Arcette, a mucker, received a fatal injury, both legs being terribly mangled and he having internal injuries.

MINING MAN FATALLY SHOT.

Two Little Boys Playing With Gun Responsible for Accident.

Butte, Mont., May 18.—William Beckwith, a prominent mining man of Pony, was shot in the stomach Wednesday by two little boys at his mine on Mineral hill, and is probably fatally injured, a 22-caliber ball passing through his intestines. The young son of Henry Lake and another boy, son of Mrs. Gilbert of Pony, were near the mine playing with a small rifle when the gun was discharged, the ball striking Mr. Beckwith just as he was stepping out of his cabin.

COLONIZATION COMPANY

Will Develop Cut-Over and Hardwood Timber Tracts.

Cumberland, Wis., May 18.—Wednesday at Chippewa Falls was perfected the organization of the American Colonization company, having a capitalization of $500,000, with the following officers: President, J. T. Barber, Eau Claire; first vice president, Frederick Von Puls, Bremen, Germany; second vice president, P. S. Bell, Winona; secretary, William Irvine, Chippewa Falls; treasurer and assistant secretary, F. E. Weyerhauser, St. Paul; manager, Albert C. Uecke, Cumberland; directors, J. T. Barber, Frederick Von Pills, F. S. Bell, William Irvine, A. E. Walrath, G. W. Claussenius.

The object of this company is the sale, development and settlement of Northern Wisconsin lands, including in the aggregate over 2,000,000 acres, the estimated value of which exceeds $20,000,000.

These lands now placed on the market for the first time comprise cut-over and hardwood timber tracts held out of the market for several years by the large lumber concerns.

The tract includes the immense holdings of Frederick Weyerhauser, John S. Owen Lumber company, the Northwestern Lumber company, Laird & Norton, Musser-Sauntry company, Mississippi River Logging company, Chippewa Lumber & Boom company, Chippewa Farm Land company, North Wisconsin Lumber company, Lake Nebagamon Lumber company, Superior Timber company and Uecke Land company.

This throws open for immediate settlement the largest tract of land ever put on the market in the Northwest, and means that thousands of thrifty settlers will find farm homes in this resourceful agricultural region.

The organization of this company is the culmination of long and vigorous efforts of Mr. Uecke. Last September, as a result of his determination to bring Northern Wisconsin to the attention of foreign emigrants, he succeeded in inducing a commission representing the German empire to make a thorough and complete investigation of this section. After visiting various parts of the United States and Canada its members reported Northern Wisconsin as the most desirable locality in which to start German colonies.

Particular attention will be given to diverting foreign immigration from the large cities and overcrowded Eastern rural communities to this state.

COVERS FOUR MIXED MILES IN 19 MINUTES.

Simla, May 18.—A remarkable athletic feat, which rivals the famous exploit of Mr. Bulpett, the old Rugby athlete, who walked a mile, ran a mile and rode a mile, all within fifteen minutes, has just been performed by a young Indian officer of the Seventeenth cavalry, Lieut. K. Barge.

On a level mile on the road between Bannu and Dehra Ismail Khan he had to cover the distance four times—at a run, at a walk, on horseback and on a bicycle—in twenty minutes.

He walked the first mile in 7 minutes 52 3-5 seconds; ran the second in 5 minutes, 12 seconds, and bicycled the fourth in 2 minutes 59 2-5 seconds, thus achieving the task in 19 minutes, 8 seconds, inclusive of the time taken in changing mounts, and winning with 52 seconds to spare.

A SILVER WEDDING

Present Them With Silver Tea Set—Delightful Event.

Rev. and Mrs. S. A. Jamieson were very pleasantly surprised at their home, 802 North Fifty-eighth avenue west, last evening by a large number of friends calling upon them and helping them celebrate the twenty-fifth anniversary of their wedding. They were presented with a handsome solid silver tea set, the anniversary being the silver one.

They have lived in Duluth for fifteen years and for four years Mr. Jamieson was pastor of the Westminster Presbyterian church of West Duluth. At present he is pastor-at-large of the Duluth presbytery and has hosts of friends.

Last night's gathering was strictly impartial as to sectarianism. Almost every Christian creed was represented and the congratulations given Mr. and Mrs. Jamieson were hearty and sincere. The event was very pleasantly enjoyed by all.

Kirmess a Success.

The two nights of the kirmess, given last evening and the evening previous at Great Eastern hall proved even a greater success than was expected. The hall was packed each night. It is said that the little folks who danced the Highland dances were the hit of last night.

On the first evening Miss Alice Bailey and Oliver Olson won the cake walk and last night this contest was won by Miss Eva Sawyer and Louis Silger.

OFFICER IS GIVEN CHASE

Prisoner Tries to Escape at Door of Police Station.

Police Captain Resche was given a merry chase this morning by Christian Haller, a young man who is wanted in Houghton on a charge of embezzlement.

Haller was arrested on Superior street near Sixth avenue east, by Capt. Resche. The officer knew Haller, and out of respect for the young man's wishes, he did not handcuff him or summon the wagon, but walked westward toward the police station beside him.

Just in front of the station, the officer had cause to regret his generosity. The young man suddenly turned and fled at top speed. He turned down Second avenue east, with the officer in close pursuit, and took refuge in the yard of the Duluth Iron & Metal works, trying to shake off his pursuer among the piles of scrap iron. The officer was too speedy for him, however, and with the assistance of one of the men employed in the yards, he again captured his prisoner, and slipped the handcuffs on him.

The Houghton officers have been notified, and will come for their man tomorrow.

The details of the charge against him are not known, and the police have only the telegram requesting his arrest.

YOUTH BUILDS COSTLY AIRSHIP

Another Young Ohioan Has Constructed Novel Gas Generator.

Conneaut, Ohio, May 18.—There are two notable and youthful inventors in Ohio, one here and one at Columbus.

Wade Hazeltine is a pupil in the schools of this city. For a long time he has taken great interest in things of a scientific nature. He has performed chemical experiments and has also demonstrated marked mechanical skill, and has built a gas generator upon which he has patents pending. A principal feature of this invention is the self-regulating device which checks the formation of gas when the service is shut off.

The Columbus lad who is showing great inventive genius is Cromwell Dixon, 13 years old, of 1559 Highland street. He is building an airship. That it is no toy is demonstrated by the fact that $300 has already been expended in the Japanese silk of the balloon. Although so young in years, this boy has given much attention and study to aerial inventions.

When Knabenshue, with his airship, was at the state fair in Columbus, Cromwell spent a great deal of time with him, and Knabenshue took great pains to answer his questions.

In his workshop, at the rear of his home, he spends much time and has built several things of interest and value. He built a fish that would swim by means of clockwork.

The airship is being built in a larger shop than the one in the rear of his home. In appearance this ship is not unlike Knabenshue's. The car is twelve and a half feet in length. It is three-cornered in shape and made of slender pieces of spruce and cedar. The engine is two horse-power, is covered with aluminum, and weighs twenty-six pounds. It is of Holland make. The balloon will be more pointed than that of Knabenshue's airship and will have three blades on the propeller instead of two. The balloon is being constructed by a balloon maker in accordance with the boy's plans.

SUPPOSED MUTE

Wilmington, N. C., May 18.—Somewhat remarkable and a decidedly startling scene of a man dumb suddenly regaining his voice was presented in the United States district court here. The supposed mute was a one-armed white man, named Lawrence Dudley, at one time a resident here, and who moved away years ago.

He returned several months ago, and by signs and writing informed the people that he had been stricken dumb. He also caused domestic complications, as his wife, thinking him dead, had married again. Shortly afterwards he was arrested for stealing from the mail agent's office at the postoffice and committed to jail.

During his incarceration he maintained his dumb state, and hence he caused excitement in court, when he suddenly broke into a tirade against the way he had been treated. He was sentenced to one year in the federal prison at Atlanta.

OPEN BIDS FOR PAVING

Meeting of Property Owners is Called for Monday Afternoon.

Bids were opened this morning by the board of public works for the improvement of Greysolon road, formerly Dingwall street, from Twenty-second to Thirtieth avenue east.

One of the most surprising features of the bidding was the fact that the bids for tar macadam were lower than the only bid submitted for telford macadam.

Hugh Steele was lowest on the tar macadam, with his bid of $29,515.44. There were three other bidders on the tar macadam.

Only one bid on telford was submitted, Thomas & McCoy offering to do the work for $34,636.25. It will probably not be considered, as tar macadam is generally preferred to telford, even at a higher price, and in this instance a saving of nearly $5,000 would be effected by laying the tar macadam.

There were three bidders on asphalt, of whom the Barber Asphalt company was the lowest, with its bid of $37,-909.30.

George R. King was the lowest bidder on creosote blocks, offering to do the work for $45,258.50.

The board will not take the responsibility of letting such a large contract without first gaining some idea of the wishes of the property owners, and a meeting of those interested has been called for Monday afternoon, at 2 o'clock, in the council chamber. A vote will be taken on what kind of pavement shall be selected, and the contract will then be let to the lowest bidder.

The high price asked for telford practically throws it out, and the choice narrows down to macadam, creosote blocks and asphalt. Of these three the tar macadam seems to be the favorite, with some owners favoring the creosote blocks and a few asphalt.

The contract will be submitted to the council Monday evening for approval, and work can be begun at once.

Frederick Warde to Lecture.

Frederick Warde, the noted tragedian who has been heard many times in Duluth, will lecture here next week under the auspices of North Star Lodge, Knights of Pythias. He will give three lectures, Tuesday evening on "Hamlet," Wednesday afternoon on "Shakespeare and His Plays," and Wednesday evening on "Julius Caesar." The Los Angeles News said of his lecture:

"Frederick Warde, who probably has done more than any living man in the last quarter of a century to popularize the study of Shakespeare in this country, concludes, this evening, a remarkable course of eight recitals. As a physical undertaking alone, and as a feat of memory, Mr. Warde's achievement is phenomenal. The tragedian recited and discoursed concerning six of the great bard's masterpieces, apparently with the readiest ease—in all, sixteen solid hours of illuminating dissertation without a shadow of repetition! But it is Mr. Warde's careful and comprehensive preparation of Shakespeare's works into forms easily digested by the people that is the vital feature of his course. Mr. Warde without detracting one iota from the dignity and purity of his text, illuminates it by his own intelligence, and the fruit of his thirty-five years' experience as a Shakespearean actor. He tells us the story, the motive and subtelties of each play so that the poet's plan is revealed to the simplest child. As an educational factor throughout the country, the value of Mr. Warde's recitals cannot be exaggerated."

ROSSLYN TRUCE IS ON FINANCIAL BASIS.

London, May 18.—It is possible that a reconciliation may be effected between the earl and countess of Rosslyn, who are now separated.

The former Miss Anna Robinson is unquestionably deeply in love with her husband, but she objects to his excessive expenditures. The countess is wealthy, but the earl spends money with the rapidity of water going through a sieve. He has managed since his marriage to get rid of $250,000 of his wife's money. The countess now announces that if the earl will promise to live on a paltry $25,000 a year the two may reunite.

With the bulk of his wife's $250,000 the earl proceeded to demonstrate the flaws in his system of "beating the bank" at Monte Carlo. He demonstrated so successfully that M. Blanc now has the money. But the earl is still convinced that his system is all right. It only requires more money. But his wife is determined that she needs her money more than does M. Blanc.

THE BISHOP'S FLOCK.

Los Angeles Times: Once upon a time there was a queen of Denmark who visited her Danish colony in Iceland. The good bishop there did everything in his power to entertain her and show her all of the wonders of that glacial wonderland.

Upon ascertaining that the bishop was a family man, the queen graciously inquired how many children he had.

Now the Danish word for children sounds almost identically like the Icelandic word for sheep, and the bishop quickly answered:

"Two hundred, your majesty."

"Two hundred children!" exclaimed the queen in amazement. "How can you possibly maintain such a number?"

"Easily enough, your majesty," replied the bishop with a cheerful smile. "In the summer I graze them out on the hills, and in the winter time, I kill them and eat them."

SPIRIT TIPS.

Baltimore Sun: Wall street is commonly assumed to be of the earth, earthy, but there is a lady banker there, according to a recent dispatch, who conducts a large bond investment business in the Mills building on tips received from the spirit of her husband, who died two years ago. The judgment of the present head of the firm was matured, it is confessed, by communion for twenty-four years with the late husband in respect to financial affairs. Matters of routine are not now referred to him, but "whenever I am in doubt about anything," says the widow, "I seek my guidance and advice from him." It would be interesting to learn just how the information is communicated. There are hundreds of departed financiers whose opinion of present stock prices would be interesting reading. Everything that Midas touched, we are told, turned to gold. What was his combination—4-11-44? If he can be called up, there will be no end of seekers after tips. Croesus was likewise a good financier, to say nothing of Crassus and Jay Gould. But there is a shrewd opinion that a pointer from Morgan, Gates or Ryan might be worth more just now in cold cash. Every decade has its own way to make money fast, and even Jay Gould's way is now out of date.

PLAN WORK ON ROADS

County Commissioners Inspect Highways That Neep Repairs.

Lack of Funds is Likely to Considerably Hinder Operations.

Now that the annal road appropriations have been made for the various commissioner districts, the commissioners are looking over their districts with a view of getting posted as to the localities where the money can be used to the greatest advantage.

Although the road fund is larger this year than ever before, the commissioners, who have road districts to look after, claim they need much more than was apportioned to put the highways in a satisfactory condition. Complaints are numerous that many parts of the roads are in very bad condition due to the rotting of the corduroy under them. Some of the roads on which little money has been spent for a few years are now in need of extensive repairs and the settlers are making the commissioner in charge feel that his position is no bed of roses. With only about half the money to expend that is required to meet all the demands, and beset on all sides by urgent requests for repairs, the commissioners are finding it no easy matter to satisfy the settlers.

If money is spent to make thorough repairs in one locality, the settlers along some other portion of the road claim their rights have been overlooked and they are being discriminated against by the commissioner. Each delegation of farmers urges its claims as the most urgent.

Commissioner Charles Kauppl, who has the largest road district in the county, has a large amount of road repair work to look after in the next several weeks. He is finding it a difficult matter to piece out the funds allotted him to cover all the work that ought to be done. Commissioner Kauppl says some of the repairs that are really necessary are out of the question owing to a lack of money. He expects to apply his appropriation to the best advantage, and next year turn the funds to those portions of the highways that cannot be reached this year.

Commissioner Nell McInnis of Eveleth has started his road campaign and is daily visiting the highways in his district or receiving delegations of settlers who have suggestions to make. One five-mile section of the Miller trunk road in Commissioner McInnes' district is said to be in such bad condition from the rotting of the corduroy that he was compelled to walk over the route. Conditions may be a little improved when the road dries out, but it really needs new corduroy. To repair the Miller trunk road from the Pateface river to Eveleth would cost $1,200, according to the commissioner's estimate.

Commissioner McInnis has an agreement with Frank Colvin, who has a sawmill on the Vermillion road, that for every dollar of the county funds put on the highway, Mr. Colvin will spend another. Under this arrangement it is expected the Vermillion road will be pretty well repaired, as far as the sawmill at least.

If it is a possible thing, Commissioner McInnis will endeavor to give the settlers along the Embarrass river bottom access to Virginia. Embarrass and Biwabik.

CLAIMS WATER SUPPLY PURE

Superior Water Company Files Answer in Injunction Case.

Answering the injunction suit started by Charles A. Erhart and others, the Superior Water & Light company contends that it is furnishing the people of that city with pure and wholesome water. The company admits that there was a typhoid fever epidemic there last February, but denies that it was due to the water supply.

Mr. Erhart seeks to enjoin the company from shutting off the water to the buildings under his charge. He has refused to pay the water rental on the ground that the company has not lived up to its franchise and contract to furnish pure water and says threats have been made to shut off the water unless he pays the bills.

Concerning that part of the charge that the terms of its franchise have been violated the company makes a general denial and quotes sections of the franchise having a bearing on the subject.

The company claims that the only time the water was impure was during last October when the intake pipe was broken by a steamer that dragged its anchor in the bay.

THE FIREMEN'S TOURNAMENT

Preparations by Cass Lake People Are Well Advanced.

Cass Lake, Minn., May 18.—(Special to The Herald.)—At a special meeting of the fire department the principal business transacted was the reports of the different committees having charge of the coming tournament. The committees made most encouraging reports. The finance committee reported that the citizens of the town have already subscribed large sums of money, and as far as financial aid is concerned there will be nothing lacking. The railroad officials have agreed to run three excursions into Cass Lake during the tournament. The hotel accommodations have been investigated and the committee reported that there is ample room to provide for the many expected guests. A new hotel, the Bay View, will be opened June 1, and will be able to accommodate over 200 people.

The fire boys will erect a bowery tent of large dimensions, and all day long the lovers of dancing will have opportunities to trip the light fantastic. Entertainments, boat races, etc., will be numerous. The committee on entertainment has been busy arranging these matters, and promises amusement seldom surpassed.

The running track, perhaps the most essential, will be in fine shape. Teams and men are already working on it, and neither time nor expense will be considered until the track is in the best shape possible. When the grading is finished it will be covered with cinders and a fence will be constructed around it, thus preventing trespassing.

The second day of the tournament will be Bemidji day, and from present indications that day promises to be the banner one of the meet. The Bemidji, Walker, Cass Lake and possibly the Grand Rapids bands will furnish the music for the day. On this day also the championship hose race will be run and the annual firemen's parade will take place.

The fire departments that will be represented are Cass Lake, Eveleth, Park Rapids, Bemidji, Grand Rapids, Deer River, Virginia, Ely and Sparta, and likely Blackduck, Fayal and Bovey. The Cass Lake team has been practicing for the past two weeks and is getting into fine shape. Oscar Hanson, the expert coupler, is with the team again.

President Leeman and Secretary Rutledge have been busy preparing the program and expect to have it ready in the very near future.

BABY DIED ON A TRAIN

Bemidji, Minn., May 18.—(Special to The Herald.)—The body of the 14-months-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Nic Pickel was brought to Bemidji yesterday from Floodwood. Mrs. Pickel was returning from Mount Iron to her home in Bemidji, and was on what is known as the "Wooden Shoe" branch of the Great Northern, running north of Floodwood, when her baby died. When she arrived here with the body, Mrs. Pickel was almost prostrated with grief and was in hysterics. When the body of the little one was taken from the baggage car, it was found that the flesh was still warm, and an attempt was made to resuscitate the babe, but to no avail.

Mrs. James Doyle applied to Chief of Police Bailey Thursday for aid in discovering the whereabouts of her husband, who had been missing for the last five days. When Doyle left home, he said nothing as to where he was going or as to how long he would be absent, and Mrs. Doyle is fearful that there may have been foul play.

M. Heinxelman, who has gained considerable notoriety through his efforts to hold up a log drive belonging to the Hatcher Lumber company, by damming the Mississippi, south of Solway, was given a hearing at Bagley yesterday on the charge of having assaulted the foreman of the drive. Heinzelman waived examination, was bound over to the district court, gave bonds in the sum of $500 and is again at liberty.

The officials of the new Red Lake railroad have forbidden anyone to fish from their long bridge across the Mississippi where the stream leaves Lake Irwin. It has been the custom of a large number of anglers to sit on the bridge and fish, unmindful of the possible danger of being run over by passing trains and the notice at either end of the bridge forbidding trespassing. The company has employed a special policeman to enforce the new order of things.

C. R. Martin, editor of the Beltrami County News, is confined to his home with a severe illness. Mr. Martin was taken very ill one year ago this month and was very sick all last summer. He went to Hot Springs and took treatment, returning here during the latter part of last winter considerably improved. During the last week, however, he has been obliged to stay at his home, where he is said to not be improving any. He has been a sufferer with rheumatism and other ailments, and it is believed that it will be necessary to send him to Hot Springs again.

TERM IN REFORMATORY.

Louis Jungbauer, Who Plundered Bank Funds, Escapes Lightly.

St. Paul, May 18.—Louis Jungbauer, the young clerk of the State Savings bank, who embezzled $10,000 of the bank's funds, and who confessed and pleaded guilty to grand larceny in the first degree, was sentenced yesterday by Judge Hallam to the state reformatory at St. Cloud.

The court might, under the statutes, have sent the young man to the state prison for a period of not less than one year nor more than ten years.

Imprisonment in the reformatory is considered far less degrading than confinement in the state prison, and the defendant owes it to his youth, and to the fact that this was his first offense, that he will not be stamped with the felon's mark.

FLORIDA WATER DEADLY.

Inquest Upon Bodies of Five Indians in Canadian Northwest.

Rosthern, Saskatchewan, May 18.—An inquest was held on the bodies of five Indians at the police barracks of Dock Lake. Father Charleboy said the symptoms of the victims were a burning in the breast, glassy eyes and blindness. Sandy Thomas swore that the Indians drank Florida water for years. A dose was three spoonfuls in a cup of water.

Evidence of one Indian witness showed that one brand of water caused all the deaths. He said 800 bottles of Florida water were shipped into Duck Lake in the last five months.

LABOR UNIONS GROW.

Increase of 2,000 in Membership in Minnesota During Year.

St. Paul, May 18.—An increase of 2,000 in the membership of the labor unions in the state during the past year is estimated by Labor Commissioner Williams. He is compiling the annual statistics on union labor, and most of the unions have reported. If the same ratio of increase is maintained by the few yet to come in as by those already received, the total organized labor will come up to 30,000. The three largest cities, St. Paul, Minneapolis and Duluth, have a membership of 24,000. The number of unions has decreased. About twenty of the smaller and weaker unions have dropped out, but in the case of the older unions there has been a steady increase.

TRAGIC DEATH

Of Two Young Men Who Fought Battle in a Canoe.

Fort William, Ont., May 18.—W. A. Thompson and Isadore Bouchard, formerly employed on the projected line of the Trans-Continental railway, met tragic deaths in Helen lake, on the north shore of Lake Superior yesterday.

While in a canoe half a mile from shore they engaged in combat capsizing the craft. Undaunted, they climbed to the top of the upturned canoe and engaged in a hand-to-hand struggle lasting nearly thirty minutes, when their strength spent, they slipped into the water and sank.

A fisherman and daughter standing on the shore were the only ones to witness the death struggle. The bodies have not been recovered. The fight was the outcome of a quarrel over a girl.

GEN. WOOD TO IMPROVE THE GUARDSMEN'S AIM.

Washington, May 18.—Adjt. Gen. Wood, who has been here several days on business connected with the Minnesota National Guard, has left for New York to purchase some equipment for use in rifle practice. He intends to send a team from the Minnesota National Guard to the annual rifle competition at Sea Girt, which will show up better than last year's team, which stood thirteenth in rank among the state organizations. From New York Gen. Wood will go home.

Gen. Wood secured about everything that he came after in the way of equipment for the Minnesota militia. The quartermaster general has approved requisitions for between $6,000 and $7,000 worth of service uniforms of khaki, which will be distributed among the various organizations in the state, and will carry the entire guard over the time of the annual camp at Lake City.

The battery of four three-inch modern guns which was allotted by the chief of ordnance to the state, will not be shipped until after Maj. Gerlach's inspection report is made. The guns will be assigned to the battery making the best showing, and it will be up to Battery B to hustle for them. They are decidedly better for modern drill purposes than the old Parrott guns now used by the Minnesota artillerymen.

CHILD LIES DOWN AND TRAIN PASSES OVER.

Lock Haven, Pa., May 18.—"Lie down, lie down," screamed Fireman Harry Hoover, from the pilot of his fast-flying locomotive here yesterday to a little tot standing on the rails in front of the train, and the little one fell like a small log and laid still while the entire Beech Creek accommodation swept over her and came to a stop three train lengths beyond. It was one of the most remarkable escapes from death ever known in this valley.

Hoover was off the locomotive before it had passed clear over the child, and he was on the tracks as the last car swept by, tearing the little child from between the ties. There the passengers and engineer found him sitting on the track by the 3-year-old, almost beside himself with joy.

The deed was done in a field about half a mile from the hotel, where the body was found yesterday by some small boys.

He is understood to have been wealthy. No relatives can be found.

BLOODSHED EXPECTED

Steubenville, Ohio, May 18.—More Pinkerton men are being rushed to the mines in Jefferson county, and the force now numbers 150 armed men, but Sheriff Vorhees refuses to swear them in as deputies as they are not residents of the county. The situation is critical and if the operators persist on opening their mines next Monday bloodshed is sure to follow.

GIRL STUDENTS

Of Los Angeles Seminary Ask City Council for Cow.

Los Angeles, May 18.—Huntington Hall, a fashionable seminary for young women at No. 1111 South Main street, is in a fervor of excitement because its supply of fresh milk is limited to that furnished by one lonely mulley cow.

The population of the school has outgrown the milk supply of one cow, but the city ordinances prohibit the keeping of more than one.

Pure milk is as essential as fresh air in the making of creamy complexions, so they have addressed a communication to the city fathers in which they make an earnest appeal for that extra cow. Just now the young women are considering the propriety of attending the council meeting in a body, believing their presence may influence the city legislators in their behalf.

Following is the communication:

"Gentlemen — Huntington Hall, a boarding and day school for young ladies, is situated in that part of the city in which residents are limited to keeping one cow on a lot. The place was formerly owned by O. W. Childs and contains eleven acres, which are laid out with ample provisions for three or more cows. We desire to keep two and ask your body for a special permit to do so. The letter of the law is one cow to a premise. As the place is now intact and owned by H. E. Huntington, to keep the law we must have special permission for two cows. We are bounded by Main street on the east, Eleventh street on the north, Twelfth street on the south and Hill street on the west.

"Five cows on the premises could not inconvenience people living near as much as one cow on an ordinary city lot. We intend keeping the cows for our own use, not to retail milk. Will you, the members of the city council of the city of Los Angeles, kindly consider the conditions upon which we base the request for a special privilege and if not unreasonable grant the same to Miss Florence Housel."

ARIZONA A GOOD STATE

August Lindstrom Tells of Some of That Commonwealth's Richness.

"Arizona, from the standpoint of the lumberman, is one of the finest states in the country," said August Lindstrom of Williams, Ariz., at the Spalding. Mr. Lindstrom is connected with the Saginaw & Manistee Lumber company, which now makes Arizona the base of its operations, and is in the city for the purpose of getting a crew of lumberjacks to work in the forests of the Southwest.

"When the Michigan timber that we owned was all cut, the Saginaw & Manistee Lumber company began cutting in the Western state, as several other northern companies have done. The immense forests there are largely owned by Northerners. We now own 380,000,000 feet of pine there, and are buying more right along. The company has just completed a $180,000 sawmill at Williams. The price of pine lumber loaded on the cars is from $12 for the lowest grade to $40 and $50 for the highest grades.

"I have made my home in Arizona for the past seven years, and was never in a more agreeable climate in my life. We are far enough up in the mountains to be above the heat of the deserts and plains, and climatic conditions are all that could be desired. One generally associates the thought of heat with the name of Arizona, and it is very hot in certain parts of the state, around Phoenix, for instance, but in the mountains it is nice and cool, and a person needs just as heavy clothes as he does here in Duluth.

"The men we are able to hire down in that country do not fill the bill, and this year I was forced to come north in search of experienced woodsmen. First I went down in Michigan, but could not get any men there, on account of the scarcity of labor, so came to Duluth. I expect to be able to get together a crew here, with the assistance of the National Employment company. Wages in our part of the country are good. Woodsmen receive from $40 to $50 a month, and mill hands get $2.50 tnd $2.75 a day.

"We have twenty-two miles of logging railroad on the main line and five or six miles of branches. All of our timber is hauled by rail to the mill. Not much log driving is done anywhere now. The railroad is finding preference in the eyes of the lumbermen.

"Some wild and woolly towns are to be found in Arizona, though they are not as bad as they used to be. When I landed in Williams seven years ago a railroad gang had just broken up, and the population of the town consisted of 900 men and 170 women. The women were there to make what money they could out of the men. Gambling houses and saloons were about the only business places in evidence. Whisky was being freely absorbed by men and women alike, and there was the deuce to pay generally. Williams is quite an orderly town now, however."

WILL START TRIAL MONDAY

Aurora Murder Case Next on the Criminal Calendar.

The next criminal trial that will be taken up in the district court will be that of the state against Joseph Spejar and John Sertich, two Austrians accused of the murder of Charles Peterson at Aurora. It is expected that the trial will start next Monday morning, the jurors not now engaged on cases having been excused until that time.

Spejar and Sertich are indicted for murder in the first degree, a charge which means death by hanging for the accused if they are found guilty.

Peterson, who is supposed to have been robbed and then killed, is claimed to have been the last seen in the company of Spejar and Sertich. The accused men were arrested several days after Peterson's body was found in the snow near the old townsite of Aurora. They had gone to Hibbing and entered the employ of one of the mining companies.

Both Spejar and Sertich have had counsel appointed for their defense, but it is not yet known whether they will be tried together or will be given separate trials.

PASSING THE LIE.

This spectacle of a lot of sedate senators getting excited and uplifting the welkin every few minutes with shouts of "Liar!" is not particularly pleasing, nor is it going to help the people any in their Diogenes search for an honest man or two that will help them get an effective rate regulation bill through.

It's a rather trivial affair all through, apparently, but the Democratic senators who are stirring up this fuss are, perhaps unconsciously, giving Republicans a chance to say that it is all due to pique because the Republican senators are getting together to pass a rate bill.

It seems unquestioned anywhere that ex-Senator Chandler became the medium of a negotiation between the president and the Dmocratic senators on the rate bill, designed to bring about a condition under which the Democrats would support the bill and see that its provisions were not emasculated. The principle difference seems to be over the question of whether the president made the first advances, or whether it was the Democratic leaders. This is trifling. It is easy to imagine a situation where each would imagine the other had issued the invitation to confer, when as a matter of fact neither of them did, the meeting having been brought about by the gentle urgings of the intermediary.

It seems altogether likely that the president is quite convinced that he did not take the initiative, and it also seems likely that Senators Bailey and Tillman are honest in their belief that they did not start it. But this is not the important thing; the point of real vitality in it is that the negotiations came to nothing but an awkward, disgraceful row, and that the railroads must be having a good time chuckling over the fact that the friends of real rate regulation have fallen out.

It is not valid argument either to lie or to call one's opponent a liar. Because there is a difference of opinion is no reason somebody has lied. The whole thing is childish and silly. The senators had much better go about their business of making a rate bill, and those who are minded to give the people a show in it should work for what they believe to be right, without interrupting the peace and dignity of the senate and endangering the progress of reform by scandalous bandying of epithets.

A SILLY DISTRUST.

Now that all that is mortal of John Paul Jones has been laid away in its final resting place in the land for which he fought so valiantly and so brilliantly, it is nothing short of disgusting that literary ghouls should be spreading once more a doubt whether it is really the body of America's first naval hero that has been so honored.

Such a story is afloat, however, and it is unpleasant to note that it is finding a lodging place in the columns of newspapers that should have too much sanity and common sense to harbor it.

Even if it were true that some other Jones had been receiving undue honors, what is the use of parading the fact and making a mockery out of the tributes that have been paid to the remains? Why not call it a "good enough Jones" and let it go at that? It is but clay, anyway, and the spirit that animated it and inspired it to noble deeds of heroism is long since fled. The honors are intended for that spirit anyway, rather than the mortal husk that was once its home.

But this reasoning is unnecessary, because the weight of evidence is overwhelmingly to the effect that no mistake has been made. Gen. Horace Porter, who discovered the body after an expensive and wearisome search neglected no opportunity to confirm or disprove the belief that the right grave had been located. His search covered a period of six years, and he was assisted by accredited French officials and savants.

The body, when it was finally found, was in such a state of preservation that the face of the gallant sea warrior could be recognized at a glance. True, nobody was present who had lived in his lifetime, but pictures are numerous and faithful, and the identification was complete. The autopsy which followed the discovery perfectly corresponded with the medical certificate of the complicated ills that laid the hero low when the bullets of the enemy had failed so often. Every measurement of the living man and the dead body corresponded exactly.

Even if the evidence were not conclusive, nothing could now be gained by inspiring doubts about it. But it is conclusive, and there is an absolute absence of any evidence to the contrary. The only doubt that has been raised has been by sensation-mongers who have penned their falsehoods in the hope of attracting attention and of selling their products to gullible newspapers.

AN OPPORTUNITY.

The importance of the measure removing the tax on denatured alcohol is such that it may be that the trusts are overlooking an opportunity in having their Mr. Aldrich hang it up in his committee. They ought to let it go through, and then form a denatured alcohol trust. If denatured alcohol will accomplish half the things it promises to do, it will be the finest kind of a basis for a trust.

What it will do in the way of developing a new great industry may be imagined from the experience of other countries in which the tax has been suspended. In half a dozen years Belgium's annual output increased from 126,658 gallons to 924,421 gallons; in eighteen years Germany's annual output increased from 10,302,630 gallons to 100,000,000 gallons. Germany has now 6,000 potato distilleries where that kind of alcohol is made under government supervision and control, and in that country alcohol to be used as a motive power or fuel can be bought for 12½ cents a gallon.

With cheap alcohol of this sort at the command of everybody, it would become immediately available for use in thousands of ways. It would be cheaper for fuel and power than gasoline or kerosene, because while it should cost but little more it would produce much more heat and power per gallon than the Standard Oil company's products. It could be used for nearly every purpose that the oils are used for, and its cheapness would make it available for many new purposes.

Small alcohol motors would be immediately invented that could be directed to the accomplishment of hordes of purposes. On the other hand there would be a great and immediate benefit in the demand for potatoes and other products from which alcohol can be made. This benefit would be felt in the great potato sections of Northern Michigan, Wisconsin and Minnesota, where potatoes grow in amazing quantities and quality.

If the oil trust would just let this bill go through, and then prepare to gather in the denatured alcohol plants all over the country, and after the industry has acquired a good start form an alcohol trust, surely it would make a great "killing", and it would have something worth while.

The suggestion is offered to the Standard Oil company for what it is worth, in the hope that it will induce that interesting octopus to call off its watchdog and let the bill pass.

THE SPITTER.

The man who makes of the sidewalk a cuspidor, and spits thereon without the slightest regard to the comfort and health of others, is either very impudent, very thoughtless, or very ignorant. If he is impudent, he needs taking down a peg; if he is thoughtless, he needs reminding; if he is ignorant, he needs a lesson. And all these things can be accomplished in the same way: by arresting him and waltzing him up to the police station.

The Philadelphia Telegraph tells the people of that city that they ought to go after the spitter the way the Cincinnati police do. Every time a policeman in Cincinnati, judging from this description of the method, sees a man spitting on the sidewalk, he walks up to him, taps him lightly and politely upon the shoulder, and courteously hands him a card upon which these words are printed:

> Spitting menaces public health.
> Spitting on sidewalks, in public conveyances or in public places is liable to communicate disease. Do not spit.

Then, presumably, the policeman bows profoundly, bids the spitter good even, and strolls away, proud of a duty well done. The spitter returns the bow, very likely, looks at the card, and spits contemplatively upon the sidewalk.

In Duluth they do it differently, and they do it in the only way it can be done effectively. Here, when a policeman sees a man spitting upon the sidewalk, he does not go through an Alphonse and Gaston performance with the spitter, but promptly arrests him and takes him up to the police court, where he is given his little lesson in hygiene, with a small fine to make the lesson stick.

That is the way to handle men so lost to decency and politeness as to use the sidewalks for cuspidors. It's a nasty trick at best, and it is not only menacing to public health and an affront to decency, but it is the limit of uncleanness. It is not hard to imagine that a man that would spit upon a sidewalk would spit upon a dining room rug.

So the police are doing good work in arresting those who are guilty of this offense, and the municipal court is aiding and abetting this good work when it imposes fines. These are light now, but a little later, when everybody is aware of what is going on and there is no possible excuse, they might with propriety be made considerably larger.

HOTEL GOSSIP.

"Minnesota people, in their efforts to have a state road built between Duluth and the Twin Cities, are in line with the times," said I. M. Schurz of Philadelphia, at the Spalding. "A project to construct a highway, 100 feet wide, from Philadelphia to Pittsburg has been received with great enthusiasm by the cities most directly interested, and it looks very much as if the road really would be built. It is likely that steps will be taken at the next session of the legislature to provide for the work.

"Governor Pennypacker is known to favor it, and will probably recommend it in his next message. In the meantime the advocates of the road will conduct a campaign of education through the country districts where any opposition that may develop would originate. The farmers will be taught that this highway will not be simply a boulevard for the autoists, but will be a vast benefit to the residents of the agricultural districts by providing a fine, hard road upon which they can transport their produce.

"At the same time the road, if it is ever built, will be extensively used by autoists and road drivers, and trips across the state in car and carriage will become a lasting fad. The projectors see in this a revival of the roadside inns of the past, only built and operated along more modern lines. The inns will doubtless be well patronized, and they, in connection with the road, will offer society a new diversion that cannot but prove to be popular.

"If built, the road, it is estimated, the road will cost from $2,000,000 to $3,500,000. The project was launched at a big dinner at which Governor Pennypacker and other important individuals, including a sprinkling of United States senators, were present. It met with great favor right away. Pittsburg is becoming more and more important as a metropolis, as is Philadelphia, and it will be a big advantage to both cities to be thus connected.

"It will also benefit all the intermediate territory. Much the same thing would be true of a state highway between Duluth and the Twin Cities, though, of course, it would not be so expensive to start with, and wouldn't be used as much. The fact that an attempt is being made to have such a highway constructed, however, is a strong indication of the well-known energy and progressiveness of the West."

"The time to stop drinking is before you begin," said S. L. Harrison of Chicago, at the St. Louis. "I don't wish to pose as a preacher, or as an uncommonly good man, but something that happened a few weeks ago set me to thinking on the drink question. An old college chum, one of the best fellows in the world, went to the bad entirely 'fighting booze,' and when at college I hardly ever knew him to even take a drink. He worked into it gradually, though, and finally made a very bad finish.

"For a few years, no bad effects are noticable as a result of drinking intoxicants. A man may have a little headache in the morning that a bracer will fix, or he may not even have that. Then there comes the morning drink that cannot be done without, then the drinks through the day to keep him keyed up, and so on, until the man finds he is so far in that his will power isn't strong enough to save him. Of course, there are many exceptions, where a fellow will drink from the time he is of age until he dies, without being seriously injured, but all the time there is that risk of going the limit, and not being able to get back.

"Not all men who drink do so because they wish to do it. This is the case with very few of them. Not one man in a hundred who goes on a spree does so deliberately. It is a case of merely a little drink, just to be sociable. With the confirmed drinker, one glass calls for more, and before he knows it he is staggering around with a beautiful jag on. And so endeth the first lesson. I am thinking of quitting the road and taking up my position behind the pulpit."

"Not always is the best piano in the best case," said R. D. North of Chicago at the Lenox. "Often the true value of the discarded instrument is found in its covering, and these instruments are sold, without repairs, for $8 or $10 to men who make a specialty of remodeling them into antique furniture. The elaborate legs of the old pianos and the seasoned colors of the wood or veneer, make splendid antique tables, and they sell at high figures.

"Old pianos are about the most difficult things in the world to handle, especially when a dealer has a large supply on hand. It is not good policy to store them, because the rent is too high, and it is difficult to dispose of them fast enough. There is a story that one big dealer, who was swamped and who found the market bad, took a dozen or more good-looking pianos down to a poor but respectable neighborhood in an Eastern city, and stacked them up on a vacant lot. He posted a big sign on them: 'Take one.' He was certain that would move the stock but a few days later they were all there, and the owner of the lots forced the dealer to move them.

"It is remarkable how little salvage there is to an old square piano when it goes through the wrecking process. Only the case and the ivory and ebony on the keys are of value. The strings that may, under a master touch, have vibrated harmonies that brought tears to the eyes, are cast aside; the iron frame is sold as old junk, and the sounding board and wood inside the case are used as fuel by the men who break them up. Even the ivory is of little or no value if time has discolored it too much, or if it is too badly worn."

Will J. Sando of Milwaukee, Wis., manager of the pumping engine department of the Allis-Chalmers company, was at the Spalding yesterday, conferring with James Ashworth, also of the Allis-Chalmers company, in regard to the contract for installing a pumping engine in the Lakewood station for the board of water and light commissioners. Allis-Chalmers are among the bidders for the work. Mr. Sando formerly had charge of the additional water supply of New York, later was head of the metropolitan board of Boston, and before assuming his present duties was chief engineer for the International Steam Pump company.

THE WEATHER.

Yesterday's eccentric weather seems to have been a sort of clearing prelude, for this morning it was bright and sunny and warm, and though the wind was fresh it was not from the lake, and almost any kind of a wind except a cyclone or a northeaster is welcome for a change. Though none of yesterday's showers were of long duration, they scattered a lot of water while they were at it, in thawed or frozen state, the rainfall being .72 of an inch. Last night's lowest temperature was 46 degs., and yesterday's highest was 66 degs. Westerly winds, fairly cool weather, and possibly showers, are indicated for tonight and tomorrow. Says Mr. Richardson of conditions:

"The disturbance central Thursday morning over Eastern South Dakota has moved its center to Northern Minnesota. This storm caused light to heavy showers over Western Canada, North Dakota, Minnesota, Wisconsin, Iowa, Western Missouri, Eastern Texas and New York state. A rise in barometric pressure in the Red river, Missouri and upper Mississippi valleys is attended by somewhat cooler weather. Storm areas are developing over Arizona and off the North Pacific coast. Conditions indicate partly cloudy skies in this locality tonight and Saturday, with a slight chance of local showers."

Following were yesterday's highest temperatures as recorded by the weather bureau:

Return of the Busted Phenom.

There is woe at Simpkins' corners—we are feelin' blue and sore—
And the talk had sorter languished, at the cross-roads groc'ry store;
They have trimmed our baseball idol, and have shrunk his once great dome—
The big league's turned down Willie Smith and sent our cyclone home.

Our Willie was a wonder in our fast Four-County league,
And there wa'nt no kind o' batters that could solve the lad's intrigue;
He had honors heaped upon him like a senator of Rome—
But the big league's turned down Willie Smith and sent our cyclone home.

He pitched one day last summer 'gainst Abe Dolan's thre-hin' crew,
And he fanned out nineteen batters, and the score was ten to two;
So we 'lowed that this here season he'd be known from Maine to Nome—
But the big league's turned down Willie Smith and sent our cyclone home.

He went down South fer trainin' and he pitched one practice game,
And after all that happened he will never seem the same;
They lammed the sphere o' horsehide till the fielders dripped with foam—
And the big league's turned down Willie Smith and sent our cyclone home.

So Willie's back to farmin', and the pitchfork is his bat,
And he's wearin', so they tell us, an extra small-sized hat;
He can't pitch our town to glory, in his work o' pitchin' loam—
Since the big league's turned down Willie Smith and sent our cyclone home.

The Passing of the Pass.

New York Sun: The anti-pass amendment to the rate bill may have to be amended in the interests of railroad employes, stockmen, and others, but members of congress seem to be shut out forever. It does not seem possible that Senator Tillman will again lose a wallet stuffed full of railroad passes.

A Hindo Paradise.

A Hindoo died, a happy thing to do,
When twenty years united to a shrew.
Released, he hopefully for entrance cries
Before the gates of Brahma's Paradise.

"Hast been through Purgatory?" Brahma said.
"I have been married," and he hung his head.
"Come in, come in, and welcome, too, my son!
Marriage and Purgatory are as one."
In bliss extreme he entered Heaven's door,
And knew the peace he ne'er had known before.

He scarce had entered in the garden ere
Another Hindoo asked admission there.
The self-same question Brahma asked again—
"Hast been through Purgatory?" "No, what then?"
"Thou can'st not enter," did the god reply.
"He who went in was there no more than I."
"All that is true, but he has married been,
And so on earth has suffered for all sin."
"Married! 'Tis well, for I've been married twice!"
"Begone! We'll have no fools in Paradise."

More About Alcohol.

Chicago Chronicle: There are said to be some congressional sensitives who object to taking the tax off "denatured" alcohol because they fear that chemists will some time discover a way to make it again drinkable and this would add to the drink temptation. This is well up with Mrs. Toodles' purchase at auction of the doorplate having on it the name "Thompson," because if she and Mr. Toodles should have a daughter some time and that daughter should later marry a man with the name "Thompson" the doorplate would prove "so handy to have in the house."

TWENTY YEARS AGO.

G. L. Brooks is fitting up a brickyard with improved machinery, and expects to turn out better brick than has been made here yet.

J. Wixen has bought out the interests of J. Brederson and B. Johnson, in the meat market of Ringsred & Co. The business will be continued under the name of Ringsred & Wixen.

Patrick Sarsfield Gilmore, leader of the famous band bearing his name, is favorably impressed with Duluth. In fact he has so much confidence in its future prosperity that he yesterday invested $8,000 in Duluth real estate, buying 100 feet on Michigan street, at First avenue east. He also made offers for other property, which will probably be accepted, and he will invest at least $10,000 more in Duluth realty.

The Grand opera house was again filled to overflowing last evening, when Gilmore's band gave its second concert.

John Corrigan, who came from Cleveland to Duluth during the winter and determined to locate here, engaging in the manufacture of lime, is almost ready for business. He will send salesmen out through Dakota and Minnesota. It is reported that a St. Paul firm will also build lime kilns here this summer.

Mrs. J. N. Brock has closed her boarding house until the house cleaning season is over.

Capt. Lutes is erecting a building on his lot just north of the Benz block. The captain has named it the Jingo block.

A. Booth, the oyster and fish man, who recently opened an establishment in Duluth, has a large fishery at Escanaba, Mich., and has been negotiating with William Osborne of this city to take charge of the place. Arrangements were finally completed yesterday and Mr. Osborne has left for Escanaba.

The steamer A. Booth, Capt. Paul, arrived in port from Chicago yesterday afternoon. As the Booth is henceforth to be a Duluth craft, she attracted much attention.

J. C. Clark, one of Minnesota's pine land dealers, returned yesterday from a trip to his old home at Big Rapids, Mich.

The afternoon express from St. Paul brought an extra coach, occupied by the members of the St. Paul Knights Templar commandery, on a visit to their Duluth brethren. Right Eminent Grand Commander W. D. Cormick has charge of the delegation.

MINNESOTA OPINIONS.

Anoka Union: Anxiously is Duluth waiting for the Republican state convention, and is actually impatient as the school boy is four weeks before vacation.

Appleton Press: Block's platform, which takes in everything found in the decalogue, the talmud, the vedas, the koran, magna charta, and the declaration of independence, did not look big enough, so to make it a world beater he adds that he favors peut. Now as orthography is not Pete's long suit he takes Block literally, and is seriously considering a withdrawal of his refusal, much to the disquietude of Julius.

Fairmont Sentinel: If the voting machine could everywhere supercede the political machine there would be less political corruption.

Perham Enterprise: Roosevelt Republicans are today advocating many of the foremost principles proclaimed by the Democratic party a dozen years ago—and scoffed at by Republicans then. Time changes all things but the "stand patter."

Gary Graphic: Unless a better man than Jacobson comes out for governor pretty soon, Jacobson will be the choice of the people, and you know what this means. It means that if he is nominated he will be elected, and that if he is not nominated Johnson will be re-elected.

Moose Lake Star: The candidates who are not nominated at the convention in Duluth will advocate the extension of the primary election law to include all state officers.

Barnum Gazette: Bro. Hamilton of the Aitkin Republican is strongly suspected of a desire to remove the political scalp of one J. Adam Bede.

Pine City Pioneer: Our favorite office towel against a three-em space that there will be several treats all around when the delegates get to shining about Duluth on the 13th of June. Three to one we win!

Ortonville Herald-Star: It is pointed out that it took an earthquake to make the senate agree with the lower house of congress. Nothing short of a political earthquake will ever make the senate agree with the people, however.

Crookston Times: It is increasingly hard to tell the difference between a Democrat and a Republican in national politics.

Mentor Herald: If congress can so cheerfully and lightly waste $300,000 of the people's money in free seeds the question is at once suggested, how much do they waste in other forms of graft?

Albert Lea Standard: The office is not seeking the man uncommonly hard this year, but all over the state men are fairly hot-footing it after the office.

Mr. Bailey's Better Day.

New York Sun: In the senate the other day the Hon. Joseph Weldon Bailey made this rather curious remark:

"I do believe in the coming of a better day than this, when the man who knows that he is just and honest will feel that he is happier in his circumstances than the man whose riches have been corrupted through injustice."

The honest man whose happiness is poisoned by the reflection that some other men are richer than he, be their riches acquired honestly or dishonestly, is not a just man. He is still under the sway of the old delusion, so long rooted among the ancient Jews, for example, that world prosperity ought to be the reward and consequence of righteousness. And some tincture of envy is in his composition. Does Mr. Bailey, an honest if not always an altogether just man, lie awake of nights because his modest fortune, which would have seemed great riches a hundred years ago, is smaller than Mr. Rockefeller's? Isn't Texas full of moderately prosperous, honest citizens, content and happy? They may object to the way in which some vast fortunes have been acquired. Some of them may even believe that bounds should be set to such acquisitions; and where these are believed to be the result of unjust and unlawful methods, they are justly indignant. As just men, they want justice for all. But they fear the corruption and danger to the Commonwealth. They are stirred as citizens and not as individuals. They don't have to wait for a "better day" to feel that they are happier than they would be if they were rich by means of injustice and fraud.

"I am not so simple minded," said Mr. Bailey, "as to dream that the old days of small fortunes and great contentment will ever come again." "Small fortunes and great contentment" is an agreeable antithesis, but Mr. Bailey knows that the number of small fortunes is vastly greater, and greater in proportion, than in the homespun days to which he looks back as to the golden age. As to contentment, the singular ill fortune of Mr. Bailey's party in trying to foment discontent in 1896 and 1900 seems to carry a lesson. Is Farmer Roe, plodding along in his one-horse wagon, gnawed in his soul because he hasn't a $20,000 automobile? Then Farmer Roe is not really just and honest. He expects to be paid for his virtues.

No Stopping Place.

Harper's Weekly: Mr. Melville Ingalls, the Western railway magnate, was induced by a friend while spending Sunday with him to attend service at a church the pastor of which is noted for the extreme length of his sermons.

As the friends were leaving at the conclusion of the service, the Bostonian, with a touch of pride, inquired:

"Dr. Blank is a most eloquent minister, is he not?"

"Very eloquent," was the dry response of the railroad man, "but he has poor terminal facilities."

Good for All Classes.

Chicago Tribune: Booker Washington is advising his people to abandon expensive funerals and spend their money for the living. The proper application of this advice is not limited to any race, color or previous condition of servitude.

ARE FOOLED BY NIAGARA

Many Birds Are Carried in Fogs Over the Cataract.

Duck Hunters, Too, Sometimes Get Careless and Perish.

Niagara Falls, N. Y., May 18.—Duck hunting on the Niagara river has its special peril; but it is a popular sport. In fact, it has been said in a jocular way that no matter how numerous the ducks may be, the ratio between hunted and hunters is seldom lower than one to three—three hunters for every wild fowl on the Niagara river. The number of sportsmen's cabins, some of which are even lighted by electricity, seen along the American shore of the river for two or three miles above the falls lends support to this statement.

In early fall the swift and shallow waters of Niagara present abundance of feeding grounds to the canvasback, mallard, scaput and black duck, which, having summered in the fertile lakes of northern Canada, are on their way southward. The birds are exposed to a danger even more deadly than that presented by the gun of the hunter. During the densely foggy nights which occasionally prevail on the Niagara river the roosting flock, unable to see a foot ahead, may drift innocently down stream, until suddenly the water gives way beneath it.

Then, paralyzed by fear, the entire flock is swept over the brink, to be engulfed in spray and mist and plunged irresistibly into the deep, foaming water at the base of the cataract. This seems to be the only explanation for the presence of hundreds of lifeless birds found in the waters of the lower gorge on different occasions.

That a duck should survive, even in a maimed and stunned condition, after being precipitated from a height of 160 feet, seems well nigh impossible. Yet it has been affirmed by hunters who dwell in the lower Niagara gorge that on mornings following unusually foggy nights they have taken from the small eddies and whirlpools, which exist on both sides of the lower river, as many as two or three hundred ducks, some of which were alive, but were so stunned and crippled that no trouble was experienced in capturing them. These cripples, they said, undoubtedly were strangers which, having taken the gorge as a passageway from Lake Ontario to Lake Erie, became blinded by the mist on approaching the falls during nocturnal flight and were suddenly wrenched from the air by the avalanche of water to be swept helplessly down into the abyss below.

It seems possible that some of these occasionally escape with their lives. Frequently I have seen wildfowl swimming aimlessly around in the current, just a trifle out from the base of the American falls. Some of these were actually too weak and stunned to swim outside the range of a stone's throw.

The fact that these poor creatures were the remnant of some ill-fated flock is practically certain, as there is no gunning done in the immediate vicinity of the gorge; and these birds, although crippled in flight and not in swimming, certainly could not have swum up stream through the turbulent waters of the gorge.

Last winter a great deal of interest was aroused among tourists by a small flock of whistlers which fed day after day in the American channel between Goat Island and Prospect Point. Less than four yards above the brink of the American falls, in a spot where the torrent seemed to be gathering itself up for the inevitable leap, this little flock of birds daily obtained its food. True, the flock was sheltered from the swiftest impetus of the current by a lodged cake of ice; but, even so, it was plainly evident that to keep from sliding over required the exertion of all the strength in their paddling gears and the utmost, unceasing vigilance. Once, while observing this flock from a point on the American shore, I saw a venturesome young drake dive below the surface, to reappear suddenly on the very verge of the cataract; and only by taking flight did he extricate his body from the pulling, sliding water, as it leaped far out into the chasm.

I know of but one man who is said to have seen a duck swept over the falls. In describing the incident he said:

"While viewing the Canadian cataract from a point on Goat Island, my attention was suddenly arrested by a large wildfowl which, through the spy-glass, gave every evidence of belonging to the goose or brant family.

"My curiosity being fully aroused, I anxiously followed the manoeuvres of this reckless fellow who would frolic so with dangerous and indomitable nature, and to my astonishment I plainly beheld him swimming strenously with the madly tossing current, as if with suicidal intent, toward the vortex of the Horse Shoe falls. Then, with head proudly erect, he sailed neatly, and without a single effort at self preservation, over the verge."

Niagara cares little whether her victims be hunted or hunter. As she deals with waterfowl, so also she deals with man; and many a duck hunter has paid for his sport with his life.

Many tales of hairbreath escapes and daring rescues are told by hunters sometimes. One is rescued from his boat, as he floats helplessly down stream in the clasp of an ice jam. The field of ice is caught by the current and swung in toward shore, where the rescuer throws the hunter a rope.

Another's luck is far less, for; being unobserved, he is compelled to chance his life in swimming as he passes some nearest point on shore. Few such hunters reach their destination.

Some years ago two duck hunters were seen out in the center of the river drifting slowly down stream in their boat, which was held in a huge field of lake ice. Gradually they neared the first tumbling cataract.

They rowed frantically, but it was useless; the large pieces of lake ice bore continually down on them and dragged their light duck-boat down stream. Finally one was seen to mount the bow seat of the craft and poise as if intending to leap into the ice and water.

The other seemed to divine his purpose and caught him around the waist. Thus struggling desperately in each other's arms the two were swept over the cataract.

A hunter once told me that he had been forced to shoot at his guide to save his own life. The guide had placed the hunter on a lodged cake of ice to wait for ducks, and returned to the shore of a nearby island.

The place was some two miles above the falls. Unnoticed by the hunter the guide fell asleep, unquestionably from the effect of too much cold-killer (whisky). Finally the hunter's cake of ice dislodged, and began to float rapidly down stream.

Shouting and firing his gun had no effect on the drunken guide. The morning was early and there were no boats on the river. He knew that his only hope lay in arousing his guide, for the first cataract was not a mile and a quarter below. He loaded his shotgun with No. 2, took deliberate aim at the reclining form in the boat on the island shore, some fifty yards away, and fired.

The guide bounced to his feet, and was sufficiently sobered to rescue the hunter. The guide's injuries were not serious—only one shot took effect. By some freak of fortune it passed as clean as a whistle through the edge of the lobe of his right ear.

CORBETT, MODERATOR.

Chosen to Preside Over General Conference After Spirited Contest.

Des Moines, May 18.—After a spirited contest, Rev. Dr. Hunter Corbett, missionary to China for many years, was elected moderator of the Presbyterian general assembly late yesterday afternoon. Three ballots were taken, the final vote standing: Dr. Corbett, 329; Rev. Dr. J. M. Barkley, Detroit, Mich., 308; Rev. Dr. J. W. Hendy, Missouri, 4.

Five candidates were placed in nomination, and the oratory that accompanied the presentation of names occupied over two hours. The voting was by sections and there being twenty-two of these, it was attended by much noise and confusion. Dr. Corbett was nominated by Rev. Dr. Arthur J. Brown, New York, seconded by Rev. F. Silstey, Meadsville, Pa., Rev. J. F. Wright and Rev. L. E. Ewin, Pittsburg; Dr. T. H. Cleland, Duluth, was nominated by Rev. Edward A. Halsey, Chicago, and seconded by Rev. S A. Wishard, Salt Lake City; Dr. Barkley was nominated by Rev. Wilson D. Seton, New York, and seconded by Capt. Allen, Ypsilanti, Mich.; Rev. J. W. Hendy was nominated by Rev. George Reynolds, Kansas City, and Rev. J. M. Marshall, of Minneapolis, was nominated by Rev. E. J. Moors, Omaha, and seconded by Rev. Howard Campbell, New Philadelphia, Ohio. On the first ballot Dr. Corbett received 263; Barkley, 233; Marshall, 211; Cleland, 28; Hendy 23. The second ballot resulted: Corbett, 308; Barkley, 278; Marshall, 48; Cleland, 4; Hendy, 5. On motion of Dr. Barkley, the election was made unanimous. Dr. Corbett is a native of Pennsylvania and has for years been engaged in missionary work in China, where his services were distinguished.

"MUGGSY" PULLED IN PITTSBURG

Pittsburg, Pa., May 18.—John J. McGraw, manager of the New York National League baseball team, was arrested here last night, charged by Edward Brady with an assault upon his 13-year-old son, Nell Brady.

McGraw learned that a warrant was out for his arrest and surrendered himself to the police magistrate. He was released on $500 bail. A hearing will be held Saturday morning.

The assault is alleged to have occurred immediately after the game with the Pittsburgs yesterday afternoon. As the New York team was leaving the grounds, a crowd of boys followed the bus, howling and jeering, and then began to throw pebbles. Brady charges that McGraw grasped a whip and cut his boy across the face.

The magistrate said last night that when the boy was brought before him to make the complaint there was no mark on his face and McGraw says he will contest the case.

Iron Mountain Defeated.

The Forbes baseball team defeated Iron Junction last Sunday, in a well played game, by the score of 7 to 5. The batteries were, Weyman and Peterson for the Forbes team, and Troux and Rhine for the Junction. Young umpired.

They're off.

The season of the Copper country and Northern league is now in full swing, the first games of the season being played in two of the league cities yesterday afternoon, before large crowds.

About 6,000 people saw the two games played in the Copper country. At Ripley park the Houghton and Hancock teams played to about 3,500 people, while at Calumet, the Calumet and Lake Linden teams drew a crowd of about 2,500 people.

Both games were fast and well played contests.

The weather, unfortunately, interfered with the opening at Winnipeg and Fargo, and the four western teams in the league had to sit around the hotels and watch the rain coming pouring down in torrents. But the delayed opening in these two cities will take place today, and the postponed Fargo and Duluth game may be played on Sunday in a double header.

Houghton and Lake Linden, which were looked upon as the two weaker teams in the Copper country, both won their games yesterday, and all four teams played fast ball. If they continue to put such exhibitions as those yesterday, the western teams in the league will have to strike a fast gait to hold their own.

GREAT DAY IN HOUGHTON.

New Ball Park Dedicated and 3,500 People Present.

Houghton, Mich., May 18.—(Special to The Herald.)—Before a crowd of 3,500 people, the new baseball park of the Houghton and Hancock teams were dedicated yesterday and the season of the Northern-Copper Country league in this section was opened, with Hancock and Houghton opposing. The usual ceremonies were gone through in the opening of the park.

Led by the Quincy band, the Houghton and Hancock teams in carriages paraded the two towns before the game. At the park Robert H. Shields of Houghton made a happy speech and R. H. Lang of the same town dedicated the park by breaking a bottle of wine over the home plate, naming the grounds "The Ripley Park." President W. F. Miller, president of the village of Houghton, took his position in the box and Mayor A. J. Scott of Hancock donned the glove and mask and stood behind the plate, while Manager Cassiboine of the Houghton team held the bat. With the teams lined up on both sides of the plate, Mr. Miller threw three beautiful strikes to the batter and Mayor Scott caught them in big league form.

The business houses of Houghton and Hancock were closed from 4 o'clock until 6 and, as the game was the first to be played between baseball teams representing the two towns for many years, everybody who could get away was on hand. And they were enthusiastic, for every good play brought its share of applause and the umps came in for a generous amount of criticism.

The game was indeed a good one for the opening of the season. Although at times, the teams played loosely, the pitchers were in rare form for the opening game and the contest was fraught with interest throughout. Things looked bad for Houghton at the last of the eighth inning, when they went in to bat with the score 2 to 1 against them. An error by McHale gave Brand a position on second base. The next two men went out and still there was little hope in the hearts of Houghton fans. Kippert came to bat and with two strikes against him, drove a beautiful one to the left field fence, going to second and scoring Brand. Kippert was caught fooling on second, however.

Hancock couldn't do a thing in its part of the ninth and Houghton went to bat with strong hopes of pulling out a victory. Sundheim led off with a hit. Hastings advanced him with a sacrifice, a wild throw by O'Hayer put him on third and he scored the winning run on Cassibone's hit to the infield.

The feature of the game was Hastings' one hand catch of a long fly in center field. Stevens' and Kippert's two base hits helped make the game spectacular also.

RAISES ITS PENNANT

And Lake Linden Then Wins From Calumet.

Calumet, Mich., May 18.—(Special to The Herald.)—The baseball season of the Northern-Copper country league as opened here yesterday, with the Calumet and Lake Linden teams as the contestants. The latter won by a score of 3 to 1. The weather was ideal and quite a large crowd was in attendance. The two teams, headed by the Calumet & Hecla band, marched through Laurium and Red Jacket before the game. When they reached the baseball park, the pennant won by Calumet in the Copper country-Soo league last year, was raised on a staff, to the cheers of the supporters of the team.

The game itself was an excellent exhibition. Lake Linden managed to bunch hits sufficiently to win, although in the first part of the game, Calumet seemed to have the advantage in form. Newcombe, for the Lakes, pitched a steady game and the seven hits secured off him were scattered around so that they did little damage. The Lakes had their batting clothes on, as the four two baggers and the home run made by them off Grimes delivery testify.

DIFFICULTIES ARE ADJUSTED

The troubles between the Duluth and Winnipeg managements over Menelce and Treadway, have finally been settled to the satisfaction of both.

Menelce will remain with the Maroons and play first base for the season of 1906, while Treadway will pitch for the White Sox.

As matters stood, Duluth appeared to have the best claim to Menelce, while Winnipeg had a hold on Treadway. But the Maroons needed Menelce, and Duluth did not. Treadway was with the Duluth team and Menelce was with the Maroons, and it was finally agreed to let matters rest as they were.

WHEAT RATE FIRM AT TWO

Some Line Boats in Market But No Cut Yet.

Plenty of Tonnage Offered for Ore at Lake Superior.

The grain rate is firm at 2 cents for wheat to Buffalo. Some of the line boats have cleared up their shipments of package freight enough so that they are in the market for some grain. They have not yet bugun to cut the rate, however, but are asking 2 cents as do the other boats. Shippers are selling some grain to the East and at the present time the amount is about enough to fill the tonnage that is offering. The steamer Steel King was chartered in Cleveland Wednesday to load oats at Duluth for Buffalo at 1½ cents.

Owing to the light movement of grain out of Chicago offerings of ore tonnage are liberal at Escanaba but ore carriers are having no trouble getting cargoes at the Lake Superior ports. Most of the Lake Michigan traders are being sent for ore and until there is a better demand for grain carriers in that trade Escanaba tonnage will be plentiful.

EARLING'S DUCKING.

New Steamer to be Launched on Saturday at Noon.

Promptly at noon tomorrow the big steel freighter E. J. Earling will be launched at the Superior shipyard and it is likely that the affair will be made quite a society event. The new boat will be christened by Miss Adine Earling of Milwaukee, daughter of the man after whom the boat will be named. Mr. Earling and his daughter will reach Superior in a special car, together with H. H. Oakes of Detroit, principal stockholder in the Franklin Steamship company for which company the boat is being built; and a number of others from Detroit and Milwaukee.

The Earling is said to be one of the handsomest boats yet turned out of the Superior yard. She will be in shape to sail within a week after she drops into the water, most of the work on her having been done while she was on the stocks. Accommodations have been provided on the boat for ten passengers and the furnishings of all the quarters are said to be luxurious in comparison to most steamers.

The Earling, which is to be an ore and coal freighter measures 545 feet over all, 55 feet beam and 31 feet depth.

Grain Scoopers Scale Settled.

Cleveland, May 18.—An agreement was reached yesterday between President Livingstone and other representatives of the Lake Carriers' association and the grain scoopers employed on the steamers of the Great Lakes. The scale agreed upon is practically that of last year. President Livingstone said that no trouble is now apprehended in connection with the firemen and other bodies, though contracts with these men have not yet been agreed upon.

Old Elevator Reopened.

Ogdensburg, N. Y., May 18.—The steamers, Lambert, with 83,000 bushels of corn and flaxseed, and the Wallace, with 80,000 bushels of flaxseed from Duluth for export, from Montreal, arrived here yesterday and are discharging at the Montreal Transportation company's elevator at Prescott, Ont. This elevator, with a capacity of 1,000,000 bushels, has been idle six years, but the present grain rush down the St. Lawrence route will work all the river elevators to their full capacity.

Time-Off Not Yet Settled.

Cleveland, May 18.—After an all-day session between the officials of the Great Lakes Towing company and the Tugmen's union delegates, no agreement was reached as to time-off for the men. The matter was finally referred to a committee composed of members from each side. President Smith of the tug company last night made a proposition which it is thought will be accepted by the men. He agrees to grant the men every other night and every other Sunday off during July and August, the tugs to be operated under the old system during the balance of the season. If a contract is made it will be for two years.

BOAT WAS SWAMPED

Squall Caused His Small Dory to Fill and Sink.

The brisk west wind which sprang up this morning nearly caused the death of an unknown fisherman, by drowning.

The man was rowing along the shore, near the foot of Eighteenth avenue east, about 11:45 o'clock this morning, in a small dory. The sea which was raised by the squall proved too much for the little craft, and the waves swamped it.

The accident was witnessed by the life saving crew, the life boat was hastily launched, and the men made every effort to reach the man in time to be of some assistance. When they arrived on the scene, however, there was nothing in sight but the boat, and it was feared that the man had been drowned.

On their return to the life saving station, some East end woman telephoned that the man had reached the shore in safety, and had gone to a house in the vicinity to warm himself and dry his clothes.

The life savers were unable to learn the man's name, but it is reported that he was a Finnish fisherman.

All members of S. H. and E. F. A. F. D. No. 18, are requested to meet at Sloan's hall, Twentieth avenue west and Superior street, at 1 p. m., Sunday, to attend the funeral of our late brother, Edward Anderson.

SHOULD PROVIDE FISHWAY.

Among fishermen there is considerable criticism because the government maintains in Lester river near the park a dam which is not provided with a fishway. It is of such a height that it is only rarely that fish can go up the river. If private parties were maintaining the dam, it would not be allowed for a moment without a fishway and the question is asked as to why the government should not do what it would require of an individual.

There are many fish below the dam just now. They seem to be mostly steelheads and are not biting at this time of year. But for the dam they would probably go much farther up stream.

WIRES ARE DOWN.

Wind Storm Shuts Off Communication Between Duluth and St. Paul.

The North American Telegraph company lost all of its wires between Duluth and St. Paul shortly after noon today.

The last operator heard from was at a small station just this side of Hinckley. He stated that there was a very heavy gale blowing there at the time, and it is likely that either some of the poles have gone or that a tree has been blown down across the wires some place between Duluth and Hinckley.

The cutting off of telegraphic communication was felt chiefly by the brokerage offices, which were unable to get quotations after noon.

The Korby Piano company will be open for business tomorrow. Four carloads of pianos have been unloaded to their wareroom.

Philadelphia, May 18.—The following statement was issued today by Capt. John H. Green, first vice president of the Pennsylvania railroad: "Recent developments at the hearing in progress before the committee in this city in respect to the acquisition and ownership of stocks of coal companies, and acceptance of gratuities by its employes, are a surprise to the management. While it is not believed any injustice has been done to companies or the public, full investigation will be made, and no ownership calculated to affect the discharge of the duty owed by the company to the public will be tolerated.

CONCERNING WOMEN

The Young Women's Christian association is planning an excursion to Thomson for Decoration day, May 30, and much interest is being shown in the affair. In spite of the protests of those to whom Decoration day brings tender memories, the great majority of people, the younger generation especially, regard Memorial day as a holiday. Coming as it does in the spring, when the call of the open is most insistent, the opportunity to get out for the entire day is irresistible. The trip to Thomson will be taken, and the works of the Highland Power company inspected. A picnic luncheon will be enjoyed. The excursion will leave Duluth at 9 o'clock in the morning, and trains will return at 2:30 o'clock and 6:25 o'clock.

KING'S DAUGHTERS.

Pleasing Entertainment Given at Lyceum Last Evening.

"The King's Daughters" was presented at the Lyceum last night by local talent, directed by Mrs. G. E. Budd, and under the auspices of the ladies of the First Christian church. The affair was a series of tableaux, depicting scenes from the Bible, mostly from the Old Testament. Of course nothing in the way of a professional finish was expected, but those taking part did very well. The costumes showed up well under the limelight, and some very pretty pictures were produced. Each tableau was taken part in by from four to twenty people, and each took his or her part well. Miss Agnes Mae Johnson, who took the leading role, that of Queen Vashti, gave a very good performance, and gave her lines in excellent style. As Jepthah's daughter, Mrs. J. H. Jern was also excellent, and gave a solo, which was well rendered. Mrs. Jern has a very pretty voice, and received much applause.

The closing scene, a tableau representing the Rock of Ages, in which Miss Grace Hendricks, with arms outstretched, represented the cross, was a very pretty and attractive one. Miss Hendricks maintained a very difficult pose for about five minutes. It was not only graceful, but was something of a feat of strength.

For this scene Charles Dorrance sang the solo, and also earlier in the evening sang between acts. Arrah Myhre, a baritone, gave a solo during the scene of the king crowning Esther, which was very good. He has a good voice, but requires a little more self-confidence. Miss Norma Williams gave a delightful violin solo between acts.

M. S. Rice to Speak.

The third of a series of evangelical services, which have been held at the Young Women's Christian association, at the Sunday afternoon meetings, will be held Sunday afternoon at 4 o'clock. M. S. Rice is the speaker, and the subject of his third talk will be "The One Who Must Take the Message to the World." Much interest is being shown in the meetings. Special music will be given by the Y. M. C. A. quartet.

Engagement.

The announcement of the engagement of Miss Bernadette V. Rousseau of Detroit, Mich., daughter of C. M. Rousseau of that city, to Albert M. Ouellette of this city, has been announced. The wedding will take place at the home of the bride, June 12, and after a wedding trip Mr. and Mrs. Ouelette will be at home in this city. Mr. Ouelette is a well known business man of this city and his many friends here will be interested in the announcement.

A May Wedding.

Mr. and Mrs. Perry Day Jones of 1217 East Second street, issued invitations today for the wedding reception of their daughter, Miss Bertha Luella Jones and Justus Holladay McLaughlin whose wedding will take place Thursday, May 31. The wedding service will be read at 1:30 o'clock and the immediate friends will be the guests. From 2 to 3 o'clock a wedding reception will be held. Mr. McLaughlin and his bride will leave for a wedding trip and will go to Portland, Or., where they will be at home. Several affairs have been planned in Miss Jones' honor for the next two weeks.

To See Launching.

The members of the Outing club of the Young Women's Christian association will go to Superior by ferry, to see the launching of the big freighter "E. J. Earling." Any of the association members who would enjoy the trip are invited to meet at the rooms and go with the members of the club.

Events of Interest.

This even "The Mountain Girl," a four-act comedy, will be presented at Flaaten's hall under the direction of Miss Nellie Millard of Minneapolis, by the young people of the First Presbyterian church. The proceeds will go toward the purchase of a new piano for the church.

* * *

Tomorrow evening the pupils of the Flaaten Conservatory of Music will appear at the Flaaten hall. An interesting program has been arranged and much interest is being shown in the affair by the friends of the students.

* * *

This evening the members of the Pallestine assembly will be hosts at the last of the series of dancing parties which have been given at the Masonic Temple during the season. The members of Palestine and Ionic lodges have been invited to this last dance.

Personal Mention.

Mr. and Mrs. A. H. Comstock and Mrs. C. W. Andrews have gone to Deerwood for a short outing.

* * *

Mrs. Bert Lum of Minneapolis, who has been the guest of Mrs. W. B. Silvey, returned to her home today.

* * *

Mrs. Harry S. Burnham and sons of Proctor, are the guests of Mr. and Mrs. George M. Smith of the Ashtabula.

WHAT RETAIL MARKETS OFFER.

Black bear meat, 20 cents a pound.
Veal roast, 15 cents a pound.
Spinach, 20 cents a peck.
Pineapples, 15 and 18 cents.
Summer squash, 3 for 25 cents.

Everything else that a spring market should have.

The literal bushels of stuff which is in the market sends one's imagination off on an unlimited number of delightful things which one could have for one's Sunday dinner. Everything is getting cheaper. Pineapples are 'way down, tomatoes are only 15 cents a pound, berries are cheap; spinach, the complexion beautifier, is 10 cents less a peck than it was, and in fact, the market is a perfect riot of good things at reasonable prices.

One poor great lumbering bear was killed the other day at Alborn. His big black bushy coat was the finest seen around these parts in some time and his meat was considered more than ordinarily good. One bit was left this morning in the market and was to be disposed of at 20 cents a pond. Bear meat is not a thing that appeals promiscuously to people so there was probably not a stampede to get that one remaining piece. It is the one exclusive thing the market offers.

Tablecloths of Russian Lace Are Elaborate in Design

Russian Lace Cloth

For fine table covers Russian lace is being extensively used, the designs being made to fit the top of the table. In this way the beauty of the pattern is not altogeher lost in the folds and covered entirely when the guests are seated. Other styles show the same idea, but in much less expensive patterns.

The EVENING STORY.

WHITE HORSE

By Harry Irving Greene.

(Copyright, 1906, by Joseph B. Bowles.)

The construction department of the Superior & Western railroad had decided to sink a spur deep into the body of the woods and connect Archer with Turtle Junction. Dunham, the gray old timber fox that had charge of that bureau, sent for the representatives of the Badger Lumber company and of Findlay & Brother. Cardiff and Findlay, the representatives, came the next morning to Dunham's office.

"Now, boys," he said at the rivals glowered at each other through the smoke fog, "seeing that we are all here together we might as well drop sentiment and have a little medicine talk. The S. & W. wants those ties at bedrock price, and it wants them as soon as man can deliver them. What are your figures, Cardiff?"

"Thirty thousand dollars," said Cardiff, as he thieved a quick glance at his rival from across the Manitowish.

"And yours, John?"

"Twenty-five thousand."

"Then I'll call it twenty-five thousand, too," responded Cardiff, promptly. Externally Dunham remained cool, but internally he was aglow with a warm, glad smile.

"Well, I guess the price is near enough right, boys, if we can only get together on the question of delivery. Of course, it is understood that time is the essence of this contract. When can you deliver those ties in our yards at Archer, Mr. Cardiff?"

The black brows of the Badger representative contracted as he gazed deep into the silent woods. "Between April 1st and 10th, depending on how soon the break-up comes," Findlay sat looking at them in silence, and Dunham, after giving him plenty of time in which to make a bid, husked a dry cough from his voice and went on thoughtfully:

"Pretty late, but I don't suppose I can ask you to deliver them by airship at those figures. Our minds have met as to the price, and, of course, which one of you gets the contract makes no difference to me. But inasmuch as Mr. Cardiff spoke first and Mr. Findlay can't better the bid I suppose I might as well let Cardiff—"

"Hold on," broke in Findlay as his jaw suddenly thrust itself out. "If I give you a $50,000 bond that I will deliver those ties at Archer, March 1st, thirty days before Mr. Cardiff's date, do I get that contract?"

Dunham glanced at Cardiff, and Cardiff, staring stupidly at his rival, said nothing at all. So, presently, Dunham answered "yes," and at that word Findlay arose.

So, with that the incident ended, and John Findlay strode away, as many another victor has done, his heart thumping triumphantly and his brain sick with fear.

Long and bitter had been the fight that he and his half invalid brother Joe had waged in those cold north woods, and to lose out now spelled ruin just as their star of hope was rising brightly above the horizon.

"Of course, there is only one way to carry out that contract, Joe," said John, "and that is to build an ice road from Camp 3 to Archer. When I fixed the date with Dunham I thought you and I could figure out a route through this swamp and ridge country, but it seems that we can't make good. And there is only one man I know who can and he is James Livingston Flint, 'White Horse,' we used to call him—and, of course, as our luck would have it, he is way up in Alaska country somewhere. But I'm going after him. I'll be back before the first of December and I'll bring him with me, alive if possible, but anyway I'll bring him. I'd rather have Flint dead than any other man in the pineries alive."

So that night John Findlay packed his grip and departed for the white land. It was way out Seminow way that Findlay found his man.

What occurred between them is of little consequence—but when some weeks later White Horse arrived at Camp 3 and sized up the situation, he sat down on a log and covered his face with his hands.

"Wish I was back in the Klondike," he muttered between his fingers. Then he seemed to remember that time was passing, got up and began to move around like a man who is in a hurry.

For the next week he blazed his way through frozen tamarack swamps, across old slashings and over hardwood ridges, while back at camp the Findlays stamped among their men and fretted silently. On the eighth evening as the walking boss came into headquarters at Camp 1 and began pulling off pair after pair of heavy socks, his eyes shone brightly as if he had only traveled two miles instead of twenty through the brush since morning.

"I've got the route laid out and there is only one bad hill on it," he said through the ice of his mustache. "We can get over that rise all right with a couple of extra teams to yank the sleds up. A month from now you will be able to skate from Camp 3 to Archer if you feel like it."

"I'll be hauling 10,000 to the load before January 1—and that is something no man has done in this neck of the woods. But, of course, it is going to cost some money to build that road."

"All right, we'll stand for it," said John, as he drew his chair to the table.

White Horse built the road in a little less than three weeks, but he only slept on an average of four hours a night while he did it. As for the men who worked under him during that frenzied period, they cursed him without intermission while the work was going on, and are still bragging about having had hand and foot in it.

Of course it seems incredible, but it is astonishing how much seventy hard-driven men and twenty good teams can do in three weeks when they work eighteen hours a day. The road was finished on the 24th of December, and it was a good thing to look at.

Christmas morning came clear and bitterly cold. Heavy feet crunched the brittle snow without the cook shop of Camp 3, and at the first sound White Horse thrust a heavy, automatic pistol into his pocket and then leaned indolently against the logs with his hands buried deeply in his pockets.

The next instant the door was burst open and in lurched a body of woodsmen who, crowding into the corners of the cabin, left the center of the floor empty, while Lebeau, who led them, stepped forward and spoke:

"Bah, you man from Chill Cat. Like a dog you work us in ze cold to make ze cursed ice road. Like a loup garou you drive us and swing your canthook when ze moon shine. Come, you, every man, follow along with me, Joe Lebeau, and I will show you joy. We will drink, we will dance, we will make ridicule. Come with Joe Lebeau."

Out into the open air he swaggered, his band behind him, and White Horse heard them go roaring down the ice road with nearly the whole camp en train. And as the last yell died away the forehead of the walking boss wrinkled like a pool into which a pebble is tossed and those lines bound his lips closely together. For he well knew that once fairly started on a big drunk his crew would scatter from the Soo to Sturgeon Bay, and every day's time was priceless to him now with the driving work that lay before him. The crisis had come, and White Horse, arriving, walked to the window and stood moodily staring into the silent woods.

Within the log saloon six miles down the road the noise of the revelry arose in ever increasing volume. From side to side of the crowded saloon one pair of woodsmen, locked in each other's arms, galloped in drunken danee roughshod over the feet of their companions. In a corner two more were fighting clumsily to the plaudits of their knot of spectators.

The door of the shack suddenly opened and the tall form of White Horse towered before them. Calmly, but with each word forceful as a bullet, White Horse spoke.

"This thing is going to stop. I've got to have you in the woods tomorrow and you must get back to camp while you are able to walk. I've been a patient man today, but I've reached my limit. Now clean out of here before I clean you."

Suddenly they turned upon him, shifting on their feet and glancing at each other uneasily. And seeing their doggedness, an ominous glitter suddenly came into the gray orbs of the boss, and roughly he shouldered his way to the back of the shack and drew a small cylinder from his pocket.

"Dynamite cartridge with a two-minute tail," he said, as he sat it upon the wood box and held a flaming match above it. "You want to dance and fight some more, do you? Well, unless you hike out of here you'll all be doing a quick-step tonight for the devil."

No man knew just how far White Horse would go in the enforcement of an order, and now none waited to see. Struggling, cursing, roaring, they fought their way out of the door, and went swarming down the track, while the boss, extinguishing the fuse, stepped out onto the trampled snow and threw his cartridge deep into the woods. Far down the track the runaways were straggling into the distance, wrangling and howling insanely.

The afternoon sun sank until it seemed to rest on the tops of the Western Forest like a broad gold piece poised delicately. And the walking boss, arising from a log beside his cutter, where he had sat for an hour following the rout, climbed up to the seat. Back along the rough woods trail he went until the gleaming ice road lay before him, then turned upon it.

As his half-galloping ponies swung around a bend of the forest road, they suddenly arose upon their hind legs with wild pawings at the air. Less than a dozen yards in front of them and lying upon his back on the ice, was the first of the fallen that White Horse had feared would litter the homeward route.

The legs of the lumber-jack kicked spasmodically and White Horse, shortening his reins, leaped the ice. "Can't leave you here to freeze up solid," he grunted, as he dumped the limp form headlong into the sleigh box behind. "But I'll make you pay for this ride tomorrow."

At the next turn of the road the first oath that had escaped his lips that day burst from him explosively. Fairly in front of him, locked in each other's arms as they had gone to sleep fighting, were Jimmy Hard Hoots and Ole Sawlog. Along the next hundred yards four more men were strewn like skirmishers fallen in battle.

One by one the walking boss laboriously raised them and piled them upon each other in the box, wedging the last man firmly between the dashboard and the seat.

The moon sailed high and the black shadows of the forest lay heavily upon the clearings. White Horse, hurrying back from Camp 2, where he had been summoned to quell an incipient riot, drew a deep breath as he threw open the door of the cook shop.

"They are sleeping all right now. They'll be in fair shape to break their backs again tomorrow, and most likely they won't lick up another drop of firewater until after the drive in the spring. Poor devils! There isn't much pleasure in this world for them—not much—not much!"

And this is how White Horse delivered an impossible contract for Findlay Bros. on time to the dot, with scarce an hour to spare between success and a $50,000 loss.

Old Fashioned Manners Now Taught in School

Many are asking, "What has become of the old-fashioned manners—the kind that made gentlemen give up their seats to women, that made all of us deferential to our elders, considerate to strangers and genial to all?" What are our schools doing to preserve them?

In the Girls' Technical High School of New York, an institution teaching two thousand young women under the direction of the department of education, thought is given to this problem every day in the year. Miss Agnes Boldt, a member of the teaching staff of the school, gives these comments.

Manners are like music in more ways than one, but certainly in this respect that you have to practice all the time or lose proficiency. A school should be a constant lesson in manners from the time one enters the building until the end of the session. Even then the influence of the school should follow the girl wherever she goes. Most young women bring good manners from home with them. We try to see that such are given free play, so that the few unfortunate ones whose training has not been so good may learn from the others. It is a common observation that students acquire fully as much from one another as from their teachers.

Some of the principals who send girls to high schools have achieved such success in training them in gentle ways that they can frequently be identified as graduates from a particular institution.

Schools No. 6 and 9 are such. In them special attention is given to making life pleasanter, which, I take it, is the object of good manners. Every school in the city is teaching in regular lessons devoted to that purpose, duties to parents, brothers, sisters and acquaintances, to the aged, the poor and the unfortunate; conduct at home, on the street, in assemblies and in public conveyances.

One must remember that this is only the supplementary work of the school; it belongs chiefly to the home, and it would be a sorry day for American parents should they become so indifferent to their duties to their children as to abandon the teaching of manners wholly to the schools. If one ever sees boys and girls showing ill-breeding on the street or in a public meeting it is when they are out of the teacher's jurisdiction. To witness the other side one should notice the attention, deference and quiet politeness shown during an address given in any of the four hundred New York public educational institutions.

Our ways of attending to manners in the Girls' Technical High school have interested some of our visitors. The foundation of our usage is fostering among the young women the spirit of ownership of the school. The principal never calls it "my school," but it is always "our school." The girls open the exercises in the morning, reading the Bible, giving the salute to the flag and leading he singing. We all try to make the home serve as the model for the school. As the spirit of the true home is mutual respect and courtesy towards its members and hospitality to strangers, those are the qualities that the teachers and the older pupils take pains to keep prominent.

Twice a year, when new scholars come into our family from hundreds of grammar schools in our city, our young women make special efforts to see that hospitality is evident. On the first day representatives of the various classes already in school deliver addresses of welcome to the new ones. "Welcome" mottoes are put up in every room. Girls formerly of any particular grammar school look up those who have just been admitted from it and show them attention. At luncheon time, when the students usually divide into cliques with their favorite friends, there is a period of self denial during the first week that the new pupils may not feel too lonesome.

Then on Friday afternoon there is a "get acquainted party" especially for the newcomers, who, with their hostesses, are all labelled with their names and taken to sing and dance and drink chocolate in the gymnasium.

We try, too, to give our girls practice in hospitality in managing formal receptions to ladies who have expressed a friendly interest in the school. A committee of 100 or 150 students elect their chairman and form their sub-committees and invite guests and friends to an afternoon tea. From the white gowned ushers at the front door to the singers, recters, players, tea servers and cooks, all the service is done by the girls without a teacher appearing as other than a guest. In this way our scholars have entertained Mrs. George B. McClellan, Mrs. Patrick McGowan, Mrs. Henry Tefft, Miss Theresa Bernholz and Supt. Joseph Taylor.

For keeping alive our thought of courtesy toward one another we have essays, addresses and conversations on the subject. There is no end of opportunities for bringing in the idea naturally and effectively. One can use the various necessities of courtesy in different situations as subjects for compositions in English, French and German classes.

For exercise on the typewriter and in penmanship lessons we use that time-honored practice of selecting paragraphs that are full of pertinent suggestion. Let the girls write out the reasons for the thorough courtesy of listening, deploring that the habit of interrupting is on the increase. To listen properly one should learn to look at the speaker and think of what she is saying. Such a listener is an inspiration. Let them record the elements of a good conversation, not the troubles of the kitchen, the cost of the last new dress of the petty doings of the neighbors, but the higher workings of the mind. Let them note what the best people do at a dinner party, at the introduction of a friend or the entertainment of a guest, in short, at all those occasions where there is a call for gentle breeding.

After all has been said the surest way to teach girls good manners is to use good manners toward them. A recipe for making school girls gentle, refined and courteous is to bet to them gentle, refined and courteous.

Pet Dogs Need Different Care and Food in Summer

Dogs, particularly thoroughbreds, need a change of climate during the summer time quite as much as their owners, according to Dr. D. S. Johnson, a well known veterinary of New York, who declares that pets kept in the city nine months in the year should have a three months' vacation amid different surroundings and in a different atmosphere, if they are to be kept in good health.

In my opinion all dogs should have a change from the city life for a few weeks each year, and the more highly strung and finely bred these pets are, the more essential such a change is. In choosing a summer home for pets their physical condition should be carefully studied, for a change that would prove beneficial to some would not even agree with others. For instance, the seashore would be just the place for a strong, healthy animal with plenty of strength, and inclined to be too fat, while for a dog that had suffered with bronchial and pulmonary troubles, a visit to the ocean front might only be bad, but positively dangerous.

For an animal that suffers with a weak throat and lungs I would advise the mountains. And let them go where the atmosphere is as rarified as possible, for in that way the most benefit from the outing will be derived. Then the country, that is, neither among the hills nor near salt water, is a good change, and one that the majority of canines thoroughly enjoy because of the freedom they are allowed. They like to run in the long meadow grass and romp down shady lanes quite as much as we take pleasure in these things, and I have frequently seen pets really thin and jaded looking from the life in steam heated apartments and the lack of proper exercise and fresh air, grow to be strong and healthy after three months of outdoor sport in the country.

During the summer a certain amount of exercise should be insisted upon, and careful owners should make arrangements for their pets to have it daily. It should not be too strenuous or allowed to be taken in the heat of the day, but a certain distance, the number of miles varying according to the strength and size of the animals, should be covered once in twenty-four hours, either by walking or running.

One thing that should be kept constantly in mind during the hot days is that the dogs must not be allowed to become overheated, for this too often ends in death, especially when the animals are not in the best physical condition and so are really open for attacks by almost any form of illness. Exercise should not be given when it makes them pant too violently, and dogs should not be permitted to lie in the sun when they are panting. Should one be overcome the best thing to do is to put a cold ice compress on its head until the weakness is passed. Exhaustion following sunstroke often manifests itself in a dog when the animal lies weakly on one side and pants convulsively.

Particular attention should be paid to the diet, for quite as much depends on the food that is fed as on the exercise given, especially in the summer. Less meat should of course be given, and the supply of vegetables increased. Meat once a day should be sufficient for even large dogs, and this should be fed in small pieces after it has been well cooked with beans, peas, potatoes, greens, etc., and made into a stew. Beef is the best kind to use during the hot months. The first and heavy meal is best if heavy in the morning, as soon as the dogs are up. The other meal, for two are sufficient, is fed just before the animals are put to bed for the night. It should consist of old dry bread well soaked in a rich beef gravy. Plenty of fresh water should always be within the reach of dogs so that they can get it when they feel inclined.

In speaking about taking exercise I neglected to add that directly after eating, these pets should never be taken for a long walk or run. The best plan is to leave them alone, for they know just what they want to do after a good breakfast or dinner, and that is rarely to do anything but sleep, for they know instinctively that the other is apt to bring on indigestion.

Sleeping out of doors, especially in the country or at the sea shore, where there are heavy dews at night, is bad, and dogs should not be allowed to lie out on the ground at night, because it is almost sure to result in a cold, if not rheumatism, to which they seem to be predisposed.

QUESTION IS RAISED

County Auditor Will Get Legal Opinion Before Taking Action.

Can a candidate for the nomination to a public office, under the laws of Minnesota withdraw his name before the primary election?

This question has been raised since the recent declarations of two candidates for sheriff that they have withdrawn.

There seems to be a general belief that a person who pays his $10 fee to the county auditor and announces that he is a candidate for the nomination to a certain office, has a right and privilege to withdraw his name. Inquiry at the auditor's office and a search of the statutes on the primary election law, however, disclose no authority whereby the auditor can erase a candidate's name from the ticket after he has filed a declaration of his intentions and paid the fee.

If the law does not give the auditor authority to take a candidate's name off after he officially announces his withdrawal, it does not say that the auditor cannot do such a thing, and right at this point arises a difference of opinion among the legal minds in the city and county as to the legality of the removal of any name that has been filed for nomination.

County Auditor Haldon has received only one official notice of withdrawal from nomination, that of Jack Miles, who declared his intention in April of running for sheriff on the Republican ticket. Auditor Halden has acknowledged receipt of the notification, but has taken no action yet. He has reserved his decision until he can get an opinion from the county attorney as to his proper authority in the premises.

As for the withdrawal of Ole Larson from the race for the office of sheriff, as announced by Mr. Larson in The Herald last week, Auditor Halden has received no official notice, and has not even taken the matter under advisement. If the primaries were held tomorrow Ole Larson's name would most certainly be on the ticket.

Assistant County Attorney W. C. Crosby when asked if the auditor could withdraw a name from nomination, said that he had not looked up the law in the matter yet, but could see where an important point might be raised.

Other county officials have expressed themselves something along this line:

"Certainly a person has a right to withdraw his name from nomination before the primaries if he wants to. He is the only person interested anyway, and knows that he stands on his own footing. If any person is satisfied that the footing is insecure, he has a perfect right to get out of the race, although his money has been paid to the county treasurer and he must forfeit the fee."

Those expressing themselves as above admit that there is a possibility, if their opinion is a correct one, where the very purpose of the law, which is to give an open and unrestricted field to any person who desires to be a candidate for office, might be defeated.

The supposition is advanced that one person, without any intention of standing for nomination at the primaries, files for a certain office, with a view to keeping other persons from entering the race. At the last moment, before the date expires for filing for nomination, this person withdraws his name, when there is no longer time for other candidates to get in the race.

MRS. MACKAY'S $40,000 GIFT

Offers to Bear the Entire Expense of Building Church.

Roslyn, L. I., May 18.—Mrs. Clarence H. Mackay, whose country estate is here, has sent to the vestry of Trinity parish, in this village, an offer to bear the entire expense of building the $40,000 church, for which plans and estimates have been submitted. Mrs. Mackay's offer, which was received at a meeting of the vestry held Wednesday evening, provides for the improvements and alterations needed on the rectory, and also for a nucleus of $1,000 toward an endowment fund to be raised for church maintenance.

Estimates for the building of the church were to be received by the vestry at its meeting, and Mrs. Mackay's offer came at the same time. Plans for the structure had been drawn some time ago, and a subscription list had been started. The subscriptions amounted to between $4,000 and $5,000, and as this sum, including the $10,000 pledged by Mrs. Mackay, would have fallen far short of the amount required for the structure, if built according to the plans, the vestry would have been unable to take any definite step but for Mrs. Mackay's offer. As it was, such action was laid over, pending the arrival of certain plans and specifications which the vestry wished to see before notifying Mrs. Mackay that her offer was accepted.

The church property, when completed, if built according to plans, will have cost something like $75,000. Most of this expense will have been borne by Mrs. Mackay. The subscriptions raised by the congregation will, however, be used in erecting the altar, and a tablet placed in the chancel will show that this part of the work was done by the people. Mrs. Mackay has already given to the parish a parish house, which is now being built at a cost of $20,000. This is a memorial to her father, for whom she is still in mourning. The church will be a memorial to her mother, the late Mrs. Duer. She takes an active interest in the church outside of the building plans. She has regraded the Sunday school, and has taken a class herself.

BOOKS ON BIRDS IN THE LIBRARY

Many That Will be of Vast Interest to Students.

This is the time of year when birds and bird-lovers are abroad in the land, and when bird-lore is a popular topic of conversation and study. Much interest is manifested in the study of birds of late years, owing in part to the fact that many species are becoming extinct in various parts of the country, and that new problems have arisen on this account, and also on account of the marked increase in scientific agricultural investigation and methods.

The public library has a fine collection of books on birds, both for general use and for technical study. The following books are mentioned as a good working bibliography on the subject:

Bailey, Mrs. F. A., "Birds of Village and Field." One of the best books for a beginner; contains illustrated keys, bird biographies and lists of reading, migration lists and detailed suggestions of what to observe in the field.

Chapman, F. M., "Bird Life: A Guide to the Study of Our Common Birds." Seventy-five full-page colored plates. Colored plates extremely good, descriptions non-technical and in narrative form. A popular book with young beginners.

"Handbook of Birds of Eastern North America," with keys to the species, and descriptions of their plumages, nests and eggs, their distribution and migrations. Best brief ornithology ever written.

Doubleday, Mrs. N. B., "Bird Neighbors: An Introductory Acquaintance With 150 Birds Commonly Found in the Gardens, Meadows and Woods About Our Homes." Colored pictures from the periodical birds.

"North American Shore Birds: A History of the Snipes, Sandpipers, Plovers and Their Allies Inhabiting the Beaches and Marshes of the Atlantic and Pacific Coasts, the Prairies, and the Shores of the Inland Lakes and Rivers of the North American Continent." Accurate technical descriptions, with good drawings.

Herrick, F. H., "Home Life of Wild Birds." Account of photographic methods by which remarkable results have been obtained. Gives also much general information and treats the important question of habit and instinct.

Job, H. K., "Among the Water Fowl: Observation, Adventure, Photography." Extremely interesting on account of patient and original work.

Lange, Dietrich, "Our Native Birds: How to Protect Them and Attract Them to Our Homes." Suggestions for furnishing nesting places and materials, and protection from natural enemies. Has a chapter on the English sparrow problem.

Maynard, C. J., "Handbook of the Sparrows, Finches, Etc., of New England." Small handbook, noting appearance, habits, etc., and comparing species difficult to distinguish. Practical and reliable.

FOR CONSTIPATION

MOCK TRIALS END IN DEATH

Astounding Atrocities Committed in Name of Russian Law.

St. Petersburg, May 18.—Amazing revelations are beginning to filter through from Siberia as to the activity of Gen. Rennenkampff and the other high officers entrusted with the suppression of the recent revolutionary movement there.

Scores of persons have been put to death for the most trivial offenses, and scores of others for no offense at all, after mockeries of military trial without precedent in the world's history.

Tchita, in the Transbaikal territis the chief center of these atrocities. A Jew named Vanstein was convicted there and shot after a trial which lasted five minutes. The charge against Vanstein was that he was assistant station master at Tsuksmapu, where many atttacks took place on military trains. When Vanstein denied he had anything to do with the attacks, one witness, an illiterate peasant, was summoned. The trial consited of the following dialogue:

President—Do you known the accused?

Witness—Yes.

President—What is his name?

Witness—I don't know. (Laughter.)

President—How, then, do you know him?

Witness—I saw him at a meeting.

President—What did he say?

Witness—I can't talk in their learned way.

President—Did he cry "Down with the autocracy?"

Witness—Yes.

President—What else?

Witness—He talked about freedom.

President—Nothing else?

Witness—Nothing else.

This ended the trial and Vanstein was sentenced to death.

Another man, Krivonosenko, was condemned to death for reading to his fellow-villagers the czar's manifesto of October.

A third trial occupied exactly two minutes. The accused, Grigorioff, was led in and charged with "spreading propaganda." No witness appeared. The following dialogue ensued:

President—Call the witness, Liubimtsoff.

Gendarme Officer—He's not here.

President—Why?

Gendarme Officer—I don't know. He has sent a written statement against the accused.

President—Does the statement confirm the charge?

Gendarme Officer—Yes; in every detail.

Grigorioff was then condemned to death and shot. Three days later another Grigorioff was arrested. He admitted that he was the man who ought to have been charged, though he denied his guilt. He was condemned to death, but respited on the ground that one man—the wrong one—had been shot.

Of eleven persons sentenced to death at Verkheudinsk, another Transbaikal town, two were accused of "disrespectful remarks about the authorities," one of occupying a house from which a Cossack said "he thought a shot had been fired," and a third, a boy of 18, of "stealing government money." The government money consisted of a four-rouble money order, and stealing it was exalted into a political offense, triable by courtmartial.

Several women were sentenced to death but were respited. The offense of one was that her husband was wanted by the courts, and that she had falsely informed the Cossack pursuers that he had gone to Irkutsk, whereas in reality he was hiding in a forest close by.

Altogther nearly seventy persons are known to have been shot by order of these mock courts.

ENVY MISS AMERICA.

English Girls Want to Look Cool in Summer.

London, May 18.—English girls have long envied the American "summer girl" her power of looking cool and dainty in the hottest weather. But the mystery of her fascinating coolness is now to be revealed.

Miss Frances Rockefeller King, a niece of John D. Rockefeller, and a well-known American author and actress, is coming to England to deliver, at Claridge's hotel, a series of seven lectures, illustrated by her own sketches, on "What to Wear and How to Wear It."

"I will teach the maidenhood of Great Britain as the American 'summer girl,'" said Miss King, in an interview. "I have been over to England twice before, and each time I saw how far short the English girls in summer fell of our spick-and-span standard.

"They have delightful complexions, perfect figures, and spend any amount on their clothes, but on a warm day they look like a wilted lampshade. They lean too much towards flowered hats and lace, ruches, ruffings and all that sort of easily mussed-up thing.

"If I have time I mean to run over to Paris, and buy my poor Uncle John a new wig. The fun the newspapers make of his bald head makes my heart bleed for him."

UNPRECEDENTED AMOUNT OF STEEL RAILS ORDERED.

Pittsburg, May 18.—Since the order books were opened two weeks ago, the United States Steel corporation, the Colorado Fuel & Iron company, Jones & Laughlin Steel company, Pennsylvania Steel company and the Maryland Steel company and the Tennessee Coal & Iron company have booked an aggregate of one million tons of steel rails for delivery in 1907. This is an unprecedented amount of business for this time of the year. It is estimated that the tonnage booked is more than 700,000 tons above the actual production of the United States in 1905. From present indications 1907 will be more active in the production of steel rails than any previous year.

In all the metal lines there is a similar degree of activity.

NORWEGIANS CELEBRATE THEIR NATIONAL FETE DAY.

Christiania, May 17.—The national fete day, the first since the dissolution of the union between Sweden and Norway, was celebrated here pleasantly with extraordinary enthusiasm. There was a general holiday, all business was suspended, thanksgiving services were held in the churches, and there were processions through gaily decorated streets to the Akerehus fortress, where, in the presence of King Haakon, Premier Loveland delivered a patriotic speech. There was a banquet in the evening at the royal castle in honor of the storthing, the guests numbering 500. There were also numerous popular entertainments.

PEOPLE JUMPED AT CONCLUSIONS

Pope Did Not Go to Naples as Was Reported.

Rome, May 18.—One of the strangest of the many strange reports which spring up from time to time in Rome was that which represented Pope Pius X as having gone to Naples to comfort by his presence the poor sufferers who have been deprived of home and possessions by the eruption of Vesuvius. There was a more profitable foundation for this rumor than for most others concerning him. Persons worthy of belief had seen the carriages leave the precincts of the Vatican and moving towards the railway station. One of these vehicles—the largest of them—was completely enshrouded in canvas, and the wheels being taken off, was placed upon a lorry. It was a certainty to the onlookers, many of whom are sharp enough to see through greater obstacles, that the pope was in this carriage, and that he desired to withdraw himself from the public gaze.

There is no doubt that three of the pope's carriages did on the day in question leave the Vatican and were brought through the city to the railway station, but they were empty, and their destined journey was not to Naples, but to Milan. They had been sent to the exhibition, which is to open in that city, where they will be shown in the section devoted to "Retrospective Art" and the department of means of transport. These carriages have not been seen in the streets of Rome for the last thirty-five years.

A Roman paper gives an account of the pontifical train, which was built for Pius IX for railway journeys. It will figure also at the Milan exposition. It consists of three wagons, and was presented to Pius IX in 1858. One of the wagons is a parlor car and another an oratory. The salon, or parlor car, was richly decorated. Here a throne was placed and the walls of it were adorned with damask in which the papal arms were wrought, and very valuable paintings by modern masters—Jerome, Millet, for example—adorned this wagon.

The subsequent history of this train is suggestive of the modes of the Italian government in its dealings with pontifical property. After the fatal Sept. 20, 1870, these three wagons were left aside in the station of Santa Maria in Florence, where they remained to 1884. In 1885 another railway company—the Adriatic—came into possession of them, they neither being given or consigned to them, nor inventoried to them—these wagons were transferred to another Florentine station, and abandoned to the weather and to every chance event. It is impossible to describe the condition to which they were reduced, when the commission of the Milan exposition sought them out. Now the question has been brought up as to which party—the government or the commission, or the railway company—shall pay for the restorations necessary to fit these wagons for show in the exposition.

THE S.S.S. STANDARD TONIC

The ingredients of which S. S. S. is composed, and the method of combining and preparing them so that they gently and pleasantly build up and strengthen every part of the body, make it the ideal tonic for a disordered condition of the system. Every one feels the need of a tonic sometimes. The system seems to get "out of gear," the appetite becomes fickle, the energies are depressed, sleep is not restful or refreshing, and the entire body has a nervous, worn-out feeling. When the system is in this depleted, run-down condition it must be aided by a tonic, and S. S. S. is recognized everywhere as the standard. Being made entirely of roots, herbs and barks selected for their gentle action as well as their invigorating effect on the system, it will not disagreeably affect any of the delicate members or tissues as do most of the so-called tonics on the market which contain potash or some other harmful mineral ingredient. These derange the stomach and digestion, unfavorably affect the bowels or otherwise damage the health. S. S. S. tones up the stomach and digestion, improves the appetite, produces refreshing sleep, rids the body of that tired, run-down feeling, and supplies tone and vigor to the entire system. It re-establishes the healthy circulation of the blood, acts more promptly and gives better and more lasting results than any other tonic, and because of its vegetable purity is an absolutely safe medicine for young or old. S. S. S. acts admirably in cases of dyspepsia, indigestion and other stomach troubles, and after using it that uncomfortable feeling of fullness, dizziness or drowsiness, after eating, are no longer felt. Not only is S. S. S. the greatest of all tonics but possesses purifying and alterative properties, and if there is a taint in the blood it will promptly remove every trace and restore perfect health. In selecting your tonic for this year do not experiment but get S. S. S., the recognized standard.

MOUNT TOM'S BABY QUAKE

The Moodus Noises Recalled by the Quake in Connecticut.

Residents Thought Old Tom Was Starting on a Rampage.

East Haven, Conn., May 18.—Some of the residents of this town who were awakened early Tuesday morning of last week by the baby earthquake that shook up this place thought that old Mount Tom at Moodus was starting on another rampage, and that this region was to suffer the fate of San Francisco, or that possibly the old mountain, which for the last two hundred years or more has done nothing more serious than scare the residents hereabouts with an occasional bit of grumbling, was going to settle down to business and belch forth like Vesuvius.

Nothing of the kind happened and nobody fled the town from fear; but there was a great revival of stories of the various earthquakes which for the past two hundred years have visited this locality. The older inhabitants shook their heads and recalled the stories told them in their youth of the prophecy of the Englishman Steele, who, away back in 1750, fled to England, declaring that for years this region would be visited by strange noises and earthquakes.

The tale as told hereabouts a hundred years ago, and handed down from generation to generation, is that the Moodus noises, one of the accompaniments of the earthquakes here, were first noticed when Steele came to East Haddam and took up his residence with a prominent citizen named Knowlton. Queer stories were told of the visits made at night by Steele to Mount Tom, and finally Steele confided to his host that he had discovered a wonderful fossil in the mountain that he called a carbuncle. The stone, he said, was a large, white, round substance, resembling an ordinary stone in the light, but of great brilliancy at night.

One evening he brought the stone home and secreted it in the basement of the house. When darkness came on it began to shine with great brightness, and despite the fact that there were no windows or doors in the cellar the whole house was illuminated by its radiance, and neighbors came from far and near thinking the house was afire.

The following morning Steele and his wonderful gem disappeared. Nothing was ever heard from him afterward, and the story spread about that he was murdered on shipboard while on his way home to England.

Just before he left East Haddam he is reported to have told some of the villagers that the noises that had been heard in the neighborhood were caused by this stone, and prophesied that for ten or fifteen years there would be no recurrence of the noises or the earthquake shocks, but after that time they would begin to be heard again, because he was unable to get all the stone out of the mountain, and the portions left there would grow large enough in that time to cause more trouble for the inhabitants.

About fifteen years after he left the town, so the story goes, residents began to notice again the recurrence of the earthquake shocks and rumblings of the mountains that ever since have interested scientists.

There are those who take little credit in the gem story and place confidence in the old Indian theory of the trouble. East Haddam, according to those who are up in Indian lore, was named Morehemodus by the Indians, who before the coming of the white man used this as the favorite spot in Connecticut for their powwows.

Interpreted into English "Morehemodus" meant "Place of Many Noises." When the white man began to drive the Indians out of this valley the latter ascribed mutterings of the old mountains to the wrath of the Indian God at having to make way for the God of the white man.

In the early part of 1800 Prof. Benjamin Silliman of Yale became interested in the Moodus noises, and sought the aid of the Rev. Henry Chapman of East Haddam, a foremost clergyman of this region, in getting accurate information concerning the phenomenon, believing that the minister's version would be more accurate than that of the ordinary resident.

According to Mr. Chapman's report, the first severe shock of which the town of East Haddam had a record came on May 16, 1791, and was felt as far away as New York and Boston. This quake was so severe, according to Mr. Chapman, that Capt. Benedict, at Killingworth, twenty miles away, while pacing the deck of his schooner, which lay at anchor, saw the fish leap out of the water in every direction. One hundred shocks were counted that night.

In writing under date of Aug. 13, 1792, the Rev. Mr. Hosmer of Haddam gave an account of the occurrence, in which he attributed the noises to the work of the red men and their deviling influence. His letter, addressed to Mr. Pierce of Boston, after describing the terror that prevailed on that night, and subsequent nights when other shocks were felt here, closed as follows:

"I have been informed that this was a place where the Indians drove a prodigious trade at worshipping the devil. Now, whether there be anything diabolical in these things I know not; but this I know, that God Almighty is to be seen and trembled at in what has been often heard among us."

That nobody here need lie awake nights for fear that Mount Tom will kick up any rumpus is the opinion of Prof. William North Rice of Wesleyan university, who made a study of the Moodus noises and the earthquakes hereabouts. Only young, giddy mountains made trouble like that at San Francisco, according to him, and the old Connecticut hills are too staid to be put in this class.

"For years," said Prof. Rice, "there have been slight earthquakes in these regions and the so-called Moodus noises are light earthquake shocks. Wherever there is much folding and overlapping of the crust of the earth, there is apt to be an occasional shifting which will cause a shock to be felt on the surface.

"Where the mountains are old in geological times, as the hills in this region, for example, the readjustment is almost completed and the shifting will be slight and the earthquake resultant only a light one. On the Pacific coast, where the mountains are younger geologically, much more severe shocks may be expected as the rocks readjust themselves and become settled."

By the reckoning of Prof. Rice Mount Tom has been doing duty in the Connecticut valley since the paleozoic geological age, and is therefore two or three million years old, more or less. Consequently he has become pretty well settled and will not cut up the capers that his younger relatives on the Pacific coast may be expected to. When asked how he told the age of mountains, Prof. Rice said:

"High mountains are generally classed by geologists as young mountains, for as soon as a high mountain is formed the winds, rains and streams begin to wear it down, and unless a second earth disturbance throws it up again, as it gains in years it loses its height."

"WED IN MORNING OR NOT AT ALL."

London, May 18.—"Get married early in the morning" is the dictum of Canan Horsley, the well known vicar of St. Peter's church, Walworth, London, and an authority on social subjects. He has put his principles into practice in the case of his youngest daughter, who was married at half past eight in the morning to the Rev. R. Walter Lewis.

At half past nine the wedding breakfast was over and the bride and bridegroom had left for Cambridge, where the latter lives. Their honeymoon will not take place until a year after the marriage, in accordance with another belief of the canon.

The canon holds that "society weddings held, as they are, in the late morning and afternoon, are not performed according to the strict understanding of the service as shown by the Prayer Book."

"No newly married couple," said the canon, "should start away on their honeymoon until at least two months after their marriage. Let them go straight to their homes and settle down. Then when they know each other's moods and ways completely the honeymoon would be all the more enjoyable."

Morning marriages, it appears, came about in a curious manner. In the middle of the eighteenth century weddings were allowed to take place at any hour of the day or night. So many marriages of a morganatic character took place that stipulated hours became a necessity. Young bloods in their cups were frequently married to women far below them socially, and when sense and soberness returned were amazed to learn of the ceremonies.

A law was then passed to make all marriages illegal which did not take place between the hours of 8 and 12 in the morning, the only time when the gilded youth was likely to be sober.

In 1886 a bill was passed extending the hours from 3 a. m. to 3 p. m. This is in force at the present day and the majority of society weddings are held at either 2 o'clock or half past 2.

HOW BONI WAS CAUGHT.

Countess Introduced Detective as Friend of Gould Family.

Paris, May 18.—According to one of Count Boni deCastellane's legal representatives the only evidence that his wife has in her divorce suit is that of a man who passed here under the assumed name of Pilter.

He is really an employe of Byrne's detective agency of New York, this man says, and came as a friend of the Gould family, and acted as a tutor to the Castellane boys, his duty consisting of talking English to them, the countess declaring that they were talking French too much and losing their English.

The countess took Pilter everywhere and introduced him to all her friends. He was a good bridge player and became a great friend of Count Boni, who let him into much of his secret life, which Pilter revealed to the countess. The two women named as co-respondents have not put in an appearance. One of them has gone to London, and the other, who is a member of one of the most prominent families of Europe, has gone to Spain with her husband, where she will remain until July.

PRINCESS ENA'S WEDDING CAKE

Is Six Feet High and Weighs More Than 340 Pounds.

London, May 18.—Princess Ena's wedding cake, which was made here, has been completed and packed for shipment to Madrid. It will be the first royal wedding cake ever seen in Spain.

The English custom was introduced by King Alfonso as a compliment to his bride. The cake is six feet high, and weighs more than 340 pounds. It stands upon a huge silver salver, on which the bride's mother's wedding cake was placed. The cake consists of three glistening silver white tiers, and is forty-six inches in diameter at the base.

The lowest tier is divided into eight panels, separated by Corinthian columns, and is surmounted by Cupids disguised as postmen and messengers. The spaces between the columns are filled with panels of sugar work, representing Spanish vines. The panels are festooned with orange blossoms, white heather, myrtle and white roses. The flowers were chosen by Princess Ena.

There are four panels on the second tier. In the center of each is a shield with the monogram "A. V." surmounted by the Spanish crown.

Medallions, sprays of myrtle and tiny white roses embellish the third tier, on top of which is a beautiful group of children in white Parian marble, bearing aloft a vase holding a bouquet. Four long floral festoons reach from the top to the bottom tier.

A gold knife, with an ivory handle, two feet long, accompanies the cake, and will be used to cut it for presentation to the guests.

TO INCLUDE ASTRONOMY.

New Study Is Added to British Army Education.

London, May 18.—Practical astronomy will shortly become a part of the education of army officers holding any command from a company of woods.

The army council has decided to establish an observatory at Aldershot, and contractors are now busy erecting the building. The site chosen is in the South camp, near the hearquarters offices.

When the building is completed a powerful telescope will be mounted and the study of the stars will begin in earnest. The observatory will be in charge of the royal engineers, and it is expected that officers will assemble periodically for instruction.

Astronomical observations are of great importance in warfare by night, and Sir John French has already given it as his opinion that the important military operations of the future will be performed in darkness.

It will be remembered that Lord Wolseley was guided by the stars when he made his famous march to Tel-el-Kebir. The number of officers in the service who could perform a similar work with any accuracy is at present comparatively small.

BULL FIGHT EXCITEMENT.

Fierce Animals Make Short Work of Their Tormentors.

Madrid, May 18.—What is known as "temporade," or bullfighting season, has begun at Bexiers, in the southern Herault. The first performance of the Spanish professionals engaged were marked by numerous incidents of a sensational kind. The third bull let loose butted a toreador in the groin, and the man was carried out of the ring fainting. A matador, who was at the head of the cuadill was pursued to the barrier by the fifth bull. The man was lifted up in the animal's horns, tossed in the air, and his skull was fractured in the fall. He, too, was carried out of the ring in a pitiful plight, and owing to the injuries in his head, he may not recover. The police superintendent now interfered, wanted to stop the games, but the spectators strongly opposed him. A bull with horns rendered harmless by pads was then sent into the ring for the amateur toreadors and matadors, who are young men of the town, and who tried to imitate the Spaniards without running the same risks.

Postmaster Robbed.

G. W. Fouts, postmaster at Riverton, Iowa, nearly lost his life and was robbed of all comfort, according to his letter, which says: "For twenty years I had chronic liver complaint, which led to such a severe case of jaundice that even my finger nails turned yellow; when my doctor prescribed Electric Bitters; which cured me and have kept me well for eleven years." Sure cure for Biliousness, Neuralgia, Weakness and all Stomach, Liver, Kidney and Bladder derangements. A wonderful Tonic. At all drug stores. 50 cents.

TO VISIT CANNIBALS.

London Missionaries to Try to Convert Man Eaters.

Sydney, May 18.—The ferocious tribe of cannibals who inhabit Purari Delta, New Guinea, are to be visited by delegates from the London Missionary society with a view to their mental and moral reformation. They are known to be alert and daring men hunters, and, when on the warpath, savage and ferocious beyond description. They are cannibals of the most daring type, but not merely for the sake of procuring human flesh as animal food. Oftener than otherwise they seek for victims that they may get human blood for ceremonial purposes, and on such occasions, when victims from an alien tribe cannot be got, they find them among their own kin. This phase of cannibals is the most difficult to deal with from a missionary's standpoint. The deeply imbedded idea that human blood is essential in their ceremonial rites has to be uprooted. The London Missionary society has organized a company to develop industrially the more civilized portions of New Guinea.

REFUGE FOR THE JEWS.

Zangwill Points Out Need of Haven for His People.

London, May 18.—The Zionist movement is by no means dead. A letter from Mr. Chamberlain, promising to help any practical scheme to establish a Jewish "colony of refuge," was read at the inaugural meeting of the Jewish territorial organization, at the Steinway hall.

Mr. Lucien Wolf presided, and Israel Zangwill, Sir A. Conan Doyle, Lord Kinnaird, Gen. Sir Alfred Turner and Holman Hunt were among those present.

Mr. Zangwill, who moved a resolution pledging the branch to extend the work of the organization, said that the necessity of a Jewish land of refuge was so glaring, written as it has been in letters of blood across half a continent, that all Christendom should have combined with all Jewry to push forward their political negotiations. Under the inspiration of Zionists and territorialism, the Jewish masses have awakened to the notion of self-regeneration, he declared. In Russia the Jewish territorial organization counted among its adherents an organized group of 30,000 young men, who would lay down their lives for a Jewish land, and the Russian middle classes were planning their exodus. It only remained to find a suitable territory, with a favorable government. Although the negotiation had not yet reached a decisive stage, he remained unshaken in the belief that England would not refuse.

Sir A. Conan Doyle expressed the deepest sympathy with the scheme. That a race which had proved itself in comparison with its numbers to be the greatest upon the earth could look upon a map of the world, and could show no square yard that is called its own, must be a thing intolerable, he said.

ORE IS MOVING FAST.

Mines and Ore Roads Making Up for Lost Time.

Ore is now moving from the mines on the Minnesota ranges with the usual dispatch. The tie-up which the marine strike caused is now a thing of the past and all the open pit mines which were obliged to shut down when the boats were unable to move, have reopened again and are shipping big quanties of the brown stuff every day.

All the ore trains are in operation again. In fact, all the men in the Minnesota mining district who were forced into idleness by the strike are back in their accustomed places and earning wages once more.

Despite the time that was lost during the strike, it is thought that the ore shipments from the docks of the three roads tapping the Minnesota ranges will make a big total for the month of May. Boats are being loaded and gotten under way as fast as possible. No time is being lost either at the Head of the Lakes or at lower lake ports.

NATIONAL BISCUIT COMPANY

AGAINST CONSUMPTION.

A Fund is Sought for Pushing the Crusade in England.

London, May 18.—An interesting scheme has been put forward with the object of providing a permanent fund for pushing forward the crusade against consumption, and for the promotion of research into the causation and cure of cancer.

The magnitude of the scheme, which has been started by the "Practioner" and is national in character, may be gathered from the fact that it will provide $500,000 a year for its objects.

When inquiries were made at the special offices which have been opened on the Strand, an official cited that innumerable appeals for the help made by hospitals and societies which are fighting consumption and cancer.

"Every week wards or laboratories are closed from want of funds," he said.

"Many influential members of the medical profession are ready to combine with the co-operation of the nation.

"It is estimated that in this country one death in every eight is due to consumption, while 6 per cent of the total deaths registered among men, and more than 7 per cent among women, can be traced to the unknown cause of cancer."

MONKEY IN COURT CONVICTS MASTER.

Philadelphia, May 18.—A small monkey appeared as a witness in the Central police court to substantiate charges made by a policeman and several citizens that Pastonese Daniels, an organ grinder, treated it cruelly.

Daniels was put into the dock with his hand organ strapped over his back. Policeman McGowan and George McCord of No. 212 Juniper street testified that the man beat and cuffed the monkey time and again and knocked it down with his fist and afterward held it between his knees and cuffed it because it would not take pennies out of its pocket and hand them over.

During this time the little victim of Daniels' alleged cruelty was not in sight. "Where is the monk?" demanded the magistrate, and Daniels, by way of reply, began tugging at a chain and in a moment the head of the Simian came out of a pouch under the prisoner's coat. The little animal began squealing and clutched the side of the bag. Daniels tugged at the chain viciously. "Don't hang the poor thing," commanded the magistrate, but Daniels pulled as hard as ever at the chain and grabbed the monkey's feet to make it release its hold on the bag. The animal in anger gave a cry and bit Daniels on the thumb.

The prisoner stopped to suck the injured thumb and the monkey climbed back into the bag. Daniels then used more care and got the little Simian out of the bag. It was dressed in red. He put a cap on its head and let it down on the floor. The monkey immediately climbed up the wire grating of the prisoner's dock and jabbered angrily.

"That is sufficent evidence," commented the magistrate; "you don't know how to treat your pets; I'll fine you $10," and when Daniels was led back to the cage he added: "Officer, get that monkey a drink of water as soon as he is taken over to the cells."

Carlyle said: "Make yourself an honest man, and then you may be sure that there is one rascal less in the world." Also—read The Herald ads, and you may be sure that there is one less "easy mark" in the world.

WHOSE SAY-SO IS BEST?

With nearly all medicines put up for sale through druggists, one has to take the maker's say-so alone and exclusively as to their curative value. Of course, such testimony is not that of a disinterested party and accordingly is not to be given the same credit as if written from disinterested motives. Dr. Pierce's medicines, however, form a single and therefore striking exception to this rule. Their claims to the confidence of invalids does not rest solely upon their owners' and makers' say-so or praise. Their ingredients are matters of public knowledge, being printed on each separate bottle wrapper. Thus invalid sufferers are taken into Dr. Pierce's full confidence. Scores of leading medical men have written enough to fill volumes in praise of the curative value of the several ingredients entering into these well-known medicines. Amongst these writers we find such medical lights as Prof. Finley Ellingwood, M. D., of Bennett Medical College, Chicago; Prof. Hale, of the same city; Prof. Jno. M. Scudder, M. D., late of Cincinnati, Ohio; Prof. Jno. King, M. D., late of Cincinnati, Ohio; Dr. Grover Coe, of New York; Dr. Bartholow and scores of others equally eminent.

The writings of these have been for the various medical journals and for publication in standard medical books for professional reading and instruction, and hence are the more valuable as they relate to Dr. Pierce's medicines, since the writers did not know that they were endorsing and recommending articles that enter into the composition of these medicines and had no personal interest whatever therein. Hence, their great value as endorsements.

A brief synopsis, of a small part only, of these extensive writings, which apply to the several ingredients entering into Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery—the world-famed remedy for weak stomach, or dyspepsia, torpid or congested liver, biliousness, ulceration of stomach and bowels and kindred ailments—has been compiled for publication in book form. These extracts also treat of the several ingredients entering into the composition of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription for weak, over-worked, "run-down," debilitated, nervous women, who find in it a priceless boon.

Send your name and address by postal card or letter, with request for this little book, to Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y., and it will be mailed free to your address. From it you will learn why "Golden Medical Discovery" cures catarrh of the nasal passages, even though of years' standing. It is a most potent constitutional remedy for this terribly common and generally unsuccessfully treated malady. The cure will be facilitated if Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy be employed to cleanse out the nasal passages at the same time that the "Discovery" is employed for the constitutional treatment.

The "Discovery" is equally efficient in the cure of catarrh of the stomach and bowels, and in cases of ulceration of these organs. Read what Doctors King, Scudder, Grover Coe, and others say of the curative properties of Golden Seal root and of Stone root in cases of the above diseases. Both these roots are important ingredients of "Golden Medical Discovery." From the writings of these same authors you will learn, why the "Golden Medical Discovery" cures chronic, or lingering ailments of the throat and bronchia attended with hoarseness, cough, soreness and kindred symptoms. Several of the ingredients in the "Golden Medical Discovery" are highly recommended for their specific, curative effects in laryngitis, or "Speakers' sore throat," as well as in incipient consumption and obstinate, lingering coughs, which, if neglected or badly treated, are apt to end in consumption.

From the same little book you may learn why Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription cures the worst cases of female weakness, prolapsus, anti-version and retro-version and corrects irregularities, cures painfull periods, dries up disagreeable and weakening drains, sometimes known as pelvic catarrh, and why inflammation of the ovaries and a multitude of other diseases peculiar to women, readily yield to its marvelous curative potency. Bear in mind, it is not a patent nor even a secret medicine, but the "Favorite Prescription" of a regularly educated physician, of large experience in the cure of woman's peculiar ailments, who frankly and cheerfully takes his patients into his full confidence by telling them just what his "Prescription" is composed of. Of no other medicine put up for woman's special maladies and sold through druggists, can it be said that the maker is not afraid to deal thus frankly, openly and honorably, by letting every patient using the same know exactly what she is taking.

That every ingredient entering into Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription has the endorsement of the leading medical writers of the age amply attests its harmless character as well as its sterling curative value. Send your address for the little book and read what some of the most eminent medical men of this century say of the curative properties contained in the several ingredients which go to make up Dr. Pierce's leading medicines. No other medicines are backed up by such marvelous, disinterested, professional endorsements. This one fact is worth more and should have more weight in determining whether these non-secret medicines, or some secret compounds without professional endorsement and with only the makers' praise to recommend them, are best and most likely to effect important cures.

In favor of Dr. Pierce's medicines is the frank, confiding, open statement of their full composition, giving every ingredient in plain English, without fear of successful criticism and with confidence that the good sense of the afflicted will lead them to appreciate this honorable manner of confiding to them what they are taking into their stomachs when making use of these medicines.

Dr. Pierce's medicines are made from harmless but efficient medicinal roots found growing in our American forests. The Indians knew of the marvelous curative value of some of these roots and imparted that knowledge to some of the friendlier whites, and gradually some of the more progressive physicians came to test and use them, and ever since they have grown in favor by reason of their superior curative virtues and their safe and harmless qualities. The little free book mentioned in the preceding column will tell you all about the properties and uses of these most valuable medicinal roots. Send for it now.

Your druggists sells the "FAVORITE PRESCRIPTION" and also that famous alterative, blood purifier and stomach tonic, the "GOLDEN MEDICAL DISCOVERY." Write to Dr. Pierce about your case. He is an experienced physician and will treat your case as confidential and without charge for correspondence. Address him at the Invalids' Hotel and Surgical Institute, Buffalo, N. Y., of which he is chief consulting physician.

It is as easy to be well as ill—and much more comfortable. Constipation is the cause of many forms of illness. Doctor Pierce's Pleasant Pellets cure constipation. They are tiny, sugar-coated granules. One little "Pellet" is a gentle laxative, two a mild cathartic. All dealers in medicines sell them.

Dr. Pierce's 1000-page illustrated book, "The Common Sense Medical Adviser," is sent free in paper covers on receipt of 21 one-cent stamps to pay the cost of mailing only. For 31 stamps the cloth-bound volume will be sent. It was formerly sold for $1.50 per copy. Address Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y.

TRACING THE EARTHQUAKE

Geologists Hold That the San Bruno Fault Was Responsible.

State Commission Gathers Data—Earth's Crust Shifted Six Feet.

Oakland, Cal., May 18.—"What caused the earthquake of April 18?" and "Where did it come from?" are questions which, quite naturally, are being asked pretty generally out here. Never before has the opportunity for discovering the geological disturbances which cause at least some earthquakes presented itself as in this case. The geology of the coast ranges of California, and especially of San Francisco peninsula, has been of great interest to local scientists for years past, and it is safe to say that nearly every foot of the ground has been inspected and measured and surveyed and tapped over with the geologist's hammer pretty carefully. Almost immediately after the shock the opinion was expressed that the terrific shaking up had been due to a more or less local cause.

Acting promptly and with the consent of the national government, Governor Pardee appointed a state earthquake commission within a few days succeeding the disaster. The commission is composed of Profs. A. C. Lawson, chairman; A. O. Leuschener, secretary; G. K. Gilbert, Fielding Reid, John C. Brainer, George Davidson, Charles Burkhalter and W. W. Campbell. A better choice would have been difficult, as nearly all of these are thoroughly conversant with the topography and geology of the coast.

They met within the week of the earthquake, organized and laid out certain definite plans for work. Some took up the field work, while others devoted themselves to the preparation of blanks for securing data from all parts of the state, which reports will later on be sifted, sorted and compiled.

The mistake has been made very generally by the public of calling this the San Francisco earthquake, whereas it was felt over large areas of the state. These blanks are being sent to all agents of the various railroads throughout the state, to all telegraph and telephone operators and to superintendents of or teachers in the schools. Many thousand reports will be received and thus most valuable inforamtion will be secured. It will be many weeks, if not months, before the commission is prepared to make a full and official report, but much general information has already been gathered, and doubtless most of it will be found eventually to coverrespond fairly with the final and official report.

From notes made by Prof. Leuschener at the students' observatory, University of California, it was learned that the first shock began violently, and without the usual preliminary slight shock, at 5:12:38, Pacific standard time, though very mild disturbances were noted about half a minute earlier. The first portion of the main shock lasted forty seconds, then greatly diminished for ten seconds, and became violent for twenty-five seconds more, thus lasting in all something over one minute. The direction of motion was from southeast to northwest.

It is interesting to note here that the records of the two previous severe shocks—those of 1868 and 1838—show the same general direction opposite to the movements of the hands of the clock. The first movement of the earth was due west and nearly half an inch in amount, which was also about the extent of motion in the northwesterly direction. The vertical motions was at times quite sudden and violent, and its maximum amount at the point of observation was eighty-tenths of an inch.

The students' observatory is somewhat out of the part where greatest movements are noted, so displacements exceeding these figures undoubtedly occurred at other points. Indeed, in some places heavy objects of smooth surfaces were displaced fully three inches, indicating a movement of the earth of that amount. Estimating the time factor carefully, the earth wave is found to have traveled, roughly, two inches per second, which is really very slow motion. It was this slowness that was the saving factor of the shock, for had the waves of disturbance been equally great and more rapid, hardly anything would have been left standing.

The fact that the large mains carrying water from the distant watersheds and reservoirs to the city had been broken at once led to inspection, and this disclosed the geologists to the section most interesting and promising most returns for careful study. This is what is known geologically as the San Bruno fault. Fortunately this has been a special object of study by Prof. Lawson for years past and he has explored and mapped and measured the fault for many miles, and traced its almost unbroken course up and down the state. It can be traced for nearly 99 miles.

An almost straight line passing through Batinsa bay to the north of San Francisco under the coast waters to Mussel Rock, and thence again southeasterly, passing through Salinas and avoiding Santa Barbara, will almost exactly mark the San Bruno fault. Faults in the earth's crust are caused by the lateral or vertical stresses from cooling in the early stages of formation, or to pressure during the more recent years of earth history.

Faults formed during what geologsits consider recent periods are almost always found near to the coast lines of the great oceans, and are due, according to the theory which finds most favor with geologists, to the greatly increased prussure caused by a deposit of sand and silt on the ocean's floor and the tremendously increased pressure which in time, results.

As these deposits have formed, water has been included between the particles and pressure tends to squeeez it out. When this happens a more or less sudden jar occurs and a slight earthquake results. If the jar is sufficiently strong to cause a separation or a sliding in the vicinity of the fault, then this produces a superinduced jar or jolt and a more violent earthquake is noted.

The jarring due to settling or to the movements of strata at the point of faults sets up waves in the eatrh crust. Where the soil is loose or marshy or where the land has been made by filling in marshy ground, these waves are transmitted much as are waves in water or vibrations in jelly. At times these waves meet some more highly resistant mass, such as a deeply rooted mountain range, and are then reflected backward. Where wave crests of propagation meet similar waves of reflection, the resultant disturbance is very great, while at intermediate points it may be very much less marked or, indeed, unappreciable. Thus, in the recent earthquake in California violent jars were felt in various parts of the state remote from the probable point of origin by areas in which little, if any, seismic disturbance was noted. Such a severe manifestation has been reported from Ferndale, in the extreme northerly part of the state, and also in places as far east as Nevada. How far to the south and southeast more or less severe quakes may have been noted is not yet known.

Sufficient is now known to demonstrate that the severe earthquake of April 18 was due to a sliding of the San Bruno fault. whether or not this was its original cause, or whether there was some antecedent jar that caused the sliding of the San Bruno fault, is not known, and, indeed, may never be fully explained. So far as the immediate interest of Californians is concerned, however, the injury done to the state may safely be charged to the sliding at the San Bruna fault.

Geological changes, more or less similar but of vastly greater magnitude, which have occurred in prehistoric times, have resulted in the formation, along the axis of the San Bruna fault, of what is known as a structural valley. This valley, with its nestling lakes, San Andreas and Crystal Springs, and its excellent watersheds, was naturally taken by the Spring Valley Water company many years ago for one of its principal sources of water supply for the City of San Francisco. Dams at the lower end of this natural valley impounded enormous quantities of water and transformed the valley of the San Bruno fault into a vast reservoir. From it the main aqueduct to the city was a run.

Unfortunately for the city, these water mains were laid out so as to cross the San Bruno fault near the northern end of the structural valley at an angle of about 45 deg. When the earthquake came nothing could save them. No matter what their construction might have been, the very great shifting which occurred would have produced the same result. They were cut as though by a huge knife. The terrific lateral pressure of the Pacific ocean, thrusting against the land, produced a longitudinal sliding at and along the San Bruno fault.

The maximum slide was approximately six feet. All pipes and pipe lines were shaved off. Where fences crossed the fault the sections on either side are displaced many feet. The whole of the western fragment seems to have been moved forward toward the north-northwest.

Everything on or near the line of this fault suffered severely. Stanford university was near it and is almost a ruin. Salinus city, nearly in its path, is laid waste. The large sugar plant below Salinus, built by Mr. Spreckles, has buckled up, and the huge steel beams shortened up a foot or two. San Francisco lay somewhat to the north and east of the fault and suffered very severely in places. Here in some localities the jelly-like shaking was most marked, and wherever in the city was soft soil, or filled-in land, there great damage resulted.

On the other hand, the experience has demonstrated that even very lare buildings may be built upon such soil, if the foundations are constructed with the nature of the soil and the liability to earthquakes ever in mind. For example, the ferry building is built on piles sunk in the mud of the bay; yet the floor of the building is perfectly level, and the building itself in all essentials is undamaged. But the foundations of the ferry building were put in to stay. There are seventy-two groups of sixty piles eighty feet long, driven down into the hard, blue clay. On top of these groups of piles concrete arches were built, and on these arches rests the ferry building, a structure of steel and cement. When the earthquake came this building, practically a solid mass from foundation to top, vibrated as a unit, and, except for the splitting off of some of the stone casing, is undamaged.

Exactly which portion of the land on either side of the fault moved and to what extent are questions which cannot now be answered. It may be that the eastern section has moved south and brought San Francisco a few feet nearer to Los Angeles. Or it may be—and this seems more probable—that the western fragment moved north. The direction of the fault is almost northwest. The greatest thrust was probably from the Pacific and in a direction almost due east or somewhat north of east. This being the case, the slide, which was, so far as now known, entirely a longitudinal one and without vertical movement, would naturally have been along the line of least resistance. In other words, it would seem clearly more easy for the western fragment to move northward than for all the land to the east to move southward.

The government has already been requested to undertake this work of relocation, and doubtless it will be done in teh course of time.

Of course there have been many changes and land shifts noted in addition to those observed along the San Bruno fault, but the general opinion of those who have studied the problem seems to be that all such lesser movements, as, for instance, the sliding of secondary faults which branch from the San Bruno, are resultants and not causes. In places such secondary faults which meet the San Bruno at an acute angle give the appearance of having been thrust wedge-like north into the land above. Here the knowledge gained by Prof. Brainer in years past will be of the greatest value, as the measurements and surveys now being carried on will tend to clear up many of these now obscure points, particularly when taken in conjunction with the work of the coast survey in re-establishing the exact location of what are called points.

An interesting feature, and one going to support the theory that the pressure of slowly deposited sediment causes a sinking of the ocean bed and a squeezing out of the contained moisture, is the fact that at various places along the coast, and particularly where the San Bruno fault disappears into the ocean, muddy water has been noted by navigators. It is believed by many geologists that the earthquakes of 1868 and 1838, as well as the last one, were due to the same cause—a slipping along the San Bruno fault. Of course, it is doubtful if this theory can be absolutely demonstrated, but there is certainly very strong presumptive evidence of it. All three shocks were of the same general character, and the area of greatest severity in all was practically the same. Moreover, the direction of motion was almost exactly the same—from south-southeast to north-northwest.

The lessons to be studied from the work of the earthquake commission, even so far as it has gone at the present time, seem clear. Earthquakes may occur at any time owing to the same causes which have produced the three severe ones in the years noted. The main aqueducts of the Spring Valley company or any other main water feeds should not cross the line of the San Bruno fault, but should be constructed to the east of it. The jelly-like shaking of all soft filled or marshy land is absolutely fatal to any structure not based upon foundations which go down to solid ground and in which the foundations and superstructure are not a solid unit. No danger is to be anticipated where these principles of building solid foundations and properly keying buildings are followed. There is no reason why the city cannot be made not only earthquake proof but also almost fireproof if it be rebuilt on proper lines and with due thought to the great possibilities of the San Bruno fault.

A properly constructed building may be likened to a springy pole set solidly in the ground. It may be caused to vibrate, but will be undamaged, whereas a poorly constructed building, or one having insecure foundations placed in a soft soil or filled land, may be regarded as a jointed rod with loosely hinged joints. It will topple over on the slightest jar.

A member of the commission has suggested that the insurance companies can do much to secure a proper following of these desiderata in the reconstruction of the city, if they will refuse to assume any risks upon buildings not constructed along these lines, and showing due regard to the possibilities of the Cyclops residing in the San Bruno fault.

THE NEW STEEL CITY IN INDIANA

Indianapolis, May 18.—Preliminary work on the biggest steel plant that the world has ever known has been begun on the site of the new town of Gary, in Lake county, and every branch of it is to be pushed to completion as rapidly as possible. Two hundred men and 100 teams are now at work every day laying out the streets and avenues of the new city, making soundings for the foundations of the buildings and getting everything in readiness for the army of workmen that will soon invade the place and begin the work of construction.

The surveyors have completed the preliminary engineering work. The new city will be built under the supervision of A. F. Knotts, while the construction of the steel plants will be superintended by Second Vice-President Thorpe of the United States Steel corporation.

The test holes for the plant, which will give employment to 25,000 to 30,000 men, have been bored and show sand to fifty feet and clay at seventy feet. The surveys have also been made for streets.

There will be two principal streets in the city, running at right angles to each other, one to be known as Broadway and the other as Fifth avenue. Each will be 100 feet wide and paved with vitrified brick.

The city is expected to have a population of at least 100,000 when the work of manufacturing steel begins, and the plans provide for the accommodation of that number of people with additional ground platted for enlargements of the town as they may become necessary.

The railroad companies have already let contracts for switches to the site of the new works, and these are to be constructed at once; and the material for the thousands of houses is to be placed upon the ground ready for building. Sewers, electric lighting and waterworks have been provided for in the plans, and work on these plants will be carried on simultaneously with the erection of homes for the workmen and the construction of the big steel plant.

There will be no saloons in the town of Gary, but saloon men have bought ground on the outskirts of the corporation's holdings and are preparing to erect houses.

The Indiana congressmen have been disappointed by the action of the war department, which has refused to entertain the project of a deep water harbor at Indiana Harbor for the convenience of the industry, but there are indications that the corporation will undertake this work itself, as it is indispensable that the harbor shall be so enlarged as to admit the largest class of vessels employed in the lake trade.

At any rate, soundings have been made in Lake Michigan, reaching out from Gary, and it is the announced intention to construct one of the finest deep water harbors between Chicago and Michigan City. This work appears to be undertaken by the Gary Land company, an organization composed of the officers of the United States Steel corporation.

It is said that the charter of the corporation does not give the right to engage in land speculations or the real estate business, except to the extent of land absolutely necessary for its plants, and the Gary Land company was organized in order to overcome this difficulty, it being impossible to lay out and build the town under the corporation's charter.

There has been a steady stream of investors in Gary this week—men who want to establish business houses of different kinds—and many locations have been selected, one of them being for a bank with $250,000 capital that will be ready to open business when the first whistle at the new plant calls its employes to work. Property at Tolleston, which is on the east outskirts of Gary, has taken a sudden jump owing to the fact that many investors are seeking holdings, on the theory that there will be an overflow from Gary.

For the present, however, the people of Tolleston do not expect other advantage than will come with employment in the new city, but every artisan is already under contract for work in some capacity at Gary.

A. F. Knotts, who will have charge of the construction of the new city, was mayor of Hammond for two terms. He often urged upon the people of Hammond the necessity of beautifying the city and of providing parks for the recreation of the working people, and he is going to carry out his ideas in the new city.

One of the first things after the surveys after the streets were completed was to provide for shade trees and for many kinds of open air amusements. The plat shows a number of parks, and these are to be beautified with flowers and fountains.

THE SITUATION IS GRAVE IN NATAL

Johannesburg, May 18.—The situation created by the successful escape of the rebel chief, Bambaata, from his own location near Greytown, in the Nkandhla district of Zululand, is undoubtedly becoming one of increasing gravity, owing to the action of the Zulu chiefs in that vicinity. There are minor differences of details between the various reports transmitted from Natal, but it is apparent that at least two chiefs of authority, Siganamdi and N'Dubi have flatly refused to co-operate with the authorities in their endeavors to capture Bambaata and his followers.

Even more serious are the reports that these chiefs actively helped Bambaata in his flight after he crossed the Tugela, and that they have threatened Hashi, a minor but loyal chief, with the wiping out of himself and his tribe unless he joins in their plans, which, according to Hashi, include a deliberate attack upon Nkandhla and Eshowe. Siganamdi has long been supected of harboring refugees in the dense thickets of the Nkandhla forest. He is said to be a centenarian, and an associate not only of Cetowayo, but even of Dingaan, the ferocious tyrant whom the Boers defeated seventy years ago. He is one of the old school of Zulu warriors, and it is believed that he feels that if his end is to come soon he might as well die fighting the white man as in any other direction. That the trouble has so far extended beyond the chiefs mentioned there is no evidence.

A report from Melmoth declares that the Zulus of that district are holding a large meeting of armed natives at a place called N'Vomba. The white population have gone into laager at Nkandhla, Eshowe and Melmoth.

The native troubles in the South African colonies are generally looked upon in much the same way as the appearance of a few cases of cholera in a home city are regarded. Beyond the widespread Kaffir discontent that has existed for a considerable time, there is nothing in the situation to cause a very gloomy outlook at present, but at the same time it cannot be denied that there are elements that do not bode well for the future. For instance, every one in the colonias has looked upon Dinizulu as a rock of loyalty, whereas now it begins to appear that he cannot be depended upon. The Zulus as a general thing respect Dinizulu as a rock of loyalty to their ancient customs and religions, and it can readily be seen that in a period of storm and stress he is more likely to climb down on the native side of the fence than on the English side.

However, St. Paul's church at Durban was not burned down in this way, as has been reported. In fact, there is a strong suspicion that natives started the fire, which broke out about 2 o'clock in the morning. The church was one of the oldest in South Africa, contained the memorial to the plucky Dick King, whose name will be remembered as long as Durban lasts. The Dick King cabinet was smashed, there is evidence that the building was looted before it was fired. Nothing escaped total ruin, and the church is a loss, not to Durban alone, but to the colony.

The Watch-Dog in your Vest Pocket

YOU can buy Health Insurance now.

Several good "Accident" Companies sell it.

Sixty dollars per year will bring you $25.00 per week, for every week you are Sick.

But, your time alone may be worth far more than that.

And $200 per week might not pay for your suffering.

That's why "Cascaret" Insurance which prevents Sickness, is worth ten times as much money as other "Health" Insurance.

Yet "Cascaret Insurance" will cost you less than Ten Cents a week.

That gives you a "Vest Pocket" Box to carry constantly.

"Indigestion" means food eaten but only partially digested.

"Constipation" means food retained in the body undigested too long, till it decays.

It then supplies the poisons of decay to the system, in place of the nourishment it might have supplied.

Isn't that a tremendous handicap worth insuring against?

What does it cost to Cure Constipation or Indigestion, with their train of small and great ills, and to Insure against a return of them?

Not so very much.

One 10 cent box of Cascarets per week, at most, perhaps half that.

One candy tablet night and morning, taken regularly for a short time, is warranted to cure the worst case of Constipation or Indigestion that walks the earth.

* * *

One tablet taken whenever you suspect you need it will insure you against 90 per cent of all other ills likely to attack you.

Because 90 per cent of these ills begin In the Bowels, or exist through poor Nutrition.

Cascarets don't purge, don't weaken, don't irritate, nor upset your stomach.

No,—they act like Exercise on the Bowels, instead.

They stimulate the Bowel-Muscles to contract and propel the Food naturally past the little valves that mix Digestive Juices with Food.

They strengthen these Bowel-Muscles by exercising them.

* * *

The time to take a Cascaret is the very minute you suspect you need one.

—When your tongue is coated a little.

—When your breath is not above suspicion.

—When your head feels dull, dizzy, or achy.

—When you have eaten too heartily, or too rapidly.

—When you have drunk more than was good for your digestion.

—When you have a touch of Heartburn, Gas-belching, Acid-rising-in-throat, or a Coming-on-Cold.

DECLINE IN WHEAT

Moderate Setback Follows Strong Advance of Previous Day.

Modern Miller Is Bullish —Flax Dull and Slightly Lower.

Duluth Board of Trade, May 18.—Wheat was somewhat lower today. The sharp advance of yesterday brought some profit takers into the market this morning when the Argentine shipments proved to be liberal and Liverpool was lower. The weather, however, is still unfavorable and when the Modern Miller report came out admitting that the weather is too dry in parts of the winter wheat country, there was some buying that advanced prices. It was only temporary, however, and prices at the close were practically at their bottom point.

The Liverpool market closed ¼d to ⅜d higher; Paris, ¼c lower to ¼c higher; Antwerp, unchanged to ⅝c higher, and Berlin and Budapest, ¼c higher.

The May option closed ⅝c lower in Duluth, a shade off in Chicago, ¾c higher in Minneapolis, ½c lower in New York, 1c higher in St. Louis and ½c lower in Kansas City. The July option closed ⅜c lower in Duluth, ⅜-½c lower in Chicago, ⅝c lower in Minneapolis, ½c lower in New York, ¼-⅝c lower in St. Louis and ¼c lower in Kansas City.

The Modern Miller had this to say: "Drought conditions still prevail over a large part of the winter wheat belt. Rains have fallen in Texas, Oklahoma, Nebraska and parts of Kansas, but there has been no general rainfall in the latter state and moisture is urgently needed in dry districts. In Missouri and east of the Missouri river, including Indiana, Ohio and the country south of the Ohio river the plant is suffering and where already weakened by previous unfavorable conditions or on thin land, great damage is feared. Too much rain has fallen in Texas and there is evidence of rust, but with favorable weather a much larger crop than last year is expected. In Oklahoma and Nebraska, conditions are excellent. Rains have relieved drought in the Pacific Northwest."

Corn was lower, being off ⅛-¼d in Liverpool and ¼c for the July option in Chicago. July oats in Chicago fell ⅜-⅝c.

Primary receipts of wheat were 285,000 bus., last year 344,000 bus. Shipments 130,000 bus., last year 240,000 bus. Clearances of wheat and flour aggregated 57,000 bus.

Argentine shipments of wheat this week were 3,112,000 bus., against 3,104,000 bus., last week and 1,784,000 bus., last year.

Primary receipts of corn were 357,000 bus., last year 146,000 bus. Shipments 108,000 bus., last year 372,000 bus. Clearances of corn were 27,000. Argentine shipments of corn were 2,803,000 bus., against 2,234,000 bus., last week and 2,186,000 bus., last year.

Wheat was fairly active in the Duluth market, steady during the first part of the session but falling off toward the close. May wheat opened unchanged at 83¾c and closed at 83⅝c, a loss of ⅛c from yesterday. July wheat opened ¼c lower at 83¾c, advanced to 84c at 10:10, fell off to 83⅝c at 10:40, rallied to 84⅛c at 11:50, declined to 83⅝c at 12:10, advanced to 83¾c at 1 o'clock and fell off at the close to 83⅝c, a loss of ⅜c from yesterday. September wheat opened ⅛c lower at 81c, advanced to 81⅛c and fell off to the close, which was 80⅝c, a loss of ½c from yesterday.

Flax was quiet, with slightly weaker prices. Prices were 1¼c higher in Antwerp and unchanged in London. The foreigners have not been buying much flax in the Duluth market during the past few days. They have been receiving flax already bought and that probably is the reason for their inactivity as buyers on this side. May flax opened ⅛c higher at $1.12¾, fell off to $1.10, rallied to $1.16¼ and closed at that price, a loss of ¼c from yesterday. July flax opened unchanged at $1.17¾, declined to $1.17, rallied to $1.17⅝ and closed at $1.17¼, a loss of ¼c from yesterday.

September flax opened ⅛c higher at $1.17¾, declined to $1.16¾, rallied to $1.17¼ and closed at $1.17, a loss of ½c from yesterday. October flax opened unchanged at $1.16, fell off to $1.15¼, rallied to $1.15¾ and closed at that price, a loss of ¼c from yesterday.

May oats and oats to arrive and on track were ⅜c lower and the other coarse grains unchanged.

Following were the closing prices:

Wheat to arrive: No. 1 Northern, 83⅝c; No. 2 Northern, 81¾c; on track: No. 1 Northern, 83⅝c; No. 2 Northern, 81¾c; May, 83⅝c; July, 83¾c; September, 80⅝c; Durum No. 1, 75½c; No. 2, 72½c. Flax to arrive, $1.16¼; flax on track, $1.16¼; May, $1.16¼; July, $1.17½; September, $1.17; October, $1.15¾. Oats to arrive, 32⅝c; oats on track, 32⅜c; May, 32⅝c. Rye, 57c; barley, 37-45c.

Cars inspected: Wheat, 16; last year, 8; oats, 1; flax, 6; last year, 1.

THE CHICAGO MARKET.

Considerable Profit Taking Causes Weak Opening in Wheat.

Chicago, May 18.—The local wheat market opened weak this morning. There was considerable profit-taking by local longs and prices at Liverpool were reported to be somewhat lower, despite the sharp advance of yesterday on the local market. The decline at Liverpool was attributed to increased shipments from Argentina. July opened ¼c to ⅝c lower at 82½@82¾ and sold down to 82⅜c. Minneapolis, Duluth and Chicago reported receipts 150 cars against 123 cars last week and 161 cars a year ago.

The corn market was weak on steady cables and cooler weather in the corn belt. There was general selling on the part of commission houses and pit traders, but the demand was not urgent. July opened ⅜c to ⅝c lower at 47¼c to 47½c, and for a time held within the opening range. Local receipts were 139 cars, with 59 of contract grade.

The oats market was inclined to be weak in sympathy with other grain. A large amount of profit-taking also depressed prices. July opened ¼c to ⅝c lower at 32⅝c to 32¾c and held steady for a time within these figures. Local receipts were 110 cars.

The provisions market was quiet and steady, based principally on a steady market for live hogs. July pork opened 2½c higher at $15.77½. Lard was a shade lower to a shade higher at $8.72½@8.75. Ribs were 2½c lower at $9.02½.

Asks for Directed Verdict.

Only one civil case was on trial in the district court today, that of Berneche against Hilliard for $10,000 for injuries alleged to have been received while the former was employed on a building by the latter. The jurors were given a little vacation in the case when they were excused during the morning session, while the attorneys argued over the motion of Mr. Hilliard for a directed verdict in his favor. All of the evidence has been put in, the defense having called but two or three witnesses, when the motion was made to direct the verdict.

DECLINES IN STOCKS

Nearly All Show Losses, Except Atchison and Reading.

Bear Operators Found Little Opposition in Depressing Prices.

New York, May 18.—Opening prices in the stock market today were inclined to sag under a light volume of offerings. A rise of ½ in Atchison was the only exception amongst the prominent market leaders. Anaconda fell 2, Chicago Terminal 1⅛ and Northern Pacific a point.

Bear operators found that they met no serious opposition in depressing prices and put out enough stock to drive the list down about a point. Pennsylvania, St. Paul, Union Pacific and the principal metal stock were heavily sold. The market quieted at 11 o'clock and was becoming steadier. Anaconda fell off 4½; Northern Pacific, 2; Sugar, 1⅜; Pennsylvania and Tennessee Coal, 1½; Union Pacific, Locomotive and Lead, 1¼, and St. Paul, Delaware & Hudson, New York Central, Baltimore & Ohio, Smelting, Colorado Fuel, Distillers Securities and Central Leather, 1.

There was a slow movement toward recovery led by Reading, which was lifted ½ over last night. Trading was very dull on the rally. Delaware & Hudson fell 2 and Southern Pacific, Kansas City Southern, American Car and Pressed Steel Car, 1.2 Bonds were steady.

The Cotton Market.

New York, May 18.—The cotton market opened steady at an advance of 1@3 points on covering and some fresh buying for long account inspired by steady cables and the continued large spot business in the English market, where 15,000 bales were sold at a decline of 1 point. After the opening, prices ruled rather irregular and in the middle of the morning were about unchanged to 2 points lower, with the tone fairly steady at the decline.

BISBEES HAVE A BETTER TONE

Prices Are Stronger in Duluth—Brokers' Wires Down.

The high wind played havoc with the telegraph wires entering Duluth today, and as a result the closing quotations from the Boston exchange were not to be had at any of the brokers' offices up to 3 o'clock. Copper stocks were about unchanged at the opening. North Butte opened at $92.62½, declined to $91.75 and rallied to $93. Amalgamated opened at $103.75, advanced to $110 and declined to $109.37½.

Anaconda opened at $271, advanced to $271.50, declined to $268.50 and rallied to $270. Butte Coalition was $33.50 bid and $34 asked, and Calumet & Arizona sold at $13, United Copper opened at $68.12½, declined to $63.75 and rallied to $64.

Calumet & Pittsburg, Denn-Arizona and Junction were the leaders among the Bisbees. Calumet & Pittsburg sold at $30 and closed in Duluth at $30 bid, Denn-Arizona at $14 and closed at $14 asked, Junction at $25.50 and closed at $25.50 bid, Lake Superior & Pittsburg at $33.50 and closed at $33.50 asked, and Pittsburg & Duluth closed at $19.25 bid.

Black Mountain closed in Duluth at $10 bid and $10.50 asked, Warren at $15.25 bid, Kewcenaw at $10.25 bid and $10.75 asked. Copper Queen of Idaho sold at $2 and closed at $2 bid, and Ophir Tunnel closed at 17 cents bid and 19 cents asked.

AMENDMENT BY TELLER

The Rate Bill Completed and All Ready to Pass.

Washington, May 19.—When the railroad rate bill was taken up today the senate resumed consideration of the Teller amendment striking out of provisions giving to the interstate commerce commission power to prescribe rates, the words "in its judgment."

The senate struck out of the rate making provision of the rate bill the words "in its judgment," yeas, 50; nays, 24.

At 1:50 the rate bill was completed and was ready to pass when Mr. Raynor took the floor.

Senator Raynor said he expected the president to change his opinion again before the bill was finally enacted and get back to the Long amendment. There is no telling but that in a few days some new Chandler of fortune might get possession of the president and get him back to the original terminus. The president resembled a kaleidoscope. He went tearing through space oblivious of where he came from and with no conception of where he was going. He claimed the Allison court review amendment destroyed the bill and deplored the president's interference.

FAWCETT GETS BIG CONTRACT

Will Erect Handsome $30,000 Residence for D. G. Cutler.

The contract for D. G. Cutler's new residence at the southwest corner of Twenty-third avenue east and Superior street has been awarded to Hugh Fawcett. Work on the foundation is to be started immediately and the building is to be completed ready for occupancy early in 1907. The cost of the building is not made public, but it is understood that it will be in the neighborhood of $30,000.

The house will be a three-story sixteen room structure with a ground size of 50 by 80 feet. It will be built of limestone and along the lines of English country style of architecture, the designs having been made by Bray & Nystrom, the architects.

It is claimed that the building will be one of the most artistic of the East end residences that have been erected in recent years.

GALVANIC SOAP

Has no equal. There are hundreds of laundry soaps, but Galvanic is the only one which has brought joy to the home on wash day. It has been imitated, but has never been equalled.

GALVANIC may be used in cold or hot water. Beware of soaps that cannot be used in hot water. Galvanic is a hard water soap.

It is adapted to the water in Duluth and Superior.

After the clothes have been soaked in Galvanic suds, rub slightly the soiled parts, put through the rinsing water, blue, and hang out to dry.

GALVANIC does away with the boiling and the hard rubbing. It gets the clothes on the line at 8:30 a. m. instead of 10:30.

Your Grocer is authorized by us, for a limited time, to give with every 25 cent purchase of GALVANIC SOAP or Johnson's (Germ Proof) Washing Powder, a full size 10 cent cake of PALM OLIVE FREE.

This means, that with each dollar purchase, 4 cakes Palm Olive free. With 100 cakes purchase 20 cakes Palm Olive free. Ask your grocer for it.

KING REPRIMANDS INSULTERS OF QUEEN.

Berlin, May 18.—The king of Wurtemburg has administered a telling rebuke to the unmannerly young students of Stuttgart.

Walking with her maid of honor in the streets, the queen met a group of unmannerly students walking arm in arm and monopolizing the sidewalk. Instead of making way for the ladies, the students compelled them to walk in the gutter. This caddish behavior the queen reported to her husband.

Next day the king sent for the president of the "corps," to which the students belonged. He had him shown into a room where there were no chairs, and kept him waiting an hour.

At last his majesty came and addressed the students' leader in these words: "I cannot expect that my wife should be known to every student, but I demand that the Corps Suevia shall practice ordinary courtesy to ladies in the streets."

"Every man's task is his life-preserver." A Herald want ad. will get you a new and better life-preserver if the old one is unsatisfactory.

GETTING RICH QUICKLY.

Work for Cent a Week and Make $15,000,000,000.

Many plans have been suggested for getting rich quickly, and some of these are so plausible and alluring that multitudes have been induced to invest in them the savings which had been accumulated by hard labor and severe economy. It is needless to say that, except in the case of a few stool pigeons, who were allowed to make large profits so that their success might deceive others and lead them into the net, all these projects have led to disaster or ruin. It is a curious fact, however, that some of those who invested in such "get-rich-quickly" schemes were probably fully aware of their fraudulent character and went into the speculation with their eyes open in the hope that they might be allowed to become the stool pigeons, and in this way come out of the enterprise with a large balance on the right side. No regret can be felt when a bird of this kind gets plucked.

But by the following simple method everyone may become his own promoter and in a short time accumulate a respectable fortune. It would seem that almost anyone could have 1 cent for the first day of the month, 2 cents for the second, 4 for the third, and so on. Now if you will do this for thirty day we will guarantee you the possession of quite a nice little fortune. See how easy it is to become a millionaire on paper, and by the way, it is only on paper that such schemes ever succeed.

If, however, you should have any doubt in regard to your ability to lay aside the required amount each day perhaps you can induce some prosperous and avaricious employer to accept the following tempting proposition:

Offer to work for him for a year, provided he pays one cent for the first week, two cents for the second, four for the third, and so to the end of the term. Surely your services would increase in value in a corresponding ratio, and many business men would gladly accept your terms. We ourselves have had such a proposition accepted over and over again; the only difficulty was that when we insisted upon security for the last installment of our wages, our would-be employers would never come to time. And we would strongly urge upon our readers that if they ever make such a bargain they get full security for the last payment, for they will find that when it becomes due there will not be money enough in the whole world to satisfy the claim.

The entire amount of all the money in circulation among all the nations of the world (not the wealth) is estimated at somewhat less than $15,000,000,000, and the last payment would amount to 1,500 times that immense sum.

The French have a proverb that "it is the first step that costs" (c'est le premier pas qui coute) but in this case it is the last step that costs and it costs with a vengeance.

While on this subject let me suggest to my readers to figure up the amount of which they will be possessed if they will begin at 15 years of age and save 10 cents per week for 60 years, depositing the money in a savings bank as often as it reaches the amount required for a deposit, and adding the interest every six months. Most persons will be surprised at the result.

THE BETTER WAY.

Kansas City Journal: At one time in his career John L. SSullivan, formerly heavyweight champion, gave lessons in boxing, but the average pupil lacked much of the fortitude necessary, for John was a vigorous instructor. A young man once went to the great fighter and arranged for a course of ten lessons. At the end of the second lesson, pretty well battered up, the young man said he thought he had enough. "Enough!" said his teacher in astonishment. "Why, you haven't learned——" "I know," the young man interrupted. "But I'll tell you how it is. There's a fellow I dislike, and I arranged for this course so as to lick him in a fight. But on second thought I have decided it will be just as well to send him down here to you to take the rest of the lessons."

AT GROSVENOR'S EXPENSE.

Kansas City Journal: Gen. Grosvenor was at the White House and when he came out he delivered a little lecture on the folly of thinking the American people can not elect Roosevelt again if they want to. "Why not?" asked the Ohio congressman. "Why shouldn't he have a third term if they want him? This talk about third terms and fourth terms is all nonsense. A man should have as many terms as the people want him to have." "That explains why you were not renominated, doesn't it, general?" asked a bystander. Whereupon Gen. Grosvenor muttered gruffly into his beard.

RETURNING RUSSIANS.

Kansas City Journal: Six trains now running daily either way on the Siberian railway, four being military trains carrying troops from the Far East. When the damaged engines have been repaired and others which have been ordered have arrived, fourteen trains are to run both ways, six of which will be used for military purposes. A similar service will be established on the Transbaikal line. There were 900,000 men to be brought back. Of these 400,000 had already left on January 14, and there were thus still 500,000 to be repatriated. The evacuation is expected to be completed by the beginning of June.

FREE TRANSLATION.

Kansas City Journal: Ex-Speaker Keifer of Ohio, in making a speech in the house of representatives the other day remarked that the leaders, Republican and Democratic, and their followers have adopted the principle of the legal maxim, de minimis non curat lex—the law pays no attention to small things. A Western judge gave a free translation to that maxim and said that it meant: "The law goes with head and tail up."

CANDIDATES ARE NOW ON A STILL HUNT AND MUCH QUIET WORK DONE

Activity Among the Gubernatorial Candidates Is Increasing.

Block Busy Attending to Baseball Games at St. Paul.

Cole, Jacobson and Stephens Are Hard at Work.

St. Paul, May 19.—(Special to The Herald.)—The candidate in the race for the gubernatorial nomination have all been out on a still hunt this week. There has been little dust flying but it is rumored that a heap of quiet work is being done by the several aspirants. Block has been busy attending the baseball games in the capital city, which is as good as 500 votes a day. It is estimated that during the week, excepting Sunday, he has been visible to not less than 15,000 strong healthy voters. Block is an ardent believer in the doctrine of "seeing is believing." There is no other candidate in the field nearer, visibly speaking, to the masses than is the state treasurer.

None of the candidates has taken the stump but all of them are busy among their friends, and despite the calmness on the surface there has been more activity this week among the gubernatorial candidates than for some time.

A. L. Cole is the only one to establish headquarters, and if he does not land the nomination he should be given the credit of advertising the cause of state development. Northern Minnesota is being advertised every day by the gentleman from Cass county. Eddy looks with suspicion upon "pre-convention headquarters." He declares that they are the places where trades are made and political jugglery and legerdemain of all kinds prospers and grows mighty. He declares that no

WOULD EXCLUDE THE JAP CADETS

Tawney Wants Foreign Students Shut Out of Naval Academy.

Washington, May 19.—(Special to The Herald.)—Pending the consideration of the naval appropriation bill, a great deal of comment was created by an amendment offered by Representative Tawney, chairman of the committee of appropriations. This amendment is: "No person shall be admitted for instruction at the naval academy at Annapolis from any foreign country, except upon authority of law hereafter enacted."

Scarcely a man in congress, or in the navy, for that matter knows why this amendment was offered. It appears, however, that Mr. Tawney does not like the idea of educating naval cadets by the United States who may some day be called upon to oppose the naval officers of this country.

The Army and Navy register, the leading organ of the united service, in its issue yesterday, commenting on the amendment, explains the necessity for it and says:

"There may have been a suspicion in the house that this sort of legislation was unnecessary, but as a matter of fact it really repeals a law which was enacted on July 27, 1868, reading as follows: 'That the secretary of the navy be, and he is hereby, authorized to receive for instruction at the naval academy at Annapolis, not exceeding six persons, to be designated by the government of the empire of Japan, provided that no expense shall thereby accrue to the United States, and, provided, further, that the secretary of the navy, in the case of said persons, modify or dispense with any provisions of the rules and regulations of the said academy which circumstances may, in his opinion, render necessary or desirable.' There is one Japanese now at the academy, Asalie Kitagagi."

TO FURTHER STUDY "SLEEPING SICKNESS."

Berlin, May 19.—Prof. Robert Koch who returned to Equatorial Africa in March in order to continue the study of tropical diseases, has written to the Berlin Medical society saying that he has become so interested in his further researches, especially in connection with the "sleeping sickness," that he will not return to Germany for two years and, therefore he has resigned the presidency of the society.

STRIKE IN BRICK YARDS IS ENDED.

Coeymans, N. Y., May 19.—The strike of the brick yard laborers at this point apparently is ended. After a conference held yesterday afternoon between members of the union and the employers, the men voted to return to work on the terms offered by the employers. This concluded all the demands of the men except recognition of the union by the exclusive employment of its members. Some of the men were inclined to insist upon the release of the six men arrested yesterday, but acceded entirely when President Sudderly agreed to give bail for them. The troops will probably held here until Monday.

MICHAEL DAVITT.

Dublin, May 19.—Michael Davitt, who is now improving, had a narrow escape from death as the result of a complication of blood poisoning and a mild form of lockjaw. The trouble commenced with a bad tooth. The inflammation extended to the cheek, necessitating an operation. Blood poisoning, accompanied by a form of lockjaw, followed, the patient's jaw having to be forced open to admit nourishment. For forty-eight hours his life was despaired of, when another operation was decided upon and this time, it is believed, it was successfully performed. Mr. Davitt had not realized his danger until John Dillon happened to call on him and found his condition serious.

OFFICERS LEFT THEIR SICK BEDS

To Do Duty When Great Disaster Overtook San Francisco.

Washington, May 19.—The navy department is in receipt of further evidence of the heroic conduct of the personnel of that branch of the service when earthquake and fire overtook San Francisco. This came in the shape of a report from the United States naval hospital at Mare Island giving the names of three officers who were patients and who volunteered for duty when disaster overtook the Golden Gate city. These officers were Ensign R. C. Davis, Lieut. A. Stokes, marine corps, and Lieut. F. A. Udell, marine corps.

Rear Admiral McCalla, commandant of the Mare Island navy yard in forwarding their names to the department says:

"These officers are, in the opinion of the commandant, to be commended for their zeal and for the fact that, notwithstanding they are in the naval hospital, they applied for or continued on duty after the earthquake and subsequent fire in San Francisco."

Lieut. Stokes, it was shown continued on duty at the main gate daily as officer of the guard, while Ensign Davis and Lieut. Udell were directed by the commandant in conformity with their request to proceed to San Francisco and report for duty. When the emergency was over these two officers returned to Mare Island and re-entered the hospital.

INVESTIGATION COST $101,518.93

The New York Legislative Insurance Committee Disbands.

New York, May 19.—After nearly ten months of labor, the legislative insurance investigating committee disbanded yesterday. The final meeting was held at the committee's headquarters in this city and nearly the whole day was occupied in auditing accounts. The compensation to be paid to the counsel and other employes of the committee was determined. Of the fess to counsel, Charles E. Hughes, was allowed $25,000, James McKeen $17,500 and Matthew Fleming $10,000. The original agreement of the committee with its attorneys was that Mr. Hughes was to receive $15,000, with extra compensation rendered after Jan. 1, 1906, while Messrs. McKeen and Fleming were to receive respectively $10,000 and $7,500 under the same conditions. In addition Mr. Hughes receives $1,284 for extra expenses; Mr. McKeen, $301, and Mr. Fleming, $116. At the close of the meeting yesterday Senator Armstrong, chairman of the committee, announced that the total cost of the investigation to the state was $101,518.93. Of this amount $5,907.90 will be paid out of the regular legislative allowance for printing committee reports, leaving $95,611.93 to be paid out of the special appropriation of $100,000.

HOT IN NEW YORK.

New York, May 19.—The hottest May day since 1903 was recorded here yesterday when the United States weather bureau thermometer climbed to a fraction under 87 degrees. In the streets thermometers were higher, and one case of prostration was announced by Bellevue hospital.

TERRIFIC EXPLOSIONS CAUSE PEOPLE AT RACINE TO LEAP OUT OF BEDS

Many Thought City Was Visited by an Awful Earthquake.

Blowing Up of Powder Mills Was Cause of Excitement.

Windows Shattered and Houses Rocked But No One Killed.

Racine, Wis., May 19.—Two terrific explosions which shook buildings throughout the southern part of this city and as far north as the city hall, occurred between 3 and 4 o'clock this morning and hundreds of people leaped from their beds in wild excitement, believing that it was an earthquake. Telephones were worked in all directions and for an hour it was impossible to ascertain the cause, and the earthquake solution was reported. Later it was ascertained shocks were caused by an explosion at the Rand & Laflin Powder mills, located in Pleasant Prairie, Kenosha county. Messages from that place state that the glaze and press rooms and the corning mill were blown to pieces, involving a loss of perhaps $25,000. Windows in houses througnout the village were broken and some damage done, but there was no loss of life, only one man being knocked down by the shock. The main mills are in tact, and can be operated. The cause of the explosion is not known. It was felt throughout Racine and Kenosha counties.

The exact time of the explosions at the Rand & Laflin Powder mills in Kenosha was 3:15 a. m., and the second two minutes later. It is now estimated that the property loss is $50,000. No one was killed or injured for the reason no one was working in the buildings. Glass was destroyed in buildings for a mile around and some in the western part of the city of Kenosha. The glazing, corning and pressing rooms are a total loss, and adjoining buildings are damaged. Debris was thrown 1,000 feet.

Grand Rapids, Mich., May 19.—Two supposed earthquake shocks were felt in western Michigan at 3:20 o'clock this morning. Distinct shocks are reported from Holland, Grand Haven, Fennville and Bangor. The first shock lasted about six seconds and the second about three seconds. Residents of Holland rushed out of their homes in night attire, the quake having thrown open many doors. Rumblings like thunder were heard around the shores of Black lake. No serious damage is reported.

The shocks were coincident with the powder explosions directly across Lake Michigan in Wisconsin.

FOUR HUNDRED WOMEN DEMAND RIGHT TO VOTE

Party Includes Ladies of Title and Factory Girls.

The Premier Favorable But Would Make No Pledges.

London, May 19.—Escorted by forty members of parliament nearly 400 women suffragists representing organizations from all parts of the country interviewed Premier Campbell-Bannerman at the foreign office today and presented their claims that women be allowed to vote. Only eight members of the numerous deputation were allowed to speak and in accordance with a previous arrangement each speaker was limited to five minutes. But in the aggregate of forty minutes the premier heard about all there was to hear in favor of female suffrage.

The immediate grant of women's rights was the unanimous demand of the speakers, some of whom presented to the premier their "minimum demands," claiming that immediate legislation bestowing on women the right to vote was necessary, and declaring that a promise to take the matter up

UNION LABOR BANK OPENS AT CHICAGO.

Chicago, May 19.—The Commonwealth Trust and Savings bank, Chicago's first union labor banking institution, opened its doors today. The bank is organized under the laws of Arizona, and has an authorized capital of $2,000,000, divided into shares of $5 each. This capitalization has been reduced to $500,000, half of which has been subscribed for. The managing officers of the bank are practical bankers and men of long experience. The board of directors is composed of men who are prominent in the labor world.

CONFIDENCE IN READING CLERKS

Speaker Cannon Believes in Their Efficiency and Integrity.

Washington, May 19.—Speaker Cannon instanced his confidence in the reading clerks of the house yesterday. Mr. Williams (Miss), during the filibuster against the bill to pay Samuel Lee $10,000 for expenses incurred during his contest for a seat in the forty-seventh congress, stated that he had heard the name of a member called and that the clerk had recorded him as voting when as a matter of fact the member was not in the city.

He said that he thought on several occasions he had heard clerks respond for the name of members, but he could not be certain of this because his own hearing was not good. On this occasion, however, he had distinctly heard the clerk vote the member, and he thought there ought to be a more careful calling of the roll.

Speaker Cannon replied that the efficiency and integrity of the clerks at the speaker's desk had never been questioned. In fact, their worth and honesty were known to every member. He said that in this great hall and with the great membership in the house it was almost impossible at times to hear members respond, and he thought that in a moment of thoughtlessness the clerk may have recorded a response without consideration. He believed that the taking of votes in the house was on a high plane of integrity. Mr. Williams replied by saying that he did not desire to impugn the motives of the clerks. He only asked for a proper record.

HUSBAND HAS HIS WIFE ARRESTED

Says That She "Proposed" and Stole His Money.

Sioux City, Iowa, May 19.—Meeting Mrs. Carrie Hinkel on a street here, becoming enamored of her, accepting her proposal to marry and finally having her arrested on a charge of grand larceny, after she had spent $900 of his money, is the feeling story told by Chris Ihms, a retired German farmer, to the police. Mrs. Hinkel was brought yesterday from Mondamin, where she was arrested.

Ihms spent money liberally for her. After their wedding date had been fixed, he had to pay $75 for clothes for her. Then they went to Omaha, April 16, and the marriage ceremony was performed by a justice. Then Ihms asked about the happy home they were to buy, and she told him he would have to pay $600 as an installment, and she would pay the rest from a farm and a bank deposit of $1,600. Ihms gave her the money.

That was the last Ihms saw of it, for the woman went to Minneapolis and spent it, and then he had a warrant issued for her arrest.

MINISTER ARRESTED FOR BUYING BEER ON SUNDAY.

Appleton, Wis., May 19.—Rev. A. H. Zechiel, a representative of the Wisconsin Anti-Saloon league, charged with purchasing beer on Sunday, was arrested yesterday on a warrant sworn out by saloonkeepers, charging violation of the Sunday law in that he worked on the Sabbath. The beer was bought, it is said, to obtain evidence against saloonmen who kept open on Sunday. They in turn say Zechiel violated the law, which reads "only works of mercy and necessity can be carried on" Sundays.

An Area of About 100 Square Miles Almost Swept Blank.

The Loss of Property Will Run Into the Millions.

Hundreds of People Are Homeless, Losing All They Had.

Milwaukee, May 19.—An Evening Wisconsin special from Escanaba, Mich., says: The forest fires in northern Michigan have almost swept blank an area of 100 square miles. Whether or not any human lives were lost it is impossible to say; nor is it possible to tell at present how much damage to property, industry and means of communication there has resulted.

When communication by railway, telegraph and telephone is established—which will probably be within thirty-six hours—a forest fire story can be told which, it is believed will rival any similar piece of news that has ever come out of this section of the United States. An Evening Wisconsin correspondent spent all night and several hours this morning in an effort to gain a general review of the fire situation for his paper and finds that the loss will be several millions of dollars. He has been unable to find any loss of life, but six thousand people are homeless, it is estimated.

Alfred—Population 200, every house and huge piles of logs burned.

Quinnisec—Population 100, destroyed; all residents homeless.

Cornell—All but one store burned, 300 people homeless.

Northland—Mill and six houses burned, many of the 600 people homeless and without food.

Antoine—Mining town; houses and one mill burned, boarding houses destroyed and all but a few of 700 people homeless.

Felth, branch Northwestern railway—All bridges burned and scores of homesteaders in that section, covering ten square miles are homeless. It is feared there was loss of life here.

Northland, branch Escanaba & Lake Superior railway, 5,000,000 feet of cut logs burned, bridges down and line tied up completely, perhaps for weeks.

Menominee, Delta, Dickinson, Marquette and Schoolcraft counties bear the brunt of the loss. The Isaac Stephenson Lumber company, the Pittsburg & Lake Superior Iron company, the Escanaba Woodenware company and other concerns suffer the greatest loss. Some of the towns partly or wholly destroyed belong entirely to these corporations.

Three train loads of homeless people have already arrived in Escanaba. Thousands of others are believed to be homeless and suffering from want of food, clothing and other necessities. There will be intense suffering, of that there is no question. Arrangements for aid and offers to give assistance are reaching this city from lower Michigan and Wisconsin, which must bear a large share of fire losses, directly or indirectly the result of the forest fires.

Reports this morning indicate that the fire is being swept northward, and that it is dying out in many places. The wind has changed so that such towns as Escanaba, Marquette and the larger places in the district, are out of danger. But there is still an immense amount of hardwood timber, of the best in the country, in the path of the flames.

Foster, Mich., has had a narrow escape, but only one house was burned. At Woodlamn, Mich., several cars of ties burned.

Other reports say that Spring Valley, Mich., near Stambaugh, is surrounded by flames and people are fighting hard to save it. It is also said that the big hardwood factory at Hermansville, Mich., has been destroyed. Perronville, in Menominee county, was surrounded by flames last night but was saved. At Loomis, Wis., a school house was wiped out and the teacher and pupils had a narrow escape. The only rumor of large loss of life comes indirectly from Saunders, in Iron county, which is said to have been burned. It is absolutely impossible to get definite information.

BESSEMER TO NEWBERRY

Marks the Extent of Territory Dotted With Forest Fires.

Marquette, Mich., May 19.—(Special to The Herald.)—A stretch of territory over 250 miles in length, reaching from Newberry on the east to Bessemer on the west and north, and south between the shore line of Lake Superior and the southern boundary of the Upper Peninsula is dotted with forest fires. Settlements and farm houses have been wiped out, timber lands destroyed and hundreds of persons rendered homeless. It is impossible to estimate the financial loss, but figured on a basis of local conditions, it is probable that hundreds of thousands of dollars' worth of property has been destroyed.

The loss in the immediate vicinity of Marquette is over $50,000, involving only the destruction of personal

Believed They Can be Saved—Improvement to Mission Church.

Julius Johnson, a lumber piler at the Alger-Smith yards in West Duluth was run over by a log train yesterday and both legs were badly crushed. He was taken to the Graham hospital where it was doubtful for a time whether or not the legs would have to be amputated. However, it is believed that they can be saved.

He has a compound fracture of both legs and the bones, crushed as they are, stick through the skin. His escape from having the legs completely cut off is considered remarkable.

He was coupling cars in the mill yards and slipped, going under the train.

IMPROVES THE CHURCH.

Swedish Mission Church Has New Roof and New Paint.

Many improvements are taking place at the Swedish Mission church, corner of Fifty-ninth avenue west and Green street. A new roof has been put on the church and the structure is being painted anew. A great many firms have made donations of the material for this work. For the roofing these have given: Carpenter-Glass, E. G. Wallinder, C. J. Petruschke, Merrill & Ring and Alger-Smith.

For the painting, the Standard Oil company furnished the oil, and Rev. Mr. Forsell, the pastor, claims that it is not tainted oil, either. Marshall-Wells gave the white lead.

About twenty trees are being planted about the grounds of the church and every effort is being made to beautify the location and building.

Olivson Took Picture.

The picture of the huge hailstones which fell in Duluth Thursday, printed in The Herald of Friday evening, was taken by C. Olivson the photographer, of Central avenue, West Duluth. Mr. Olivson has taken some very excellent pictures of these hailstones, one of which measures seven inches in circumference. He is finding a big sale of the photos, many wishing to send them to friends outside of the city.

West Duluth Churches

At Holy Apostles Episcopal church, Fifty-seventh avenue west and Elinor street, Sunday school will be held at 9 o'clock tomorrow morning. Evening prayer and sermon will take place at the usual hour in the evening. Phil Bevis, general secretary of the Duluth Y. M. C. A., will give the address. Rev. Roderick J. Mooney is the rector.

THE SITUATION GROWS PERILOUS

Non-Union Miners Are Being Brought Into Plum Run Mine.

Dillonvale, Ohio, May 19.—Under guard of 100 detectives, armed with Winchesters and revolvers, fifty non-union miners from West Virginia were landed at the Plum Run mine late last night. The Maxim gun in the company's office was trained on the hillsides, where were grouped 500 striking miners.

The cars were switched upon the coal tracks, and the non-union men, one by one, filed into the tipple above. Today they are being huddled in the cottage left vacant by strikers who have left the district.

Supt. Val Cox said today that 150 miners will be brought in tonight and Sunday.

The situation hourly grows more perilous.

Steubenville, Ohio, May 19.—Thousands of striking miners in Jefferson county are on the march today in the mining districts, and at each mining town they are listening to speeches by the officers. They are preceded by bands, and march along singing the Marsellaise and other songs. There is not a waver in the ranks of the foreigners. They have even refused the offer of cheaper rent for shacks, free coal and other inducements.

MILLIONAIRE INSANE; HIS ESTATE DISPOSED OF.

Worcester, Mass., May 19.—Distribution of the $5,000,000 estate of Ransom C. Taylor, a familiar figure in the streets of Worcester and at the present time esteemed as one of the city's most prominent citizens, has brought to light the fact that he has been declared insane. Judge Forbes has appointed Charles L. Thayer and E. L. Morgan guardians and ordered a division of the estate. It will be distributed as if Mr. Taylor had died.

It now appears that in deciding the insanity question there was weighed in the balance the old man's ability to tell who is president of the United States. When Mr. Taylor did not name Theodore Roosevelt he was adjudged insane.

RELIEF OF MINISTERS

Discussed by Commissioners at Presbyterian General Assembly.

Des Moines, Iowa, May 19.—Commissioners and visitors to the one hundred and eighteenth general assembly of Presbyterians of America were entertained at Fort Des Moines today following a short morning session. A reglimental drill reviewed by Lieut.-Gen. Nelson A. Miles (retired), who is here as the guest of his son, Lieut. Lewis Miles, was the feature of the afternoon. Following the drill a reception was tendered General Miles and the commissioners.

After listening to the report of the board of ministerial relief, showing that more disabled members than ever before had asked for aid during the year, the assembly voted in favor of a resolution offered by the board asking for an appropriation of $4,000,000 to be expended in this cause. An amendment made it incumbent upon the elder of the church to collect the amount from the entire church membership at the rate of 10 cents each.

There were 852 names upon the rolls of the board of relief for disabled ministers and the widows and orphans of deceased ministers for the year ending March 31 last. Of these, 378 were ministers; 509 widows, thirty-five orphan families, one widow of a medical missionary, eight women missionaries and twenty-one guests in the Merriam Home at Newton, N. J. This is the largest number the board ever had upon its rolls. Current fund receipts for the year amounted to $240,883, as compared with $239,529 for the same purpose last year. In addition to the receipts for the current fund there was received for the permanent fund $39,919. Among the contributors to these funds were 4,441 churches. Three thousand three hundred and eighty-five churches did not contribute to the funds. The total of the various funds held by the board is $1,829,352. The board's cost of administration for the year, according to the report, was 3.3 per cent of the total receipts.

Considerable interest is taken in the approaching discussion of the prayer book. Van Dike's common book of worship, copies of which have been placed on every member's desk, will probably receive the greatest attention. Members are waiting for reports on marriage and divorce before making comment. Other important questions will be allowed to go over until reports are made.

GREAT EXPENSE IS JUSTIFIED

Editor Says Expenses to Prevent Legislation Are All Right.

Washington, May 19.—"I am willing to go on record that even the one million dollars which was spent by President McCall under the auspices of 'Andy' Hamilton was justifiable. And I further say it has not only saved millions of dollars to the policyholders of that company but millions of dollars to the policyholders of other companies."

The house committee on judiciary listened to this statement today. It was made by Max Cohen, publisher of an insurance paper in this city. The committee was considering the Ames insurance bill for the regulation of insurance in the District of Columbia. Mr. Cohen made the further assertion that the entire amount of the "alleged graft," which the Armstrong committee discovered was not a tithe of the tax levied upon policyholders by the states. He justified the means which had been employed by the officers of companies to prevent state legislation of the "hold-up" character.

BISBEES GO UP A LITTLE

Calumet & Pittsburg is Particularly Strong, Selling at $32.50.

Listed Shares Close About Unchanged After a Dull Session.

Calumet & Pittsburg led the copper stock market today and monopolized a good share of the local interest. It was strong at the opening, selling then at $31 and sold as high as $32.50 in Duluth, closing at $31.50 bid and $33 asked. There is an excellent demand for it, but it is not coming out to any marked extent at the prices bid.

LITTLE SHORT OF DESPERATE

Washington, May 19.—"Should war break out within the next few years, the condition of the navy will be such as to lead to disaster."

Such is the statement of Admiral Mason, chief of the bureau of ordnance, navy department, in a statement to the secretary of the navy calling attention to reduction in estimates of the bureau of ordnance made by the department and house committee. Admiral Mason shows that more than $12,000,000 has been cut out of the estimates and he describes the condition of the bureau as "little short of desperate" for the coming year. He says there is not now and will not be any reserve ammunition available for any of the important guns. It will be necessary, probably, to discontinue target practice and new ships must be sent into commission without ammunition or ordnance stores. There will be no reserve guns, torpedoes or reserve mines on hand and range finders and the money to buy them is lacking.

A POOR JUDGE GAVE US SIX MONTHS.

An amiable clothing man of this city, who evidently did not relish the idea of our coming to town, predicted, at the time we opened, that we would not last six months in Duluth. He must have calculated from former experience with our ways and methods of selling the very best on the very lowest basis of profit—that these would not work where rents are high and competition keen. Well, The Columbia is here now for nearly a year and is a pretty lively and growing baby. We have knocked a few holes in the high prices which clothing stores have exacted heretofore and put a dent in some of the all-the-year-around fake sales, with which high prices are sugar coated. These Saturday night talks (of which this one is No. 10) have explained a few things to the people and have opened their eyes to the worst feature, which is the ten per cent rebate custom.

Well equipped, as we are, with capital, enterprise and courage to carry out a definite policy in our own sweet time, we venture to predict that we will outlast our aforesaid friend by at least twenty-five years.

Rents are high here, but, perhaps, proportionately, neither higher than in smaller towns nor than in larger cities. No, gentlemen, it is the rebate abuse that is at the bottom of the local high prices on good merchandise and the poor merchandise furnished at ordinary common-sense prices. Therefore the rebate custom must go. Not we, but the people of Duluth will attend to this.

Once a week we shall continue to remind them of asking for a 10 per cent rebate at any time they make a purchase at one of the stores where the custom is in vogue. If one customer is entitled to a suit of clothes for $18.00, it is not fair to charge the next one $20.00—is it? Ten to one that suit never was worth more than $18.00 in the first place, and why any man should pay $2 more is more than we can understand.

Here it is one fair price to all comers. Come!

BUILDING SCORCHED

Fire of Unknown Origin Does From $5,000 to $10,000 Damage.

Floor Falls Breaking Large Stock of Expensive Art Glass.

Fire broke out this morning in the basement of the building at 108 and 110 First avenue west, and damaged the building and contents to the extent of from $5,000 to $10,000.

The origin of the fire is unknown. It started in the front of the basement of that part of the building occupied by St. Germain Brothers, and burned through to the first floor. The principal damage was done by smoke and water, however.

The lower half of the building is occupied by H. Heistein, a manufacturer of all kinds of men's furnishings. St. Germain Brothers occupy the upper half of the building, with their art glass warehouse and factory, where they manufacture all kinds of beveled mirrors and art windows. The second story was rented for living apartments, and was not damaged to any extent.

The heaviest loss will probably be sustained by St. Germain Brothers. They carried a large stock of expensive glass decorations, and a part of the floor gave way, breaking hundreds of dollars worth of glass. Others were damaged by the smoke and water. The total value of the stock is estimated to have been about $10,000. Just what percentage of this will be saved is not known, but the loss will probably amount to at least one half of the total stock. This amount will be covered by insurance as policies aggregating $5,000 were carried.

H. Heistein, when asked for a rough estimate of the value of his stock, placed it at from $15,000 to $20,000.

He stated that he did not know how much insurance he carried, but there is little doubt but that the loss will be covered. Much of the stock was in boxes, and the salvage corps did good work in getting them covered up. It is likely that when the boxes are opened the goods will be found but little damaged.

The building is owned by a Nebraska woman, who is represented here by Stryker, Manley & Buck. The damage to the building will probably not amount to more than $1,000 or possibly $1,500.

Today being the Jewish Sunday, the Heistein factory was closed. One of the employes stated this morning that he locked up last night, and that everything in that part of the building was all right then.

The greater part of the insurance was carried by the Manley-McLennan agency. The building was insured for $5,000, all of which was carried by the companies represented by the Manley-McLennan agency. This agency also carried the $7,000 insurance on the Heistein stock, and a policy of $1,000 on the stock of St. Germain Brothers.

HAPPENINGS IN THE DAKOTAS

Man Killed by Lightning While Driving Near Thompson.

NORTH DAKOTA.

Grand Forks.—Gunder Salamonson, aged 29 years, was instantly killed by lightning while driving a four-horse team along a road near Thompson, this county. All the horses were knocked down and two of them blinded.

In sections about here the rainstorm amounted almost to a cloudburst, and at a point three miles west of Larimore the railroad track was washed out for a distance of ninety feet, delaying traffic several hours.

Wahpeton.—District court will convene in this city on June 5. The calendar is light and the court will probably adjourn after two or three weeks.

As a result of a fierce fight that took place between Indians and a policeman on the Fort Buford reservation at a dance on the night of Dec. 22, 1905, when one Indian was killed and a policeman seriously injured, four Indians have been arrested and three are in jail at Washburn in default of $200 bail. The arrest was effected by United States Marshal Quist. The Indians are Drags Wolf, Makes-the-Dust-Fly and Medicine Crow. An Indian named Driver was released.

Fargo.—The "mad dog" scare has reached Fargo. Two or three canines that were acting strangely were killed and taken to the state veterinarian, who announces that his tests show the dogs had rabies. As a result, Mayor Johnson issued a proclamation that all dogs must be kept in enclosures or muzzled.

State Veterinarian Van Es advises the people not to grow excited and to keep their dogs closed up for three or four weeks to see if any develop rabies from the bites of those recently killed, and, if there are no new cases, there will be no cause for alarm.

The sensational case against such prominent Cincinnatians as Senator Foraker's law partner, L. C. Black; Judson Harmon, Cleveland's attorney general, and others, brought by T. B. C. Crowell of this city, will not come up for trial. An agreement was reached by which the case is dropped. Crowell negotiated the purchase of the Fort Stevenson reservation for the Cincinnati men and claimed $35,000 in commissions. There was a scandal in connection with the sale, resulting in two official investigations.

SOUTH DAKOTA.

Lead—Albert Forrest, the elevator boy at the Smead hotel, escaped a fearful death. He was on the third floor and had commenced to descend. Just as he started the elevator and closed the door, a ring which he was wearing caught in the wire netting, holding him fast. The elevator passed down, squeezing the boy between it and the wall of the shaft. Nothing but a defect in the elevator top, which was loosened from the framework, saved the boy's life. One finger on his right hand was cut off at the first joint, and the second finger stripped of flesh to the bone. It is feared that the boy sustained internal injuries.

Bath—Frank Mang, son of a farmer of this town, was badly injured in an encounter with a colt. He tied one end of of a halter about his wrist and attached the other to the colt. The animal became frightened and ran away, dragging the boy through several barbed wire fences. When the halter finally became untied the boy dropped to the ground unconscious. It is believed he will recover.

Geddes—The desire to see what would happen if he places three or four pounds of gunpowder in a stove resulted in the serious injuring of Leonard, the 6-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Lynch of Charles Mix county, and wrecked the Lynch dwelling house.

In addition, a baby brother on the floor near the stove had a miraculous escape from instant death. The grown members of the household were temporarily absent from the house when the little boy secured the can of powder, and, pouring out three or four pounds of it, threw it into the stove for the purpose of seeing it "pop." The force of the explosion wrecked the house so that it looked as if it had been struck by a tornado.

LABOR WATCHING TROUBLES

Marine Strife and Electrical Strike Occupies Local Unions.

Various Matters of Interest in Labor Convention Matters.

Union meetings:

Tonight—Bakers and confectioners, Kalamazoo hall; Boilermakers, Axa hall.

Monday—Building Structural Alliance, Labor World hall; Barbers, Labor World hall; Stonet Masons, Ava hall.

Tuesday—Carpenters, Rowley hall; Machinists, Axa hall; Painters, Decorators and Paper Hengers, Labor World hall; Sheet Metal Workers, Labor World hall.

Wednesday—Meat Cutters, Labor World hall; Steamfitters, Labor World hall; Plasterers, Kalamazoo hall.

Thursday—Builders' Laborers, Axa hall; Plumbers, Labor World hall; Steam Engineers, Lyceum; Cooks and Waiters, Labor World hall; Stationary Engineers, Axa hall.

Friday—Tile Layers and Helpers, Labor World hall; Lathers, Labor World hall; Iron Moulders, Sloan hall; Trades Assembly, Labor World hall; Bricklayers, Axa hall.

* * *

In labor circles of Duluth the principal interest aroused is in watching the marine situation. When the strike regarding the mates was declared off, everybody settled back for work, and then it looked like trouble over a scale of wages and hours among the firemen, oilers and water-tenders. This is not past yet and everybody is taking notice of the situation. Much interest is shown among Duluth unions.

* * *

It may be said that preparations among Duluth unions have started fairly under way for the State Federation of Labor convention. Almost all of the unions are electing delegates. The printers, however, will not elect delegates this year owing to the fact that they have had a fight on for the past eight months and have some fighting still to do; so they wish to devote their money to that instead of sending delegates. At any rate they will be represented, for two of the members of the delegation sent from the Trades assembly are printers.

* * *

A good deal of interest is shown in labor circles in general over the electricians' strike in various part of the country, although the principal interest is centered upon the Twin Cities. The local union of Electrical Workers is contributing like every other local in the country to the strike cause. The strike of the employes of the Southern Bell Telephone company involves seven states in the South; and the strikers claim they are winning. Recognition of the union and an increased wage schedule with shorter hours are the demands. The Electrical unions, it seems, have combined to fight the Bell company, which, they claim is the union's bitterest enemy.

A spirited contest took place Thursday afternoon at Labor World hall when the local Typographical union held its annual election and elected August Murphy the union's delegate to the International convention at Colorado Springs. G. A. Bergstrom, foreman of the News Tribune composing room was Mr. Murphy's opponent and the result was: Murphy, 37; Bergstrom, 30.

Mr. Murphy is evidently thought a good deal of among his co-workers. He was recording secretary of the local for several years and for the past two years has been secretary-treasurer, being elected without opposition. Recently he was nominated for the third time without opposition. He is a member of The Herald linotpye staff.

W. G. Powlesland of St. Paul, special organizer of the Blacksmith's union has organized a local at West Duluth. This includes the blacksmiths at West Duluth and Proctor, and the union starts off with about twenty members. This organization does not include the horseshoers, who have a union of their own. Mr. Powlesland is very successful in his work.

The catalogue for the year 1906-1907 is printed and ready for distribution. This edition is the catalogue number of a magazine which is to be published quarterly by the State Normal school at Duluth and devoted to the interests of elementary education in Minnesota. The next number will be the commencement number and other matters pertaining to the school will be printed with it.

The catalogue number is very nicely gotten up. It contains the calendar for school 1906-1907, the names of members of the state normal boards, officers and faculty, a short history of the school and an account of the purpose, plan and courses of the school, also conditions for admission; a descriptive outline of the work in the different subjects, general information as regards diplomas, certificates, endorsing of diplomas, expenses, sessions and news of general interest. The names of the students enrolled in the normal department, in the different courses are given, as well as those in the different grades of the training school. There are 202 students enrolled in the normal department and 156 in the training department.

The book contains many fine cuts and pictures of the school. Among them are pictures of the exterior of the building, the new dormitory, the assembly hall, drawing room, library physical and chemical laboratories, the manual training room, biological laboratory, the domestic science laboratory and dining room. Several pictures of Garfield park, the aerial bridge and canal and Lester park scenes are given. The catalogue is very tasty in appearance and gives a good idea of the work which is given at the school.

No fascination equals that of a clear brained, tender-hearted, lovable woman. Just as there is no picture like a beautiful girl. Hollister's Rocky Mountain Tea makes lovable women, beautiful girls. 35c. Ask your druggist.

PASSED BY THE SENATE

Rate Bill Goes Through Upper House Almost Unanimously.

A Summary of the Measure as it Now Appears.

Washington, May 19.—After seventy days of almost continuous deliberation, the senate yesterday at 4:53 p. m., passed the railroad rate bill by the practically unanimous vote of 71 to 3. The three votes were cast by Senators Foraker, (Rep.), Ohio, and Morgan and Pettus, (Dem.), Alabama. There was a somewhat larger attendance of senators than usual, but the attendance in the galleries was by no means above normal and there was no manifestation of any kind when the resula was announced. There was, however, an almost general sigh of relief among senators.

The bill has received more attention from the senate and from the country at large than any measure that has been before congress since the repeal of the purchasing clause of the Sherman act in 1893. It was reported to the senate Feb. 26, and was made the unfinished business March 12. From that date to May 4, the bill was under general discussion without limitation on the duration of speeches, fifty-eight of which were delivered. Many of these were prepared with great care and two of them consumed more than a day's time in delivery. Senator La Follette spoke for three days and Senator Daniel, Virginia, for two days. Senators Bailey, Foraker, Lodge, Raymer, Dolliver and others each spoke for an entire day.

For twelve days the bill has been under consideration under a rule limiting speeches to fifteen minutes each. The debate has at all times been earnest and animated, but for the most part devoid of personality as between senators. The last few days, however, called out some caustic criticisms of the president and of some newspaper correspondents by Senator Bailey.

In addition to passing the bill the proceedings yesterday consisted in concluding the consideration of the amendments of the delivery of a number of speeches.

Washington, May 19.—The principal purpose of the railroad rate bill, passed yesterday, is to permit the interstate commerce commission to fix rates. The provision conferring this authority is found in the fourth section of the bill, which amends Section 15 of the interstate commerce law so as to accomplish this result. That section directs the commission to investigate complaints of unjust and unreasonable charges on the part of the common carriers in the transportation of person or property or of regulations or of practices affecting such charges.

It also authorizes an inquiry as to whether the rates or practices are "unjustly discriminatory or unduly preferential or prejudicial or otherwise in violation of the act," and in case any of these conditions are found to exist, the commission is empowered to determine and prescribe what will be the just and reasonable maximum rate and what regulation or practice is just, reasonable and fair.

Further authority is given the commission to enforce its orders and they are to go into effect within thirty days and continue in force for two years, unless suspended, modified or set aside by the commission or by a court of competent jurisdiction.

Other powers conferred by this section are: "To apportion joint fares, establish true routes and maximum joint rates and prescribe their division and to determine the compensation to be paid to shippers doing service for carriers.

Section 16 of the present law is changed so as to provide for pecuniary damages to complainants found entitled, and in case payment is not made promptly, the beneficiary is authorized to file suit in a United States circuit court. The finding of the commission is to be received as prima facie evidence of the facts in such suits, and the petitioner is absolved from all liability for costs. Another provision renders legal the service of orders of the commission by mail, and provides that these orders shall take effect thirty days after service, unless suspended or modified by the commission, or suspended or set aside by the courts. A penalty of $5,000 for each offense in disobedience of the order is imposed, and the penalty is to accumulate at the rate of $5,000 a day in case of continuous violation. Orders other than these for money payments are to be enforced by the federal courts through writs of mandamus, or injunction, and in case of appeal to the supreme court these cases are to be given precedence over all others, except those of a criminal character.

The bill was amended by the senate, so as to give the United States circuit courts jurisdiction to entertain suits brought to annul or change the orders of the commission, and to prevail against the granting of interlocutory decrees without hearings, and making appeals from such orders direct to the supreme court.

Other provisions extend the definition of the word "railroads, so as to make it include switches, spur tracks, terminal facilities, freight depots, yards and grounds," and defines the word "transportation, so as to make it embrace cars and other facilities for shipment or carriage," irrespective of ownership or of any contrtct, the intention being to make the railroads responsible for all special car service. It is made the duty of carriers to furnish special car service upon reasonable request.

Senate amendments include oil pipe lines, express companies and shipping car companies, under the head of "common carriers," and make them amenable to the requirements of the bill; prohibit the issuance of passes, or the granting of special favors to one class of passengers over another; prohibits railroad companies from transporting commodities produced by themselves; requires the companies to put in switches at the reasonable request of shippers; prohibit the granting or acceptance of rebates, and reinstate the imprisonment penalty for violation of the law.

There are also changes relative to the reports to be required of common carriers, and a penalty of $100 a day is imposed for failure to comply with these requirements.

The commission is given access to the accounts of the companies affected by the act, but the examiners are forbidden, under pnalty of heavy fine and long imprisonment from divulging the facts ascertained. Fines of $500 for each failure to keep proper accounts are provided. A falsification of accounts is made punishable by fine and imprisonment.

Circuit and district courts of the United States are given jurisdiction over all complaints by the commission of failure to comply with orders, and such courts are required to issue writs of mandamus compelling such compliances.

at the next session of parliament, would not satisfy them.

One speaker menacingly declared that the women were prepared to sacrifice their lives in behalf of their demands.

The premier smiled upon this strangely assorted gathering of women, including as it did ladies of title side by side with factory girls and said he sympathized with the object of the deputation, but asked his visitors to be patient until the government became more united in favor of the extension of the franchise to women. The cause, he added, had made enormous strides of late years. Personally he believed that women were as well qualified as men and perhaps better, to exercise the right to vote, and in his opinion the deputation had made out a conclusive and irrefutable case.

Speaking for others, however, as well as himself, the premier pointed out that it was necessary to preach the virtue of patience. Only harm would result if, because of his own sympathies and convictions, he gave a pledge regarding the time and method of achieving the object they had in view. No party or government was entirely united on this subject. He warned the women against indiscreet action which he said probably would check the flowing tide, and advised them to leave the matter confidently to the growing strength of their cause.

The premier wound up his remarks with saying that he believed it would not be many years before the desired change was brought about. This reference to "years" was met with hissing from the members of the deputation, who left the foreign office evidently greatly dissatisfied.

The arrival of the deputation at the foreign office was preceded by a street demonstration, contingents of women from various localities marching with banners flying and bands playing, to the Victoria embankment whence, accompanied by an interested crowd of onlookers, the women marched to the foreign office.

IN POLITICS.

At the time the true facts in the shrievalty fight in St. Louis county were made known about two weeks ago, when a letter written by John T. Armstead to Jack Miles, and an agreement made between W. J. Bates and Jack Miles were published, the latter promised that, when the proper time arrived, he would give an explanation of the whole unpleasant affair that would "make things appear in a much different light"

Apparently the proper time has arrived, in the mind of Mr. Miles, for he has addressed a communication to The Herald, giving the promised explanation of the deal whereby he received $500 and his filing fees from W. J. Bates for filing for the nomination for sheriff, the evident intention of the action being to split the city vote that Mr. Armstead might otherwise receive, and make the election of Mr. Bates more certain.

Miles withdrew from the race this week. He says that he has fulfilled his contract with Bates, and that he does not regret taking the money and "exposing him." The young man further states that he would not have filed at all had it not been for the fact that Bates was telling around town that "he could buy Miles up for a few hundred dollars and get him to split up the city vote so that his range strength would easily overcome the majority Armstead was likely to get in the city." Miles says that, because of this, he decided to accept the offer and then show up the sheriff. His communication follows:

To the Editor of the Herald:

I wrote you a few days ago that I would have a statement for you soon in reference to the sheriff mixup, and here it is. I hardly know how to begin the story of how I got into the deal unless I begin at the beginning which was several months ago, when a friend of Bates spoke to me on the street in reference to whether or not I intended to be a candidate again this year. I told him I did not. We talked over the last campaign for a while when he remarked, casually, "You ought to get in again this year, Jack, you can make four or five hundred dollars out of it." I told him I was not in politics to get money by selling out, and we parted at that. He did not say he came to me from Bates but I inferred from his talk that he did.

The next suggestion made me along that line was by a deputy sheriff who talked to me in the St. Louis hotel lobby. Like the other he did not say he came from Bates, but he told me I could make $500 by filing and making a pretense of being a candidate to keep others out of the field. I turned down that proposition as I had the other. I have not mentioned the names of either of these men. Bates knows who they are and if he desires I will name them.

Several weeks later Bates came to me in Watts' cigar store where I happened to be talking with a friend. He invited the friend who was with me and myself into the buffet of Cook's hotel, we went in there, sat down and talked for an hour or more. During the conversation he made me an offer of $500 and my filing fee if I would file, make a pretense of running, and pull out before the last day of filing. He made this offer in the presence of the friend who was with me and did not ask either of us to consider it as confidential. I flatly refused to consider the offer. Some days later he again approached me in the St. Louis hotel lobby and renewed the offer. I again refused to consider it. On March 30 he came to my office, room 102 Manhattan building, and again renewed his offer. Since he had made the offer at Cook's hotel, some time before, I had heard two or three times he had made the statement that, "If Armstead seemed dangerous in the city he would buy Miles up for a few hundred dollars and get him to split up the city vote so that his range strength would easily overcome the majority Armstead was likely to get in the city." Hearing this repeated several times made me sore and I made up my mind that when he renewed the offer, as I was sure he would, I would accept it and then show him up.

In the meantime I had received from Mr. Armstead the letter which has been printed in the papers urging me to run and promising to support me if I would do so. When Bates came in the office on the 30th I took the letter out of the desk and showed it to him. There is where I slopped over, it was a confidential letter and I had no business to show it to any one. After showing it to Bates I put it back in the desk and we continued our conversation in reference to my filing. My only object was to show him up for the remarks he had made on the street regarding me and I insisted that we have a written agreement as there were no witnesses present. After considerable talk the contract was written and signed by both of us, and he left the office, each of us keeping a copy of the agreement.

When he first asked me to help him in his fight for a renomination I told him I was against him for his refusal to keep a promise he made me, after his nomination and prior to his election two years ago, to appoint a friend of mine as chief deputy.

Before I filed, which was on April 2, I told my father and Mr. Armstead what I had done and why I had done it. Mr. Armstead said, "Well, if that is the condition of affairs I am going to get into the game myself." He filed the day after I did. The statement that I gave Bates the letter from Mr. Armstead is an absolute, unqualified lie. I left the letter in my desk, the desk is open, that is, it is unlocked, the lock on it is broken, and any one can go into the office, shove up the roll top and take out any thing in it. Bates saw where I put the letter, I do not know that he took it out of the desk, but some one did. I did not give it to him or to any one else.

"When I told my father and Mr. Armstead of the deal, both of them advised me, and strongly insisted, that I should donate the money to the Children's home, but I felt it would have been a good deal like John D. Rockefeller's $100,000 to the foreign mission fund, so I did not do it. Perhaps that is what I should have done, and then I could have easily convinced the people I was not in the deal for what I could make out of it, although that is proven by the fact that I was offered $1,000 for the return of the contract. Bates denies that he made such an offer, but, if necessary, I can prove that he did by the man who came to me with the offer, a man whose veracity will not be questioned. I do not regret that I took the money and exposed Bates. Having fulfilled my contract with Mr. Bates, I have mailed the county auditor my withdrawal as a candidate.

"JACK MILES."

A good deal of talk has been going the rounds this week concerning the possibility of C. F. Staples, a member of the railroad and warehouse commission, becoming a candidate for governor on the Republican ticket. Duluth politicians are displaying a lot of interest in the matter, and some of them say that Staples would be an excellent man from the standpoint of Northern Minnesota, and that his chances for getting the support of St. Louis county should be just as good as those of anyone else. In case there is a deadlock at the convention, it is believed that Staples will be put in the field as a strong dark horse.

The name of Staples will be brought up at the convention for the position he holds at present, on the railroad and warehouse commission, unless he becames a candidate for governor. The governorship nomination will be considered before the other, however. It is said that Staples would probably receive the support of the Jacobson delegations, if it should be seen the latter has no chance of a victory. Staples and Jacobson were colleagues in the house of representatives for four or five terms, and were warm friends during that time. Their ideas seemed to be the same on all matters of importance that came up, and each did what he could to help the other.

Nothing special in connection with the senatorial race in the Forty-ninth district has come up lately, except the announcement that P. E. Dowling of Eveleth, editor and proprietor of the Eveleth Star, and a candidate for state senator from his district, is associated with E. A. Koem in a deal to establish papers in the very near future at Virginia and Hibbing. It is their intention to get the Virginia publication started soon after June 1, and the one at Hibbing a little later. One of them may be made a daily. The paper to be established at Virginia will be called the Virginia Star.

Although Mr. Dowling says it is strictly a business proposition with him, the fact that the papers are to be established just as the political campaign is getting under way makes it appear that politics has something to do with it. In his candidacy for state senator, Mr. Dowling is understood to have the opposition of practically all the range papers. P. R. Vall is developing considerable strength, and L. A. Barnes of West Duluth, a third candidate, is saying nothing, but is said to be doing some effectual work on his own hook.

At the county convention two years ago there were two sets of delegates in the field. One was for Collins and the other for Dunn. In almost every precinct of the city and county the delegates were known to favor one or the other of the men, and there was a warm contest in some instances between the Dunn and Collins men. This year it is believed the situation will be different. No contest among the delegates to the county convention is looked for, and there will probably be no factions. The leaders will try and forget the fight of two years ago, and the county convention and preliminaries will doubtless be very harmonious.

Ex-State Senator Charles Halverson, a member of the state highway commission, aroused the ire of the legislators from this district by saying at the good roads convention in Duluth this week, that the prejudice existing against this part of the state was due to the policy of the Northern Minnesota men in asking for too much and giving too little. He asserted that legislators from here refused to help other parts of the state, and, by being unfriendly with the representatives from the south, were looked upon with disfavor in return, and could not be expected to receive the support of the remainder of the state when it came to getting legislation of the kind desired.

Everybody who knows anything about the situation knows that Mr. Halvorsen has no ground whatever for his charges. Anyone who has paid any particular attention to the matter, can testify that St. Louis county and her neighbors have always stood ready to assist other parts of the state in getting appropriations and legislation. They have asked little in return, and have gotten less. It has been all giving and no taking with them. They have been well aware that the prejudice existed, and have done all they could to overcome it, but haven't met with marked success in their efforts in this direction.

About the only appropriation St. Louis county ever got from the legislature was for the normal, and it was a long fight to get even that. At the same time legislators from up here were lending their support to movements for large appropriations for drainage in the Red River valley, for expensive additions to the state university buildings, for normal schools elsewhere, and for a variety of other projects along the same lines. This county pays one-third of the gross earnings tax of the state, and gets less of the benefits, probably, than almost any other county in the state. It is always giving away and getting nothing in return.

Mr. Halverson's statements were ill-timed, to say the least. The prejudice, if one exists, is not against the members of the legislature from St. Louis county, but against the county itself.

"Jacobson is taking charge of his own campaign," said Mr. Halverson while in Duluth this week. "He is now taking an active personal interest in arousing sentiment and securing delegates favorable to his nomination. He has no money to spend, and depends largely upon letter writig, but also makes some personal visits to the different counties. Personally, I believe he is the only man in the party who can defeat Johnson, and, unless improper methods are used, he will be nominated. Jacobson is not a radical and extremist, as has been charged. On the contrary, he is quite conservative."

* * *

J. J. Lomen, assistant secretary of state, and candidate for the secretaryship, was in the city this week. He says Duluth seems friendly to his candidacy. He has no special platform. His claim is for promotion. He says he has tried to do his work well, and that there has been no intimation that he has not done so.

"I base my hopes on getting support from Duluth," said Mr. Lomen, "on the fact that I have tried personally to do what I could for Duluth politically. Officially, I don't think any one up this way will complain."

Duluth is much interested to know what Hennepin county's delegation is going to do in the state convention. There are many minds in Hennepin, and half a dozen different programs are under consideration. There is the Block organization, which is bending every energy toward getting delegates friendly to the St. Peter man. There is the Staples-Lydiard coterie, which wants to send an uninstructed delegation, but to select men friendly to their program, and present C. F. Staples as a candidate for governor. Then come the friends of Thomas H. Girling, who want a delegation free on the governorship, and instructed for Girling for secretary of state. P. G. Sjoblom would like the Hennepin delegation for the same purpose, and has lined up a good many of the workers to assist him. There are also various unattached Republicans, including friends of Jacobson, Lord, Somerville, Cole and Stephens, who are not in favor of any of the before-mentioned programs, but want an uninstructed delegation, to ask for nothing, but to split its vote according to individual choice of the delegates.

'It does not seem likely that any one element can control the county convention, and some kind of a combination will probably be effected. Three names are prominently mentioned for chairman, M. H. Boutelle, John H. Steele and Thomas Voegeli. If any one faction can get control and name its man, it will probably try to have the chairman appoint the delegates, but sentiment generally is in favor of choosing them by wards. As to the unit rule there is considerable difference of opinion. Beyond a doubt the delegation under the unit rule would wield more influence, but the minority would object most strenuously, and the unit rule for Hennepin is not popular with the outside counties, who say it would amount to dictation from this county. Republicans from other districts have given the opinion that any candidate getting the Hennepin delegation for governor under the unit rule would suffer in other sections of the state by that fact.

"Behind the contest for different candidates lurks another motive, a desire to control the county committee. Unfortunately, there are a good many local Republicans who care less about harmony and the success of the state ticket than they do about control of the local organization."

CANDIDATES ARE NOW ON A STILL HUNT

trimmer or trader is going to get the next nomination but that the vox populi is to be the determining factor.

Jacobson is using up mileage traveling about the state, and in the Sixth district the Eastman faction is out hot and heavy for the "foe to corporations." It is predicted that Jacobson would shine in the country but that he would meet his Waterloo in the large cities and the principal towns.

Andy Stephens is working his district hard and going all he can to break Jacobson's preserves. It is more evident as the campaign advances that he is there to injure Jacobson's chances. This may do more good than harm to "Jake's" candidacy, but the contest will be more interesting for it.

Little is heard from Somerville but it is understood that the federal ring is out for him strong. Perhaps the only thing lacking in Somerville's candidacy is a platform. The others are standing on more or less substantial structures, but Somerville has not as yet seen fit to erect one.

Sam Lord is still talked of as a possibility, but he seems to be the most indifferent person in the state regarding his candidacy. Any attempt to secure from him a formal withdrawal from the race meets with failure and many are speculating as to what his real intentions are. Some accuse him of trifling with the affections of his party, but Lord smiles and trifles on. Diment seems to have allowed his aspirations to remain at the receptive stage where from the present outlook it is likely they will be stationary.

Congressman McCleary is working his district from all sides and one of the fiercest fights in years is promised this fall. He has sent out a challenge to mortal combat to Guttersen and Eddy. If the gentlemen consent to enter the tariff tournament, it is expected that the Second district will receive more light on the tariff question than has ever been the fortune of any other district in the state.

Several of his constituents are recipients of circular letters calling attention to the fact that he has been largely responsible for the inauguration of the rural free delivery system. He laments the fact that the service is not so good in Martin county as it might be, but he gives the reason and at the same time gets in a nice "knock" for Guttersen, his rival, in this:

"The work of establishment in your county has not progressed as fast as I would have liked and was promised by the department. It would probably have progressed faster and the service would have been established sooner if the inspector (Guttersen) whom I had detailed for this work had spent more time attending to business and less time to politics."

The announcement has been made that Nick Jullar of Blue Earth will not come back to the house. It is reported that Nels Nyquist will make a run for his seat.

A. J. Rockne of Zumbrota, who was active in the house at the last session, is attempting to start a boom for himself for speaker of the next house. He was in St. Paul this week, but was not inclined to discuss his candidacy.

M. F. Satterless, editor of the Annandale Advocate, has filed notice of his candidacy for the legislature. It is his first entry into active politics.

There is some talk of running Gen. J. H. Baker as a compromise candidate for congress in the Second district. There has been some persistent agitation to force him into the contest, but it is unlikely that he will be forced into the race. He has been an ardent advocate of tariff revision for some time and that wing of the party thinks that he would be a good man to put up against McCleary.

Julius Schmahl, candidate for secretary of state was a visitor at the capital this week and claims that he has everything in sight and that the other candidates might just as well get on the band wagon and "holler" for him. He alleges that he has sixty-three counties just as good as counted. The other candidates are not quite so optimistic as Schmahl and are doing some very vigorous campaigning. J. J. Lomen, the present assistant secretary of state, has been busy in the northern part of the state trying to counteract Nelson's activity. The race for secretary of state is going to be a pretty one and it is safe to say right here that no candidate has a "cinch" on the office yet. The nominee who heads the ticket is going to weed out a lot of the present candidates and when he is chosen there will not be more than three possibilities in the race. It is not likely that delegates, except in the home counties of candidates, will go to the convention next month instructed for secretary of state. The battle will be fought out in Duluth during those few strenuous hours the night before the day of the convention. There is no doubt but that some of the candidates for secretary of state will find it rather solitary, long before the chairman's gavel calls the convention to order.

In the Fifty-second district, Dan, Gunn of Itasca county, has already filed for senator. In Aitkin county little is heard from Ole Mausten. Carlton county has S. Swanson, and Cass, the fourth county, will likely satisfy with a candidate for governor.

From the comments of the country press and elsewhere, Governor Johnson's remarks at Washington were taken too seriously. There is no doubt at official circles but that Governor Johnson was "jollying" the Washington correspondents in respect to his predictions on Bryan. The administration disclaims that the interview commits it to Bryan's candidacy.

It is reported that John C. Applegate of Cannon Falls may contest with Senator W. R. Putnam for the seat for Goodhue this year.

Edward G. Rogers is planning to give Congressman Stevens a hard contest this fall. Mr. Rogers has his cards out, and he is busy at work in Ramsey county. It is the general prediction, however, that he will be retired to private life after he has served his present term as clerk of courts. Party strife gave him a third term, and it is rumored that he desires to relinquish the office now because the legislature put all fee offices in Ramsey county on a salary basis when it made the Hennepin law operative in Ramsey.

The declaration of the Sun, a Buckman paper, in favor of Cole's candidacy is interpreted by some that there is a Buckman-Cole alliance on foot. Buckman visited the Cole headquarters at the Ryan when he was in St. Paul. Most of the workers in the Sixth district, who are supporting Jacobson are anti-Buckman, so that there may be something in the report that Cole will ally himself with Buckman. The Sun says:

"The main fight in the race for the nomination for governor on the Republican ticket is between Jacobson and Cole. The northern papers are taking up the cause of Cole to a large extent, and it now looks as though he would get a large number of votes from the Sixth district, which was supposed to be strong for 'Jake.' The people will be satisfied with either. Both are good men."

An incipient boom for Senator F. H. Peterson of Moorhead for lieutenant governor was noticeable this week, and for a time it looked as though it had the ear marks of maturity. It is likely that Peterson will not listen to the call, as he wants to go back to the senate, and has announced his intentions of doing so.

HIGH SCHOOL TEAMS MUST STICK TO RULES

Hardware Concern Draws Up Regulations Which Must be Obeyed by Baseball Players in Duluth and Superior, Trying for Cup—Other High School News.

Whether or not there is a contest for the cup offered by the Northern Hardware company to the high school base ball teams of the Head of the Lakes, now depends upon the Superior schools. The contest over the game with the Nelson-Dewey school, Superior, which was to have been played last Saturday called the attention of the managers to a need for some definite rules and the hardware company drew up the following:

"The team which wins the most games out of an agreed upon schedule, shall have possession of the cup for one year. Each succeeding year, it shall be contested for in the same manner. The team that wins it for three consecutive years, shall have it for permanent possession.

"To contest for this cup, each member of a team shall be an under-graduate, who has not been a member of a secondary school for more than four years, who is not 21 years or over, or who has never broken the rules governing amateur athletics, or who has not received any gift or remuneration or pay for his services on the school team.

"Each member must be pursuing the regular course of studies in the school which he represents, having the full number of recitations in the grade he is, and must have a passing average in each study.

"He must have been a bona fide pupil in regular attendance in his present or another school during the term preceding the contest, and must have been promoted at the end of said term.

"Each principal shall file with the other, before each game a list of the players and substitutes, and shall certify that they are eligible to play under the above rules.

"The principals of the several schools competing shall constitue a board of appeal, to which questions requiring settlement shall be referred."

These rules are far stricter, it is said, than any that have been enforced in any department of Superior athletics for some time, and Duluth players fear that the Blaine and Nelson-Dewey teams will be so badly curtailed by following them that they will be unable to compete. The cup rules provide for a passing average in each study, while an average of 75 per cent in all studies is all that has been required of Superior athletes. Also each player must be taking the regular course at the institution which he represents, while it is known that a number of the gridiron and diamond stars from across the bay are not doing this.

If Blaine and Nelson-Dewey cannot get together enough athletes who can keep up in their studies, to meet the Duluth aggregation, it is the intention of the local management to withdraw from the contest and the championship cup will be held over for another year.

If Blaine refuses to play under these rules it will be an admission of the handicap under which the local teams have labored in competing with the Blaine huskies.

TO MEET ON DIAMOND AGAIN

Faculty Protests Game and Seniors Agree to Play Another.

The high school is really to be unusually favored this year, for there is to be another senior-faculty baseball game next Wednesday. Last Wednesday's twelve-inning contest was by far the most exciting and closest contest that has ever been played between the teachers and the students and the extra three innings were the best played and most enthusiastically applauded of any in the contest. Now, however, comes the startling information that the game was won by the faculty members; that they were one ahead in the ninth, and that the last three innings should not have been played.

After the game, the faculty members got their heads together and decided by the aid of trigonometry, algebra and several other mathematical sciences, that in the fourth inning, in which they were supposed to have made five scores, there had been a mistake in the score and six professors had crossed the plate. Capt. Phillips figured out that they had twelve men up to bat during that inning, and with three out and three on bases when the side retired, the minimum of scores during the inning was six.

Further investigation by the educators showed that Mr. Townsend's score had not been registered, although he was on the third bag when Joyce got a two-bagger. This should have given a lead of four points at the end of the inning and made the score 10 to 9 in their favor at the end of the ninth.

The seniors refused to relinquish their claims to victory, on the ground that the protest is ill-timed and should have been made on the grounds, and claiming that they would have worked harder to overcome the greater lead. As there is no higher court to appeal to it has been decided to play the game over next Wednesday, if the faculty can get its sore muscles into trim again by that date.

A large attendance at this second contest is assured, as the quality of ball put up by the pedagogues is now known to be first class, and the game will be well played. The faculty will probably be strengthened by the presence of Principal Foster of West Duluth on third base. He was prevented playing Wednesday by injuries. Mr. Foster's stick and field work are well known and the faculty team with this addition to the infield, stands a much better chance of winning than it did this week. There will be no changes in the Senior line-up.

FRESHMEN AND SOPHOMORES

Lower Class Men Meeting on the Diamond in Ball Contest.

This afternoon, the Freshmen are giving the Sophomores another opportunity to revenge themselves for last fall's gridiron victory, the the two lower classes being scheduled on the Athletic Park diamond. The contest promises to be unusually close. Max Cook and Earl Cummings, the school's best twirlers, will be pitted against each other, and several other members of the line-up of the school teams are members of the lower classes.

It has not yet been decided who will umpire. Prof. Phillips was to have handled the indicator but he has been asked to officiate at the Y. M. C. A. field meet, so some one else will have to be selected. The admission will be 15 cents.

FIELD MEET POSTPONED.

The Baseball Dates Must be Determined Upon First.

The field meet has been postponed indefinitely, awaiting the decision of the Superior schools in regard to the baseball contest, as it is not until this has been received that it will be known what dates are open. It was to have been held yesterday afternoon, but as several of the school's most able track athletes had fallen behind in their studies, it would be impossible for the school to send a competing delegation to Ashland, which removed the necessity of holding the meet so early. The management decided in favor of a postponement in order that the aspirants for track honors might get into beter condition before the event.

An enthusiastic meeting of boys was held in Mr. Custance's room during the luncheon period yesterday and the general opinion seemed to be in favor of June 2, two weeks from today, as a date for the meet if that date is left vacant on the baseball schedule.

High School Notes.

Next Friday evening, the social career of the class of '06 will come to a close and all preparations are being made to make the Senior farewell spread the most enjoyable of all the delightful affairs which have been credited to the class.

The spread will commence early in order to have the program of dances as long as possible and the class is sure to attend almost in a body. The halls will be decorated in red and black, and La Brosse's orchestra will furnish the music. The committee in charge consists of Margaret Whipple, Mabel Culkin, Madge Millar, Florence Winchester, Ruby Harris, Hazel Britts, Henry Becker, Earl White, Guy Williams, Don Stalker and Charles McLennan.

SECULAR SHOTS AT PULPIT.

New York Tribune: The word obey is omitted from the form of marriage service in the new Presbyterian book of worship. The compilers evidently sought to bring the service into closer conformity with the actual conditions of married life.

New York Post: The story that Dowie plans to establish a Zionist mission among the Indians is made plausible by the explanation that it is to be among the "Eastern Cherokees," whose claim for $4,589,588 has just been allowed by the supreme court.

Philadelphia Record: It is said that John Alexander Dowie proposes, if his health shall be spared, to establish a new Zion on one of the Western Indian reservations. The proposition to stop the spread of monopoly by keeping in the possession of the government valuable oil, mineral and timber lands would be made still more provident and satisfactory if the reservation were so extended as to exclude the settlement on top of the lands of prowling religious fakirs.

Chicago Chronicle: Bishop Mallalieu preached an eloquent sermon at the First Methodist church on Sunday on the coming triumphs of the Christian faith and found occasion to inform his hearers that if they wished to enjoy good physical health they should avoid canned food. The connection between his subject and the advice is not apparent, but we wish to say that we agree heartily both with the bishop's theology and with his dietetics. If any one wishes to live long in this world and go to heaven when he dies he should follow the bishop's advice in both respects.

HANDLING THE GARBAGE.

Capt. Lewis Urges That City Should Perform Work Itself.

To the Editor of The Herald:

For the past week I have been trying to get all the information I possibly could regarding the granting of a franchise for the removal of the garbage of the city. From all I can learn I must say that I am very much opposed to a contract of this kind for several reasons. One of them is that the expense will be much in excess of the present cost and I cannot ascertain how any of the citizens are going to receive any special benefit. I will just mention how it will affect me personally. I am interested in a piece of residence property that has—without including basements or cellars—22,000 feet of space. This, at Mr. Root's price of 5 cents per 100 feet will cost me $11 per month for the removal of the garbage alone. Now for the past fifteen years I have paid $5 per month, not only for the garbage, but including all the ashes. The men who contract to do this work for me are perfectly satisfied with the price, but whenever circumstances compel them to give up the job there is always plenty ready and glad to take the contract at the same price.

Now at Mr. Root's last offer I cannot see why it will not cost me three or four times to do this work, including the ashes, more than it does now. Take my home; myself and family occupy 3,000 feet of space. That does not include cellar or attic. This would cost me $1.50 per month, but I understand $1.25 is the outside limit of cost for residences, and this for garbage alone. I have no space to pile the accumulated ashes of a year and have a man to take it away every two weeks, I never kept account, but I do not believe the total cost of keeping my yard clear of ashes and garbage amounts to $10 per year. Under the franchise desired by Mr. Root it would cost me certainly double this amount. I persume what affects mo affects the great majority of the people of the citizens of our city.

Now it seems to me that the time has come for the city of Duluth to take this work up; purchase proper and sanitary carts and everything that is necessary to go with them; employ men and do this work as it ought to be done and at actual cost to our people. There is no reason or sense in our citizens paying a profit to an outsider or anyone else for doing work that in my opinion ought to be done by the city. I have talked with several members of the city government regarding this matter. Some of them have stated that it was all right in theory, but the city had no money for this kind of work.

It would seem to me that if there was any really necessary work that would be a benefit to the city and to every one who resides here, it is the matter of keeping it clean and in a sanitary condition no matter what the cost is. If the city is not able to purchase an outfit this year let arrangements be made for doing it the coming year, and if necesary increase the taxes sufficiently to do this work in a thorough and sanitary manner. I sincerely hope the city government will turn this franchise down cold and hard at their next meeting. I believe in home rule.

Very truly, RAY T. LEWIS.

SELLS-FLOTO CIRCUS

Will Give Performance in Duluth Monday, May 28.

Now comes the cheerful circus press agent with his first aid to the children. The Sells-Floto Shows inaugurate their annual traveling season this year with the most costly, gorgeous and elaborate display ever seen under the enormous canvas.

The Sells-Floto Shows have grown to such magnitude as to necessitate enlargement in every department. And this famous amusement institution is proud of its home, and while on tour is ever a standing reflection of Denver's industry and genius.

The menagerie alone is nearly double its former capacity, for during the winter the old world has been scoured thoroughly for wild animals and strange beasts of every country, and now this attractive and highly educational department is complete in every particular. The cages, vans, chariots and tableaux cars are all new and especially attractive in wondrous architecture, conceded by all show men to be unequaled by any other firm, corporation, company or syndicate.

It has taken many years and several fortunes to place this department on such a lavish magnitude, to tickle the fancy and satisfy the mind of the generous public. When witnessing the grand street display from which no revenue is derived—only the gratification to please both young and old children—remember that what follows in the big canvas is more, meritorious. In the main tent many new features will suprise and delight the beholder, daring acrobatic acts will fill out a long and worthy program, more than enough to satisfy and please the most exacting critic and astonish everyone else. Two performances are given daily, rain or shine.

Coming on Monday, May 28.

GIVES STAG SMOKER.

Royal Arcanum Entertains Many Guests With Cigars and Program.

Duluth council, No. 1483, Royal Arcanum, gave a stag smoker at Elks' hall last evening for its members and friends, and about 150 persons enjoyed the social entertainment. The society has been giving a series of social entertainments during the past winter and spring, and this was the last for the season.

B. P. Neff, orator for the council, was the master of ceremonies, and under his management the affair passed off in an enjoyable manner. The program included several selections by the Royal Arcanum Mandolin club, songs by Charles Applehagen, Don Clark and E. P. Kreimer, dialect sketches by F. B. Beaupre, William Eastman and Joe Schwartz, an impersonation by Bruno Eyferth and a speech by E. L. Millar.

The local council is making preparations to initiate a class of more than thirty-five candidates.

MATERIAL IS HERE.

Lighthouse Department Will Start Work on Supply Station.

W. F. Beyer, a civil engineer of Detroit, connected with the government lighthouse department on the Great Lakes, has arrived at the Head of the Lakes to superintend the construction work of the lighthouse supply station, on the lower end of Minnesota Point. Mr. Beyer is assembling the material, and expects to have the work under way next week. Some delay has been had in getting the material here, and for that reason the work has not been started sooner.

About $14,000 is available for the improvements contemplated. These include a wharf, an oil house and buoy shed. Later a house will be erected for the custodian of the station.

ORDERS THE POPE TO REMAIN IN BED.

Rome, May 19.—When Dr. Lapponi visited the pope this morning he found his patient in an improved condition of health, although the pontiff passed a somewhat restless night, as the result of his attack of gout.

Owing to a slight rise in his temperature, Dr. Lapponi ordered the pope to remain in bed for several days.

MUCH LUMBER BURNED.

Bad Fire Occurs at Marathon City, Wis. ---Loss $50,000.

Wausau, Wis., May 19.—Fire of unknown origin broke out in the lumber yards of Phillips & Menzmer, at Marathon City, yesterday. Over 3,000,000 feet of lumber, valued at $50,000, have been consumed. Wausau sent an engine to help subdue the fire, which is threatening the mill and the town. The woods north of the town are burning fiercely.

With the aid of fire engines from Wausau and bucket brigades, the fire was confined to the mills where it started, and the city saved. The fire, which spread to the surrounding forest, is dying out.

North Bay, Ont., May 14.—A report has reached here that Cobalt, one of the mining centers in New Ontario, has been completely destroyed by fire. It is also reported that several persons were killed by an explosion.

A later dispatch says a large quantity of dynamite in the Northwestern section of the town, ignited by a bush fire, exploded, wrecking twenty-five houses. Several persons were injured, but so far as can be learned, no one was killed.

The wires are down between here and the northern towns, and the situation cannot be learned.

GALVANIC SOAP

Has no equal. There are hundreds of laundry soaps, but Galvanic is the only one which has brought joy to the home on wash day. It has been imitated, but has never been equalled.

GALVANIC may be used in cold or hot water. Beware of soaps that cannot be used in hot water. Galvanic is a hard water soap.

It is adapted to the water in Duluth and Superior.

GALVANIC does away with the boiling and the hard rubbing. It gets the clothes on the line at 8:30 a. m. instead of 10:30.

Your Grocer is authorized by us, for a limited time, to give with every 25 cent purchase of GALVANIC SOAP or Johnson's (Germ Proof) Washing Powder, a full size 10 cent cake of PALM OLIVE FREE.

This means, that with each dollar purchase, 4 cakes Palm Olive free. With 100 cakes purchase 20 cakes Palm Olive free. Ask your grocer for it.

THE RATE BILL PASSED.

The senate has passed the Hepburn rate regulation bill in an amended form, and the practical unanimity with which it was received gives hope that the changes that have been made in it are mostly for the better.

In the court review feature the senate has not strengthened the bill, and it will be fortunate, indeed, if it does not turn out that it has been seriously weakened. The senate amendment provides for a "broad review", and the question to be determined in practice is whether it is not broad enough to practically defeat the purposes of the measure by giving the railroads power to indefinitely delay the decision of applications for relief from unjust rates. This is what the railroads have fought for, and the fact that Senators Aldrich, Kean and others of the senate "combine" are not recorded as voting in the negative would indicate that they had got it.

However, the bill must go into conference, and the house may be able to bring about a narrower court review provision.

The measure, as passed by the senate, gives the interstate commerce commission power to revise rates after hearings before it, and its revision orders are to become effective within thirty days and continue in force for two years, "unless suspended, modified or set aside by the commission or by a court of competent jurisdiction." The United States circuit courts are to have jurisdiction, and no injunctions are to set aside the commission's orders without hearings. Appeals from the circuit courts are to be made directly to the supreme court of the United States.

The bill also aims to make railroads responsible for all special car service, which should bring the private car within the jurisdiction of the interstate commerce commission. Oil pipe lines, express companies and shipping car companies are brought within the authority of the commission. The bill prohibits passes and favoritism, prohibits railroads from transportating commodities produced by themselves, and finally reinstates the provision for imprisonment of rebaters, a most important change.

With the exception of the "broad court review" provision, it must be admitted that on the face of it the senate has materially improved the bill, and that the long weeks of debate and delay and subterfuge have not been wasted. It goes back to the house, apparently, a better bill than it was when the house sent it over to the senate. Such a result was unhoped for a few months back, and that the senate should have been driven to this righteous action is a powerful testimonial to the efficacy of an enlightened and awakened public opinion.

MONDAY'S MASS MEETING.

The city council, in search of light on the wishes of the people in regard to the proposed garbage contract, postponed action at its last meeting, and called a mass meeting to be held in the council chamber at the city hall Monday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock.

This is a matter that concerns every householder in the city, whether he owns or rents.

The city authorities are going to enforce strict removal and care of garbage, and either the pending contract will be accepted or the city will endeavor in some way to raise money to buy its own plant.

At the meeting Monday afternoon a chance will be given to air objections, and the advocates of the contract plan will have an opportunity to answer these objections and explain its merits.

Every householder who can get there should be on hand to inform himself and decide whether he wants the contract to be entered into or not.

It is up to the people, and they should take advantage of their chance to be heard.

Otherwise they can hardly complain if the result does not turn out to suit them.

POISE.

The quality of human nature usually spoken of as "poise" is a most admirable and enviable trait. Few people have it. Those who do possess it march steadily through life in perfect equanimity and comfortable balance, receiving events as they come with unruffled souls and forming an agreeable contrast to those whose mental and moral equilibrium is sadly shaken by the slightest untoward event.

Very likely it may be cultivated. Certainly its opposite may be acquired very quickly by abandoning yourself to the breezes of fortune, and letting them sway you where they will. These people of poise handle the affairs of life as certainly and as unerringly as a skilled mechanic handles a machine to the use of which he has been accustomed for many years.

People of poise do not give away to bursts of temper, do not suffer themselves to be overwhelmed by despair or discouragement, and do not spend idle hours magnifying their troubles by contemplating them.

A woman has made a suggestion, intended for women but good enough for men, that ought to help much toward the cultivation of poise. Her advice is given to those who are struggling with an irritable and melancholy disposition, and who are prone to think much of their troubles, and thereby to magnify them.

When you think your cup of sorrows is full, and you are just about ready to believe that you are the most unfortunate being in the world, sit down at a table with a sheet of paper and a pencil, and write out every grievance you have. Don't neglect any of them, large or small. Put every one down and if ill health is a part of your trouble add a full list of your disagreeable symptoms. Make it as complete as you can; cover that paper with your burden of woes, and if there is not room for them get more paper.

When you are quite certain you have no more sorrows to list, lay down your pencil, lean back in your chair, and read the list over. If you can get through it without a hearty laugh at yourself you are doing well. If the surge of merriment at your own folly that sweeps over you does not wash every grief away, read the list over the second time, and it cannot fail to cure you when you find how many of your troubles are imaginary, and how many of them, that loomed largely in the shadows of your mind, dwindle to insignificance when put down on paper.

That is one way of cultivating poise. Another is to form yourself into a Don't Worry club, with a membership of one, and a capital of stern decision not to magnify trifles or to submit to being oppressed and depressed by the vagaries of your imagination.

RESOURCEFUL WOMEN.

In the aftermath of the San Francisco earthquake are a multitude of stories showing human nature being tried in the fire of adversity. In many cases it failed, and unsuspected streaks of yellow and unexpected weaknesses developed. But in many more cases commonplace individuals suddenly developed into heroism, and altogether the sum of it tends to make man think rather the better of himself.

A case of peculiar pathos is reported from Washington. The family of a wealthy citizen of San Francisco, consisting of his wife and two daughters, had been spending the winter at the capital, living in luxuriant apartments, enjoying the social life and gayeties of Washington and having a comfortably good time of it generally.

They were out driving in their victoria the afternoon of the fire. Two days later the daughters, who had never been accustomed to anything but the most comfortable circumstances, and who had never had to think for a moment about the source of their comfort, were in search of work.

One of them has since secured a small place in one of the government departments, where she is doing clerical work on a small wage. The other is still looking for a similar place.

The father's fortune was all invested in a California insurance company. He is ruined, and his daughters will work to assist him in supporting them and their mother.

To realize the bravery and character in this one must look at it from the viewpoint of these daughters of luxury suddenly projected into poverty. It was a clean sweep. Nothing remained to them but their health and courage. Without hesitating a moment, without useless wailing and without idle regrets, they plunged into the vortex of everyday affairs and sought work. This means little to daughters of humble homes who have been brought up with the expectation that they would have to support themselves. But to those reared in luxury, who had never dreamed of such a possibility, it meant much, and it is a fine tribute to womankind that they accepted their fate with cheerful alacrity, and set themselves to the search for useful work without delay.

And this story is but a sample of many others. It is in times of stress and storm that human nature is proved, and that true character comes out in all its nakedness,

THE REAL DISEASE.

At the recent national conference on charities and corrections one of the speakers touched upon a most important subject when he said that a careful revision of the marriage laws of the different states is needed in order to decrease the supply of mental, moral and physically deficient children. He might have broadened this proposition, and said that by the same method much of the seriousness of the divorce evil could be removed.

This speaker was E. R. Johnstone, superintendent of the New York training school and chairman of the committee on defectives. Said he in part:

> Elopements, marriages under age, the marriage of people while intoxicated, consanguinous marriages, all need legal restriction and enforcement of the laws. Laws requiring the permanent custody of feeble-minded women at least are needed.

The Herald has on numerous occasions expressed the belief that the best and quickest way to get at the divorce evil was to begin at the foundation and remedy the marriage evil. That is not saying that marriage is an evil, because it is a great blessing when contracted under proper conditions. But in every state where marriage laws are lax, and ill-advised marriages can be quickly made without time for thought or interference, a premium is placed upon divorce, and the law helps to create conditions that make marriage worse than a failure.

Marriage is a very solemn thing, one of the most important and significant things that comes into the lives of human beings, yet in most states it is possible to hurry into it drunk, mad or under temporary infatuations, and it is small wonder that under such conditions it has been deemed necessary to have divorce laws that will enable the victims to hurry out of it again.

If it were possible to permit the mating only of men and women physically, mentally and morally perfect, an ideal race would result. But it isn't possible, and there is little use in talking about it. It is possible, however, to prevent marriages that are obviously a serious menace to society, and states that do not prevent them by law are laggard in their duty. To surround the marriage ceremony with forms and requirements likely to make those seeking it think deeply of its importance is wholesome. To require delays between the thought of marriage and the ceremony can do no harm, and it would prevent many marriages that are made on the spur of a thoughtless moment.

The divorce evil, and the evils of hereditary mental, moral and physical disease, can best be treated by stricter marriage laws. To treat individual cases and to restrict divorce is to doctor symptoms and neglect the real trouble.

WAKE UP, MINNESOTA!

While it is true that Minnesota, in common with many other states, is not getting by any means value received for its road expenditures, it is also true that it is far behind many others in its activity in road-building.

It was not until the last session of the legislature that it was possible to create a highway commission to oversee the building of roads in the state, to hold meetings for public enlightenment, and to gather and dispense in every possible way information likely to be helpful in road-building. Strangely enough, even then many of the representatives from farming communities opposed the measure bitterly, though primarily it will work to their advantage more directly than it will to that of any other class in the state, though all will be helped.

It will be the function of the highway commission, as explained at the good roads convention lately held in Duluth, to teach scientific road-building and to preach system and coherency in road plans. Under its supervision county road associations are being formed in each county, and an important work is cut out for these organizations in spurring public sentiment up to the point where it will force the legislature to make properly liberal appropriations in the way of state aid for road-building.

Next year, under the old tax levy of one-twentieth of a mill, the state, after paying overdrafts made by the last legislature, will have about $55,000 to distribute. If the people this fall accept a constitutional amendment that will be submitted to them, raising this tax levy to a quarter of a mill, the amount available thereafter on the present valuation will be about $200,000. This is very feeble aid, and will be scattered, under the present law, so widely that it will be of little use. No county is to receive more than 3 per cent nor less than ½ of 1 per cent of this amount, and St. Louis county, which needs roads badly and is already spending $70,000 a year besides work done by local communities, would get no more than $6,000 a year from the state.

It is plain that in view of the vast need, something much more elaborate than this must be done. New York has recently issued bonds to the extent of $50,000,000 for road-building. Many states pay half the entire cost of all road-building, while others pay two-thirds and even three-fourths.

Minnesota is an enlightened and progressive state, but it must, if it would hold its grade and keep moving ahead, open its eyes on the good roads question, and treat it with more liberality. It can afford to be liberal, for its expenditures would be a highly paying investment.

HOTEL GOSSIP.

"The residents of Niagara Falls aren't worrying nearly as much as the outside world over the possibility of the sacrifice of one of the greatest wonders of the world to modern comercialism," said O. C. Good of New York at the Lenox. "The falls today seem just as great as they ever did, and I really no not believe there is any special danger of their being destroyed altogether, or even injured enough to materially afect the grandness of the sight.

"The visitor to Niagara Falls who has read current literature upon the destruction of the falls may expect to find a local community plunged into mingled grief and indignation over the manner in which their beauty spot is being treated, but no indication of such a feeling is apparent. The citizens feel that the beauty and grandness of the place can be preserved, and yet allow certain opportunity for the play of commercialism. They figure that if they can have beauty and power at the same time, they may as well have it as beauty alone."

"They have a queer custom down in Cleveland of keeping a lot of the grocery stores open on Sundays," said A. C. Miller of Cleveland at the Lenox. "A systematic effort is now being made to break up the practice. The matter has been taken up by the retail grocers association, and resolutions protesting against such action have been passed. Nearly all the members of the association have agreed to close on Sunday, but the majority of the smaller dealers who are not members cannot be reached by the association as an organization, so outside aid has been asked for. Letters have been sent all the ministers of the city, and an effort is being made to work up public sentiment against he practice."

"The season at Isle Royale will soon be opened now," said Capt. W. H. Singer of Isle Royale at the St. Louis. "The help has been engaged at our hotel for the summer, and we are fast getting in readiness to take care of the guests. The season will be in full swing along in June, although most of the visitors will come later in the summer.

"No doubt exists in my mind that the island has a great future as a summer resort. The advantages that may be enjoyed there are superior to those of any place along the lakes, according to the estimation of some people who are in a position to know. All that is necessary to place the resort on a footing with any in the West is a little time and advertising. It is a noticeable fact that those who visit the island once are to be seen there every year thereafter, if they are able to go anywhere for an outing, and usually they recommend the trip to their friends, so the travel is increasing every year.

"We are doing a little advertising in the Chicago and Twin City papers, and I am sending my advertising literature over a pretty wide stretch of country, wherever it will be apt to accomplish the most good. The people interested in the island are hardly in a position as yet to carry on a really big advertising campaign, such as the eastern resorts get, but we are doing a little more every year, and as business grows it will be easier to attract attention to the place."

"The examination a barber in Wisconsin is compelled to pass through before plying his trade is a rigid one," said J. W. E. Gray of Reedsburg, Wis., at the McKay. "The examinations there are virtually the same as those for druggists or lawyers. There are 125 different skin diseases, and while a barber is not supposed to know the symptoms of all of them, he nevertheless is required to be thoroughly informed concerning the diseases coming directly under the observation of barbers.

"If a barber should happen to cut a patron, he should know immediately what remedy to apply, and especially should know how to keep the wound from possible infection. If there is an unsightly pimple on some man's face, the barber should know how to remove it painlessly, and there are many other indispensable requisites of a good barber. Twenty-two states have laws regulating barbering."

Indigestion, Avaunt!

New York World: This ought to be a good cure for indigestion. It is recommended by the eminent Dr. Bond in the London Lancet, a medical journal of world-wide repute.

"The indigestion must be a very hopeless one," says Dr. Bond, "which will not yield to a diet of a small cup of warm milk to which a teaspoonful of rum has been added, followed by a plain biscuit or two and some very mild cheese, paradoxical as this combination may seem."

According to Dr. Bond there is a subtle harmony between these ingredients that does the business.

THE WEATHER.

The west wind seems to have a mind to teach us that the northeast wind is not the only one that can bring chill weather. Last night and this morning, though the wind was not from the lake at any time, it was decidedly cool, and though when the sun struggled through the clouds from time to time it brought some relief, overcoats were in order, and there were no symptoms of summer. Last night the thermometer got down to 34 deg., while yesterday it was up to 64 deg. Warmer weather is expected tomorrow, but with it a return of the northeast wind. Says Mr. Richardson of conditions:

"The Northern Minnesota storm area has moved its center to the St. Lawrence valley, causing high westerly winds and light rain or snow in the Lake Superior region and rain over the Ohio valley during the past twenty-four hours. Some rain also fell over Western Kansas, Northern and Central Texas and North Pacific districts, due to low pressures developing in the plateau region and far Southwest. Temperatures continue high in Atlantic states, but it is much cooler in the lake region and upper valley sections, the cold weather attending the easterly movement of the high pressure area that is this morning central over the Red River valley. Freezing temperatures prevail in the latter district. Conditions indicate that partly cloudy weather will prevail in this locality tonight and Sunday, with probably frost tonight."

Following were yesterday's highest temperatures as recorded by the weather bureau:

The Age of an Egg.

British Agricultural Economist: A simple method of finding out the age of an egg is by means of the air space, which is situated toward the broad end of the shell. If the egg is held up between the hands before a light in a dark room the air space can be determined. In a perfectly fresh egg the air space is very small, but as age increases it extends, until when the egg is three weeks old the air space occupies about a sixth of the entire contents. With practice the age can be told to within twenty-four hours.

Saturday Night Talk

The Reserves in Human Nature.

Nothing is more admirable in the being called man, than the power he possesses to rise to an emergency and by drawing upon his reserves to meet bravely an unexpected test or carry to successful conclusion a difficult undertaking.

Think of the reserves of patience which enable the mother, for example, to endure the demands which careless and sometimes irritating children make upon her. The childless woman looks on with wonder. She has never taken any lessons in the school of parenthood and therefore she has not stored up a supply of that particular grace which a mother needs. And the manual laborer is another person whose supply of patience challenges respect. He has to have it in order to keep at his monotonous task day after day and fulfill with almost machine-like precision his part in the social and industrial scheme. There are in many a man also reserves of heroism. As you see Smith or Jones on the prosaic plane of their daily existense, you might not pick either of them out as conspicuous examples of the heroic and they are both, like the rest of us, blends of strength and weakness. But wait a bit. Something may happen tonight or tomorrow that will make this same Jones or Smith a popular hero. He will be rushing into a burning building and rescuing a sleeping child or he will stand at his post on the front of the car when by jumping he might avoid a serious accident that may maim him for life. Or he will meet some financial reverse or some personal bereavement with a fortitude of which we had never suspected him to be capable.

"Hurrah for Jones!" we will be saying. What good stuff there is in him, isn't there?" Even more beautiful and inspiring are the reserves of kindness and generosity which multitudes of men and women possess and draw upon readily when they are demanded. The world is far more tender than it was in former ages. How the millions of dollars do roll up when a great catastrophe does its devastating work. Cheerful, unforced giving it is, the fruit of real sympathy and pity. Bravo for human nature we say again as men of all creeds and no creeds unite to mitigate the woes of sufferers thousands of miles away. And what we witness on a large scale is duplicated daily in every city and hamlet of the land on a small scale as neighbor goes to neighbor on some errand of help or comfort as friend stands by friend in distress, as brothers spring to the succor of their brothers who have fallen behind in the race.

Yes, indeed, this poor, weak humanity of ours is capable of far greater things than is often realized. And each individual can do more and bear more, and when the pinch comes lend a stronger hand to others than we have been in the habit of doing, if we will only call out our reserves. And we can face temptation, too, and down it in reliance upon these same reserves of character. We need never, even when sorely pressed, yield a single point to the enemy of our soul if we bethink ourselves of the reinforcements within easy call.

Of course the securing of these reserves is a matter of forethought and of planning. We shall never have any reserves in the bank to draw upon when the proverbial rainy day comes, if we do not begin to save now. We shall never have any funds of valuable information to enrich our lives and the lives of others unless we improve our present chance to study, read and acquire facts and truths. We shall never have any reserves of virtue which may save the day for us as the arrival of Blucher saved the day for Wellington at Waterloo, unless we commence at once to lead virtuous, self-denying and sympathetic lives.

THE PARSON.

Rate-Cutting "Coincidences."

Philadelphia Record: An official of the Santa Fe testifies that the raising of rates on oil just at a time to favor the Standard Oil company was a coincidence. Of course, there is a chance to take this view of the matter, but the integrity of the conclusion is imperiled by the fact that the history of the concern is so largely made up of similar coincidences as to suggest absence of the element of accident. When "coincidences" are so piled up that the total is the history of a vast monopoly, wonder arises that an occasional coincidence does not work the other way.

No More Three-Bottle Men.

London Saturday Review: The fall in the sum received from the wine duties agrees, unlike many budget figures, with facts, perhaps we should say with observation. No one lunching in a club now can help noticing how very few men are taking wine. Compared even with ten years ago the change is marked. No doubt a large proportion, the majority of those who at one time took wine at luncheon are now taking their whisky-and-soda. But a large number take no liquor at lunch at all. At dinner the change is not great in the number who take wine, but in the character of the wine taken and the quantity per man.

Have you ever attended the rummage sale and the numerous side shows which are operated in connection with it? Of course you have, and some of you can appreciate the feelings of Bifkins when Mrs. Jones bustled in and laid a ticket on his desk.

"It's for the dinner," she explained. "It will be served in the church parlors from 6 until 8. You must surely come. I know you will have a delightful time."

"But, Mrs. Jones, I—"

"Oh, pshaw," said the good lady, "you can, too, and I shall surely look for you. No excuses will be accepted and I shall make it a point to look after you myself if you come out. I don't believe you have met all the nice people in our church and I will introduce you to some nice girls."

"Of course, I'd like to come but really I had already—"

"You can do that afterward; you get dinner any time from 6 until 8, you know."

There seemed to be no means of escape, so Bifkins dug in his pocket for 50 cents. He had figured that perhaps he would escape because of lack of funds, but pay day had passed recently and he still had money.

"You must surely come," said Mrs. Jones as she waddled out, the half dollar grasped tightly in one of her ample hands.

Bifkins was annoyed. Not over the loss of the 50 cents, but at the prospect of taking himself off to a strange church, there to stand around amid a lot of strangers and attempt to get something to eat. If he did not show up, Mrs. Jones would be offended and if he did, the chances were that she would be so busy superintending the whole she-bang that she would not see him at all. And he would stand around first on one foot and then on the other and curse a fate that had led him thither. He knew what he was going up against and that is why he hesitated. He not only hesitated, he was lost and he knew it.

"Well," he said, resignedly, "I suppose I might as well make the best of it. I only wish someone I didn't know so well and who didn't know my whole family so well had sold me that ticket. Then I would have passed the deal up, but as it is Mrs. Jones who has invited me, I see nothing to it but to go."

Bifkins closed his desk with a bang and went out to get a strong cigar.

"I might as well have all the fun I can before I go," he said. "I don't see why they want outsiders coming to their old dinners for anyway. It's all right to have the husbands of the managers of the enterprise there because they have nothing else to do, but it seems to me that unmarried men, who don't like to leave their accustomed haunts to gossip should be exempt, although it is all right to make them dig for tickets."

Bifkins went to his rooms and read and smoked until he thought the time ripe for departure. Then he looked at the yellow ticket again, that he might get directions and started out. He was not in a very good humor when he boarded the car, for the night was beastly. The wind howled and beat the rain-drops against the car windows, etc. It was one of those nights.

After the car had thrust itself into the heart of the East end, it was impossible for a near-sighted person to distinguish the corners. The moon had skidooed (to be very elegant) two nights before. Of course, the conductor did not call out the streets so that he could not be understood without the assistance of an interpreter.

Bifkins looked wildly out into the wild night in an attempt to get his bearings. He saw a house that looked like the one on the corner he wanted to get off at and yelled wildly to the conductor. That official gazed calmly at him and told him to push the button. Alas, he had forgotten that this was one of the big cars. He has been used to the East Fourth street "dinkies."

A thoughtful motorman stopped the car in the middle of a puddle about the size of Pike lake and permitted Bifkins to alight. This feat he accomplished with considerable subdued profanity. His conscience did not permit him to be too noisy with his cursing when he was about to attend an affair under the auspices of the church. And besides, there were several men on the back platform and he did not want to give them a chance to hand him the merry haw-haw.

"I ought to have brought a compass along," he mused, as he started up toward First street. "Who would have thought that they made nights as dark as this?"

He was forced to keep his head down and plod along. He already felt as damp as the weather. With a sigh of relief he noted the lights in the church, further on. An electric light was burning over the entrance to the basement, where the festivities seemed to be in progress.

"I wish I had had forethought enough to eat something before I came out here to dinner," he said. "I went to one of these affairs once and got so badly stung that I never really recovered. They called it a New England supper, but the best I got was a piece of pie."

He stamped his feet as he entered the vestibule, in an effort to get some of the thousands of rain-drops off his clothing. Some one was performing the same feat there.

"Nasty night, isn't it?" asked the other fellow.

"All of that and more,'" responded the sour Bifkins.

The other fellow was somewhat of a dandy and he took off his hat very carefully lest he muss his shining locks. Under ordinary circumstances, Bifkins took considerable pride in his personal appearance, but he was so out of sorts just at present that he did not care how he looked. He presumed that his hair stuck up straight behind so sudden was the jerk he gave his hat.

The walls were lined with hooks, and most of them supported damp outer garments belonging to the others present to serve or partake of the feast.

When he entered the big room where things seemed to be doing, Bifkins looked helplessly around. He searched the crowd for Mrs. Jones, but could not find that stout lady, although something of importance seemed to be going on in the middle of the room. He could not understand why Mrs. Jones was not present to boss the job.

He thought of fleeing and was just about to sling back to the cloakroom from whence he came when he was espied by the floorwalker and his escape cut off. The newcomer rushed forward and treated Bifkins to one of those Ancient Order of Brotherly Love hand-shakes.

As the man seemd to be a person of considerable intelligence, yet of no apparent importance, Bifkins presumed his new friend to be the pastor of of the church.

"Come right in and look at the booths," said the pastor. "The ladies have not quite completed their dinner preparations, I believe. And besides, no doubt you are interested in the sale as well as the demands of the inner man."

"Quite so," said Bifkins. He felt that was non-committal enough and real classy people in novels always said it.

Just the same, the mention of the booths startled our friend. He stuck his hands into his pockets with alarm and hoped that he would not be called upon to buy anything. Curses on the luck! An inventory showed that he had only 45 cents on his person. Why had he not thought of the sale and brought along sufficient capital to make a showing if he got in a tight place and had to buy some knick-knack?

"Let's see, what is the name?" asked the kind, old pastor, "I really don't remember having ever heard it. You are not a regular attendant at the church, are you?"

"Oh, no," said Bifkins, "I attend a church in the West end. I came out here tonight upon the invitation of Mrs. Jones. My name is Bifkins."

"I see, I see," murmured the clergyman. "You are most welcome. I wonder where Mrs. Jones is tonight, I haven't seen her since this afternoon."

Finally, the clergyman left and turned to other new-comers, whom he rewarded with hearty hand-shakes and other friendly signs. Bifkins found a seat in a far corner and sat back as far as possible. Despite the wet weather, a large number of the faithful were on hand. All the women were trying to talk at once and most of them stood around and tried to be glad because they had come.

All of them seemed to become imbued with a desire to eat at once and the throng started for the other room, where the tables had been laid out in all their glory by the ladies of the church. Every woman was represented by something, from dishes down to real linen table cloths and napkins. All of the silverware was supposed to be marked with colored string but Bifkins smiled to himself when he thought of the trouble that the owners would have in getting back their own spoons and not those of Mrs. So-and-So, whose were not so good.

He was forgotten in the mad rush for the dining room, and he was very grateful. When the throng had seated itself, he found a small table in a corner and sat down without further ado, hoping that no one else would come to annoy him.

He did not mind the first quarter of an hour that he had to wait. But after he had been sitting there for fully half an hour, he began to fidget. Soon, a pretty girl with a spick-and-span apron on came in sight. The young women of the congregation were doing the honors as waitresses, as is customary at all affairs of this kind. She halted at the table whereat Bifkins waited and informed him that she was prepared to do his bidding.

Her good looks made up for the long wait he had had. She furnished him with a napkin and then started out in quest of food. After a long interval, she returned, looking rather tired.

"How does it happen that the attendance is so small at a table presided over by such a pretty girl?" asked Bifkins.

The girl laughed. "It does seem rather strange, doesn't it," she said jestingly. "Maybe it is because I did not get here until a short time ago. I had to work late and had to wait long for a car."

Bifkins accomplished one of his best smiles. This young person was charming, and the grub was rattling good, even if a fellow did have to wait a couple of hours to get it. He got away with his soup with such alacrity that the fair waitress noted it, and when she returned with the next course, the dishes were heaped high with food. And when she brought dessert, two portions instead of one adorned the dish.

She did not stand around and watch him eat, but was near at hand all the while. When he was half through with his dessert, she stepped up to his chair and said:

"I beg your pardon, but I have forgotten to collect your ticket. We have to turn them in, you know, so that we can tell how much the society has taken in."

"I beg your pardon a thousand times for not producing it before," said the polite Bifkins, as he fished in his pockets for the ticket Mrs. Jones had given him. "Here it is," he said, as he handed the girl the yellow ticket. She looked at it closely and began to smile.

"This isn't one of our tickets," she said. "You are at the wrong dinner. You should have attended the one given by the Methodists in the next block. This is a Presbyterian affair."

Bifkins was too astounded to say much of anything. He looked decidedly sick, and the girl's smile grew broader. This certainly was a good joke,

"Don't take it so hard," she said, "I think our dinner every bit as good as the one you would have got down on the next corner."

"But that is the wrong ticket, I must pay you," stammered the unfortunate man, as he dug for his money. All he could mass was the 45 cents.

"Well, what do you think of this?" he remarked, "I can only find 45 cents on my clothes. This is very awkward—but I am afraid you will have to trust me until tomorrow for the other 5 cents. Do you suppose the other church members will raise a row?"

"I am sure they won't, for they will never know anything about it," said the girl. "Keep the 45 cents, you will need car fare, you know, and I will turn in one of my tickets as yours."

"Oh, I can't think of that for a minute," said Bifkins. "I——"

"That is the only thing to do," said the young woman, smiling still more. She seemed to be prettier when she smiled.

"Well, how am I to reimburse you for this great kindness?" said the man, looking expectantly at her.

"Oh, don't bother about that. You paid the Methodists 50 cents for their ticket, and we gave you a dinner. That 50 cents was intended for the heathen, and what difference does it make whether the Methodists or the Presbyterians get it?"

But Bifkins was not satisfied.

"That will not do at all. I want to repay you. Won't you give me your name and your address?"

The girl hesitated, and he thrust one of his cards in front of her. "Write it on the back of this card," he said. She looked at the name on his card, hesitated a minute, and then scribbled her name and address.

Bifkins left the church straightway. When he got home he happened to feel in the pocket of his cravenette and found a dime and two nickels. "Well, I probably wouldn't have found out her name if I had thought of these," he said.

THE OLD SETTLER'S TALE

The Story of Bill Hogan's Goat, His Strange and Ungoatlike Propensities, and the Revenge of Ole, the Woodsman.

"Yes," said the old timer, as he drew out a loaf of eating tobacco, and carved himself a comfortable slice, "those old times in Superior before the boom broke, were great days."

The little coterie of listeners drew up their chairs in a circle, expectantly, and waited in respectful silence for the old timer to continue.

"Did I ever tell you boys the story of Bill Hogan's goat? I'll call him Bill Hogan because that ain't his name, and Bill's still living right here in Duluth. Bill is what you would call an impulsive fellow when he gets started, and is a little previous with his fists and even his shooting irons, and if this kid here should take it into his head to print this yarn, I might have to decide to go West and grow up with the country.

"Bill used to keep the worst whisky in Superior, in those days. You fellows think that it would be a hardship to drink the fusel oil and brown sugar they dish out to the jacks on the Bowery now, but say, do you know what the worst whisky in Superior in the eighties was like? Why say, the fumes from that stuff used to burn the corks out of the bottles. It tasted like hair oil flavored with a streak of lightning. Bill used to buy a gallon of wood alcohol, once a year, from a Chicago factory, and 'renovate' it. It lasted him all year. He used to call the stuff the 'Woodsman's Bouquet' or something of that kind.

"Bill had a dinky little hole in the wall down on the lower end of Tower avenue. Out in front he kept his woodsmen's Bouquets, and at the back there was a little room, where a philanthropic gentleman with a dough face and a diamond shirt stud, helped the lumberjacks get rid of their money by means of a roulette wheel. He and Bill worked in cahoots. Bill got the woodsmen into a receptive mood with the Boquets, and the gent with the dough face did the rest. With with the Bouquets under his belt a lumberjack would be willings to give odds that the sun would rise in the West the next morning."

The O. T. stopped to shift the quid to the other eye tooth, loosed a stream of tobacco juice, in a masterly manner, at the bull's eye of the cuspidor, and continued.

"Now the dearest thing to Bill's heart, next to the secret of the Woodsmen's Bouquets, was a goat. He was a long, lean, mangy looking beast, with a scraggy beard, and the meanest eye I ever saw in any kind of a head. He was so thin his ribs used to wear holes through his hide, and his backbone was like a buzz saw.

"He was the meanest, scraggiest, cussedest lump of deviltry that ever walked on four legs. He used to wander around the saloon, with his head down, in a most disconsolate manner, and he looked so poor, and mean, and weak, that you wouldn't think he had strength to tear a yellow poster off a billboard. Then, suddenly, and without any warning, he'd duck his head between his legs, flirt that scrubby little tail of his once or twice, and launch himself at the most convenient piece of human anatomy he could find. The brute never missed his mark. If a fellow was leaning with his back against the bar, and his hands in his armholes, and if that geat aimed at the second button of his vest, he'd get it. He never got the first or the third button, but if he aimed at that second button he'd fetch it every time.

"Then Bill would drag the customer into the back room to get his breath, and that hairy devil would continue his dejected amble around the saloon.

"The goat seemed to know enough not to get promiscuous with his deviltry. He never chose a solitary lumberman with heavy river shoes, for he seemed to know he would get his bare old ribs stove in. But he'd always pick a fellow out of a crowd, and then when the poor jack got his wind, he would have to buy the drinks for the bunch.

"Oh, that goat was a great trade-getter. There was no question about that.

"The goat had one besetting vice. It was beer. He used to keep the drip pans under the beer taps, licked dry, and on Saturday nights, I've seen that old he devil with the most beautiful skate you ever saw. He'd stagger around the saloon, with his bleary old eyes dripping, and the beer running from his scraggly old beard, and when he was jagged he was the most disreputable, unregenerate-looking beast you ever saw. He was a whole temperance lecture in himself, and if you ever saw a picture of a hoary sinner that goat was it.

"Well, one day there was a bunch of 'bully boys' came in from a camp near Hurley. They were flush and started in to blow their money on Bill's bouquets. One big fellow, whom they called Ole, got a beautiful start with about three of the bouquets, when his shoe came untied. He stooped down to fasten the lace, and that scraggy old sinner saw his mark. Did he take it? He got a brace with his feet against the wall for a start, gave two short, little, bucking jumps, and they fished Ole out of the wreck of the swinging doors, cussing in Scandinavian in a way that made his breath smell of brimstone.

"The goat retired to a corner, sat down and blinked one eye at the crowd in a way that made him look like an imp from Hades.

"The bunch sat on Ole until he calmed down, borrowed enough money from his pockets to pay for another round of bouquets, gave the goat one, which he was wise enough to refuse, and dragged Ole out, swearing vengeance.

"That was Tuesday night, and it was Saturday before Ole and his crowd got decently sober again. Saturday night, about 8 o'clock, they blew into Bill's place again, for a final round before they hit the trail for the camp. Business had been booming. It was a warm night, and most of the sales were beer, and that hoary, old devil had a beautiful jag. He had been cleaning out beer pans since 5 o'clock, and he was tanked up proper. He was the drunkest goat that ever sneaked a tomato can from an ash pile.

"Ole paid no attention to him, but ordered some beer, and went over in the corner and sat down.

"Now that goat was not what you'd call a friendly animal. He didn't seem to crave companionship, either human or otherwise, and it wasn't often you could get within kicking distance of him. But this night he had enough beer in him to be sociable. It wasn't long before he snooped around past Ole, and we saw Ole reach out his hand. The goat sniffed at it, and then we saw him munching at something Ole was feeding him. We didn't pay any attention, thinking Ole was giving him a piece of his sandwich or a pretzel, and in a minute Ole came back to the bar.

"About a minute later Bill set up a howl you could hear a mile.

"'Howly mother,' he yells, 'look at the goat.'

"There was that hairy old sinner, standing in the middle of the floor, with his feet braced out cornerways to keep his balance. He was the most astonished looking goat you ever clapped your eyes on. His sides were slowly swelling out till he looked like a partly inflated balloon. His scrubby tail was sticking out stiff, and his scraggly old beard was fairly bristling. He kept getting bigger and bigger, until we thought he was going to explode.

"Then he gave a bleat and started for the spring weather outside. When we got to the door all we could see was a cloud of dust headed for south by southeast, and it wasn't losing any time about it either.

Ole had slipped out the back door when we got back, and the way Bill tore around was something scandalous.

"'Where is that blank, blank Swede?' he yelled, but Ole's friends weren't giving out any information.

"Late that night I hunted up Ole in the lodging house where he kept his 'turkey.' He was doubled up on his bed, with the tears streaming down his face, and still laughing.

"'What in thunder did you do to that goat?' I asked.

"'I tank, by yiminy, ay get even,' said Ole.

"'But what did you give him?' I asked.

"'Yeast,' said Ole."

"RUSH ORDERS A PLEASURE." 30-32 West First St.

If he will not sell Arbuckles' ARIOSA write to us. We will supply you direct. You will get greater value for your money—a better pound of coffee—full weight—than he can sell you under any other name. He cannot sell Arbuckles' ARIOSA loose, by the pound out of a bin or bag, because we supply it only in sealed packages that you can identify every time, which protect the coffee from the dust and impurities that loose coffee absorbs—and insure full weight. Coffee exposed to the air loses its flavor, strength and purity. You cannot tell where it came from—neither can the grocer—he may think he knows—but he doesn't, and all you can ever know is the price ticket. It is worth remembering that outward appearance is no indication of "cup" quality.

Grocers as a rule are honest, trustworthy men who would not consciously mislead you. Whenever one of them advises you to take loose grocery store coffee, instead of Arbuckles' ARIOSA, he doubtless believes he is doing you a favor, whereas he is really depriving you of the most wholesome and delicious beverage that you can buy, something better than anything else he can sell you for the price. The sales of Arbuckles' ARIOSA Coffee exceed the sales of all other package coffees in the United States combined, and the business of Arbuckle Bros. exceeds that of the four next largest concerns in the world, simply because the public actually receives better coffee for their money in Arbuckles' ARIOSA than they can buy in any other way.

Arbuckles' ARIOSA Coffee is good to drink—it quenches the thirst and tastes good. Most people need it. It aids digestion, increases the power and ambition to work and it makes one feel like doing things—no after depression.

United States soldiers drink more coffee than the soldiers of any other nation.

If your grocer does not sell ARIOSA let us send you a Family Box.

On receipt of $1.80, express or postal money order, we will send 10 pounds of ARIOSA in a wooden box, transportation paid to your nearest freight station. The $1.80 pays for the transportation and the coffee, which will be in the original packages bearing the signature of Arbuckle Bros. that entitles you to free presents. Ten pounds—ten packages—ten signatures. If you write for it we will send free a book containing full particulars and colored pictures of nearly 100 presents for users of Arbuckles' ARIOSA Coffee.

The price of coffee fluctuates—we cannot guarantee it for any period.

BAD FIRE AT STANLEY, WIS.

One Hundred Residences and Many Business Houses Destroyed.

Stanley, Wis., May 19.—Fire, which started from a spark from the Northwestern mill, has been raging all the afternoon, but at 8 o'clock last night, practically was under control. Over one hundred residences and a dozen buildings have been destroyed and the loss is estimated at $200,000. The fire broke out in the stables of the Northwestern Lumber company and spread rapidly. A high wind from the west carried the flames away from the Northwestern mill and saved that structure, but six blocks to the east were completely burned out. The large department store of the Northwestern Lumber company was among the business places wiped out and the loss to building and stock will total $40,000. Among the other losers were: J. N. Olson, furniture, $4,000; Long & Ness, meat market, $4,000; Christian & Konsella, farm implements, $3,000; Norwegian church and Young People's Reading room, $6,000. The damage in the residence section is estimated at over $100,000, every house being destroyed between the Northwestern store and Franklin street.

The flames were blown by a high wind from the west and so rapid was the progress of the conflagration that practically nothing could be saved from the residences. The public library was on fire several times, but the walls of the building and most of the books were saved. The high school building was threatened but heroic work on the part of the firemen saved it. Engines and firemen were sent from Thorpe, Eau Claire and Chippewa Falls and the firemen succeeded in keeping the flames out of the main business section. The store of W. D. Schultz, across from the Northwestern store, was afire several times, and if the flames had not been checked here the whole business section would have gone.

At midnight the firemen had the fire under control.

The Northwestern Lumber company's lumber yards and large feed mill also were burned. The aggregate loss is now placed at $300,000. No lives were lost and no one was injured.

DUN'S WEEKLY TRADE REVIEW

Higher Temperature Accelerates Movement of Merchandise.

New York, May 19.—R. G. Dun & Co.'s Weekly Review of Trade says: Higher temperature accelerates the movement of seasonable merchandise and improves agricultural conditions, except where the precipitation has been insufficient. The season was somewhat backward on the farms until this week, but lost ground is being regained, although the scarcity of labor delays operations. Customary quiet prevails in certain lines that are between seasons and mercantile collections are still irregular, yet the future is regarded with increasing confidence. Manufacturing returns indicate future activity and little idle machinery, some sections of the iron and steel industry having secured contracts covering output more than a year ahead and shipments of footwear from Boston are surpassing all records, while the textile mills operate freely, notwithstanding the high prices for raw materials. Despite the coal strike and interruption to freight handling at lower lake ports, railway earnings for the first week of May were 1.2 per cent larger than in the corresponding week last year.

Foreign commerce in April surpassed the same month in any preceding year, both as to exports and imports, and it is especially gratifying to note the gain in shipments of manufactured products. At this port for the last week imports gained $3,421,929, and exports lost $1,280,609 in comparison with last year's figures.

Strength still prevails in the hide market, although large tanners are not operating freely, but numerous small orders made a good showing in the aggregate, and there is no evidence of trading below full rates. Leather is well maintained on the whole.

Failures this week numbered 211 in the United States, against 234 last year, and 16 in Canada, compared with 11 a year ago.

BOYS STOLE WHEELS.

Two Youths Are Arrested on Charge of Stealing Several Bicycles.

Clifford Dwyer and George Oven, two 16-year-old boys, were arrested last evening by Officer Bradley on the charge of having been implicated in the theft of several bicycles during the last month.

Several bicycles have been reported missing since May 1, and the police have been trying to find the guilty party. The boys are said to have confessed stealing the wheels, and gave as their excuse that they wanted to buy shares in a shoe shining parlor.

SUPPORT IS NECESSARY

Those Opposing Garbage Collection Will Be Out in Force.

Council Will Be in Predicament If Plan is Rejected.

If the proposition of John M. Root is to be approved at the meeting to be held Monday afternoon in the city hall, the citizens who favor the plan will have to take an active part in pushing it, and appear at the meeting.

Those who are opposed to the plan are sure to be out in force, and if those who favor it are content to remain away from the meeting, it will result in an overwhelming opposition to the garbage collection idea.

Members of the Women's council have expressed themselves as being favorable to it, and they will have representatives at the meeting on Monday.

The West Duluth Commercial club has opposed the plan, claiming that it will involve a useless expense on the householders.

One feature of the condition of affairs has been overlooked in the general discussion of the proposition. Under the ordinance recently passed by the city council, some system of garbage collection must be adopted by June 1, which will provide for two collections of garbage a week from residences, and one each day from the business district of the city, and the steel receptacles must be provided for the garbage whether Mr. Root's bid is accepted or not. Up to the present time householders have been having their garbage removed about once a week, or even less frequently.

If Mr. Root's bid is not accepted, the city will have to provide some other means to take care of the refuse. No funds are available to put in a sanitary department at the present time and do the work free of charge, paying the cost from the general fund, and under the present city charter it is very doubtful if the city could establish such a department and charge a fee for the collection as Mr. Root proposes to do.

The city must therefore fall back upon the plan of having a contractor do the work, and the only course left open would be to readvertise for bids. Mr. Root's bid was the only one submitted, and nobody has since appeared who is anxious to do the work at the price asked by Mr. Root.

THE PEOPLE ARE PANIC STRICKEN

Many Refugees Come Into Marinette From Burned Region.

Marinette, Wis., May 19.—Deputy State Game Warden Charles Nelson of Madison, and County Warden Robert Hitchon, reported here today from the forest fires in the Lake Noquabay region. They say that the flames were fully 100 feet high and swept over the country with a terrible roar. At several points they assisted the settlers to save their homes where possible, and in others to bury their furniture to keep it from the fire. The settlers in this part of the country were in great danger and the Wisconsin and Michigan railroad officials were finally reached and sent a train to take them out of the zone of fire. Fully twelve or fifteen farmers were burned out and a number are still unaccounted for. There may have been loss of life. People all over the Lake Noqua bay region were panic stricken and a big crowd of refugees came in on the Wisconsin and Michigan train.

Will Cut No Figure.

In a group of local politicians this afternoon, discussing the sheriff's fight, somebody mentioned letter-writing, and it brought the usual laugh.

"That's all right," said a prominent local leader in the group, "but the only letter in the mix-up is John Armstead's, and in my opinion that will cut no figure whatever. It is on its face a purely personal and confidential letter, which one man, especially a free, open-hearted fellow like Armstead, might write to a man in whom he imposes confidence. Naturally, there are things in it, not intended for general reading, that might not sound as they would if they had been written for public reading, but in this case they are thoroughly harmless and innocent, and will have no bearing on the campaign except to earn Armstead a little good-natured joshing, which I presume he is getting all right. But while it is a letter a man might write to a friend, it is not one he should write to an ass."

PROTECT YOUR POSIES.

Weather Forecaster Richardson Says Killing Frost Is Due.

Horticulturists and flower fanciers of Duluth are warned by Weather Forecaster Richardson to look out for their flowers and gardens, for there is going to be a heavy frost. This is rather late for a killing frost in this part of the country, but it happens to be due tonight, and some damage may be done if flowers are not made ready for it.

By tonight, Mr. Richardson says, the wind will shift to the east, but it will be warmer tomorrow. Some snow fell at Grand Rapids, Minn., this morning, but Duluth is in no danger of this. Maybe the hail storm of Thursday headed it off.

FIRES CUT OFF TRAINS

Traffic on South Shore Road is Temporarily Blocked.

Duluth Train Out Friday Night, Returns From Thomaston.

Owing to the forest fires raging in Northern Michigan, no passenger train arrived in Duluth from Marquette, Mich., today, although a special train was run to Duluth from Thomaston, this side of Trout Creek, where a bridge was burned, preventing any trains from crossing.

The morning train from the East over the Duluth, South Shore & Atlantic railway was due here at 8:55 o'clock. The special arrived at 1:30 p. m. The latter had no passengers from points east of Thomaston, for the trains from the east and west are unable to get within three miles of each other. The special is really the train that left here for the East at 6:20 p. m. yesterday. It was unable to get far past Thomaston, and so returned to Duluth today, having to run through a part of the fire belt, and over at least one bridge that was reported to be burning at the time.

Large crews of men with the necessary working tools have been sent to the scene of the trouble, and it is expected that by tonight all the bridges will be repaired sufficiently for trains to pass over them. It is stated at the general offices of the South Shore road that none of the bridges is completely destroyed, and the train for the East will probably leave here at the regular time tonight, 6:20 o'clock.

The telegraph wires are working all right this afternoon, but the South Shore officials say they have received no special reports of the fire other than those pertaining directly to the delays of the trains. The freight trains are out of commission for the time being as a result of the fires.

CITY BRIEFS.

Decoration day services will be held at Temple Emanuel next Friday evening, May 25. The services will be for all denominations. Dr. Mendel Silber will preach, and special musical numbers will be rendered by the Sunday school choir.

Consignment of ore cars from the Pressed Steel Car company of Pittsburg are being received daily by the Duluth, Missabe & Northern road. The Missabe road ordered seventy-five new cars and they are being delivered in lots ranging from five to fifty. They are going into service at once.

The funeral of Edward Anderson will be held Sunday afternoon at 2 o'clock from the Swedish Mission church, Twenty-first avenue west and Second street.

Owing to the absence of the justice of the peace at Proctor, prisoners arrested there are being brought to the Duluth municipal court. James Christie and Charles Aubrey were arraigned this afternoon on charges of drunkenness and disorderly conduct.

Judge Cant this morning denied the motions of the Duluth & Northeastern Railway company for new trials of the fire damage actions instituted by Andrew Wilson and Andrew Johnson. The settlers claimed that their property had been damaged by fires started by section hands on the railroad. They were awarded verdicts for small amounts.

Judge Dibell has filed an order adjudging Roy Bell the owner of the title to the southeast quarter of section 6-15-16. The action was brought by Bell against William Robbie to quiet title.

Joseph Stuber has petitioned the district court to dismiss the appeal of Bischen Brothers from the former order of the court granting Stuber a new trial of his civil action. The order is asked on the grounds of abandonment.

The Women's Alliance of the Unitarian church will meet next Wednesday afternoon at the home of Mrs. William Burgess of 2017 East Second street.

W. B. Shaver has started suit in district court against Arthur and Ida Thayer to recover payment on a bill for building material claimed to have been furnished at Virginia two years ago. He asks judgment for $127 and petitions the court to sell the property to satisfy the account.

Miss Florence Hyland will sing "O Divine Redeemer" by Gounod at the Lakeside Presbyterian church tomorrow morning.

Seats for the "Story of the Reformation" are now on sale at Boyce's Drug store, Abbett's, 1902 West Superior street, and Nygren's at West Duluth. They will be given at the Lyceum next Thursday and Friday.

COAL OPERATORS SAY THEY FEAR NO TROUBLE.

Cleveland, May 19.—Despite the reports which came from Dillonvale, Smithfield and other points in the strike zone, Cleveland coal operators, who are interested in the properties, declare there will be no trouble. They explain that the apparent inactivity of the local officials argues that there is no cause for alarm, and deny that there has been any move to seek the protection of state troops. They contend that conditions are peaceful.

THINK THAT MAN FLED, FEARING AN EXPOSURE.

Chicago, May 19.—George S. Baker, a former member of the Illinois legislature and a prominent Evanstonian, has disappeared and his family have called upon the police to assist in finding him. Financial difficulties are said to be the root of the trouble that caused him to leave without a word of warning or farewell.

For one thing, he is said to have taken money intended for others and to have kept them unsuspicious by paying interest—the principal not being forthcoming.

Baker's law business was large ly of a chancery nature, and his clientele included a number of board of trade operators. This circumstance led to the rumor that speculation on the market had led him into losses amounting to $50,000. It was said his valn endeavors to recoup discouraged him to such an extent that he fled, fearing ruin.

She has been keeping house for him during the past two years. He is in jail awaiting his preliminary examination.

EMPLOYES WANT GOLD.

Washington, May 19.—Employes in the canal zone have acquired such a taste for American gold and paper money that the Panama silver which was formerly hoarded has now been thrown into circulation and bankers who formerly had great difficulty in supplying silver enough to pay the wages of laborers on the canal zone are now anxious to give the commission all the silver it will take.

HIS LARGE LEGACY.

Boston Herald: "Con" Horan, a well known traveling man from the upholstery district of Boston, while in Keene, N. H., stepped into the "Museum," Keene's oldest dry goods house, to display his hangings. "Con" is a brother of the late Maurice Horan, the senior partner of the firm for which he was traveling. Since his last call his brother had died.

Mr. Pressler, the manager of the "Museum," asked him what became of the business, to whom it was left, and "Con" replied: "It was left to my mother, and after her death to my youngest brother."

Mr. Pressler then asked: "Well, what did they leave to you, 'Con'?"

THE DOG IN FICTION.

Harper's Magazine: We will venture to own that it was with a sense of something purposely banal in his answer, when the other day we asked a young novelist whether he had ever thought of tackling an animal for a hero, and he replied:

"Yes, a dog!"

Dogs have been heroes almost from the moment they ceased to be wolves and foxes and turned upon their savage ancestors in defense of their new-found human friends. There is doubtless something to be said on the side of the wolves and foxes in the matter. One can see how they might well accuse the dogs of race-treason. But this is a point of view which no believer in the heroism of dogs will take.

"Allow," we imagine such a one urging, "that the wolves and foxes are right in much they claim. Admit, for the sake of argument, that dogs are filthy brutes, with habits that no wolf or fox would indulge; that they bring fleas into the house and a bad smell; that they go straight from a perfumed bath, the curled darlings of tender mistresses, and seize the first occasion of rolling in carrion; that they are worse than swinish in their diet if permitted to indulge their preferences; that in guarding the shepherd's flocks by night they will sup on the lambs of neighboring folds if opportunity offers; that they are nervous and hysterical, and that they will rouse the households they watch over with a thousand false alarms, and then yield to the first burglar who tempts them with a bit of meat; that, knowing the superior intelligence of their own species, they have such a low taste for society that they will rather consort with the stupidest little boy, or the greatest blackguard of a man, or the silliest doll of a woman, than with the best and wisest dog that ever was; that they are vain, jealous, vindictive and cruel; that their peculiarly excitable temperament renders them liable to the most dreadful of diseases, especially in a state of high domestication, when they go mad and incontinently bite their dearest friends, who presently expire in inexpressible torments; that in the country they minister mainly to the idleness of man, and in towns are an unmitigated nuisance. But what of all that? Do they not throttle venomous serpents about to bite infants in their cribs and then suffer themselves to be precipitately slain by the rash fathers who mistake the blood of the reptile for that of their offspring? Do they not constantly save children from drowning? Do they not come and notify people that their masters are lying helpless from injury or exhaustion in waste places, and pull at the garments of the incredulous till they go to the rescue?"

It must be confessed that arguments like these leave the wolves and foxes scarcely a leg to stand on, and establish the dog almost unassailably in that quality of hero in which he has not yet been adequately, or at least coherently, painted. His heroism illustrates a thousand anecdotes and a hundred short stories, but it does not yet illumine a sustained fiction, say, of 120,000 words.

GOOD FIELD FOR YOUNG MEN

Is Found in Traffic Department of Railroads, Says G. J. Grammar, Vice President in Charge of Traffic of the New York Central Lines.

As the population of the country, particularly the territory west of the Missouri river, is increasing rapidly, more miles of railroad are being constructed, there is more business for the transportation companies, and consequently more persons are required to operate the common carriers. Prosperity means that a big majority of our children are attending school, and a large percentage of them will pursue college courses. Railroading has come to be a science, and for several years many colleges have taught engineering with regard to its application to railroad work. Recently the universities of two states have enlarged their circulations by adding departments for teaching general railroad principles, among which is that of traffic. Many railroad officers are questioning the success of such a department as applied to traffic. It is not my purpose to enter into a debate on this point, beyond saying that I believe the principles of traffic management of a railroad may be taught successfully in schools. By this I mean principles and not practices. I see no reason why rate-making, with its many divergent features, tariffs, prorating, competition between railroads and districts, traffic relations of railroads with one another and with the government, legal responsibilities of the common carrier, and other features in this line, could not be outlined and studied in schools. A thorough mastery of these principles by a young man before he goes into railroad practice could not but help make him a better officer and save him several years that otherwise must be consumed in learning the same principles in a railroad office.

After devoting twenty-five years to railroad work, the occupation is still congenial to me, and I think there are as many openings and as many opportunities in the business today for young men of the right class as there were ten, twenty or thirty years ago, and I am of the opinion that were all fields of labor canvassed, none would be found offering better opportunities to the conscientious, ambitious young man than the transportation world.

There is a public impression that the jurisdiction of railroad officers is somewhat co-ordinate; that a superintendent knows all about freight and passenger rates, and that a general freight or passenger agent directs the operation of trains as well as makes tariffs. While this impression is not serious it is confusing and often causes unnecessary trouble to passenger and shipper and many times unmerited criticism of railroad management. The traffic and operating departments of railroads are as separate and distinct in their jurisdictions as the army and navy. Officers of the operating department have to do with the running of trains, employment of men and general maintenance of track and right of way, but they have absolutely nothing to do with the making of rates or the securing or routing of freight or passengers. On the other hand officials of the traffic department make the rates and secure the business for the road and turn it over to the operating department for transportation. The traffic department of a railroad is devided into two distinct branches, freight and passenger. Those employed in these branches work under separate sets of officers, final authority of both usually being merged in a general traffic manager. The general organization of these two departments is too well known to require explanation.

The operating and traffic departments are the two big wings of a railroad that come more closely in contact with the public, and for this reason there is probably more desire on the part of young men with no particular technical learning to enter one or the other than there is to engage in the accounting, engineering or other branches of railroad work. The traffic department more than the operating is the side of a railroad that is in the lime-light, and for this reason the passenger or freight agent knows more about the public's wants than those whose business is to operate trains and who seldom have any financial dealing with a shipper or a passenger. By reason of this contact the public looks to the freight or passenger agent for everything from the making of rates to the employment of a brakeman.

Usually a railroad man grows up in the department in which he first enlists. If he starts in as a brakeman, telegraph operator, switchman or fireman and is successful he arises to a general superintendency, or general managership or to a presidency, for there is no limit for the right man, and no field of work where there is so little paternalism. If he begins as a traveling freight or passenger agent his goal is usually a general freight or passenge agency, or nowadays the general traffic management, with the presidency of the road always a possibility. Occasionally one will find a high railroad officer who has served in all or nearly all of the principal departments. And in my opinion such a man is more valuable than he who has never rubbed against anything but his own line of work.

G. J. GRAMMAR.

MODERN MONEY BURNERS.

Yachts Are Furnaces for the Cremation of Surplus Wealth---Even After You Own the Boat, It Costs a Small Fortune Each Year.

New York, May 19.—The brown mate waved his arm contemptuously around at the beautiful ships that lay on both sides of the long pier, each beginning to deck herself out in snowy clothes, buff stacks and gallant gilt figureheads.

Truly enough, the scene was different from the days before steam yachts had become young trans-Atlantic liners, and when sailing yachts were still something smaller than a clipper ship. There were plenty of keen sailors around. There was plenty of the delicious bustle that spells heaven to a lover of the ocean when he watches a ship lying on her armor for a fight with the faithless old sea. But there were no grouns of excited, eager, boyishly enthusiastic men, comparing the merits of their craft, peering with craftsmen's eyes at spars and lines and keels, cheering on their crews to dress the pet boats in their best, or debating to the quarrel point over oft-debated theories of naval construction or practice.

Here and there was a man, evidently an owner, who viewed matters with a cold, business eye and "rushed" through the things to which he had to give attention with the same shrewd method with which he arranged his work in town so as to do the utmost most in the utmost least moments.

That was just the reverse of the methods of the old-time yachting owners, who stole all the time that they could from their dull business in town to give it to their yachts, and who often slept aboard them even while they were still on drydock.

Of the twenty yachts that lay in the basin, at least four were more than 200 feet long, and the rest ranged from 120 to 160 feet. It was easy to see that these were not yachts in the sense that they were craft whose owners expected to handle them and manage them and know them as a real yachtsman knows his boat.

They were packets—glorified packets, but packets just the same, intended primarily to carry their owners and other passengers from place to place with the greatest possible amount of ease and luxury and safety.

Each year there are more of these private passenger steamers in the United States. And each year the real yachtsmen become more and more dismayed when they hear the owners of these ships called "yachtsmen," and not only honored by the title, but often elected to fill the coveted places of flag officers of yachting fleets.

Not that these "shipowners" are all ignorant of yaching or lacking in daring and the zest for the royal sport. Some of them are good navigators and good sailors; some of them are fairly adept with yachting technicalities; many of them love the sea for its own sake. But they are so rich.

When a ship assumes the proportions of a young warship the demands that personal command would make are excessive. The bigger steam yachts have proportions greater in everything except tonnage than many of our protected cruisers of the second class. The famous Goelet yacht Mayflower, for instance, which is a part of the United States navy now, is longer than warships like the Marblehead.

Merely to put a yacht like this in commission for the season entails the labors of such a multiplicity of trades and men and costs so much money that a bookkeeping force is needed to keep track of the expenditure alone. To put a yacht like Morgan's Corsair in commission means the expenditure of at least $7,500, even with the utmost economy. And if the engines are overhauled or changed, or other vital alterations made, the expense may and does run up to $10,000 and more.

If "the liner she's a lady," the steam yacht is a Queen of Sheba, and like that royal beauty, demands a fortune from her King Solomons for her entertainment. The whims of a pretty woman in the way of gowns are as nothing compared to the whims of the steam yacht in the way of everything from manganese bronze propeller to main truck.

Be she clothed ever so gloriously in the beginning of one season, she needs brand new apparel the next.

Her flashing white duck awnings will refuse to flash after even the most expert scrubbings within a few months. Her steel wire rigging will insist on sagging, despite all nursing known to seamen. Her masts need grooming like a race horse. Her engine room staff clamors for new machinery and her chief engineer will look with a foreboding eye and a hopeless fact at any estimate that falls far short of completely new engines.

Every inch of her steel hull must be scraped clear to the mother metal, cemented and painted, first with the best red lead, pure, and then with the finest, glossiest, and, of course, most expensive paint that there is in the world of ship chandlery.

Spars and woodwork drink up spar varnish that costs more than some kinds of wine, and they drink it by the gallon like old topers. Pure leaf gold must be lavished on the bows and the stern and in a score of other places as gold must be lavished on a spoiled belle.

During the preceding season, even in the most quiet of cruising, our Queen of Sheba has lost rivets and gear like a girl at a wild masked ball. There isn't a part of her that doesn't need the marine complexion specialist or the dressmakers of the sea, whose bills come higher than those of Worth.

She is a sweetheart who will drain her lover's purse before he knows it, and like many a sweetheart, she costs her lover so much during the courtship that often he has not enough money left to marry her. In other words, many a yacht owner is so overwhelmed with unexpected charges for putting his yacht in commission that he cannot afford to use her afterward, and finds it expedient to keep her at anchor through the greater part of the season to save coal bills and entertainment expenses and the cost of paying and feeding a full cruising complement of crew.

ARE GREAT WINE DRINKERS.

Americans Consume 4,500,000 Quarts of Champagne Every Year.

There is a botle of champagne imported for every nineteen persons in the United States, says a Washington dispatch to the New York World. Each "cold bottle" requires the labor of forty-three men, and it takes four and a half pounds of grapes at 20 cents a pound to manufacture it.

The consumption of champagne has increased 33 per cent in the United States during the past five years, until there is now being imported 4,500,000 quarts, about one half of which is in pint bottles. During 1904 the consumption jumped to 4,621,188 quarts, but this was a year in which there was a presidential election, when the "bet-you-a-quart" man was around.

The people of the United States rank second as consumers of champagne, the English drinking more than the Americans, with Russia third on the list. On a per capita basis Belgium is the great champagne consuming nation, with the Scandinavian states second. Exporters of champagne maintain that the number of quarts sent to a nation is a sure indication of its progress, and point to the fact that none is ever sent to Korea and very little to China, while the trade with Japan has increased 33 1-3 per cent during a single year.

The corks alone in the 4,500,000 bottles shipped to the United States cost $200,000. They cost, for quart bottles, four and five cents each, and for pints from three to three and a half cents each. The bottles cost $650,000. The quart bottle, with fastener, costs from 18 to 20 cents, and the pints from 12 to 16 cents. The bottles cannot be used for champagne a second time. They are sold to manufacturers of cheap and artificially charged wines.

The United States consul at Rheims, France, has submitted an interesting report on champagne manufactured there. Practically all the champagne is produced in the district around that place. England takes the driest champagne, while Russia takes the sweetest. Belgium and the Scandinavian countries want it just a little less sweet than Russia. The demand in the United States is for a champagne with not more than 3 per cent of sugar in it. Ten years ago the demand was for the sweetest vintages. The manufacttirers decry the American custom of putting ice in the glass.

Champagne, according to the report, does not improve with age. Much of it shipped to the United States is three years old, while the choicer brands are sometimes five years old. It requires from three to five years to place champagne on the market after the grapes are pressed. Because of this a vast stock is always kept on hand—generally three times the amount sold each year.

Champagne is kept in great caves from twenty to 100 feet deep, dug out of the solid chalk. These caves have a greater number of miles than the subways of New York and London combined and are estimated to be 150 miles in extent. They are all lighted by electricity. Summer and winter they are kept at an even temperature—about 45 deg. Each cave is plied high with champagne in bottles.

PUSHED BACK THE WAVE.

New York Times: When Miss Rosa Wedsted, the Finnish giantess, who is to be an attraction of the Barnum & Bailey circus this year, landed from the Hamburg-American liner Bluecher yesterday morning, Col. Tody Hamilton, the energetic and far-famed press agent of the big show, promulgated a yarn that when the big liner was in mid-ocean Miss Wedsted had stopped a giant sea that was sweeping a sailor into the ocean.

The sea, according to Col. Hamilton, came over the port side and caught a big, strapping German seaman full and square and was hustling him seaward, when Miss Wedsted appeared. She lifted one hand and stopped the wave and with the other pushed the German out of the way. Then she stepped aside, and the wave rushed over the starboard railing back into the sea. The sailor escaped without a scratch. What happened to the wave was not told.

INDIAN PRODIGAL'S RETURN.

Kansas Clay Journal: Solomon Homer, the brilliant Choctaw Indian, said at his home in Caddo that he needed to be a very intelligent and industrious Indian who would go out into the world and make a name.

"Many Indians," he said "go out into the world and some of them, of course, succeed. Those who fail return home; and that is a sad returning, for every one sneers at the young man whom the world has conquered and driven back.

"It is not much of a welcome that the returned Indian gets, even in his father's house.

"There was MBlack Eagle, a Choctaw. He went to Chicago, failed and came back home. But he was afraid to go to his father's house till an old man said:

"'Are you going to your father's, Black Eagle?

"'I don't know,' answered the youth.

"'Go there,' said the old man, 'for you will be very welcome. There is no doubt of it.'

"Heartened a little, Black Eagle did go to his father's, and the next day he met the old man again.

"The old man smiled kindly.

"'So the prodigal returned,' he said. 'And did your father kill the fatted calf?'

"'No,' Black Eagle answered, 'he didn't kill the fatted calf, but he nearly killed the prodigal.'"

THE EARLING IS LAUNCHED

New Steamer Goes Into Slip at Superior Shipyard.

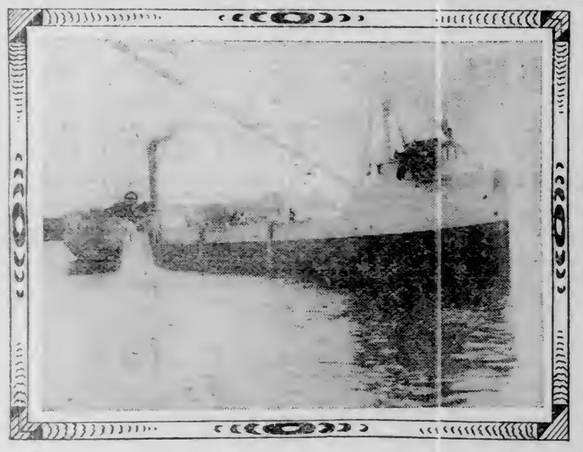
No Accident---Large Party From Milwaukee and Detroit.

The big new steamer E. J. Earling took her initial plunge into the water, which she is to grace, at exactly noon today, in the Superior shipyard. The weather conditions were ideal, and an immense throng of people witnessed the launching. Many went from Duluth by street car, and a large number went by boat. Many private launches from this side of the bay were in attendance, the owners taking with them parties of friends. The boat was christened by Miss Adine Earling, daughter of the man after whom the boat was named, of Milwaukee. When the Earling hit the water—and the launching was not marred by accident of any kind—she got the usual salutation of whistles ashore and afloat.

The launching party came up from Milwaukee over the Wisconsin-Central this morning, in the private car of E. J. Earling. In the party, besides himself and his daughter, who christened the boat, were his wife and Mr. and Mrs. H. B. Earling, their son, Everett, and daughter, Miss Dean Earling, of Milwaukee; Capt. and Mrs. Dennis Sullivan of Chicago, and the following people from Detroit: Mr. and Mrs. H. K. Oakes, Mr. Oakes being the principal stockholder in the Franklin Steamship company for which the Earling was built; Mr. and Mrs. B. F. Berry, Mrs. H. P. Carroll, Mrs. Edgar S. Paxton, Miss Isabelle Cheney and William Gage.

The launching party was entertained at luncheon after the launching at the Superior Commercial club, and returned to Milwaukee this afternoon at 4 o'clock.

The Earling is 545 feet long over all, 55 feet beam and 31 feet deep. She is modern in every way and has accommodations for ten passengers. The fittings of her compartments are luxurious and she is one of the handsomest steamers on the lakes. She will be commanded by Capt. D. C. Sullivan, and will be ready to sail in a very short time.



DULUTH-SUPERIOR SAND & GRAVEL CO.'S STMR. RELIANCE.

The accompanying picture is that of the new steamer Reliance, owned by the Duluth-Superior Sand & Gravel company. The Reliance was a schooner last year, but was rebuilt during the winter and is now a steamer with a clam-shell dredging apparatus attached. She will be used for wrecking work especially, and of late has been employed dredging out the sand around the stranded steamer Crescent City at Lakewood. She is adapted to all heavy work and, for instance, Friday night left Duluth for a small port on the north shore for a lumber company, where she will do some work. She is considered by vessel men to be a valuable addition to the wrecking outfits of the Head of the Lakes. The Reliance has the following dimensions: Length, 150.9 feet; beam, 30 feet; depth, 9.3 feet; gross tonnage, 480; net tonnage, 323. She draws, when light, only 7 feet of water aft and can be used in very shallow water.

AGREEMENT REACHED

Between the Lake Carriers and the Licensed Tugmen's Association.

Cleveland, May 19.—An agreement was reached yesterday between representatives of the Lake Carriers and the Licensed Tugmen's Protective association, which is to hold for two years. The agreement also includes a settlement of the dispute with the firemen and practically clears all of the labor disputes in lake carrying circles. The demands of the men for more time off was allowed, and at Duluth, Chicago, Cleveland, Buffalo and Ashtabula, where most of the tug work is done, the men will hereafter be allowed off every other night and every other Sunday. No change was made in wages, and other conditions are the same as last year. By the terms of the new agreement, which runs for two years, the captains and engineers will hire their firemen and linesmen and have full control of them while they are on duty. They have agreed not to hire a man who leaves his boat without cause for thirty days.

Three children lost their lives during the fire.

Burning embers from the Quinnisec fire started a fire in the little town of Niagara, Mich., across the river and destroyed several buildings. The paper mills were saved.

PRESIDENT MAY YIELD ON PHILIPPINE TARIFF.

Washington, May 19.—A determined effort will be made, now that the rate bill is out of the way, to do something with the Philippine tariff matter, which is so near the heart of the president. Secretary Taft has spent the better portion of three days at the senate end of the capitol in conferences regarding the prospects.

It is said that as a last resource the president will consent to having the duty fixed at 50 per cent of the Dingley rates on all goods coming from the Philippines, and to remain permanently at that figure. This, however, will only be as a last resort, when it is seen that the legislation otherwise would be doomed to defeat.

Senator Lodge is still of the opinion that it will be worth while to see if it cannot be possible to have the senate committee discharged from further consideration of the bill. If enough votes can be secured for this purpose, the senate will have the matter before it, and something can be done, as a majority is believed to favor some action.

Jury Returns a Sealed Verdict.

A sealed verdict was returned last evening in the personal injury case of Wilfred Berneche against John W. Hilliard, the contents of which will not be made public until the district court convenes next Monday morning. Saturday is the day set aside in each week for the special term of the court, and sealed verdicts returned after the court adjourns Friday evening cannot be opened until regular session again the following Monday.

SHAVING, WASTE OF TIME AND MONEY, THEY DECIDE.

Des Moines, Iowa, May 19.—The national conference of the Brethren in Christ church of the United States and Canada, in session here, declared against shaving as a waste of time and money. Henceforth all male members will be expected to wear full beards.

After a heated discussion the rule against allowing members to be photographed, because it violates the scriptural injunction, "Thou shalt not make unto thyself a graven image," was allowed to stand, but it will not be rigidly enforced.

BANK PRESIDENT ENDS HIS EXISTENCE.

Norfolk, Va., May 19.—Irwin Tucker, president of the Savings bank of Newport News, committed suicide in his room over the bank in Newport News today just as Chief of Police Reynolds of that city opened his door to arrest him upon a warrant charging him with defaulting in the sum of $10,000. Tucker shot himself through the right temple as the door was thrown open.

The Savings bank had been closed pending an investigation by the board of directors. One report is to the effect that the shortage may amount to $20,000.

Tucker's life was insured for $30,000, which will cover all of his alleged defalcations.

WRECKERS RECOVERING

Members of Crew at Crescent City Getting Over Illness.

H. Coulby, President of Pittsburg Steamship Company, Here.

Captain W. W. Smith and his men of the wrecking crew at the steamer Crescent City are fast recovering from the mysterious malady which put so many of them out of sorts this week. Yesterday, several of them were confined to their beds, but are much improved and able to move about some today.

H. Coulby, president and general manager of the Pittsburg Steamship company, owner of the steamers Crescent City and Mataafa, arrived in Duluth this morning and went at once to Lakewood, where the first named steamer is aground.

He spent almost the entire day looking over the steamer and conferring with Captain Smith. The indisposition of the crew has delayed operations at Lakewood quite a bit. The malady, due to some poisonous substance in their food or drink, produced sickness of the stomach and extreme lassitude, making a partial cessation of work necessary.

The cause of the crew's illness has not been determined yet. The state chemists at St. Paul are making an analysis of the food supply at the wrecking camp but have not made a report as yet.

The men are so much improved that they will be able to go to work very soon.

Mr. Coulby's visit to the Head of the Lakes at this time is merely one of routine business. It is understood, however, that he is very anxious to see both his company's stranded ships released as soon as possible.

The pumps aboard the steamer Mataafa were going full blast today. One of the Reid tugs was working at the scene of the wreck all day.

Would See the Records.

Judge Cant is hearing the arguments on a motion of the Rogers' heirs for an order of the court directing the Leonard Mining company to produce for inspection certain records, accounts, maps and other documents having a bearing on the Clark mine property. The arguments for the order are being made by J. B. Richards and D. G. Cash, representing the Rogers' heirs, and those against the order by J. B. Cotton and F. D. Adams, who represent some of the defendants. The petition for the heirs also asks permission to make all the extracts that they desire from the mining company's records.

RIGO SCORNS CHIMAY; SAYS SHE WANTS HIM.

New York, May 19.—"Princess Chimay is doing everything in her power to win back my affections. She went to my home in Hungary the other day and placed a tombstone on my father's grave, kissed my mother and told her she was lonesome for me; scattered money in the little village and sent me $1,000 to go back to her. I returned the money and I scorn her affection. I prefer to stick to my first love—my violin."

Janczi Rigo, the Gypsy violinist, now playing in New York, so spoke about himself and the princess, who, before her marriage, was Clara Ward of Detroit, and whose fortune is estimated at $15,000,000.

WHEAT SEEDING IS COMPLETED

Van Dusen-Harrington Company Reports Conditions Favorable.

The Van Dusen-Harrington company, in a letter to the grain trade regarding the wheat seeding in Minnesota, the Dakotas and Manitoba, is most sanguine. It states that conditions are very favorable for this time of the season. The complete letter follows:

"Wheat seeding in Minnesota, the Dakotas and Manitoba was completed last week. In the southern counties of Minnesota and South Dakota, oats and barley seeding has also been completed and work is now progressing on flax seeding and the preparation of the ground for corn. Further north, flax and barley lands are being prepared and seeded as rapidly as possible.

"Excepting only the unfortunate strip of lands in the Red River valley, which has been wet for three seasons, all of our wheat crop was put in under excellent conditions of soil and weather and following seeding we had moisture in very satisfactory quantity over the entire territory.

"Wheat everywhere is up and looking well. The early sown stands from 4 to 6 inches high; the plant is strong and stooling nicely; the color is good. The seed was better than a year ago and the exceedingly favorable germinating period has put the crop in advance of the average stage of growth at this date.

"As stated in a previous letter, the wheat acreage in these states is increased from 5 to 10 per cent over last year and not less than 15 per cent of the total is Durum.

"Our reports indicate that there will be no material change in the amount of barley and flax seeding as compared with 1905; it is still too early to say definitely, as the work is in active progress."

CHICAGO NOT ON GOPHERS' LIST

Minnesota May Have to Go East for Big Game.

Chicago, May 19.—Minnesota has been eliminated as a possibility on the Maroon football schedule this fall. Director Stagg has received a letter from Dr. H. L. Williams, director of athletics at the University of Minnesota, requesting a date this year and the signing of a contract for a return game in 1907.

But as the same has already ruled against such an agreement, along with its abolition of the Michigan and Wisconsin games, there is no prospect of the Gophers securing a battle with Chicago. With this announcement the last hope for a big Western game goes glimmering.

George K. Herman has been selected by the alumni governing board of the Western inter-college conference to act as referee for the conference meet on Shepard field June 2.

DENVER WANTS GAME WITH THE GOPHERS.

Appleton, Wis., May 19.—Deacon Koehler is planning arranging a game of football between Minnesota and the University of Denver, to be played in Denver next fall. He received instructions from the school where he will coach next year to offer Wisconsin $1,000 for a game.

He talked with the Badger manager by telephone and was informed that the Madison team would not go West for less than $4,000, as they would need the money next year owing to the slump in athletics there.

Koehler will now look elsewhere for a game and will no doubt make an offer to Dr. H. L. Williams.

BRITT GIVEN AN EASY PROPOSITION.

New York, May 19.—Terry McGovern and Jimmy Britt have been matched to fight ten rounds at Madison Square Garden May 28 at catchweights. Straight Marquis of Queensbury rules are to be the order of the battle, which means that the sporting fraternity is taking the fullest advantage of the recent decision that fights may not be interfered with by the police, and that twenty or twenty-five-round championship fights in New York may soon be expected.

The straight Marquis of Queensbury rules permit the prettiest kind of fighting from the point of view of the fight followers, because the fighters may fight all the time. Punching at close quarters, jabbing, in the breaks and all kinds of infighting may be indulged in.

This ten-round battle of the lightweights, if it is allowed to take place—and from what Department Commissioner Matthew said recently, there will be no interference on the part of the police department—will be the longest since the quietus was put on the Horton law.

SPORT DIED GAME.

Noted Gambler Died in Philadelphia Penniless and Alone.

One of the old-time gamblers was found dead in the streets of Philadelphia recently under circumstances that illustrate the penalties of sporting life, says the New York Press. His name was Maj. William B. Anderson, and his military title was fairly gained in the Civil war in the Third Pennsylvania volunteers. In his time he had backed about all of the famous old minstrel men, a luxury that delighted successful gamblers in olden times.

He was the backer of Simonds, Slocum and Sweatman for the two seasons they existed in partnership. Of these only Willis Sweatman survives, playing the negro in "The County Chairman." Anderson also backed Skiff and Gaylord, Duprez and Benedict and Carneross and Dixey—names that will recall the palmy days of the minstrel stage, and in his prosperous days he staked every minstrel in hard luck he met. He buried Billy Emerson and Harry Stanwood and started Billy Rice in business several times.

He said just before his death that his fondness for negro minstrels prevented him from being a rich man, which is doubtless true, if he had also cut out the gaming. For a long time he was a partner of George Brotherton, now better known in New York than Philadelphia. The pair of them found an "angel" in William M. Singerly and played him to a showdown. Singerly fitted out the old Masonic building as the Temple theater for them, which they conducted as a comic opera house for some year, running "The Little Tycoon" for a whole season.

When Singerly got tired of the theater, Brotherton moved to New York, but the major stayed in Philadelphia to have it out with Lawyer Giboney, head of the Law and Order society. The society got the final fall. He kept faro and poker rooms when he could, and closed them when he had to, and when recently the wave of reform in politics swept over the Quaker City, the major was washed high and dry on the shore of insolvency. He kept up a good front, however, but fell dead in the street from pure starvation at last and without a penny in his pocket.

Anderson was well known all over the country to sporting men. Once when he made a large winning he went to Chicago and broke McDonald's faro bank. He crossed Clark street to Jeff Hankins' place and dropped it all. He borrowed a stake from Hankins and the next night played at McDonald's and won again, but a second visit to Hankins' left him poor as before. Five times the major beat the game in McDonald's and five times the game in Hankin's beat the major back to Philadelphia.

Anderson was a friend of Matthew Quay, of "Chris" Magee, of "Bull" Andrews and many prominent and wealthy men. In fact, he was a friend of nearly everybody, except himself. His condition been known he would not have been permitted to die in the street hungry and penniless. For a time he was a friend of "Pope" Perry, the Sansom street sport, but one night, when both of them had been drinking heavily in Madden's place, at Sansom and Eighth streets, Perry said: "Major, I'll bet you I can shoot an apple off your head from the length of this barroom. The barroom was thirty-five feet in length. Frank Frayne, the actor, had just shot his wife dead on the stage while performing the same trick, and the tragedy started the conversation.

"You're on!" said the major. "You win, whether you hit me or the appie."

Perry took his place with a pistol, and just as he was ready to fire Louis Megargee, the city editor of the Times, entered the room at a door near where the major stood. At that instant Perry fired, and Megargee, with a flesh wound in his shoulder, walked over to the bar and said: "Pope, you never could shoot straight. It's on me!"

"Yes," said the major, "that's so; but he never wastes a shot nor plays a false card."

The Times was then engaged in a war upon the Sansom street gamblers.

The day before his death Anderson went into the Continental hotel and, calling Lu Maltby, the proprietor, aside, said to him: "Lu, I want you to give $10 for a monument, or at least for a stone, to put over old Billy Emerson's grave." And Lu gave it. After the major's death the $10 was found in his lodgings, in a letter addressed to George Silver, in Chicago, a saloonkeeper and a friend of the negro minstrel, who had undertaken to get some money together for this purpose. There was nothing else of value in the room, not even an article that was pawnable. The major was an Elk, and they buried him. The flowers off his grave would have kept him alive for months.

CURED TO STAY CURED

The longest established, most successful and reliable specialist in diseases of men as medical diplomas, licenses and newspaper records will show.

What the afflicted man wants is not a temporary relief, but a permanent cure.

The beneficial effects of my treatment are as lasting as life—I cure to stay cured.

When once a patient is rescued by me from the ravages of disease or weakness peculiar to his sex, he is never again bothered with his former trouble.

I do not treat all diseases, but I treat men—MEN ONLY—and cure them to stay cured.

Varicocele.

Under my treatment, which includes no cutting or pain, this insidious disease rapidly disappears.

Pain disappears almost instantly.

The pools of stagnant blood are driven from the dilated veins and all soreness and swelling quickly subside.

Every indication of Varicocele soon vanishes, and in its stead come the pride, the power, and the pleasure of perfect helth and restored manhood.

Stricture.

My cure for Stricture is safe, painless and bloodless, and therefore, free from surgery in any form.

It is the only cure that should ever be used, and the only one recommended by the legions of men who have been restored by it.

It dissolves the Stricture completely and removes every obstruction from the urinary passage, allays all inflammation, stops every discharge, reduces the prostate gland when enlarged, cleanses and heals the bladder and kidneys when irritated or congested, invigorates the organs and restores health and soundness to every part of the body affected by the disease.

Contagious Blood Poison.

My special form of treatment for specific or contagious blood poison is practically the result of my life work, and is endorsed by the best physicians of this and foreign countries.

It contains no dangerous drugs or injurious medicine of any kind.

It goes to the very bottom of the disease and forces out every particle of impurity.

Soon every sign and symptom disappear completely and forever.

The blood, the tissue, the flesh, the bones and the whole system are cleansed, purified and restored to perfect health and the patient prepared anew for the duties and pleasures of life.

Nervo-Sexual Debility.

My cure for weak men does not stimulate temporarily, but restores permanently.

It soon drives away all those distressing symptoms which so constantly remind one of his former folly.

It stops every drain of vigor and builds up the muscular and nervous system, purifies and enriches the blood, cleanses and heals the bladder and kidneys, and invigorates the liver, revives the spirits, brightens the intellect, and, above and beyond all, restores the wasted power of manhood.

Reflex Diseases.

For instance, manly weakness sometimes comes from Varicocele or Stricture, innumerable blood and bone diseases often result from blood poison taint in the system or physical or mental decline frequently follow loss of manhood.

In treating diseases of any kind I always cure the effect as well as the cause.

We charge nothing for private counsel, and give to each patient a LEGAL CONTRACT to hold for our promises. Is it not worth your while to investigate a cure that has made life anew to multitudes of men?

If you cannot call at our office, write your symptoms fully. Our home treatment by correspondence is always successful.

DOUBLE HOUSE BUILDING AT LAKESIDE FOR MRS. SOPHIA A. MILLER.

One of the pretentious dwellings being erected at Lakeside is a double brick house Bergquist Bros. are building at the corner of Forty-fourth avenue east and Grand avenue for Mrs. Sophia A. Miller. The house is designed by F. L. Young & Co., architects, and will be thoroughly modern throughout, including hardwood finish and a laundry with drying rooms in the basement.

The house will cost about $8,000 and will be one of the most important of the improvements made in that locality this year. The Lakeside Land company is building several homes near the Miller residence for various people, and it is generally believed that 1906 will witness more building activity in Lakeside than any season in many years.

WEST SUPERIOR STREET PROPERTY IN BIG DEAL

The transfer of 475 feet of Superior and Michigan street property between Sixth and Eighth avenues west, has been made within the last few weeks and the transactions were closed so quickly that comparatively few people were aware of it. Although only one of the deeds, involving but twenty-five feet of the property, has been recorded, it is learned that the deal is one of considerable magnitude and probably the most important transaction in local realty circles that has taken place in a long time.

The total consideration has not been made public, but it is learned on good authority that something over $180,000 was paid for 325 feet of the property.

The purchaser is the North Star Realty company, a corporation that has been investing in Duluth real estate for some time past. There have been some strong rumors abroad that the land in the two blocks was being bought up for a depot site for the new road that the Wisconsin Central company is said to be building into Duluth.

This rumor, however, lacks confirmation and there have been some pretty strong intimations that the property has been bought for an investment. The fact that so much contiguous property has been purchased by the same people backed up by the reports that they have other lots in the same blocks under option, would tend to give color, it is claimed, to the report the road is acquiring the property for terminals.

The east half of lot 120 in the block between Sixth and Seventh avenues west, was purchased for $10,000.

Among the other properties purchased by the North Star Realty company, for which prices are not definitely known, are the southwest corner of Seventh avenue west and Superior street, the southeast corner of Eighth avenue west and Superior street and the fifty foot lot immediately west of the Swanstrom lot between Seventh and Eighth avenues west. The two corners and the inside lot comprise 150 feet fronting on both Superior and Michigan street.

The fifty-foot lot immediately east of the Metropolitan Opera house is said to have been sold to the North Star Realty company for $45,000. This includes a two-story stone and brick business block. The southwest corner of Seventh avenue west and Superior street, comprising a fifty foot improved lot, was bought for $40,000. Seven years ago, this same property, it is said, was lot, was bought for $40,000.

A fifty feet on Superior and Michigan streets, owned by A. G. Swanstrom and described as the second lot west of Seventh avenue west, was bought by the North Star Realty company for $25,000. This lot is unimproved so that the land value may be figured at $500 a front foot.

The 150 feet of unimproved property immediately west of the Swanstrom lot is said to have been sold to the North Star company for $61,000, or on the basis of a little over $466 per front foot.

It is rumored that attempts were made to get options on the Metropolitan Opera house building and the southwest corner of Sixth avenue west and Superior street, what is known as the Hartley corner, but that the negotiations were unsuccessful.

While large sales, such as those mentioned above are not common just at present, there are other important transactions pending that are very near the closing point. One of these may have an important bearing on the industrial future of the city, a deal that has been a long time under negotiation and which involves a large amount of property in one of the prominent localities of the city.

The local real estate offices have had an excellent inquiry this week, for unimproved and improved property both centrally located and in the suburbs. The demand for suburban lots for building purposes continued undiminished, although not all that are being sold now are likely to be improved before next spring. Anything that has the ear-marks of so-called "snap" is being quickly investigated and taken up, these days. Nothing of the kind is being offered except in isolated cases where the owner, for good reasons, is compelled to sacrifice his prospects to some extent in order to acquire ready money. The demand for building loans is considered very good for this period of the year and there is a htalthy tone to the improvement talk that is being indulged in by the buyers.

The contract for D. G. Cutler's $30,000 residence in the East end has been awarded to Hugh Fawcett, and work on the foundations will begin at once. The house is to be ready for occupancy early next year. It will have ground dimensions, 50 by 80 feet, and contain about sixteen rooms. The residence will be the English country style of architecture, and will be among the handsomest and most artistic of the East end residences. Limestone will be the chief material used. The designs were made by Bray & Nystrom, architects. The structure will be erected at the southwest corner of Twenty-third avenue east and Superior street.

At the rate the building permits have been issued in Duluth recently the May building record will reach a high figure. Thus far, permits have been issued for over $170,000 worth of improvements, not including the new $275,000 elevator on Rice's Point and a $40,000 business block, that is practically assured. Considering all the proposed buildings, it has been figured that the total value of improvements for the first eighteen days of May will be approximately $485,000. The total for permits issued during the month of April, which was one of the largest months in the building line, was $313,000. There is a possibility that the total of permits for May will reach the half-million dollar mark.

DAKOTA FARMER KILLS HIS WIFE AND HIMSELF.

Mandan, N. D., May 19.—Word has been received here that Henry A. Brandt, a prosperous farmer living fifteen miles northeast of New Salem, shot and killed his wife Thursday and then committed suicide. Mrs. Brandt four days previous had given birth to a child and while her attendants were out of the sick room, Brandt approached the bed where she lay and fired twice, one bullet entering her head and the other penetrating her neck. He then turned the weapon to his own heart, but the bullet glanced and only a flesh wound resulted. Going to the kitchen he secured a rifle and despite the efforts of two women who sought to restrain him, went to the barn and blew the top of his head off. No reason is known for the tragedy.

THE SENATE AMENDMENTS

To Rate Bill Will be Considered by House Committee.

Washington, May 19.—When the railroad rate bill reaches the house from the senate which probably will be Monday, Chairman Hepburn will make the request that it lie on the speaker's table pending a conference of the Republican and Democratic members of the committee on interstate and foreign commerce which is to be called as soon as a print of the bill with the senate amendments included is available. This has been decided upon by Representative Hepburn as the proper way to get the sense of members of the committee of both parties, in view of the unanimous action of that committee in reporting the bill.

There is no likelihood, in the opinion of those in touch with the situation, that the house will at once accept the amendments of the senate, the refusal of which necessitates a conference.

AMNESTY DECREE DID NOT APPEAR

Russians Disappointed In Czar's Failure to Signalize Birthday.

St. Petersburg, May 19.—Although it was certain last night that the partial amnesty decree with which it was thought a few days ago the emperor would signalize his birthday would not be promulgated today, nevertheless, the failure to appear caused great disappointment and misgiving. This was more pronounced, as the Official Messenger contained, this morning, side by side with the usual batch of promotions and decorations issued on such occasions, two columns of protests from reactionary organizations, inspired by Gen. Trepoff's secret circular to the governors, instructing them to have the "Black hundred" organizations immediately reported to the emperor, protests against amnesty, the abolition of the death penalty and concessions to parliament. President Mouromtzeff was present at the gala luncheon at the Alexandra palace at Peterhoff today in honor of his majesty's birthday, but he cannot present the addresses in reply to the speech from the throne, except at an audience formally granted for that purpose. It is hardly possible, however, that he can avoid an informal discussion of the situation with the emperor's members of the court.

Claims Power of Attorney.

W. G. Joerns, representing the German imperial consul at St. Paul, has filed with the judge of the probate court certified copies of the powers of attorney running from the Maus heirs in Germany to the mayor of some village there and from him to the German consul. The consul claims to represent the foreign heirs of Charles Gasper, who died at Fond du Lac, leaving an estate valued at several thousand dollars. With the other papers filed was a notice of an appeal from the order of the probate court appointing Simon Clark as special administrator of the Gasper estate.

WHEAT IS FIRM HERE

Prices Go Higher Despite Lower Cables and Bearish News.

Flax Has Desultory Time and Closes a Little Weaker.

Duluth Board of Trade, May 19.—Wheat was stronger today, the July option closing higher everywhere except New York, which market closed an hour earlier than others on Saturday. Cables were lower and weather conditions in the Southwest more favorable but light receipts and decrease in stocks in the Northwest offset this. Liverpool closed ¼d lower, Paris unchanged to ½c higher, Berlin ⅝c lower and Budapest ⅜c lower.

Broomhall estimates the world's shipments of wheat for this week at 11,200,000 bus., of which Europe will take about 10,400,000 bus. The actual shipments last week were 12,320,000 bus., and those of a year ago, 11,035,000 bus.

It is estimated that the stocks of wheat in store in Duluth will decrease 90,000 bus., to 260,000 bus., and flax 285,000 bus. this week.

The May option was higher in all the American markets except Chicago, where it was off, and Minneapolis and New York, where it was unchanged. The July option closed ⅜ higher in Duluth, ⅜-½c higher in Chicago and St. Louis, was unchanged in New York, ⅝c higher in Kansas City and ¼c higher in Winnipeg. The September option closed ⅜c higher in Duluth, ½-⅝c in Chicago, ⅜-½c in Minneapolis and was ⅛c off in New York.

Corn was weaker in Chicago, the July option closing ¼-⅜c off. Corn was unchanged to ½d lower in London. July oats closed ⅜-½c higher in Chicago.

Car receipts at Duluth were 30, against 3 last year, and at Minneapolis 122, against 200 last year, making a total for the Northwest of 152, against 203 last year. Chicago received 12, against 7 last year.

Primary receipts of wheat were 283,000 bus; last year, 284,000 bus. Shipments, 178,000 bus; last year, 219,000 bus. Clearances of wheat and flour aggregated 200,000 bus.

Primary receipts of corn were 433,000 bus; last year, 192,000 bus. Shipments, 289,000 bus; last year, 396,000 bus. Clearances of corn were 96,000 bus.

Wheat was fairly active during the session of the Duluth market, with stronger prices. May wheat was inactive and closed ⅜c up at 84c. July wheat opened unchanged at 83⅝c, fell off to 83½-⅝c at 9:20 and ranged between that and 84c during the rest of the session, closing at ¼c, a gain of ⅜c over yesterday. September wheat opened unchanged at 80⅞c and advanced steadily to the close, which was 81c, a gain of ⅜c over yesterday.

Flax was dull and the trading was light. It was ⅝c lower in Antwerp and ⅜c lower in London. May flax closed ¼c off at $1.16. July flax opened unchanged at $1.17⅛, fell off to $1.17, rallied to $1.17¼ and ranged between ten that and $1.17⅛ during the rest of the session. THE CHICAGO MARKET.

Wheat Opens Firm With Good Demand by Commission Houses.

Chicago, May 19.—Wheat opened firm today on a good demand by commission houses. The bullish influences were steady prices at Liverpool and light Northwest receipts. More favorable weather for the Southwest crop was a depressing factor. July opened a shade lower to a shade higher at 82⅝@82⅝c, sold at 82⅝@¾c and advanced to 82¾@⅞c. Minneapolis, Duluth and Chicago reported receipts of 164 cars against 162 cars last week and 210 cars a year ago.

The high point for July was 83@¼c. The market remained firm all day. The close was strong, with July up ⅜@½c at 83c.

The corn market was a trifle easier on liberal receipts and reports of rain in Southern Illinois and Indiana. Cash houses were free sellers. Later, the market became firm on good buying by shorts and cash interests. July opened a shade to ⅛c lower at 47¼c to 47⅛@⅜c, declined to 47⅛c and sold up to 47⅝@½c. Local receipts were 259 cars with 61 of contract grade.

July reached a high mark of 47½c. The close was steady, with July off ⅛c at 47⅜c.

The oats market opened easier on reports of scattered showers in Illinois and Indiana. Later, the market became firm. July opened a shade lower at 32⅝c and advanced to 33⅛@⅜c. Local receipts were 146 cars.

Provisions were steady. July pork was 7½@10c lower at $15.55. Lard was 2½c lower at $8.65. Ribs were unchanged to $9.00.

Close: Wheat—May, 84½@⅝c; July, 83c. Corn—May, 48¾c; July, 47¼c. Oats—May, 33⅜c; July, 33⅝c. Pork—May, $15.50; July, $15.57½. Lard—May, $8.50; July, $8.57½. Ribs—May, $8.90; July, $9.07½@9.00. Minneapolis Flour.

Minneapolis, May 19.—The flour market shows firmness at present quotations. There is a fair demand but little foreign inquiry. Millers are disposed to think that the next week will see a turn in the situation one way or another. Flour stocks are light and there are some large buyers in need, who are persistently holding off in the hope of lower prices. Shipments, 60,477 barrels. First patents, $4.30@4.45; second patents, $4.20@4.30; first clears, $3.50@3.60; second clears, $2.40@2.55.

Grain Gossip.

Logan & Bryan, Chicago: Wheat—It was not easy to tell exactly what the bull influences were doing during the session. Public weather map did not show as much rainfall over the winter wheat country as the trade expected. It looked from the map as if the rainfall had been in patches. There is a large section of winter wheat country in the Southwest which reports indicate very dry. Advices seem to point to more rainfall than shown by the weather map, but at best it is probable that the moisture is yet insufficient. It is claimed that there is a shortage for the month of May so far from two to four inches of rain over the greater portion of the winter wheat country, which must be made good during the last ten days of the month if the crop is to advance toward harvest under normal conditions. There are large local holdings of wheat which appear to be increased every time the local trade makes any attempt to sell the market off ½c or more. As long as May wheat, which represents the cash article, holds well up toward 85c, stocks continue to decrease and the crop condition is lowered in some sections at least from day to day, the market must remain in a strong position.

Corn—With several features favoring the bears in the corn trade prices for the day lost but a 1-16 to ⅛c for the different months. Receipts overrun today, estimate for Monday is 330. There is talk of a movement of 500 cars a day for this market. If it ends in talk and a light movement, the buying force will be renewed. If actual large receipts are experienced, cash and futures should show further reaction from the recent advance.

Oats—Northwest interests in the oat trade appear to be divided in this market. One leading concern which has been covering the Northwest account for days was active again today, while several other Northwest houses sold more oats than the rest of the trade. Reports from Indiana say much too dry for the new crop. Market shows more tendency to advance with wheat than to weaken with corn.

Provisions—There has been so much talk for a few days about a big run of hogs for next week that some of the timid holders were letting go moderate lines this morning. Local shorts covered lard on the dips. The packers want to purchase the hogs in sight as cheaply as possible, and they are doing it. On soft spots, caused by enlarged run of hogs, think these products a safe purchase.

* * *

Wisconsin Grain & Stock company: Wheat—A dull day in this market. After a steady opening the market sagged a little, when reports of frost had a stimulating effect and the market worked up ½c. This firm feeling was only temporary and the market again sagged to lower levels, where short covering and some good commission house buying developed and the market advanced sharply to 83c, closing at about the best price for the day. Southwestern reports were of a more favorable tenor. St. Louis was the weakest market in the country today after leading, as far as strength was concerned, for the past week. There is no doubt that there will be firm spots from time to time, and we would advise taking advantage of these to put out short lines of July and September wheat.

DULLNESS IN STOCKS

Trading Was Extremely Light and Market Was Lifeless.

Bank Statement Better Than Expected and Caused Rally.

New York, May 19.—Opening prices in the stock market today showed but slight changes from those of last night. Gains and losses were mixed. Advances of about a point in Baltimore & Ohio and Locomotive and a decline of as much in Consolidated Gas were the only conspicuous changes. Dealings were very small and many active stocks were not quoted at all the first few minutes of trading.

Trivial fluctuations prevailed. A slight hardening after the opening induced sales of Reading, Union Pacific and Amalgamated Copper and these as well as some others yielded a fraction below yesterday's closing. Kanawha & Michigan and Distillers Securities gained 1½. Wisconsin Central preferred fell off 1.

There was no transaction in St. Paul until well into the second hour, an example of stagnation prevailing in the market. The bank statement induced no change. There was some recovery in the final dealings, but last prices showed insignificant changes from last night. The closing was irregular.

Stock Gossip.

Logan & Bryan to Paine, Webber & Co.: The market closed with a better tone, but trade extremely light. The bank statement was better than expected, and closing conditions generally. There was brought forth a little stimulating effect and the market worked up ½c. This firm feeling was only temporary and the market again sagged to lower levels, where short covering and some good commission house buying developed and the market advanced sharply to 83c, closing at about the best price for the day. Southwestern reports were of a more favorable tenor. St. Louis was the weakest market in the country today after leading, as far as strength was concerned, for the past week. There is no doubt that there will be firm spots from time to time, and we would advise taking advantage of these to put out short lines of July and September wheat.

* * *

Charles G. Gates to Pringle, Fitch & Rankin: Today's market was even more uninteresting than that of yesterday. The trading was confined almost entirely within the four walls of the stock exchange, being materially reduced even there by the fact that many traders were out of town for the week end. Crop damage reports were again circulated, but had little effect in such a quiet market, and the movements that were attempted were generally on the bear side, as the traders, on the whole, seemed to feel in a blue mood. We do not agree with them, expecting a better market and higher prices next week.

* * *

Dick Bros. to Paine, Webber & Co.: The market has been at a standstill with professional trading only in evidence. If there was any tendency it was downward, but the fractional declines were merely due to apathy and not to real pressure. The market closed without any showing of life, but the tone at the close was firm. Indications point to higher prices next week.

* * *

Walker Bros. to Paine, Webber & Co.: There was nothing doing today and trading was light as possible. The bank statement had no effect, but before the close prices stiffened up a trifle. For next week we expect to see a rather dull market and in the hands of traders. We think that on sharp declines the market is a purchase, as there is no pressure and no necessity for any liquidation.

The Cotton Market.

New York, May 19.—The cotton market opened easy at a decline of 6@9 points in response to lower cables, smaller English spot sales, favorable weather reports and disappointing week end figures. Copper Gossip.

Boston to Paine, Webber & Co.: The extreme warm weather and the annual ball game between the New York and Boston exchanges gave the market a holiday appearance and stocks were extremely dull all through the list. There seems to be a little demand for Mohawk springing up and the stock is very scarce. All of the North Butte around $33 was cleaned up and the close was strong. Money is slightly easier, but we do not see any reason at present for the market moving one way or the other and expect a dull period for the time being.

Treasury Balances.

Washington, May 19.—Today's statement of the treasury balances in the general fund, exclusive of the $150,000,000 gold reserve in the division of redemption, shows: Available cash balance, $159,363,768; gold, $73,165,727; gold certificates, $41,358,710.

THE PRODUCE MARKETS.

The following prices, with the exception of those on hay, feed and meats, are the official quotations of the Duluth Produce exchange, and shippers can rely upon them as being correct The list is corrected daily by the secretary, and it shows accurately the market condition up to 12 o'clock on the date of issue. The weekly market letter, published on Fridays, is not an official statement of the exchange, but the information is gathered personally from the different dealers.

FRED H. MERRITT
I devote my entire time in buying and selling on commission and guarantee best prices. I confine myself to the most active stocks and make a specialty of large orders.

WISE INVESTORS
Don't put all their eggs in one basket, nor buy only high priced stocks; they recognize that $100 or $1,000 invested in MERITORIOUS low priced stock is good, and will, on an advance of a few cents per share pay a larger percentage of profit than would $1 per share advance on high priced stock.
The W. I. don't buy simply because a stock is cheap, but he does not hesitate when mine and management have merit.
Careful investigation is invited and will prove that the BUTTE AND ST. LOUIS
Mining Company OWN a good mine and is well managed. Previous "ads" have given a dozen reasons why investors buy this stock. There are now three more, viz: a strike 14 inches wide of $24 ore in No. 3 East; machinery to be installed this week; stock selling in St. Louis, Butte and elsewhere.
The large profits are made by investors with judgment and courage who invest in the beginning of an enterprise.
Butte and St. Louis stock has advanced 40 per cent; the subscription stock is limited to 50,000 shares, a part of which can NOW be had of your Duluth broker at 70 cents per share.
There are five veins on the property, three developed. Ore assays $15 to $100.

TROUT FRY FOR LESTER

45,000 Brook Trout Placed in West Branch of River.

Flycasting Club Trying to Keep Streams Near City Stocked.

Pursuing the plan to provide good trout fishing in the streams in the immediate vicinity of Duluth, President J. P. Harris of the Duluth Fly Casting club, and Game Warden John Green, last evening planted 45,000 brook trout fry in the west branch of Lester river.

Two or three weeks ago Mr. Harris and Mr. Green planted 90,000 fry in the east branch of the stream. The fry were procured from the state fish hatchery near Glenwood.

"Our aim is to stock the streams near the city," said Mr. Harris today. "We want to provide sport for the greatest number of anglers possible, and with this object in view, we are confining our attention largely to the streams right around Duluth. The majority of men are not able to get away for several days at a time, and take a long trip to some of the distant streams, but nearly everyone can get away for a few hours, or for a half day, the fly casting club is trying to keep the streams near the city stocked. If it hadn't been for the fry that have been planted in the past few years, all these streams around the city would have been fished out long ago."

The efforts of the club and of the game warden, have brought the desired results and the good effects are plainly noticeable this spring. Some good catches have been made in Lester river already this year, and it is a common occurrence for a fisherman to pull out several good trout in an hour's fishing. This is better than they could do on many of the more distant streams, and they have the advantage of being able to enjoy some sport at any time they have a few hours to spare.

WOMAN ACCUSES MAN.

Worthington, May 19.—About three weeks ago Minnie Williams of this city made an unsuccessful attempt to commit suicide by taking poison. At the time it was thought her insane act was the result of a quarrel with a young man with whom she had been keeping company, but this she emphatically denied. Yesterday she made criminal complaint against David Tripp, charging him with her trouble, and he was placed under bonds to appear before the grand jury.

DISAPPEARANCE OF THE PUMP

Fertile, Minn., May 19.—During the past week and since the Frisco earthquake, some unnatural phenomena have happened around here. West of here some artesian wells have stopped flowing. The most curious, however, is what happened to the well belonging to Tom Stevenson of this place. One of his boys was playing near the well and saw the pump suddenly disappear. Upon investigation it was fond that the pump and some forty feet of curbing had completely disappeared, not a timber or portion of a timber, remaining to be seen. Only the iron pump shows. It left a large hole, cut straight down, about twelve feet across and twenty-five feet deep. The hole is larger at the bottom than at the top. What the cause of such a sinking is is a conundrum, many believing it to be an after effect of the earthquake.

LATE DOINGS IN MICHIGAN

Marquette Man Ground to Pieces Under Wheels of Train.

Marquette—Eric Sjoholm, was ground to pieces by a train at a street crossing Thursday night.

Ontonagon—So far this year this is proving a bad season for commercial fishing on Lake Superior. Fish bring a good price, but the lifts are so small that there is little or no profit in the business. Unless there is a marked improvement in the near future, it is not improbable that some fishing concerns will suspend operations. As is the case here, the Marquette fishermen are complaining of the poor catches, and similar reports come from Manistique in upper Lake Michigan. The scarcity of trout and whitefish cannot be accounted for. The season of 1901 was the best in years. Last year business was very light, and it was anticipated the present season would be a good one. However, the best lift for a single day with any of the Ontonagon concerns has not exceeded a ton, and there have been days when the catch has not amounted to half that. Operations are being continued with the expectation there will be an improvement.

Houghton—So frequent and severe have the earth disturbances, commonly called air blasts, become in the Atlantic mine, that all under ground operations have been entirely suspended, even the timbermen having refused to return underground. Hundreds of miners are leaving for other points and the entire town is on the verge of a general breakup.

TAWNEY, IN AN AUTO RACE, WAS NEAR DEATH.

Janesville, Wis., May 19.—Congressman Tawney of Minnesota, taking part in a sensational automobile race here, was near death Thursday when the car in which he was riding lost a tire at the middle of a ten-mile race, and jumped madly about the track for a few seconds before it could be stopped.

The driver of the car, Jimmie Menhall of Beloit, cut away the ruined tire and finished first in the race, running five and a half miles on three wheels. Before the car was stopped, however, it was thought its occupants would be sent into eternity.

The accident took place at the local horse and auto show. The race was the closing feature of the show. The Rambler, driven by Menhall, was half a lap ahead of the other cars, when suddenly he was seen to jam at his lever. In a cloud of dust the big car dashed for the rail of the track, then was turned at the edge of the ditch and plunged across to the other side of the track. The other cars were stopped. Menhall, when he finally brought his car to a standstill, cut away the tire and won the race, driving ten miles in twenty-one minutes.

SIMPLON TUNNEL IS INAUGURATED

Domodossa, Italy, May 19.—The Simplon tunnel was inaugurated by King Victor Emanuel today who left here for Brique on the Swiss side of the mountain at 10:55 a. m. The royal train passed through the twelve miles of tunnel drawn by a steam engine, the electric motors not being ready. On reaching the middle of the tunnel, 2,269 feet high, the king exclaimed: "It is a cyclopic work; the result of half a century of study, seven years of work and the expenditure of nearly $15,000,000."

At Brique, the king who was accompanied by Premier Sonnino, the minister of public works and others, was received by the president of the Swiss republic, members of the federal council, the national council and the council of state and 500 other officials. In the speeches which followed, much satisfaction was expressed at the opening of the tunnel which was completed as far as piercing the mountain was concerned, in February last.

REFUSES TO COLLECT FOR GOLD MINE "SUCKERS."

Wilkesbarre, Pa., May 19.—Governor Pardee of California has refused to honor extradition papers issued by Governor Pennypacker for the return to this state of R. L. Mitchell, who is accused of swindling residents of Wilkesbarre out of $60,000, by selling them stock in a worthless gold mine.

A detective, who went to California, with the requisition papers, arrived here today and said Governor Pardee declared he wouldn't act any longer as collecting agent for a lot of gold mine "suckers" in the East.

Pat is Lucky.

Pat Cunningham was fined $30 and costs this morning by Judge Windom, on the charge of being drunk and disorderly. He was arrested on the charge of grand larceny, it being claimed that he stole some money from a companion, in a Superior street saloon. Cunningham was intoxicated at the time, and swore that he only took the money for safe keeping, as his companion was drunk also and he feared he would spend it.

The grand larceny case was dismissed.

RICH STRIKES AT FAIRVIEW.

Latest Theater of Mining Operations in Nevada---Mine, Less Than Six Weeks Old, Is Already One of Great Producers.

Goldfield, Nev., May 19.—(Special to The Herald.)—Not since the first gold discoveries in southern Nevada has the outlook for the many camps which have, mushroom-like, sprung into existence in almost a night, been so bright as it is today. From many sections of this already famous gold producing country come reports of improved showings, greater ore bodies, and phenomenal strikes. Properties which were prospects yesterday are mines today. A dominant fact, indicative of conditions, in the fiscal affairs of southern Nevada has been the strength exhibited by all securities since the earthquake in San Francisco. Many of the industrial and railroad stocks of the East slumped as a result of this disaster, but through it all Nevada stocks remained comparatively strong. In fact, when the exchange opened up about a week ago for the first time since the San Francisco disaster the market was firm and steady. This fact speaks volumes for the stability of character of the holdings which the Nevada securities represent.

From Fairview, the latest theater of mining operations, come reports of remarkable strikes made in several sections of the camp and the development of a mine less than six weeks old, which is destined to become the greatest producer in the state. The Nevada Hills property, the stock of which is selling for $2 per share in New York, has, incredible as this statement may seem, mined during the past ten days $200,000 worth of ore.

On the Fairview Keystone property, controlled by Patrick, Elliott & Camp of this city, the same ledge from which the tremendous product on the Nevada Hills property was taken has been disclosing some very high assay values from the prospecting work done on it. As this great deposit of ore has been opened on two sides of the Fairview Keystone the proving of the ore deposit simply enlarges its extent and increases to a manifold degree the producing capacity of the camp. The Fairview Keystone Mining company has for its president Mr. L. L. Patrick, who promoted the Combination mine of Goldfield, and Mr. Sol Camp, chief of Patrick, Elliott & Camp's corps of engineers, is vice president of the company. Mr. Camp returned yesterday from Fairview, and gives the most glowing account not only of the immediate property in which he is interested but also of the entire camp.

The character of the formation at Fairview is absolutely a true fissure, and the geological arrangement of affairs closely resembles that existing at Tonopah. The ores are almost identical with the products of the older southern Nevada camps.

At Manhattan there is renewed activity on every hand. The great Consolidated ledge, which has made the camp famous, is being proven to a greater depth each week, and not only are its uniform values maintained, but the deposit is broadening out with depth.

On the Manhattan Mizpah, owned by Patrick, Elliott & Camp of this city, the ledge has been proven at a number of points, establishing its continuity for more than six hundred feet across the Bizpah company's ground. Three of the leasers are sacking shipping ore, rock which runs in excess of $100 to the ton.

On the Manhattan Buffalo excellent progress is being made with the double compartment shaft, the first one to be started in the camp. The entire working is in milling grade ore, and for some time past high grade shipping rock has been sacked on this ground.

The Combination is making an improved showing every day, and a mill is soon to be built to treat the milling grade ores on both the Buffalo and this property.

MINE CENTER OF MANHATTAN

Manhattan, Nev., May 19.—Gold Hill is proving itself to be the mine center of all Manhattan. The development work that is now going on on the Stray Dog, Union No. 9, of the Manhattan Dexter company, Jumping Jack and Indian Camp, which lap each other on Gold Hill, has probably never been exceeded in any mining camp at so early a stage in a gold camp's history.

The Stray Dog is now conceded to be the great mine of the district. Five lessees are at work with full shifts of men, and some of them have two shifts. They are all sacking and shipping ore to the smelters with clockwork regularity. A net return just received from the smelters by owners of lease No. 3, on the Stray Dog, which has heretofore been considered the lease of least consequence on this property, shows an average of $450 per ton for ten tons, and on the dumps of this same lease there are now sacked and ready for shipment more than twenty tons of ore of the same character.

On lease No. 1 of the Stray Dog, John D. Campbell, formerly general manager in Nevada for Schwab and McKane, reports that there are 500 tons of ore blocked out that will average not less than $70, and may go fully $100. On this same lease, at the 105-foot level, they have just uncovered one and a half feet of ore that will run $175 to the ton. Mr. Campbell, J. H. Sullivan and H. H. (Bullfrog) Clark, who are interested in this lease, guarantee the absolute accuracy of this statement.

On the January Jones lease of the Stray Dog, known as lease No. 4, they are sacking ore that runs into the thousands. In sinking their first shaft, they found the showing to be so large and rich that they were induced to immediately sink another shaft. Work was begun on this about seventy feet to the south, and they have just cut into their ore at the 65-foot level. It is estimated that the net return on the Jones lease on the Stray Dog to date is upwards of $40,000, and that fully $100,000 worth of ore will be sacked within the next sixty days.

Mr. Campbell pronounces the showing on the Stray Dog, beyond any question, to be the superior of anything yet opened up in Manhattan, and he predicts that more ore will be taken out of the Stray Dog in its first year than was taken out of the Jumbo of Goldfield.

A force of men now employed by the Stray Dog Manhattan Mining company are prospecting Stray Dog ground, and it is the intention of the company to sink a shaft on its own hook as soon as a location has been decided upon.

On the Jumping Jack, a shaft is being sunk to cut the ledge from which the Union No. 9 and the Stray Dog are obtaining their richest ore. The shaft is now down seventy feet. Half a dozen stringers have been intersected on the way down, that give very high assay values, two of which exceed $4,000 per ton. The company has ordered a 25-horse power Fairbanks-Morse gasoline hoist, with cable and bucket attachments complete, and with this plant the mine superintendent declares the 500-foot level will be reached

HEINZE IN A NEW FIELD

Believed to be Back of Deal for Idaho Properties---The Utah Copper Mines are Paying Good Dividends.

Salt Lake City, May 19.—A deal of more than ordinary interest was closed here when J. A. Czizek, believed to be acting for F. Augustus Heinze and others, secured an option upon practically all of the stock in the Lost Packer Mining company on a basis of more than $1,000,000 for the property. The mines are located on Loon Creek, Custer county, Idaho. They have been developed through five tunnels, and last fall and winter they were equipped with a smelting plant, which is now ready to go into commission.

The ores carry exceedingly high values in gold and copper, and such a high percentage of iron that the matter to be turned out will prove desirable in either the Salt Lake or Butte smelters of the Heinze combination. It is not long since the management of the Lost Packer company asserted that, with the smelter in operation, the company could and would turn out from $200,000 to $300,000 worth of gold-copper matte per month.

Mr. Czizek says that a holding company, to be known as the Lost Packer Mining and Smelting company, will take over the property of the old company, together with other valuable ground in the same district and adjoining the Lost Packer group and when all cleaned up the new company will be in possession of a large acreage of the richest mineral ground in the State of Idaho.

A month or more ago it was said that Samuel Newhouse was negotiating for the purchase of the Big Indian company's copper property, in Grand county, this state. Last week his engineer, August Mathez, went to the property accompanied by the company's president, C. E. Loose, for the purpose of conducting a formal examination and making a report to Mr. Newhoyse. The ore of this property is a great blanket deposit of sandstone, thoroughly soaked up with carbonates of copper and carrying, it is asserted, an average of better than 4 per cent of the metal.

The Little Bell company, operating at Park City, has cut the splendid fissure vein that leads to the great ore bodies below on the 300-foot level. It is now only a matter of development to prove that the large bodies of rich ore that were found on the contact at the juncture of the fissure on the 700-foot level extend through the ground for more than 1,000 feet on the dip of the ledge. Laterally on the 700 level this remarkable ore body has been found to be continuous for practically 300 feet, with its limits in each direction still unknown. It is one of the biggest strikes of the year in Utah and the company's stock, which was obtainable at about $6 a share a few weeks back, has more than doubled in value. The Daly West company owns a sixth interest in the Little Bell and the properties adjoin.

The Silver King company of Park City paid its usual $100,000 monthly dividend on the 10th. Owing to the suit of James McGregor against this company, alleging trespass, the deal for the Silver King property, understood to have been on with Thomas F. Cole and others, is said to have been declared off until such time as the Silver King company is able to present a clear title. Efforts to settle out of court have so far proved futile.

INSTALLING NEW MACHINERY

At the North Butte Properties—Large Force of Men at Work—Three More Claims Added—Amalgamated to Reopen Properties That Have Lain Idle.

Butte, Mont., May 19.—Out at the North Butte properties the work of installing the new machinery is progressing rapidly and the promise made some time ago by the management to the effect that the new equipment would be in place by July 1 bids fair to be fulfilled.

Much of the machinery is already on the ground and a force of men is busy putting it in place. The work is all being done under the general supervision of Arthur C. Larson of the North Butte and Red Metal companies.

When the new hoist, pumps, compressors and skips are in place the North Butte will assume a forward place in the rank of the producers. The discoveries made recently on the 1600-foot level of the Jessie have given the operators all the confidence in the world and enough ore has already been blocked out to insure a shipment of 1,500 tons per day for months to come.

The North Butte has already proven itself one of the best propositions of the camp, but regular results are yet in store, according to men who have accurate knowledge of existing conditions.

• • •

The North Butte company has added three more claims to its already large group, the Adirondack, Lynchburg and John Emmet being the last to be taken in out of the wet. The Adirondack was owned by James A Murray and the Lynchburg by the estates of Bryan, Irvine, Dr. Mussigbrod and James W. Forbis. The John Emmet was owned by George Pascoe and others. The amount paid for the Lynchburg was $100,000.

One of the most important announcements heard here for a long time was the statement made by B. B. Thayer, assistant to President Henry H. Rogers of the Amalgamated Copper company, to the effect that the Amalgamated and all of its subsidary companies would begin at once to reopen the properties that have lain idle during the years of the Heinze-Amalgamated litigation. Mr. Thayer stated positively that such properties as the Tramway, Snohomish, Nipper, Berkeley and others would be put on the producing list as rapidly as possible. This will eventually mean the employment of probably two thousand more miners and will materially benefit the city.

The assistant president of the Amalgamated company also stated that some improvements would be made at the Washoe smelter. The capacity is to be increased 500 tons daily, and new blast furnaces and roasters added.

To the Butte men who have interested themselves in the district lying east of this city, the announcement that the Amalgamated company intends to do extensive development work in that section shortly, means much.

"I think there is copper out there," said Mr. Thayer recently, "in fact, work that has been done practically proves that there is metal there."

The Amalgamated company is at present sinking a shaft on the Greenleaf claim, north of the Butte & London properties, and a depth of more than 200 feet has already been attained. Other development work will probably be commenced shortly.

The return of Joseph A. Coram to Butte has revived speculation regarding the intentions of the American Consolidated Copper company, of which the Boston man is the principal mover. It is generally conceded by men in touch with the situation that F. Augustus Heinze is associated with Mr. Coram, and this fact causes the mining men of this city to speculate still further.

Mr. Coram spent about a week in Salt Lake and vicinity, during which time he inspected the properties of the Bingham Consolidated company, which corporation is said to be under the control of F. A. Heinze.

Upon his return to this city Mr. Coram was extremely reticent about his future plans, and refused to make any statement for publication. It is generally known, however, that the Boston man and his associates have secured control of a large acreage of valuable ground in this city, and as soon as the consolidation has been completed it is confidently expected that some interesting announcements will be made.

In addition to his Butte holdings, Coram has possession of properties in California and Mexico, not to mention the mines at Bingham, Utah. When the American Consolidated Copper company has perfected all the details of its giant consolidation, it is believed that some mammoth development work will be commenced.

Mr. Coram has been laboring for months past on the proposition, and there is every reason to believe that his negotiations have been successful. He has figured prominently in the copper world before, and his friends declare that the American Consolidated is the biggest venture yet undertaken.

The Parrot Mining company has decided to sink the shaft on the Parrot claim 400 feet deeper, and will begin the work as soon as possible. It is now 1,800 feet deep and the 400 will take it to the same depth as the deepest of the other hill mines, which is 2,400 feet, but the collar of the Anaconda is higher than that of the Parrot. It is likely that 200 feet more will be added after the 400 is complete.

COBALT IS SHOWING RICH ORE

Ontario's New Silver Camp is Booming Now—Enormous Values Near the Surface and the Veins Improve With Depth —Some of the Finds.

Cobalt, Ont., May 19.—The rush is on at Cobalt. Miners from many camps and adventurers from all parts are arriving by every train. The latter are an interesting lot. Few of them have more than enough money to last them a week. They are flocking to Cobalt, as many of them have done to other new mining camps in the past, hoping that something will turn up. Usually it does, but not in the way they expect. Some of them get an ax and go out with the clearing gang. Others drive nails—they call it carpentry—for a new city is fast springing up. Few if any of these waifs of the continent find silver.

The silver is here—millions of it in value—but the men who know are the men who get it—not the waifs. Here will be found dozens of practical mining engineers who have had years of experience in leading mining camps of the world. These men have gone at it in a cold-blooded, business way—prospecting for silver, finding it in many rich veins all over Coleman township, and going to work earnestly to get it out. That they are getting it out in enormous quantities is evidenced by the statement of Mr. Black, superintendent of the Temiskaming & Northern Ontario railroad, who is authority for the statement that at the present rate of shipment Cobalt will forward fully $4,000,000 worth of ore this year.

There are now twenty going camps in Cobalt. Some of these have shipped comparatively little—in a few instances not more than $75,000 or $100,000 in values—but all have progressed far enough to show excellent veins on their properties. Several of the leading camps, entirely satisfied by their prospecting that they have pay ore for many months to come, are crushing and sacking their output and storing it in their ore houses, ready for shipment. One of the rich mines—La Rose—discovered originally by a blacksmith in the employ of the railroad, was purchased from him for $28,000. The first car of ore that was taken out by the new owners netted them $30,000. They have since taken out fully $500,000 in values and their vein shows richer and truer as the depth increases.

The Nipissing Mines company started active operations less than fifteen months ago, and has already taken out over $1,200,000 in silver and Cobalt ores at a total operating expense of less than $100,000. Although the Nipissing company owns nearly 900 acres of lands in the very heart of the Cobalt district, it has prospected and opened veins in less than 10 per cent of this territory. At present, in the restricted area which they have worked, thirty paying veins have been opened. From one of these alone—the No. 19 ledge—over $300,000 in values have been taken. This ledge is less than 100 feet in its length, and is down not more than sixty feet. Every shot that is made indicates that this vein is growing wider and truer as it goes down. There is every indication that it will grow in values to a depth of at least 500, and possibly 1,000, feet.

Some of the Nipissing veins show little values in the wall, while others disclose rich ore scattered some distance from the vein into the enclosing rock. These scattered values, which in other silver camps would be considered very rich ore, are listed as second class ore in the Cobalt district. This second class ore will run from $100 to $250 a ton. Since it has been the desire of the company to learn as much as possible about the conditions controlling the mineralization of its property before commencing development upon a large scale, many of its cuts, which are exceedingly rich in values, have not been followed down more than fifteen or twenty feet.

Now the Nipissing company is going to work on a much larger scale. New and larger machinery has been installed and a hydraulic King plant will be in operation within thirty days. This is an absolutely new proposition for Cobalt, although extensively and very successfully used in the gold fields of the West. The entire Cobalt district seems to be a vast aggregation of conglomerate, lower Huronian and agglomerate formations, covered with enough soil and moss to carry heavy timber growths. In most places where active operations have been undertaken, the timber has been cleared away. The situation of a part of the Nipissing properties on the shores of Peterson lake and rising somewhat abruptly therefrom offers an ideal hydraulic King opportunity. Before June 15 three hydraulic giants will be stripping acres of this land adjacent to Peterson lake, and without doubt many rich veins will be uncovered.

Not a few of the sceptical who do not know Cobalt by personal observation believe reports of its wonderful richness are exaggerated. That such is not the case is evidenced by the statements of Dr. Robert Bell, geologist in chief of the Canadian survey, who, after several visits to the new Eldorado, has no hesitation in saying that the ores found at Cobalt are the richest of their kind in the world, and there will doubtless be a

THE CALUMET & ARIZONA

Output for April Shows Increase of 1,250,000 Pounds Over Year Ago---Promising Strike in Cananea-Duluth Mine.

Bisbee, Ariz., May 19.—The output of the Calumet & Arizona for April was 3,888,000 pounds against 2,638,000 pounds a year ago. For the four months from Jan. 1 the output has been 16,376,000 pounds, against 10,446,000 pound for the same period in 1905. The figures are in pounds of blister copper, 99 per cent line. The totals include, besides the output of the Calumet & Arizona proper, the production of the Lake Superior & Pittsburg and the Pittsburg & Duluth mines.

There has been considerable talk in Douglas recently concerning a new smelting plant to be owned by the Shattuck-Arizona. It is the general belief that this company, when it gets ready to build its own reduction works will locate them in Douglas, but just when that will be cannot be at this time learned. Mr. Shattuck says that the matter of the smelter for his company has been left entirely in the hands of the board of directors, but that nothing definite has yet been decided upon, either as to when the smelter will be built or where it will be located. This company is now constructing an aerial tramway which will bring the ore to the railroad, and as soon as this is completed regular shipments of ore will be begun to the Copper Queen smelter in Douglas. Of course the people of Douglas are anxious to have the Shattuck-Arizona in their city, and the same reasons which brought the Copper Queen and the Calumet & Arizona to Douglas will no doubt bring the Shattuck people there. It is known that the ore bodies in this property are sufficient to guarantee that the owners will not long be content to be without a smelting plant of their own.

A letter from Cananea says: In the Cananea-Duluth mine there has occurred what the mining men of this mining district call a big strike. They have sunk shaft No. 2 of the mine to a depth of ninety-eight feet into a solid body of ore that runs from 5½ to 8 per cent in copper, six to eleven ounces in silver and a showing of gold.

The six by eight foot shaft has been sunk sixteen feet into the solid ore body, and neither wall of the vein has been found. Everything that comes from the shaft now runs in values as indicated in the foregoing.

The experts here say that this strike promises one of the biggest things in the district. The shaft in which the strike was made is now down 114 feet, sixteen feet in the solid ore body.

At the 150 foot level a crosscut will be driven to show up just how wide the vein is, and it seems only a question of how much bigger the strike will prove.

Shipments of the ore will begin at once to the El Paso smelter. The management says that it can be shipped at a profit now of $800 to the car of thirty tons. Thirty men are working at the mines, and adequate machinery has already been ordered and the property is to be worked for all there is in it.

McClement, Masters Russel Gates and Morgan McClement, and Mr. Gates' private secretary, was a Bisbee visitor Monday. The party came in one of the private cars of George J. THE MARQUETTE RANGE

Little Doubt That Fine Body of Ore Lies Under Lake Bancroft---New Strike in Tilden Mine Reported.

Ishpeming, Mich., May 19.—(Special The Herald.)—That a fine body of ore lies beneath the bed of Lake Bancroft, at Ishpeming, Marquette range, there seems little doubt. There is every reason to believe that beneath the waters in this diorite valley will be found extensive deposits that will eventually be mined as was the case at Lake Angeline, a body of water in the same district, drained more than a dozen years ago and the scene of important mining operations ever since. It is known that the mineral-bearing formation dips under the lake. It has been followed from the workings of the Cleveland Cliffs company's Cliffs Shafts property to the north of the shaft, but whether it extends westward from the perpendicular line marking the west shore of the lake remains to be seen, the indications, however, warranting the conclusion that it does. Important in testing this theory are operations just started by the Cleveland Cliffs company. Diamond drill work has been commenced on the west shore of Lake Bancroft, directly north of the Cliffs shafts, and within a hundred feet of the water's edge. A number of holes will be put down with the intention of giving that part of the field a thorough and systematic test.

Several hundred yards directly west of the Lake Bancroft drill location, the company has a drill in commission in the flat near the Carp river. There is excellent prospect of the discovery of important bodies here. Fifteen years or more ago a small deposit of hematite ore was found on the west shore of the river, about half a mile from the Cliffs Shats mine, but only a few tons of the material had been taken out when operations were suspended. It is believed now that the ore encountered at this point is a continuation of the measures of the Teal lake range mined at the Cambria and Lillie properties at Negaunee, three miles distant. It is the belief, also, that the formation at the Lake Superior hard ore mine, to the south, will be found swinging in the direction of the Carp, the trend as far as ascertained extending toward the river basin. The time is not far distant when the lands north of the city, not only in the Cleveland Cliffs territory, but also the tracts controlled by the Steel corporation, will be thoroughly tested with drills. It has been known for some time by the Steel corporation officials that there is ore on the company's lands in the north end of town, although very little exploratory work has yet been done in that section. It is believed, in fact, that the ore bodies extend as far north as the old cemeteries, and it would occasion no surprise if they are found to extend even further in that direction.

Mining operations in the Cascade district, south of Negaunee, have been confined so far this season to the Empire and the Richmond. The former is a new property, being opened by John A. Jones of Iron Mountain, and although some ore will be shipped this year the greater attention will be given to opening work and the installation of machinery. The Richmond is operated by the Cleveland firm of M. A. Hanna & Co., and is one of the very few in the district which have given a good account of themselves. All the ore mined is reduced in a crusher, installed last year, before being loaded

THE MENOMINEE RANGE

Output Will be Larger Than in Any Past Season---Search for New Deposits in the Stambaugh Valley.

Iron Mountain, Mich., May 19.—(Special to The Herald.)—While there is more activity in the Crystal Falls district of the Menominee range at present than all any time since the opening of the field in the early '80s, it is very largely confined to actual production from developed ore bodies. More men are employed, and the output will be larger than in any past season; but while some exploring will be done in search of new deposits, there will be much less work of this nature than in the Stambaugh valley, in the western end of the county, where the bulk of the properties now receiving attention are being tested for their possible mineral wealth. This condition is due to several reasons, the most important of which is that the most promising lands are in the hands of the principal producers in the field, notably Corrigan, McKinney & Co. of Cleveland, and the selection available to the new-comer is therefore greatly limited in scope. Shortage of labor also is a factor, likewise the fact that the operating companies have about all they can do in developing ore bodies now being mined and in filling their orders from ore-consumers.

However, Corrigan, McKinney & Co. are not only bringing to the producing stage the Kimball and Fairbanks properties, mines that were opened years ago and abandoned at shallow depth, but they are doing some work on the Hennepin lands, adjacent to the Tobin, the biggest producer in the district, in an effort to trace the continuation of the formation of the latter tract. This work is particularly important, attended as it is with the possibility that it will lead to the opening of another big mine, and the progress making is watched with great interest. A diamond drill is being used, and it is the intention to put down a large number of holes. In the vicinity of the old Mastodon mine, diamond drilling is under way for the Consumers' Ore company of Cleveland. Just what of being met with is not stated publicly, but the lands will be thoroughly tested. It is excellent opinion that ore deposits will be encountered. The Great Eastern property is included in the tract being given attention there. North of Corrigan, McKinney & Co.'s Armenia mine, the Buffalo & Susquehanna company is exploring the McDonald "forty." The diamond drill in commission there was recently removed to a new location after having bored, with entirely satisfactory results, it is said, a deep hole close to the Armenia line. The Merry and Wilkinson lands are promising tracts in which strong concerns are interested, but no work is being done at present in either instance. A half-interest in the Wilkinson property is held by Pickands, Mather & Co. of Cleveland.

A characteristic feature of the Crystal Falls district is the rehabilitation of mines formerly abandoned as worthless. In the days of the old gouging methods, many a fine deposit of ore was missed. The policy was to get out the ore in sight in the shortest possible space of time; little underground exploration was done, and when the ore measures pinched the mine was robbed and abandoned. In this day of the mining engineer, every foot of the ground is tested, and it is with reasonable assurance that no ore remains that operations are finally suspended on any particular level. The theory that the ore bodies of the field cut out at a depth of 500 feet has long ago been relegated, and bigger and better mines have been created from supposedly worthless or low grade propositions until many of the so-called scrams are today yielding more profit than when they flourished in the early days of the district. Much of this rejuvenation has been accomplished by Corrigan, McKinney & Co., some of whose best mines were taken over when they were considered as little better than junk.

A case in point is the Dunn mine, which, abandoned as a worked out scram, was robbed of pillars and floors in 1898 and was permitted to collapse. Now, it is probable that the property will produce more ore this year than in any

The finance committee of the Women's council is thinking seriously and acting quietly. The campaign for money to carry the different enterprises to a successful termination is being prosecuted very quietly. Letters are sent out to the people of the city who are interested in the sort of work which the council is carrying forward and the committee awaits response. That this method vindicates itself has been proved during the past years and this year it is hoped that the money will be raised with as little trouble. The letters have been written and the subscriptions for the summer's work has been headed with a hundred dollar check. That the finance committee will be very glad to receive subscriptions from any interested in the work goes without saying. The chairman of this committee is the president of the council, Mrs. J. L. Washburn, and her committee members are Mrs. T. D. Merrill, Mrs. F. E. House, Mrs. A. M. Marshall, Mrs. A. H. Comstock and Mrs. H. C. Marshall. The largest demands upon the funds of the council are for the maintenance of the summer cooking school, and the school gardens and the other departments require lesser sums.

Mrs. Washburn is deeply interested in the line of work undertaken by Mrs. Schoff, who was the leader for juvenile courts in Pennsylvania and her committee of the New Century club is responsible for the payment of the probation officers who are secured by the committee and all ten of whom are women. Mrs. Schoff's work is in line with that taken up by the Women's council of this city and any Duluthians in St. Paul at that time will be interested in hearing her.

QUEER MATRIMONIAL RECORDS.

Nebraska Couple Met, Courted and Wed All in One Hour.

A new item has been added to the long and interesting list of authenticated matrimonial records by the marriage of Capt. Kuhns of Maysville, Ohio, to Mrs. Sarah Crawford of the same parish. It is seventy years since the lovers began their courtship, and since the gallant captain, who went through the Mexican and American Civil wars, was 31 years old when he first met his fiancee, it follows that he has reached the age of 101 years. The marriage certificate, indeed, established the fact, and also mentioned that the blushing bride had just entered upon her second century!

This is a very different sort of record from that of John T. Kruger of Wabash, Neb., for whom is claimed the distinction of being the only man in the world who was married to his wife, in strict accordance with the laws of a civilized country, within sixty minutes of first having set eyes on her.

As might be expected, this "hustling" was the outcome of a wager, Mr. Kruger having somewhat recklessly bet a friend a "level hundred" that he would ask the first girl he met on leaving the hotel where he was staying to marry him within the shortest possible time. He was exceptionally lucky, for the first girl chanced to be unusually pretty and quite willing, though an utter stranger to him, and, as already stated, in something under the hour they were man and wife.

Statistics prove that most men and women are content to be married once in a lifetime, but in the United States, where the matrimonial and divorce laws afford great facilities for record breaking, and the penetration of the press gives publicity to everybody's affairs, people appear to take a more liberal view of the holy bonds. There is Mrs. Ayres of Taylor county, for instance.

That is to say, she was Mrs. Ayres when last mentioned in the press, but since she was married to no fewer than nine husbands before she was 33, it is quite possible that she is Mrs. Something-else ere now. It is a singular fact that this record was attained without the lady having once to have recourse to the divorce court. Four of her husbands were shot dead, one died suddenly in a public thoroughfare of heart disease, another was killed in an accident, and two died in their beds. So far as we can discover No. 9 survives.

Recourse to the divorce court naturally simplifies record breaking of this description, but the well-known feat performed by Mr. and Mrs. Coffin of Chicago, is still uneclipsed. They have been married to and divorced from each other three times. Mrs. Coffin is a successful novelist, and a daughter of the millionaire, Amos Snell, who was murdered some years back under very mysterious circumstances. At one time, in one of the periods between marrying and divorcing Mr. Coffin, Mrs. Coffin relieved the monotony by marrying a Mr. Walker. But it was not a successful innovation, and she shook off the name of Walker in the divorce court, and remarried Mr. Coffin for the third time; but only to be divorced from him shortly afterward.

A more satisfactory sort of record perhaps, and certainly a more wonderful "break," is held by George Dunvile and his wife, who last year made a trip from their home in South Dakota to Washington, at the invitation of President Roosevelt, who had expressed a wish to congratulate them personally on bringing into the world twenty-seven children, and never having had a single child.

Mr. Dunvile and his wife are still young, being respectively 44 and 39 years of age, and their goodly family has gathered around them with great rapidity. Invariably arriving in triplets—eight sets of three boys, and one set of three girls. No doubt both parents are to be heartily congratulated, but all the same, few people would envy Mrs. Dunvile the task of cutting bread and butter for her children's tea!

GEN. S. B. M. YOUNG ON THE ARMY CANTEEN

The army is an institution for certain practical purposes. It is composed of men with the average virtues and defects, needs and desires of human beings. To attain the objects for which the army is instituted, it is necessary not only to maintain perfect discipline among the men composing it, but also to take all possible and proper measures for the maintenance of the health and the comfort of the soldier, so as to make him content with his lot and to render his calling pleasurable to him, to the end that he be not merely a human machine, but a soldier in spirit and loyalty.

If there is anything tending to prove that this is not accomplished in the degree in which it should be accomplished, it is the statement of Gen. Burton, inspector general of the army, that there were during the last fiscal year 6,533 deserters, an increase of 660 over the preceding year, and amounting to 11.07 per cent of the entire enlisted strength. That is to say, of every nine soldiers enlisted one deserts. No other army in the world equals that, although no other soldier in the world is better paid, better housed and better fed than the American soldier.

The inspector general gives as one of the reasons for the numerous desertions that no beer can be had in the post exchanges, and he adds that the best judgment of the army is that if the exchanges were to furnish the soldier with light beer under the supervision of the commanding officer, it would result in greater contentment and in minimizing the crime of desertion.

Now it must by no means be believed that the degree of discontent is to be measured merely by the number of desertions. Not every discontented soldier deserts. On the contrary, the probability is that the discontented soldiers who do not desert are more numerous than those who do desert.

It would be hardly necessary to explain that discontent must inevitably result in other violations and misdemeanors and in a general lowering of the morals of the army, even if it were not proven by facts. But facts do prove it. A letter from the acting secretary of war to the house of representatives (fifty-seventh congress), marked documents H 252, contains a summary of the reports of post commanders, showing the results of the abolition of the sale of beer at posts within hte United States. The number of posts reporting was 126. Of these eighty-one reported an increase and ten a decrease of drunkenness; seventy-four reported an increase of absence without leave and eight a decrease; sixty-nine reported an increase and eight a decrease of trials by courtmartial, and fifty-six reported a lower condition of morality and discipline and not one a higher condition. I think these figures speak for themselves.

As alcoholism is impossible without the use of alcohol, and as none of it can be had at the post exchange, the soldier must, of course, get it somewhere else. He gets it in the saloons and vile resorts in the neighborhood of the exchange. There, among vicious surroundings, in the company of immoral men and lewd women, he drinks whisky, mostly the worst kind; there his physical and moral health is destroyed, and the prohibition of the sale of beer at the post exchange has had apparently no other effect but that of driving the soldier from the clean atmosphere of the canteen into the miserable dives surrounding forts and garrisons and of making whisky drinkers out of beer drinkers.

The officers of the army are nearly unanimous in their opinion that the prohibition of the sale of beer and light wines has resulted in all-around injury; they almost with one accord are in favor of re-establishing the canteen feature at the posts. And who is better able to judge than they? The medical world is also nearly unanimous in the wholesomeness of these light alcoholic beverages, if moderately used. The most enlightened nations of the world do not object to the use of beer or wine by their soldiers. Why should we allow the army to be made an experiment station for the pet theories of people who ignore experience and human nature? The desire for alcoholic stimulants is pretty general among men. Moderate use of them is the rule, immiderate use is the exception, and the habit of using such a rule less than 4 per cent of alcohol, is in itself a moredate use, especially under canteen regulations which makes excess impossible. The average American has not much taste for wine, but beer is popular and its reasonable use wholesome. No other nation in the world has considered it expedient for the welfare of the soldier to deprive him of the comfort of a glass of beer or wine, and it does not seem that they are the worse for it.

In an article which the former army surgeon, Maj. L. L. Seaman, some time ago published in the North American Review, he cited the following passage of a letter written to him by a prominent officer then stationed at Pekin: "The W. C. T. U. would have no fault to find with the post here. The men go outside and get drunk on sam shui in town, and go to sleep in back yards or other worse places, but the sanctity of the government reservation is maintained. The Germans have a beer hall on the wall at Hartman gate. British have one in their grounds,and the French soldier has his little bottle of wine at dinner. We alone are virtuous. We are the advocates of reform. We are the great hypocritical hippodrome—none like us."

MANUSCRIPTS IN LEATHER.

Harper's Magazine: In 1903 the German government sent an expedition under the lead of Dr. Alfred Grunwedel, one of the directors of the Berlin Museum of Ethnology, to Turfan, in the extreme east of Chinese Turkestan. The great find at Turfan consists of the enormous number of about 800 fragments of manuscripts, more or less extensive, written in an alphabet which is a modification of the Syraic script tiat goes by the name of Estraggelo. The modifications of this alphabet are quite serious. Some of the Syraic letters are wanting; others are modified in form; and there are also some new letters.

These manuscripts are written for the most part on paper, but one is on silk, and a few are on white kid. These last were found in old shoes, being cut into the shape of a foot, and laid on the inner soles of the shoes, so as to strengthen the foundation. They are all written carefully and distinctly, with caligraphic chapter initials. Each page, in the manner of modern books, has at the top a heading, stating the contents of the page, in yellow, green, blue or red. Some few contain miniatures of exquisite workmanship. The lines are in general very short, this is a noticeable peculiarity of the entire collection.

The texts are throughout of Manichean origin; the 800 fragments are remnants of the long-lost Manichean literature. Such as they are they contain the sole remnants of the Manicheans Bible. Our knowledge of Mani and the Manicheans up to this time was at second hand; reports of Oriental writers and Caristian Church Fathers.

REMARKABLE NEW AUTO.

London Cor. Chicago Tribune: A public exhibition as given today of what is considered by experts to be the most novel automobile ever seen in this country. It is the invention of an Italian named Pescatore, and the name, the "automixte," briefely gives an idea of its character, as a mixture of petrol and electricity provides the motive power. The operation of the automobile is simplicity itself. A single lever and a solitary pedal are all the mechanical details which the driver is required to watch. A singular feature of the "auto-mixte" is that it has no gear box and is capable of a dozen varieties of speed. Instead of the ordinary expanding clutch the "auto-mixte" has a clutch of ingenious design. The clutch is, in fact, a dynamo connected with a storage battery under the driver's seat. When the car is started the clutch acts as a flywheel to the engine, and when the latter gives off more power than is needed the dynamo clutch serves to store the surplus in the storage battery. When going up a hill, where an ordinary petrol motor demands assistance through its lower gear, the "auto-mixte" supplies assistance in the shape of a current from the battery tarough the dynamo clutch to the transmission shaft. By this means the new machine takes hills as easily as dead levels, and when descending tae engine is cut out, leaving the dynamo free to generate the current to supply what is taken up in going up a hill.

Delicious Viands to Tempt Jaded Appetite

By EMMA PADDOCK TELFORD.

Hollandaise Sauce.

Make a drawn butter sauce in the proportion of three tablespoonfuls of butter, two of flour and one cup hot water with salt and pepper to season. Melt the butter, add the flour, stir until frothy and bubbly, then add the water and stir until smooth and creamy. Now add the mashed yolk of one egg, a teaspoonful of onion juice and one of finely minced parsley. A little lemon juice is also an addition.

Veloute Sauce.

This takes considerable time in its making and should be prepared the day before using. It will keep several days in a cold place. Take about a pound of lean ham, veal and the remains of a roast fowl, having fowl and veal in the larger proportions. Put into a saucepan two tablespoonfuls of butter and put all the meats cut in small pieces, together with a fine chopped onion, a small carrot, one or two peppercorns, a clove of garlic and a little salt and grated nutmeg. Toss until the veal is a light brown, then add a cup of rich consomme or hot water and cook until the liquor is strong and good. Strain, skim and free from every suspicion of fat. Put in a small saucepan half a tablespoonful each flour and butter, cook until blended, then add to the stock, stirring until smooth and thickened. Add a half tablespoonful of tarragon vinegar and serve.

Bechamel Sauce.

This may be made by using the veloute for a foundation, adding to it in equal quantity of cream that has been just brought to the boiling point, no more; or take a pint of any good white stock, put into a stew pan with an onion minced, a few mushrooms, and a sprig each of thyme and parsley, with a blade of mace. Simmer until the stock is reduced one-half, then strain. Put a cup of cream into a stew pan, mix the stock with it gradually and stir until thickened. If the cream is thin it may be necessary to use a tablespoonful of arrowroot, stirred smooth in cold milk to thicken.

Bavarian Potato Balls.

My Dear Mrs. Telford:

Can you give me a recipe for Bavarian potato balls, made of raw potatoes? They are often found on the bills of fare of German restaurants, but I have not been able to get a recipe. Thanking you in advance, I remain,

MRS. A. E.

I think the potato balls to which you have reference are the "kartoffel-klosse." They are usually served with beef a la mode and are popular, as you suggest, at the German restaurants. They must be boiled as soon as made, as they turn black if allowed to stand. Peel and grate one quart of potatoes, then drain through a coarse towel so as to get rid of any water. Next take four boiled potatoes, medium size, grate, add to the raw ones and season with salt and a little nutmeg. To make the balls dip the hand in cold water, then deftly fashion into shape, putting in the center of each ball a couple of small cubes of bread fried brown in drippings of butter. Drop into boiling salted water and cook gently, though keeping at the boiling point all the time, for about fifteen minutes.

Another way of making the potato balls, where potatoes are grated raw, is to mix them after grating with egg and a little sifted flour to hold in shape. Have a kettle of hot fat, and fry the balls in this. Meantime have some onions sliced and fried brown in another pan, and when he potato balls are ready to serve put a spoonful of fried and seasoned onions on top of each ball.

Dakota Potatoes.

Peel raw potatoes, wash and slice very thin. Do not wash after slicing. Put into a frying pan a tablespoonful of lard, butter or drippings, and when hot add the sliced potatoes; pour over them a small cup of hot water and sprinkle with salt on top; cover and cook over a moderate fire; do not stir but occasionally slip a knife under to prevent sticking when done the potatoes should pour out white, tender, delicious. It may be browned, if preferred.

Pinafore Frocks Are Pretty for Children

By ELIZABETH LEE.

The pinafore frocks are seen in charming variations this season, and as they are so generally becoming, will probably take the place of the popular suspender modes for girls up to the age of fourteen. Trimmer and neater in effect, perhaps, than the suspender frocks, very little extra material being required, especially in the bib variation, it is not surprising the pinafore is gaining n favor. Dainty percales and chambrays made up in full skirts gathered into the belt have the bib-like bodice cut away extremely under the arms, the shoulder straps of needlework being continued as a finish around the wide armholes. Another model has a pleated skirt, the bib just a gathered piece taken into the belt and suspenders of the material or embroidery banding taking the outer edge of the bib as they descend to the belt, while yet another has a very full skirt, a very full lower portion of bodice gathered top and bottom, ribbons tied on the shoulders supporting the frock. For utilizing a remnant of pretty rose-tud printed challie this is an especially dainty model worn with a lingerie guimpe, in fact, either style is an example of what can be done with a length of material, too little for a grown-up waist, yet sufficient for a whole frock for a small maiden.

Ginghams look especially smart made up in this style, the material cut on the bias when making the skirt, and are admirable for school wear. Cotton voile is another seasonable material to be recommended for children's garments, being light, cool and so easily laundered. In small checks, it makes the cutest little Russian and Norfolk suits for small boys, the only trimming braid or plain bands the color of or harmonizing with the check, and is a great improvement over many other materials hitherto employed in boys' clothing especially; and speaking of boys and their needs brings to my mind a smart looking suit in Russian blouse style made from just plain pillow ticking in a narrow blue and white stripe, the belt, collar and cuffs being of plain blue galatea, which should appeal to mothers seeking something durable for the wear of their small sons. It surely never could wear out, neither would it be likely to fade in washing, as everyone knows. In fact, if trimmed with rows of white cotton wash braid, such suits would stand boiling, and as they require no starch, the ironing would not be a difficult matter.

Smart looking coats are being made up from Rajah silk for early summer wear. In most attractive models, the natural shades lending themselves so well to the combination of touches of color, black and Alice blue being particularly good. The light pony coats, too, in light cloth will be much worn by girls from the age of 14, and, as these garments are semi-fitting and show few seams, should not be beyond the skill of the home seamstress.

Slot seams from the shoulders back and front outlined with braid, a velvet collar strapped in with braid and cuffs matching, as a finish for the coat sleeves, calls for only two yards of fifty-four inch broadcloth, six yards of braid, and three-eighths of a yard of velvet. The closing may be under a fly, or by means of buttons and buttonholes. If the latter, the effect will be smarter if arranged in two groups of two buttons and corresponding buttonholes. An Eton or similar lines may be made from one yard and one-half of cloth, so that if such a coat is needed, and a remnant could be picked up cheaply, the result would be an inexpensive, yet most useful addition to a young girl's wardrobe, coming in for general spring wear and for all summer when a lightweight wrap is a necessity. Bought in a store these smart little separate coats are quite expensive, costing as much oftentimes as a whole suit.

Accordion pleated frocks in the China and radium silks are shown in empire styles for small girls' wear. The long skirts are attached to a plain short yoke and the puff sleeves ending in lace bands are also accordion pleated. The yoke is entirely concealed by a wide, deep round collar of lace or lingerie, detachable, of course.

Scrubbing is Good for Antique Rugs

Cleaning rugs, especially the antique ones that are worth hundreds of dollars, is really a science, and housewives possessing any of these much valued floor coverings should remember it when having their spring cleanings done. According to a man who has made a life study of it, too much care cannot be taken of really fine antiques, either at the general housecleaning period or during the daily or weekly cleaning.

"The mistake of brushing with a stiff broom against the grain should never be made," he says, "and if necessary, to prevent this, mistresses should personally superintend this work, for going against the weaves takes off the silky nap and loosens the threads that bind the material together. Neither should they ever be shaken by one end or in the center to free them from dust and dirt, for this is apt to loosen the weave. Pounding them with the regulation rattan rug beater is another method that makes for destruction and should never be permitted. The only thing I know of to take the surface dirt from fine, thin old coverings is a thorough brushing, or rather a whisking with a strong but soft bristle brush, working always with the grain. After this partial cleaning a damp cloth can be stroked across the top to give a brightness to the colors and to gather up the loose dirt.

"Once or twice a year a genuine old-fashioned scrubbing to freshen the colors and to clean out the dirt should be given. But I would suggest that this be done by an experienced person who will do it by hand, for modern processes often ruin these thin fabrics, and once the weave is loosened and the covering begins to come apart the rug is of really little use for any practical wear.

"After such a brushing as I have advised for the daily or weekly cleaning, Ishould put a big rug that is strong enough to be blown by a brisk wind, out on a line when there is a gale and let it stay all day. This should take out the loose dirt, but if it does not, the process of blowing by compressed air will be satisfactory if the rug is not too thick.

"Once the dirt is blown out the rest is comparatively easy for it consists of a simple washing, scrubbing rather, with cold water and castile or pure white soap, one that has little lye in its composition, for although the colors are all of the best vegetable dyes in these fine rugs, and should never run, any but a pure soap should not be used on them.

"With the small rugs they can be soaked for a number of hours in a bath tub then thoroughly soaped and scrubbed with a soft bristle brush until they look fresh and clean. A good rinsing also in cold water follows and then a dull, flat but well polished stick should be drawn stiffly across the surface on either side and the water literally pulled out. This is an excellent way to wring, for, of course, the ordinary way of squeezing the covering through one's hands would not only be bad for the rug, leaving it full of wrinkles and creases, but next to impossible.

"When all the water is out that can be removed in this way the rug should be put on a strong stretcher with the the four sides well fastened to the square or oblong frame—of a sie that exactly fits the covering—the rug should be put out in the air to dry. If it has been properly stretched the edges will be smooth and as straight as when the covering was first woven, and the colors will be as bright and fresh looking. Then, too, the nap will be silky, more so than when first made, so that it will be put back on the floor in really excellent condition.

"Large rugs are washed in exactly the same way, only they, after being soaked, will usually have to be washed on the floor. This scrubbing, while simple enough, should really be done by an expert or the gum that is put into the rugs when they are first made will all be taken out by the water and the covering left limp and without any elasticity or life that gives the delightful springy sensation when one steps on the thick, firm nap.

"There is a method of dry cleaning that for a certain weave of rug known as the Belooge and Khiva, is better than an old-fashioned washing. The naphtha is, of course, put on in the ordinary way and should, if it is properly done, leave the nap silky and fresh in appearance."

Pongee Dust Coats for Motoring Now Ornamental

For automobiling in summer a light wrap is always necessary—that is, a wrap that will protect the gown while affording no appreciable warmth. In other words, it is a dust coat that is desired. When the dust coats first became fashionable they were modelled only to be useful, but now they must be ornamental as well. Fancy embroidered collars of a becoming color are added, and while the cloak must reach to the hem of the gown, and have long sleeves, fastening tightly at the wrists, still there is an attempt to procure a good fit, and the sleeves are of whatever cut is fashionable at the moment. The little inside cuff closing about the wrists with elastic is splendid for keeping the sleeve of the waist fresh, and the coat must button up well at the throat, in order that the collar shall not be mussed or soiled. Naturally, when all these rules are strictly adhered to, it is no simple matter to still have the garment attractive, but there are, in spite of the difficulty, plenty of smart automobile wraps.

The newest automobile coats are of waterproof silk, and the rubber lined satin rain coats are naturally absolutely dust-proof, as well as being most attractive, for dark colors are no longer thought necessary. In one way, at least, the lighter shades are best, for they do not show dust so soon as deep blue, green and black. A black cloak is perhaps worst of all, white and gray showing dust less readily. White automobile cloaks are rather the craze just now, and certainly they are most cheerful and effective, besides looking as trim at the end of a trip as at the beginning, unless a muddy road is encountered.

A rubber silk wrap is made just as any other long, loose cloak; some have the box back hanging full from the shoulder, while others are semi-fitted with the loose front. A few are quite loose, only belted in with wide straps at the waist. Rubber silk can be had in any shade. The dark colors with bright silk or cloth collar and cuffs are attractive, and the light trimming can easily be changed when soiled. Rubber silk, or gloria, is delightfully cool, lighter than the rubber lined satin which is, however, frequently preferred because of having some little warmth. Perhaps the smartest satin coats are white, with colored cloth or silk collar and cuffs. Plain taffeta silk is also made use of. An unlined silk wrap affords practically no warmth, but helps considerably to keep off the dust and dirt.

Pongee always makes an excellent dust coat. It retains its first freshness for some time and looks cool, which is half the battle in summer. Pongee dusters have not changed to any marked degree since first introduced. The sleeves have, of course, altered, and the coats are now more elaborate than at first; in fact, a pongee coat can be as much trimmed as desired, and some of the late models are very handsome, being literally covered with hand embroidery. There may be a deep embroidered shoulder cape and wide cuffs, also embroidered, while the belt carries out the same design. This makes an effective wrap, and is also a sensible style of coat, for, while the embroidery is, of course, expensive, the wrap can be cleaned so easily that an immense amount of wear can be derived from the duster.

Point to Consider in Buying Pins

So few women understand how to test the quality of pins and needles, though few things are more constantly in use, that it is only in exceptional cases that even the points are examined. In selecting these daily necessities that are made in a variety of grades, the average shopper generally fails to consider that unless the points are sharp and the pins or needles of symmetrical shapes with smooth surfaces, the materials they are stuck through may be practically ruined by the catching of a thread, which pulled out of place weakens the cloth, particularly if it happens to be sheer and fine, and occasionally tears a hole.

Many fine lawn and silk waists and pieces of neckwear have been literally ruined by pin holes, according to a well known dealer, who says that these large and ugly punctures can easily be avoided if women will only choose pins with needle-like points and of dimensions that are not so heavy that they break the weave.

"For use in silks and thin linens pins with exceedingly tiny points and slim bodies should be purchased," he says. "And the lines on which they are made should be straight, that is, free from irregularities, and should gradually taper down from the head. Then, too, the surface should be absolutely smooth to the touch, and it is always in the best makes.

"I mentioned any slight deviation in the formation of them as objectionable because such a defect is bound to make the necessary hole larger and often tears the threads, and if the surface is not smooth, and the pins are forced through soft silk, etc., a rent may be easily made.

"I would suggest that before purchasing pins one or two of them be removed from the paper or box and held up to the light for careful inspection. If they are of a dull color and bend easily between the fingers, it is an unmistakable sign that they are made from adamantine and are cheap. As a rule their surfaces lack smoothness and they are made in shapes undesirable for toilet usage. For, instead of gradually diminishing from the heads to the points, they are one size from the top to about one-sixteenth of an inch from the bottom, where the point suddenly starts. It is needless to add that they would do untold damage to sheer pieces of materials, for there would be only a small pin prick worked between the threads before the body of the metal several times larger than the point would be pushed through.

"The way the heads are made is another sure method of telling them, for on inferior grades they are often ragged around the edges or without any tops.

"Between the brass and steel pins there is really little difference except that the latter rust if not kept in dry places or in flannel and are of a darker color than those of the other material. The ones made of brass bend easily with a little pressure, just like those of adamantine, but the finished surface and well formed tops mark them a first class pin. Both of these are made with very fine points and slender, tapering bodies, topped by well formed oval heads, and in the smaller sizes can be worn with silks, etc., without injury to the materials.

"With glass headed pins the same tests can be applied, with the exception of that for the heads, for when of imitation pearls, garnets, etc., or in glass, they rarely have even a semblance of regularity.

"Needles are all made of steel, and should be more perfect in shape than the finest of pins, with slender, graduated bodies and points of extreme sharpness. As to the heads, the holes for the threads may be either round or oblong, but should have no sharp edges for they cut the cotton or silk put through them too easily and are a hindrance to either satisfactory or quick sewing.

"One safe way in buying is to ask for imported pins and needles, those made in either England or Germany, though the former as a rule are of a superior quality. The domestic ones have not as yet been brought up to the desired standard of perfection, and for that reason sell for much less money, and for toilet use and fine needlework are undesirable."

New Fashions in Mourning Millinery

While there is no question but that the mourning of the present day borders on the eccentric in comparison with the mourning of past years, there is much that is practical about it and grief is expressed just as much in the present mourning styles as when it was thought requisite to go about completely shrouded in dull black and heavy crepe.

The small bonnet on the Mary Stuart shape with a point in front is now rarely to be seen, and even older women wear bonnets that are larger and more on the lines of hats than bonnets. Crepe is just as fashionable as ever, but the veil now is so draped that it all falls at the back of the hat, and over the face is worn only a net veil with crepe border. Later on this is substituted by a net veil that has more of a figure in the mesh and a border either of plaited taffest or several rows of dull black ribbon on the net. An evidence of eccentricity may be noted in the facing of the crepe hat with white for widow's mourning.

Stiff wings of crepe and a rather fanciful style of trimming are noticeable on many of the mourning hats, while the anachronism of ostrich tips has been attempted in the first lightening of mourning, but in the different varieties of crepe may be found sufficient opportunity for fanciful efforts, while in dress trimmings there are exquisite embroideries on crepe that are extremely effective.

Entire gowns of crepe are always fashionable, while this season separate coats and jackets are made of crepe to be worn with gowns of dull Henrietta cloth, voile or lusterless crepe de chine is a favorite mourning material and can be trimmed with crepe folds or bands, or with embroidered crepe, and is delightfully effective for the more elaborate style of gown suitable for afternoon or evening wear.

Chiffon is a material that may also be used for mourning gowns, and lately net on the order of point d'esprit has been added to the list of possible materials. Both of these two latter fabrics can be trimmed with crepe, but it is rather smarter, although not so deep mourning to use dull black ribbon with the net instead of crepe.

AGED WARSHIP JAMESTOWN

Watches Over the Jamestown Exposition---Ancient Sloop of War Guards the Spot She Once Shelled.

Lying just off Sewell's Point, Hampton Roads, Virginia, within sight of an army of men who are at work erecting buildings on the beautiful site on which the Jamestown exposition is to be held next year, lies a veteran sloop of war whose history is deeply interesting to all Americans.

She was a warship carrying our flag on the seas before the majority of those now living were born. That she should be, bearing the name she does, lying off Sewell's Point, rocking herself to sleep forever and by reason of another circumstance which soon shall be told, is a strange coincidence. She is the United States sloop-of-war Jamestown, which was on the 8th day of May, 1862, busily throwing solid shot on a company of gentlemen in gray, who were ensconced behind sand hillocks hastily raised on the spot where the workers are erecting the exposition buildings.

A number of these gentlemen, their sons and grandsons, who appear to have forgotten the hot liners she put over the home plate on that May day, are among those who are preparing to commemorate there the landing of the English colonists 300 years ago, come next year, at a point on this inland sea a few miles away and called the print o ftheir feet on the shore Jamestown. The ship Jamestown is still in the service of the government, having been stationed several years ago at the point where she now lies anchored for the Marine Hospital service as quarantine station.

In the records which the navy department keeps, and admirably, of our warships, it is recited that she has not "stood to sea" since 1892. She was built at the Norfolk navy yard and launched in 1844 and on the 25th day of January sailed on her maiden voyage, bound for the African station and under command of R. B. Cunningham.

She mounted twenty guns, was of 1,150 register, 163 feet long, with 32-foot beam. She hasn't shrunk any since then, but ships of her rank in the navy built nowadays are five to ten times larger than she. She was a thundering ship, though, when she was built and her battery must have been something dreadful, especially when her armament was changed in 1861 and twenty fear-inspiring monsters were put aboard and their noses poked through her ports. Fourteen of these each threw a 32-pound shot and six of them were 8-inch smooth bores. The first important service she was engaged in was in the cause of humanity, and lest the Irish forget her name will be dear to them forever. In March, 1847, when famine was raging in Ireland she sailed from Boston, conveying a full cargo of foodstuffs, the gift of America to that race who are close to her heart, many of whose sons she has adpoted and many of whom have marched with her on glorious fields.

In July, 1858, the Jamestown was at Havana, too, as the naval records recite, "to resist the right of search by British." The mother country at that time claimed the right to board our ships and search for British subjects. In October of the same year she was at Graytown, Nicaragua, searching for filibusters who, under command of Gen. Walker, sought to free Cuba by a forcible invasion, a thing which we did officially fifty years later. On June 15, 1861, we having a little family trouble on, the Jamestown was recommissioned at Norfolk and stood to sea on June 12. She was off Charleston, S. C., on Aug. 5, and chased, ran ashore and burned the bark Alvanado. She was right busy for a while. Capturing the schooner Charles Aigburth, on Aug. 31, and captured, dismantled and scuttled the schooner Charles Long, on Sept. 4. She put in at New York city in September, '61, and stood to sea thence on Dec. 15, under the head of unfinished business, capturing the sloop Havelock, and on May 1, 1862, captured the prize brig Intended. Then she came back to Hampton Roads, within a few miles of her native home, and threw shot at the Johnnies on Sewell's Point. Many of these missiles have been dug up since the excavating for the exposition buildings was begun there.

Who is there who would have thought that from this planting of shot such a harvest would be reaped, and that on the shore where the pines stood waiting while the Monitor and Merrimac were engaged in their little shell game within the sound, almost, of the whispering trees a city, bright with wondrous light, would shine upon the sea; that born of the throes of that combat splendid steel ships of foreign nations would come and stand off Sewell's Point, across the water from Craney Island, where we once had a misunderstanding with our English mother, to assist us in commemorating the landing of the colonists and to see the marvelous accomplishment of the descendants of that handful of Englishmen whose emigration led to the building of a new world and the lighting of it by the torch of liberty—the indistinguishable fire which has flickered but never failed.

The sloop-of-war Jamestown was a nursery for admirals. At times during her long lifetime many men, whose names are famous in our naval history, sailed in her. W. T. Truxton of the noted Norfolk family, commanded her in 1869, Charles V. Gridley in 1864, Henry Glass in 1880, A. D. Brown in 1882, Bancroft Gheradri in 1870, S. B. Luce in 1883, C. J. Train in 1886, B. P. Lambertson in 1889, C. F. Goodrich in 1891, and other honored names are linked with hers. Representative Harry L. Maynard of the Norfolk district, has set his heart upon having a warship built at the Norfolk navy yard during the Jamestown exposition. He thinks that the millions who come here will learn much from seeing a modern ship under construction, and that their interest in our splendid navy and in the matter of its upbuilding will thus be aroused.

He has asked the congress to let Norfolk build another warship, which he will name Jamestown.

The suggestion has fired the Tidewater Virginians who have heard of it. They are for Jamestown, John Smith, the descendants of Pocahontas and a big navy by an overwhelming majority.

The sloop-of-war Jamestown received Alaska from the czar of the Russias, and put the Stars and Stripes over that piece of the frozen North, which Secretary Seward had just bought from the czar of the Russias, and was almost alone in considering it a bargain.

The Jamestown, on Oct. 8, 1867, lay in the harbor of Sitka, while, as the navy recites, "The Russian flag was hauled down and the American flag was hoisted on the government house."

Afterward she loafed around the seas for more than the lifetime of the ordinary ship before she fetched up in the magnificent harbor where she now lies upon calm blue waters, framed in green.

CLARK'S NEW WORD.

Kansas City Journal: Champ Clark has been receiving felicitations on the popular appreciation which has greeted his use of the word "jowering" in debate. Papers all over the country are discussing it and his colleagues are congratulating him on adding a new word to the language. "Hang 'em," said Champ. "I'm going to look it up now and see if there isn't an authority for it. I'll bet Shakespeare or somebody used it, and if they didn't, it's the first new word ever added to the language of which that isn't true."

SMOKING CONTEST.

The Concordia club, Berlin, had a smoking contest the other day. The prize went to the one of fifteen contestants who smoked half an ounce of tobacco in a pipe of certain size in the shortest time. The winner did it in eighteen minutes.

Boil the Baby's Bottle Every Time It is Used

Mothers Cannot be Too Careful, for Neglect in This Respect Causes Intestinal and Stomach Troubles, Says Expert in Hospital.

Bottles from which infants are fed cannot be too carefully cleaned if the little ones are to be kept in a healthy condition, according to the head nurse of the Nursery and Child's hospital of New York, who declares that many cases of intestinal and stomach troubles are caused by neglecting to promptly cleanse them or by using a kind in which it is almost impossible to get every particle of milk from the sides even by sterilizing them.

Many mothers make the mistake of getting bottles with long necks or those that have sharp angles, which are next to impossible to clean," she said, "and so, of course, injurious to the average child, who is unable to throw off the bad effect of getting curdled particles of stale milk in its food and develops indigestion or at the least a sour stomach.

"There are flat, round, oval, and I should say, I suppose, that there are square ones, made with short, long and medium length necks, but all, with one exception, have angles or curves where the narrow openings join. There is but one style bottle that I would recommend to mothers who are bringing up their little ones in this way and that is the kind that gradually tapers from the top down to the bottom, so that there are no direct curves into which the liquid can stick.

"These are most satisfactory, especially when it comes to cleaning, for water poured into the mouth is bound to wash down the sides, because the surface slants all the way down.

"In my opinion a medium sized bottle that holds about six or eight ounces is more desirable than smaller or larger ones, for it is easier to handle, but that is of no consequence, merely a matter of preference and convenience.

"I believe that a bottle fed baby should have at least twelve in use every day, so that there will be plenty of time to thoroughly cleanse and sterilize each one before it is filled again.

"In cleaning them, the process should begin immediately after the child has finished using the bottles, so that specks of cream that always gather will not have an opportunity to congeal to the sides and make the washing doubly hard. I would suggest that any liquid left in the bottom be thrown out, and cold water poured in until the vessel is full to the top. This should be left about five minutes, and then emptied. The mistake of pouring warm water into the bottle first should never be made, for the drops of milk remaining at once become curds, stick to the glass and are very difficult to remove.

"After the cold water rinsing, lukewarm with a teaspoonful of baking powder and small pieces of castile soap should be put in for five or ten minutes, during which time a spiral bristle brush specially made for this purpose should be used to clean off any sticky particles. When this stage of the cleaning is over the glass, if held up to the light, should look clean and bright.

"Next comes the sterilizing state that kills any microbes that might still be left on the glass, for the bottles are placed in a kettle of cold water and left there until they boil for twenty or thirty minutes. At the end of that time they can be removed, emptied and a stopper put in to keep them free from impurities. I think the best plan, however, is to leave them in the kettle over night, and not throw out the water until they are ready to be used on the following day, then there can be no doubt as to their perfectly hygienic condition.

"I suppose it is hardly necessary to tell mothers or nurses that in boiling bottles the greatest care should be taken that they are put in cold water, for if plunged into hot, the glass is almost sure to break.

"With the nipples the same kind of care is required for cleanliness. Each time after the baby has been fed, the rubber tube should be taken from the bottle, turned inside out, washed first with cold to remove all of the liquid, then cleansed with lukewarm water and boric acid. A boiling or sterilizing of five or ten minutes should follow. I would suggest leaving the nipples in this sterilized water until they are needed, to keep them absolutely sanitary.

"I believe that four or six nipples are none too many to have in use at the same time, for, with the constant boiling, they soon wear out. By that I mean they collapse, the rubber loses its elasticity, the sides cling together, making it impossible for the little one to get any milk through the tubes.

"Then, too, I think that they should all be the same size and shape. I prefer those that are perfectly plain and oval, with three tiny holes at the end, and the ones of black rubber I have found wear better than the white. Before a new one is used it should, of course, be thoroughly sterilized.

"Nipples on the end of long rubber tubes that extend down into the bottles should never be used, because with the many twists, joints and curves it is impossible to keep them clean."

New Letters for House Linens

New Design in Initials for Table Linen.

for Sheets and Pillow Cases

Two Styles for Towels

Initials for napery, bed and household linens are more elaborate this season than ever before. They are a trifle larger, too, and for this reason are particularly effective on fine tablecloths and napkins. Despite these changes, the positions in which they are worked on the various pieces remain the same, so that women who decorate their own towels, sheets, etc., will only have to copy new patterns to have them correct for spring and summer use.

The number of letters used on the several pieces is practically the same as last season—three for the napery, or two if there are not more in the name. These are entwined by the pretty floral twists used to ornament the initials. Plain script, of course, is frequently desired, and is always correct. Monograms, on the contrary, are rarely seen now.

Smaller and less ornate letters are worked on towels, and usually the plain block or old English script are selected. Three initials can be used, of course, but two or one makes the neatest finish. Like towels, the initials used on sheets and pillow cases are less showy, for the rather severe block type design is now thought to be most correct. With them, too, one letter, or two if preferred, is usually chosen instead of three, which, because of the plainness of the lettering and the size, are not as graceful as a lesser number. Wreaths, checks or squares surrounding the initials are no longer considered necessary to their completion.

In working letters on a tablecloth the size of them depends entirely upon the dimensions of the linen, and a woman must be guided solely by that in marking them with French embroidery.

"For a cloth two yards square the initials should be about three inches high, and for one that is two and a half yards long and two wide the letters should be at least three and a half inches high," according to a prominent linen dealer.

"These initials in a two yard square cloth should be worked diagonally across two opposite corners and about fifteen inches from the center, bringing them on the top of the table and just within the plate line. With smaller or larger cloths the rule is the same—to have the letters inside the line for the plates.

"On napkins the initials are about half the size of those put on the cloth, or an inch and a half high. They are worked on in exactly the same way, diagonally across a corner, about an inch and a half above the border or hemstitching. Only one set is used, however, instead of two, as on the cloth, and these should always be folded out, so that they can be readily seen.

"Those placed on towels should be about two inches high and worked directly in the center—that it, the middle from either side, for the fashion now is to have initials about an inch and a half above the border, or hemstitchings, and at one end only.

"With bed linen, like those used for the table, the initials on the sheets are about twice the size of the ones worked on pillow cases. While on the former the letters should be from two and a half to three inches high, those on the pillow coverers are not more than an inch and a half in height.

"On sheets the lettering is put on about two and a half inches above the hem and directly in the center, on the right side, of course, so that when the bed is dressed the embroidered initials are plainly in evidence.

"On the pillow cases they are about one and a quarter or one and a half inches high, and are worked on an inch and a half above the hem, in the center of the slip."

Stylish Ready to Wear Suits at Bargain Prices

By A. T. ASHMORE.

Frequently a ready made suit or dress requires so much alteration to fit satisfactorily that the original price will be run up appallingly, and there will be so many fittings necessary that it would have been better to have given up the time and ordered a tailor costume. When, however, a coat and skirt or a dress can be found which needs to be only a little changed, and if the color, material and price are all that can be desired, then, without question, such a garment is a good investment.

From now on there will be offered at all department stores the most astonishing ready-made suits. So many gowns are made up at one time of the same material, and the price of labor in the factories is so low that the retail stores can afford to sell for comparatively little, while the profit is still large. Some years the difference is very marked between the average ready-made costume and the tailor suits, but this year the same models are seen in the most expensive as well as in the cheaper materials. There is perhaps a greater individuality about a gown designed especially for the wearer, but still there is just as much likelihood of finding the exact copy of a handsome French model, as there is of meeting the duplicate of any ready-made dress.

Most effective are the volle coat and skirt costumes now to be had in all possible styles, and particular attention seems to have been given this year to the stock sizes, so that there are comparatively few women that cannot be attractively fitted. Then, too, styles that are made up for slim figures are not seen in the larger sizes, and vice versa. There are few models that are equally becoming to all. The handsomest costumes are by no means the most elaborate, particularly in a ready-made dress. It is best to choose rather a severe design, for the ornate models at once hint of the shop. This is a reason when short jackets are distinctly in vogue, the pony and reefer coats have both their share of popularity, but Eton and boleros are more generally becoming and, therefore, are more fashionable. Either a long or a short coat will always be found more becoming than one of undecided length.

As one cloth suit is necessary in the spring outfit, it is taken for granted that this has already been provided, so that the costume that will receive most general wear from now on will be of volle, mohair or some lightweight texture. Among the ready-made volle suits the prettiest models are trimmed simply with braid and tucks on the jacket, while the skirt is of some not too elaborate plaited design. The jacket falls just to the top of the wide, stitched cloth or silk girdle, a trifle longer in front than in back. The jacket must fasten in the center, but must fit so as not to wrinkle when left open. The coat sleeves most in vogue are three-quarter length, finishing off below the elbow with a silk or cloth cuff, bound perhaps with braid or with taffeta ruchings. The top of the sleeve is full, the material caught into narrow tucks about the elbow, so as to give the effect of a wide cuff. Few of the skirts that are bought made up are bound with braid. It is well worth while with either volle or cloth to have a skirt binding added, or else the material will cut through almost at once. Even volle and taffeta street dresses are cut to clear the ground, despite the fact that the Parisians state positively that "la jupe trotteur" is no longer fashionable.

Flowers of All Hues on New Shaped Toques and Bonnets

From the Queen

Outvying the florist's windows are the hat trimmings for spring and summer, every known color and variety of flower being requisitioned for trimmings. Yellow is one of the season's favorites, and the big crushed roses, with rich green and brown foliage, make a symphony of one of the burnt yellow straws so popular. Moss roses in small clusters are dainty and becoming, and even lilacs are considered modish for the big floppy flat straws.

Plumes and tips are equally in evidence, and ribbon of the soft crushable variety is used in connection. A black chip hat, trimmed with chic bows of black velvet ribbon, with a long sweeping feather fastened just beneath the left brim and drooping low at the back and velvet strings that tie back of the ear, is one of the prettiest of the late importations.

The EVENING STORY.

BACKWARD ANDY'S COORTIN

An Irish Love Story

BY SEUMAS MACMANUS, Author of "Through the Turf Smoke" "'Twas in Dhroll Donegal", etc.

(Copyright, 1905, by Joseph B. Bowles.)

Liza Jane she lived in the very next townland to myself. An' as Liza Jane was given out for a hundred pounds of dry money, there was, as you may well suspect, a tremendous traffic of boys come afther her.

But it's little encouragement they got from Liza Jane; she considered coortin' a ridiculous waste of time that a pair of tomfools, only, might engage in; an' as for marryin' the most of the lads that presented themselves, she said she wouldn't make dishclouts of them to wipe a pot.

This, I say, she thouht of most of the neighbor boys, but not of all. There was one, Andy McClarin, or Bab's Andy, as he was better known, by raison as his father's name was Bab. Anyway, this Bab's Andy was no eyesore to Liza Jane, for he had a fine farm that fed five milch cows, an' give him ten head of stock to sell off every harvest; his father, poor man, was five years dead.

An' Liza Jane Bohunnan saw that, all things considered, she couldn't get, an' wouldn't ask for, a better or a warmer sittin'-down than Bab's Andy's. An' accordin'ly she made up her mind that she'd marry Babs' Andy—in case the boy was anyways middlin' willin'.

So Liza Jane bought a new hat, an' went to meetin' as often now in one month as she had troubued it in three months afore, till Mr. McPollin, the minister, noticin' it, remarked that Liza Jane Bohunnan was very seriously turnin' to religion.

An' Liza Jane now likewise become a religious attender at all the tay-parties in the three parishes, an' magic-lantern entertainments, an' night lectures by missionaries who had just come back from terrible adventures among the black haythen. An' Bab's Andy fetched her home safe from every one of them—an' as a reward for his dutifulness larnt more in three months about the proper way of rearin' young pigs than he had larnt in half his life afore.

Liza Jane, considerin' it one of the corpiar works of marcy to encourage the narvous, coorted him the next year as hard as she did the year afore; she coorted him on the rearin' of pigs, an' she coorted him on the breedin' of calves, an' she coorted him on the care an' handlin' of every individual brute in a farmer's backyard.

At the tail-end o' four years' coortship Liza Jane begun to be not too plaised with proceedin's. An' fair good raison, too, the poor girl had.

"Mother," says she of a night, when both herself an' her mother was sittin' over the kitchen fire, "I have let his fool 'round me for long enough. I mean," goes on she, "to have him, once an' for all, make up his mind on this matter whether he wants to make a wife of me or not—I mean that he'll make it up, or I'll make it up for him purty quick."

"Brave woman ye are, Liza Jane," says the mother, says she.

"An' on next Sunday night, too, he'll make his dicision."

"The jewel ye are, Liza Jane!"

An' when, on the next Sunday night, poor Andy, poor sowl, come ploddin' to Liza Jane, it's little he suspected the thraps that was laid down for him to walk into.

"Are ye all alone?" says he.

"My mother an' them," says she, "went one road and another, to see the neighbors, an' left me to myself."

"Which,' says Bab's Andy, says he, "was noways kindly of them tor'st ye."

"Which,' says Liza Jane, says she, calm, an lookin' steady into the fire, "was very, very good of them."

"Good of them!" says Andy, says he. "Was very, very good of them," says she, "considerin' that they knew I needed a quate hour to myself to discuss in me mind a very serious matter—in fact, I may say, an exthraordinary serious matter."

Bab's Andy he was all taken aback, an' the face on him got lengthy at onct, an' he says, "Oh! I beg yer pardon, Liza Jane."

"An exthraordinary serious matter, as I was sayin'," she went on, as cool an' calm, "an' one that wants a good deal of deliberation; an' one, moreover, that I'm mortal glad to have ye here to talk it over with ye."

"Oh!" says Bab'a Andy, says he, settlin' himself to hear it, an' lookin' pleased that he was to be consulted.

"For," says she, "it's such a matter that there's only one man in the worl' I could talk it over with—an' that's you."

"I'm proud," says Andy, "I'm proud to know it, Liza Jane."

"For better, for worse," says she, playin' a thrump card, "for richer, for poorer, for good or for ill."

Poor Andy, it seemed like a dhraim to him that he'd heard something like them words somewhere or other afore, but it puzzled him for a minute to mind what it was about. So he gave it up, an' remarked, "Just so, Liza Jane. Indeed, so?"

An' then says she, "For richer, I sayed, for poorer, for good or for ill, from this time henceforrid." Then she waited a wee bit, to give him another chance—though if she'd waited durin' the nine lives of a cat it would never get into Andy's skull. "Andy McClarnin," she says, "don't ye see what I'm dhrivin' at?"

Poor Andy looked confused an' ashamed of himself, an' says he: "Faith, an' I don't then, Liza Jane, know from Adam down what ye're dhrivin' at, at all."

"I don't doubt it," says Liza Jane, sevarily. "Well, will ye understand me when I say I'm thinkin' that I'd best marry an 'settle down."

Troth, that was plain enough for a palin'-post to understand. So it's very little wondher that Bab's Andy did.

"Marry," says she, "an' settle down," perfectly cool an' calm, an' never seemin' to see Andy's raptures at all. "An'," says she, "I was waitin', very anxious, to have your opinion on it."

"An' my opinion," says he, with his head hangin', "is that though ye've done many wise things in your life, ye never done anything wiser; an'—an'—for—for—myself—"

"Thanky, Andy," says she, snappin' him up afore she'd let him go any further, "if it was about time I'd think of settlin,' if I'm ever goin' to settle—"

"Yes," says Andy.

"An' seein' that I have a hundhred pounds at me back—"

"Yes," says Andy.

"A hundred pounds," says she, "not to mention the sprickled cow, which comes to me likewise—"

"Yes, yes."

"An' a store of linen," says Liza Jane, says she.

"Magnificent!" says Andy.

"Seein' I have all that—" says she.

"Exactly," says Andy.

"An' seein', moreover," says she, "that I've been axed—" An' then she closed her mouth hard, an' waited.

"Ah-h-h!" says Bab's Andy, says he, with the purity puzzlin' look comin' over his countenance.

"Axed by a boy," says Liza Jane, an' closed her mouth again.

"Ye-ye-yes," says Andy, says he, tryin' to recollect when, in the name of wondher, he had axed her, an' comin' to the conclusion that he must 'a' been walkin' in his sleep some time or other.

"Seein'," says Liza Jane, says she, "that I've been axed by one, last Saturday night was a week."

Andy was ten times more puzzled than afore.

"Axed," says she "on Saturday night last was a week, by a boy with a big farm, from the Dhrimholme parish," an' she begun pilin' more turf on the fire.

"I thought—thought," says Andy, says he, strugglin', "thought—it wasn't' a boy from the Dhrimholme parish ye intended to marry."

"Oh-h-h!"" says Liza Jane, says she. I see. You thought it was a boy in our own parish I was goin' to take? says she, encouragin'ly.

Andy was himself again, an' he says, "Yes, Liza Jane; yes."

"Ye thought it wiser-like to marry a nelbhbor boy that I knew well, sooner than venture upon a sthranger that I knew little, or nothing at all, at all, about. Is that it, Andy?"

"Them," says Andy, says he, boldly, "is my sentiments, Liza Jane!"

"Andy McClarnin," says she, firmly, "I see the wisdom of yer words, an' I'll take yer advice. Unless," says she then, slower an' more thoughtful-like, "unless," says she, "I should change my mind atween now an' then. An' now, Andy," says she, "like the good boy you are, will ye tell me which of the parish you thought it was that I was goin' to marry?"

In the wink of a midge's eye the courage of Bab's Andy was gone off out of him again, an' he was blushin' all over.

Says Liza Jane, says she, "Did ye think it was Mose McClure?"

"No," says Bab's Andy.

"Nor Sam Long?" says she.

"Nor Sam Long," says Bab's Andy.

"Then in wondher's name," says Liza Jane, says she, turnin' to him, an' lookin' him square, "in wondher's name," says she, "who do ye mean that I was goin' to marry?"

"An' I thought," says he, "Liza Jane, it was myself ye were goin' to marry."

Liza Jane she got a face on her that would freeze a lough, an, she dhrew herself up, an' says she, "I beg yer pardon, Misther McClarnin"—she wouldn't consent to know Andy McClarnin just then—"I beg yer pardon, Misther McClarnin" says she—an' poor Andy when he seen the sight of her, an' heerd the words of her, went as weak as a dish-clout—"but I hope in my heart, an' sincerely thrust, that ye didn't mean to insinuate—even in the inside of yourself—that I meant to offer to marry you—you, Misther McClarnin, or any other man that steps in shoe-leather this day—to offer myself to marry you without your first axin' me, Misther McClarnin?"

"Och, och, I ask an' beg," says Andy, says he, an' him in such a state of distress as might melt the heart of a millstone. "I ask an' beg," says he, "an' I implore of ye a hundhred thousand pardons for my ignorance in puttin' the thing as I did. But sure ye know, an' know, that if I didn't ax ye in words it wasn't for want of the wish, but the will, for four years gone. Ye know, an' know, that it was only fear kep' me from sayin' the words to ye—I mean to say ye should know. I wanted to ax ye, an' I come to ax ye three times, an' the fright overtuk me, an' I run home like a hare. I'm a dunce, Liza Jane. An' there I am now," says he, givin' up for want of breath, "an' do what ye like with me."

Bus as Bab's Andy had gone on, Liza Jane's look was changin' an' changin' an, when he finished, her look was as mild an' gentle as a lamb's.

An' then she hung her head a wee bit, an sthrove her level best to blush, an' says she, "Oh, Andy, Andy! An' ye never breathed a word of this to me afore! An' I never suspected it! No, no, it's me is the dunce—it's me is the dunce, Andy!"

Poor Andy's heart, when he saw the change in her, come up again from the bottom of his boots, an' was thumpin' against the crown of his skull, wantin' room to rise. "An' " says he, "Liza Jane Bohunnan, then ye don't take it ill—me thinkin' of ye?"

"Andy McClarnin," says she, "ye know this is suddint—very suddint. An' myself is flustered, an'—an' na rvous a bit, an'— But if ye insist on an answer on the spur of the moment," says she, "I don't believe I to take it ill, at all, at all."

"An' Liza Jane Bohunnan," says Andy, says he, gettin' the narve as Liza Jane lost it, "Liza Jane Bohunnan," says he, "will ye consent from this time forrid to wet yer wee grain of tay in my taypot?"

"Andy McClarnin," says she, "ye're a daicent, industrious boy, an' come of self doesn't know but—maybe could do worse."

Long Trains on Bridal Gowns Are Stylish Now

By A. T. ASHMORE.

The one great topic of conversation for the next two months will be the bride's trousseau. How her wedding gown is to be fashioned, whot model and what texture is to be chosen for her bridesmaids and maid of honor, and then almost as an afterthought, the costumes of the wedding guests will be decided or discussed.

Naturally the gown first to be considered is the wedding dress. No costume will ever again be so all important, so that naturally it must be as nearly perfect in every respect as good taste and a large bank account will allow. The girl with considerable means at her disposal will choose either real lace or hand embroidered satin, the two materials which from time immemorable have been considered most suitable for this occasion. Sometimes a handsome satin gown, perfect in itself, will for the wedding day be literally covered with old family lace. The satin lining gives an excellent richness to the already beautiful lace, so that one does not at all mind hiding any of the satin body. If the lace has been in the family for generations it is generally laid aside with the wedding veil for the next bride fortunate enough to wear it. In this case the satin gown can be so modelled that when the lace is removed and the train shortened it will be a handsome afternoon or evening gown, quite in taste.

Every woman loves to wear a long train. In the street, of course, comfort has preference, and a short walking skirt is worn whenever fashion permits, but a train is so graceful and so becoming to the figure that for every house dress the train is generally very long. In a wedding gown, therefore, peculiar delight is always taken in the long, graceful folds of satin or chiffon that help so much to make the dress effective. This season trains are exceptionally long, and the court train, save for the empire gowns, is most popular. To be graceful the skirt must be full long on the sides, but while it is fashionable just now to allow the material to rest on the ground some inches in front, it is a mistake to do anything that would tend to make the walk awkward. It is, of course, most difficult to manage a very long skirt when it cannot be held up at all, and the unaccustomed weight of the train in the back accentuates the difficulty.

It is scarcely necessary to say that all the sleeves should be short, as all elaborate gowns are made in this way. Nevertheless there are many sleeves now worn in the afternoon that are little longer than an evening sleeve. This length is frequently more becoming than the half or elbow length. If there is any collar to the dress it should be very high and, of course, transparent. If a dog collar can be numbered among the wedding gifts, then the round neck is frequently preferred. A high collar, however, is apt to be the more becoming.

Empire gowns have been much modified and improved of late. On a lace gown a deep satin girdle can be brought well down in front and caught up in back beneath a court train. Many all lace dresses have the train of satin, which is, however, almost covered by the lace veil. There is no hardship in having to wear a net instead of a lace veil, for tulle, if attractively arranged, is most becoming. Many net veils are bordered with lace and trimmed with wide bands of lace insertion, to coincide in some way with the trimming on the gown. True to tradition, orange blossoms are still worked into the trimming of every wedding dress, often in fascinating profusion.

GOOD JUDGES OF PACE.

New York Press: It is a notorious fact that there is more fraud on the trotting turf than in any other form of sport; prize fighting not excepted. And now they are going to prohibit drivers from carrying split-second minute-register watches in races. Great minds! Why, there is not a first-rate driver, of experience, who cannot tell to the fraction of a second the exact gait his horse is going. He needs no watch. What he does need is the watchful eye of the judge upon him. I have noticed that whenever a trotting horse man forsakes the trotters and goes over to the "bang-tails," as race horses of the running turf are styled, he can give trainers, jockeys and owners cards, spades and an easy beating.

Some jockeys are judges of pace. Some are not. McLaughlin was a wonder in the heyday of his career. The trainer for one of the Dwyer brothers would say: "Now, Jimmy, make the first quarter in so many seconds, the half in so many; then cut loose and come home." Jimmy never violated his instructions. He was as accurate as a watch. Old Bill Hayward was a wonderful judge of pace. He used to give the grand stand heart disease by lying out of a race for over half the distance; but he was simply letting the horses in front run themselves to a standstill, and in the homestretch smothered them.

INDIAN GIRL LAWYER.

Kansas City Journal: Laura M. Cornelius, a full-blooded Indian of the Oneida tribe, in Wisconsin, is in New York city, where she intends to study law at Barnard college. At a country school she won a scholarship in a seminary in Fond du Lac, and afterward studied for a time in Stanford university, Cal. Miss Cornelius is unmistakably Indian in features and build, and is proud of it. Her object in studying law is to be of service to the people of her own race. "My religion," she says, "is this: I believe in God, in minding my own business and in hustling for what one wants."

New Parisian Reception Gown Becoming to Slender Women

This smart costume—L'Art' et la Mode—is appropriate for afternoon use and wear at receptions. It can be made up in either cloth or linen, and is equally stunning. The skirt is especially full and falls in soft folds to the body, but is kept from clinging close to the figure by two flounces at the bottom. A ruffle around the neck and above the elbows with a tight-fitting corselet complete an attractive frock.

MADEMOISELLE'S SUMMER OVERCOAT.

The Charm of Dainty Simplicity Apparent-Lace, Embroideries and Hand-work Run Riot - Class Colors and Emblems at the Dressmakers.

The College Girl. It is her day. And the School Girl. It is hers, likewise! Class and commencement days, with their many exercises and reunions, their peculiar little ceremonies and amusements, call for frocks for the girls and a change of toilette for the visitors that are bound to tax the dressmakers to their wits' ends.

Fortunately for the girl whose time and opportunity for consultation with the dressmaker are limited, there are some charming little frocks to be had ready-made in the shops, and for which a very moderate price—all things considered—is asked.

Those specialists who cater to the juveniles exclusively are showing the most delightful confections! Indeed, no other word seems possible or adequate to describe the extreme daintiness of those simple little frocks.

Daintiness and simplicity are the prevailing attributes upon which Dame Fashion beams most cordially. One French woman who has a large establishment just off Fifth avenue—there are some 25 girls in her embroidery department alone—and who absolutely refuses to take an order for anything beyond the 18-year styles, says, wisely enough: "Our girls will all of them become grown-up women all too soon. Let us keep them girls, in appearance, at least, just as long as we possibly can. There is nothing so sad to my eyes as to see a girl of 16 or 18 stiffly corsetted and tricked out in garments that look as though she had borrowed them from her mother's wardrobe. One imagines that her mind and her ideas are fully as sophisticated as her dress indicates, and that all the delightful and innocent beliefs and delusions of girlhood have been put away with her girlish frocks."

This year, as never before, is the home dressmaker and the skilled seamstress right in the front of the procession. Those soft and sheer materials that are really de rigeur cry aloud for handwork, and there is hardly any limit to the amount of this that may be lavished upon even the simplest little frock.

These so-called bebe princesse frocks—they are really but a blouse and a skirt, cleverly joined together with rows of shirring at the waistline, those rows extending for about two inches above and four below the waist—are most successful for the very tall and slender girl, she of the willowy figure, and all of that grace which intelligent gymnasium work accords.

Another equally fetching design is practically made upon the same principle, but there is a ceinture of irregular shape and fanciful stitcheries used to connect the two pieces, and on this item much thought and elaboration are lavished. The pointed Swiss belt works in delightfully in this connection, and so far it has the decided merit of not being found in the ready-mades.

The introduction of the deep girdle has made possible all sorts and descriptions of blouses and skirts, and I must be confessed that those dainty little blouses with a certain amount of looseness and bagginess to the cut, but never to the point of an ill-fitting sloppiness, as some seem to imagine, are decidedly flattering to the oftentimes awkward angles of the immature figure.

Broad sash weaves are demanded for those fetching items, and the softest qualities are those that afford the most fascinating effects. The girl of 16 and thereabouts would better order her sash built upon the featherboned lining, while the elder graduate—she who is just emerging from her teens or has just left them behind her—will find those taped and featherbored frames that lace invisibly in front prove delightfully serviceable. These are separate, and the sash is built directly upon the frame, lacing snugly to the lines of the figure.

One must realize that for all of those simple little frocks lace must be purchased by the mile, almost, rather than by the yard. Retailers report that they are unable to secure reorders upon the narrower Valenciennes, Mechlin and Cluny laces; and so, if a sufficient quantity be not purchased at the start, disappointment is more than likely to ensue.

That little square Dutch neck—or, as they term it more prettily abroad, the St. Cecilia—is to be quite a feature of the summer frocks; and where this is not followed the guimpe takes its place. Indeed, to such an extent has the vogue of the guimpe attained that one can purchase the most delightfully dainty ones in sheer nainsook, all hand made, in sizes up to and including 36 chest measure. The 18-year-old girl is supposed to have attained at least this width of chest mensurement, and with these there are fetching half-sleeves shown, either permanently attached or so made that they are joined to the sleeve with snap and ball fasteners.

Linens maintain all of the prestige that has been theirs for quite a few seasons now; but the later fashions are turning altogether in the direction of handkerchief weaves, batiste, the finest of nainsook, and the semi-transparent production of the loom suggest chiffon in their fineness and finish.

While the simplicity of outline is imperative, there is no embargo whatsoever as to the amount of detail that may be lavished upon them. Tuckings are made a thousand and one uses of, and bands of straight shirred material are cleverly joined together with entre-deux and fancy stitches to form flounces, sleeves and even whole blouses and skirts. This idea is charmingly expressed in an imported frock. The blouse is made with a deep, square neck, a separate lingerie chemisette being provided en suite, and the shirred bands are broad at the shoulders, tapering each prettily toward the waist and affording a long and slender line that is modish to a degree. The puffed sleeve is similarly constructed, and the skirt follows the line of the blouse to below the knee, where the motif is reversed, and the shirred bands with entre-deux and fancy fagotting make a deep flounce that rises smartly in the back.

Surplice waists with the fronts cut in long scarf ends, the ends being crossed in front and brought around the waist to tie in the back, are another effective item in the commencement frocks. Usually there is a cleverly fitted ceinture of some kind that hugs the waist closely beneath the fichu ends. The idea is doubly effective when the skirt is built up in corselet or princesse fashion; and those two styles are radically different, albeit the titles are accepted as interchangeable by the average dressmaker, the fulness of the surplice folds making for a good effect across the bust and the built-up skirt defining the waistline cleverly.

Snake and serpent designs are asserting themselves prominently in the jewelry world. Bracelets after this form are coiled on the arm; necklets favor the idea; and even belt buckles are not exempt. Jeweled eyes are the rule in almost all instances.

The Lingerie Craze.

Some Pretty Fads and Fashions in this Dainty Mode - The Lingerie Chapeau Resumes its Triumphant Career.

There is not even the slightest hint of wane to the vogue of the lingerie craze. Indeed, so much to the contrary is the state of affairs that the shops are inundated with requests for patterns and materials, the fancy-work counters are piled high with sheer linens and nainsooks, all stamped ready to work; and the waist, hat and parasol departments are displaying the finished articles in designs and workmanship enough to make even the stingiest person that ever was pull out a purse and pay the price cheerfully—provided, of course, that the purse contain it.

The most striking thing about all of this is that the women of today are devoting their skill and their needles to articles intended for their own use and adornment, rather than for household purposes. Where formerly the woman of leisure executed marvels of stitchery in the way of centerpieces and doilies, sofa cushions and table covers, today she is making lingerie blouses, chemisettes, parasol covers, and even hats!

The big department stores—always keenly alive to opportunity—have skilled needlewomen at the fancy-work counters, who are engaged to instruct the customer in the working of the different styles displayed. It is only necessary to purchase the materials there, and the instruction is supplied gratis. And the wonder of it is that the cut of the articles so stamped and ready for working is absolutely above reproach.

Sheer handkerchief linen and batiste, the finest of French nainsook, are displayed ready for the embroideress. One can have a choice of several of the modish stitches of the moment, and most of those are of such character as to favor a rapid execution.

Since fashion demands an absolutely fresh and spotless appearance, the demand for chemisettes and undersleeves is one that the manufacturers can hardly keep up with. One clever needlewoman announces that she has had to hire three helpers in order to fill demands from her samples located at one of the exchanges for women's work.

Just at this present moment the chemisette fills all the requirements of the average woman, but once the warm weather starts in, it is the guimpe that will be relied upon to furnish freshness and coolness at the same time. Many of the guimpe patterns are so arranged that there is a very fanciful undersleeve included in the design, this bringing the whole toilette into better accord.

While the half-sleeve has things pretty well all its own way on this side of the Atlantic, it is to be noted that the most expensive of Parisian importations show a full-length sleeve, and this with a little cuff arrangement that oftentimes comes well down over the knuckles. There is not a shadow of a doubt but that the summer days will prove the long glove too close and uncomfortable to be borne; and the coolness of the lingerie sleeve, with a short lisle or silk glove, will be highly welcomed by those who place comfort ahead of appearances.

The lingerie parasol is present in such bewildering profusion that to attempt even a scant catalogue of its appearances were a vain task. From the thinnest and most transparent of handkerchief linens up to the stout German butcher weave, there seems to be nothing left unnoticed. Coarse and heavy embroideries that stand out in bold relief, the finest and daintiest of baby embroideries that demand almost a microscope to view their perfection; solid and blind work, open eyelets, lace and net insertions—there is simply no end to the variety; it is just one more case of you pay your money and take your choice.

In the parasol edges and likewise those of the lingerie chapeau, when a scalloped and buttonholed pattern is provided, it were as well to do this work with a little tiny featherbone cording tacked securely to the extreme edge. This not only makes for a better finish, but also affords the worker more stability in both sewing and cutting away the material from the design.

The lingerie hat is supposed to accord with that simplicity which characterizes the summertime fashions. But here, as elsewhere, the simplicity is somewhat misleading, since one sees costly embroideries, sheer linens and real laces combined with exquisite ribbons and French flowers. One may have a really and truly lingerie chapeau—if you are a skilled needlewoman yourself—for a couple of dollars; or one may purchase one already to wear at a smart milliner's for a $50 bill—and both extremes are lingerie hats, suitable only for simple wear with tub frocks.

IN THE GRADUATING CLASS.

Description of Illustrations.

Italian Filet and Dutch Neck.

There is a youthful air about this essentially simple little frock that cannot fail to commend it to those who admire the simple in dress. The material is one of those sheer French handkerchief linens which show up every stitch of elaboration, from the simplest up to the most intricate, to the utmost advantage; and the contrast afforded by the piece of Italian filet lace is an excellent one. The little blouse is of the simplest order, cut with the square Dutch neck that is so modish at the present moment, and the requisite fulness arranged for in the lengthwise pin tucks that fill in the broad shoulder seam. A broad band of the lace encircles the body, matching that upon the short puff sleeve and a princesse effect is aimed at in the joining of blouse and skirt into a fanciful ceinture of needlework. The skirt is accomplished in three sections, the filet lace joining the linen and applied with fancy stitches wrought by hand. Three deep tucks are run between the bands, and likewise add weight to the sheer material above the hem. The skirt length is the correct one for the girlish graduate, and showing just the tips of the white linen pumps with their smart bows of white gros-grain ribbon, tied after the new fashion, somewhat to one side.

The Possibilities of Net.

Even the simplest of cotton nets will make up charmingly, if only allowed sufficient trimming, and some taste be used in construction. The original of this eminently girlish little gown is in white Brussels net, with an embroidered silken polka dot closely spaced. But one of the point d'esprits will answer fully as well for those who do not care to undertake the expense of the silken gossamer. It is in the ribbon trimmings, and their effective disposal that the cachet of the frock lies. The waist is cut with a round decolletage in front, and a deep V point in the back—this illustrating one of the latest features of fashion. A ruching of satin ribbon is run, tucker fashion, inside against the skin, and a ladder of narrow ribbon serves to connect this ruche with the lace-edged frill of the net, which but barely hints at a berthe effect. A deep ceinture of the palest of pink satin sash ribbon is closely swathed around the waist, to fasten in one of the new sunflower rosettes in front. The skirt is simplicity itself, the fulness at the top adjusted by means of lengthwise tucks, and three flounces, each edged with a fancy footing, and trimmed with double rows of narrow satin ribbon, are festooned from knee to hem. Anything more girlishly simple cannot be imagined, whether it be made up in silk net and silken foundations; in the cotton nets with a moire waist slip and petticoat.

Madamoiselle's Summer Overcoat.

The necessity of a separate wrap for summer time use, one that will be equally suitable for evening use as well as for driving, motoring, little trips out of town and to the races—for it is quite the thing in society nowadays to attend the various race meetings and to wear one's best bib and tucker thereto—is something of a problem to the average girl. The charming design of the picture shows an excellent model, in one of those off shades of white that it is hard to tell whether they are pearl, gray or lavender, for hints of each that display themselves, and the soft satin finish of the broadcloth aiding in the play of color. There is a bias fold down the center of the back, the side seams are extremely widely gored, and the fronts hang full circular folds from the shoulders. The arm size is large, to admit of a fluffy sleeve beneath, and the coat sleeve loose throughout. The coat is collarless, the throat hardly requiring protection in the summer weather, and the fronts are rolled back in pointed but shallow revers. A quaint and really convenient item is the Capuchine hood that is attached at the back, this made full and with a ribbon draw string to dispose of the fulness. The hood may be drawn up over the head when desired, and a charming effect is gained in this wise, to say nothing at all of the comfort attained. For those who plan to copy this delightful model at home it is suggested that the cuff and revers be interlined with haircloth rather than canvas, the former material being lighter and eminently more satisfactory in wear.

In the Graduating Class.

The extreme of modish simplicity marks this dainty little frock, every stitch of which is taken by hand. The materials are a sheer white organdie and one of the finer platte Normandie laces that are so effective when well chosen. Although the finished result is simple, as already indicated, the cost of this little frock is by no means small. Sheer organdie comes about 30 inches wide and runs up to $1 or $1.25 the yard, but for the mothers who do not like to dress their growing daughters in silks the organdies make a pleasant change from the somewhat overdone linens. The little guimpe is a separate affair, so that the frock may be worn decollete for summer dances. The berthe is merely a succession of shaped tabs, trimmed and ruffled with the Normandie lace, and hanging over the full blouse in a manner that cannot fail to prove flattering to the immature figure of the schoolgirl. The full skirt has three ruffles widely spaced from half way below the knee to the hem, while the plain upper part is plaided with appliques of the lace. The sleeve employs the organdie doubled, so that there is some stiffness to the very sheer material, and the short puff so accords better with the prevailing mode. A little handkerchief frill, trimmed and edged with lace, finishes the short sleeve, and a wide sash of palest-tinted yellow messaline ribbon is tied in girlish fashion around the waist.

DID YOU EVER GET SHAKEN IN A QUAKE?

It Is No Fun to Feel the Earth Heave, and You Cannot Run Away From It.

"I've felt land and water tremble underneath me on two occasions, and I don't like it," said a former chief petty officer of the American navy to the Washington Star. "Something uncanny about these earthquake doings when you're right on the spot. I'd a heap rather run into and heave to and wriggle out of a dozen typhoons—even Tahiti typhoons—than to be caught with my mess and hammock number on one of these sore and itchy spots of the old earth's hide. When the earthquake catches you you have an overwhelming appreciation of the futility of trying to run away. Where are you going to run to? To hike, and hike fast, is of course, the first impulse of anybody caught by an earthquake on dry land. You don't know where you're going, but you're on your way. Out in the open, and rapid leg work for yours. But when you've started, and the old bass fiddle of a rocking earth still keeps up its tremolo work, you come to a quick halt, if you are not actually thrown down, and the thought darts into your head, 'Where in blazes am I going, anyhow?'

"There's a certain grim humor in the idea of your trying to leg it away from an earthquake, but you don't see the fun of it at the time. But when a fellow starts to run that way and then pulls up suddenly with a knowledge of his utter helplessness in a situation wholly new and strange, the thing is doubly terrifying because the force underlying the disturbance can't be seen, understood nor appraised, he's pretty liable to fall to gibbering with pure fear if he doesn't take a pretty good clutch on himself.

"First time I was made literally sick at the stomach by an earthquake was up at the Volcano house, the hotel on the edge of the crater called the Burning Lake of Kilauea, which is the safety valve and vent of the greatest of all volcanoes, hoary-peaked old Mauna Loa, which is 14,000 feet high, and you get to the Burning Lake by riding horseback or in a coach seven or eight hours on a steep upward slant from Hilo, the second town of importance in Hawaii after Honolulu. Hilo's been destroyed several times by lava from Mauna Loa, and the volcano sharps say that if it wasn't for that Kilauea crater acting for a vent and safety valve for the main volcano, Mauna Loa would be doing damaging stunts pretty nigh all the time.

"As it is, Kilauea is fuming and spouting a good deal of the time, the flames and molten stuff advancing and receding with the regularity of a pulse, and when Kilauea is particularly busy letting out the aggregated cussedness of its higher-up pal, Mauna Loa, it presents a picture of the place that bad folks are said to go to that makes an old time brimstone-and-burning-marl Presbyterian sermon seem like a mere faintly outlined sketch drawn with milk on white paper.

"Our sulp was in the harbor of Hilo at a time when Kilauea was in one of its grouchy and spouty moods, and a bunch of our chief petty officers got leave and took the long, jolty ride up to the Volcano House—run for many years by a most imperturbably good-natured Scandinavian named Peter Lee—to have a peek at one of the world's most notoriously fretful carbuncles.

"Mr. Lee can have his hotel. It is situated not more than sixty yards from the very edge of that Kilauea crater, and you can stand on the front porch of the Volcano House and throw rocks into that crater with a swell chance of hitting old Nick, or some of his assistant stokers. You've got to show me where it's going to soothe an ordinary man any to be brought into such close contact with a finish that he's got a sure-thing even chance of making if he doesn't watch out, and I'm just ordinary and glad of it. The general view from the porch of the Volcano House, even when Kilauea isn't erupting any, is something to make the brush and pencil efforts of Dore look like mere flourish penmanship and drawings of birds and swans.

"We made the Volcano House at 3 or 4 o'clock in the afternoon, and when I was ready to turn in about 11 o'clock that night I had my mind made up that I hadn't lost any volcanoes that I needed to hunt for any longer and that I was going away from there on the following morning, although the bunch I was with intended to remain for a couple of days.

"All of the gang from my ship had turned in early, dog-tired, and I was sitting on a lawn bench on a little grassy sward in front of the hotel with Peter Lee, smoking a pipe with him, when the bench we were sitting on suddenly began to teeter back and forth. I turned around to look at Peter Lee to see if he was juggling the bench, and I saw that he, in his turn, was looking at me in the dim light, and there was a sort of expectant half-grin on his face. While I was noticing this I heard a sound as of distant detonations coming close together, and then the bench pitched forward and Peter Lee and I were sitting on the grass and the bench half-overturned on top of us.

"I knew what was coming off then, all right, and I jumped to my feet in a panic, powerful sick at the stomach, at that, and took up that jog in no particular direction, that is, as I say, the first impulse of the man caught in his first earthquake. But the grassy sward kept pulling away from me and then coming back so swiftly that I fell flat on hands and knees. Then I heard Peter Lee calling after me: 'Where d'ye think you're going, shipmate?' and when I turned on a sitting-down pivot I saw Lee seated on the grass with his knees drawn up and his arms clasping them, and smoking comfortably away at his pipe, although the earth continued to sway and the loud detonations continued apparently from the bowels of the flame-tinted crater of Kilauea. If it hadn't been for the cool spectacle presented by Peter Lee I might have been running yet, and I might have hopped across the road and pitched headforemost into the crater in my excitement. But the sight of Peter Lee sitting there on the grass, puffing at his pipe, pulled me together, and I crawled over alongside him on my hands and knees. By the time I had reached his the shock had ceased.

"Just then two of Peter Lee's large family of beautiful daughters appeared in dressing gowns on the second-story porch. They hung over the rail, with their fine hair plaited down their backs and they appeared to be as cool as watermelons hanging in a well bucket.

"'Teeny one, wasn't it, papa?' one of the young women called merrily down to her dad.

"'Yes, daughter—nothing worth mentioning,' replied Peter Lee. 'Go back to bed, children,' and his two handsome daughters disappeared from the upper porch rail and entered their room through the window, chatting cheerfully.

"'Teeny one, hey?' said I to Peter Lee, and I was so sick that I could hardly hold my head up.

"'Oh, just a little jar—mere little jar,' replied Lee, who, though a Scandinavian, has lived among English-speaking people all his life. 'Pelee took just a drop too much saki aboard and fell down and shook things a bit—that's all.'

"Pelee is the Kanakas' goddess of volcanoes falling down with a saki souse on and parring things s'nuds me, later on, as being a pretty good offhand metaphor, but I wasn't analyzing metaphors just then. I was chiefly in need at that moment of a proper place wherein to be real sick for a little while. By the time I reined from the outer side of the road all of my shipmates, half-dressed as if for a fire call aboard ship, were out on the little lawn in earnest confab with Peter Lee. They'd all been rocked in their beds, and one of them had been rocked out of his.

"'Oh, just a little shake-up—little rumbling of the crust, that's all,' Peter Lee was explaining to them. 'Not a particle of danger. Might as well turn in again, you boys. House is built to withstand a hundred times worse work than this.'

"Then I noticed that most of my shipmates were sick, as I had been, and this was a curious part of the business. Most of us had been in the roughest seas known without having a symptom of seasickness, and here we were all but turned inside out by about thirty seconds of a violent cross-earth. I call it a cross-earth because it was more like a vicious cross-sea than anything I ever want to see on dry land.

"None of us slept under the Volcano House roof that night. We'd all heard the timbers creak and groan during the convulsion, and all of Peter Lee's mild assurances that the house had been especially built to copper the efforts of earthquakes to toss it down went whistling through the rigging so far as we were concerned. We happened to be the only guests of the Volcano House at the time. We shook the blankets loose from the other coverings on our beds, wrapped ourselves in them and slept on the lawn under the big stars.

"And right after the very early breakfast the next morning we got the driver of our coach to make ready for a quick departure, and then we gathered around Peter Lee and thanked him cordially for his hospitality and the good care he had taken of us, adding, however, that he was perfectly welcome to his commodious, altitudinously situated hotel, and that, so far as we were concerned, it could always remain his, in fee simple, and without mortgages or other encumbrances. Then we climbed into the coach and had ourselves driven away from there, down hill at a gallop all the way to Hilo, and I am bound to own that it took a whole lot of saki and swipes and other indigenous bottled gear, on the way down, to get us screwed up to the real chatty pitch in which we had made the upward journey.

"Next time I felt that G-string pizzicati thing was in the harbor of Acapulco, Mexico, and I was on board ship at the time. We were anchored about a hundred yards from the dobe water front of Acapulco. One red-hot night in February—the temperature had been 120 in the sun that day—I was standing at the starboard gangway, half an hour after pipe-down, having a pipe and a buzz with the marine corporal on guard, when the cruiser—she was of the gunboat class—began to execute a quick, jerky, fore-and-aft pitch and full-away movement that made us grab at the hammock nettings to keep our feet. The marine corporal and myself were the only two men awake on the main deck, most of the ship's company that ordinarily swung their hammocks below being corked off on deck on account of the heat, and were sound asleep. For an instant the sea soldier and I figured that the magazines were going to explode, and that we had felt the preliminary shock of the explosion below. But no explosion following, our next thought was that some of the auxiliary machinery had gone wrong. The dynamo and the air circulating pump and the condenser machinery were going, and it seemed at first as if they might have got to racing while those of the black gang below in charge of that gear slept on watch. But we dismissed all of these sudden theories when we heard, about ten seconds after our ship began to rock on the dead calm and glassy waters of the harbor, a great shrieking from the shore.

"'It's old Atlas dropped his package,' the sea soldier, yapped at me then, which is a way men of the sea have of alluding to earthquakes, and then I knew that it was one of those uncanny disturbances away beneath the realm of Davy Jones that was doing the heaving. The howling of men and the shrieking of women on the shore increased. The pitching and rocking of the ship lasted nearly a full minute, and by that time all hands on board were wide awake on their feet, standing by for whatever might follow. We had a lot of Dagoes and Greeks and such like in that ship's company, and I never saw so many rosaries pulled out of bosom fronts in my life. The whole bunch that we'd shipped on our Mediterranean cruise fell to beadcounting and to crossing themselves and pulling their scapulars out in plain view. But the rest of the ship's company was cool enough—it takes the commoner folk of the Latin species to show the deadliest kind of fear when anything supernatural like an earthquake swings along. By this time the din of the yelling ones along the 'dobe beach front was like the breaking loose of a menagerie, and there was an occasional thud from the same direction that told of something falling down.

"The steam cutter was swinging at the gangway, waiting to make her last trip ashore to pull some officers on beach leave back to the ship, and when my head man, the chief engineer—I was engineer's yeoman—came on deck and told the officer of the deck that he was going ashore in the cutter to look after some engineers' stores that were heaped up on one of the Acapulco docks, I asked to go along with him in the cutter, and I went.

"It hadn't been such a bad earthquake. Acapulco had suffered much worse in her day, for that's an old, old town, founded not so long after this hemisphere's discovery—but it looked pretty bad to me. One and two story 'dobes had a bad list to one side or t'other, wooden warehouses were all a-wabble, piers were warped and twisted, big 'dobe churches were out of plum, and the whole picturesque place had the look as if a bunch of drunken giants had slammed along and kicked it just for fun, as a boy trudging along a road will kick at an ant hill. The poor folks were kneeling in the road, calling upon God and the Madonna and the angels to behold them with favor and postpone the hour of greater wrath, and, altogether, it wasn't just the kind of a business that a sailorman, inclined to a careless way of living, cared to stand and look at for a long time at a stretch.

"I didn't look at it very long, for our skipper, who knew a lot about earthquakes, quickly summoned the steam cutter back to the ship and soon our mudhook was up and we were steaming out of Acapulco harbor for the open sea. The skipper didn't mean to get caught by any tidal wave as long as he had the coal to make steam. We stood out to sea for half a day, but the tidal wave didn't make its appearance that time, and then we went back to the harbor and did our share toward straightening things out ashore.

"I don't want to be shown any more about these globe quiverings. I've been up against typhoons, as I say, that seemed as if the infernal regions were being torn up by the roots and being tossed in the face of the sky, but when you've been twiddled aroung by a typhoon you know what's coming off and what you've got to fight, and, in a way, how to fight it. But nobody that I ever met up with ever really knew much about an earthquake, and it's the uncanny mysteriousness, the undopeable devilry of an earthquake that makes temporary maniacs of plenty of men who are not cowards."

JOHN PAUL JONES' LIKENESS

It is probable that the likeness of John Paul Jones, of deathless fame in the annals of naval warfare, will appear upon one of the next series of United States postage stamps.

A naval officer recently called attention to the fact that the United States navy, whose achievements present an unbroken line of victories, has had but scant recognition at the hands of the postoffice department, so far as honoring eminent naval officers of the United States upon our postal issues is concerned.

The naval officer is correct. Up to 1902 only one representative of the navy had ever been recognized for a place upon a United States postage stamp, Commodore Perry of Lake Erie fame. From 1870 until 1902 he alone represented the navy upon our stamps and his position was so obscure that not one person in ten thousand ever saw his likeness upon a stamp. Perry was in 1870 assigned to the 90-cent stamp and there he remained until 1902, when instead of making a place for Admiral Farragut, who was voted into the charmed postal circle, the postoffice authorities retired Perry and Farragut took his place.

The new series of stamps for the Philippines, now in process of printing, in Washington, depict Admiral Sampson on the 16-centavo (8 cents) stamp, but upon United States stamps until 1902 Perry reigned supreme.

On the other hand the army has received numerous honors from the authorities who determine what faces shall adorn our postage stamps. Begining with Gen. Washington, the list included Gen. Winfield Scott, Gen. Zachary Taylor, Gen. Garfield, Gen. Grant, Gen. Sherman, Gen. Harrison, and Maj. McKinley. Gen. Sheridan's likeness is represented on the reply postal card.

There is no doubt but that the inflexible rule of the department that the portrait of living Americans shall not adorn United States stamps alone prevented the substitution of the likeness of Admiral George Dewey for that of Commodore Perry on one of the stamps of the current issue. As Dewey was ineligible, Admiral Farragut was deemed next in line.

The discovery of the body of John Paul Jones and his subsequent removal to the soil of the United States has invited attention to his great achievement and when the next stamps are designed his calm countenance is expected to be depicted on one of the denominations.

The stamps of the United States have always portrayed peace. War suggestions have never found a place on them. The only stamps depicting soldiers is the 8-cent denomination of the Trans-Mississippi or Omaha commemorative series, which represents United States troops guarding an emigrant train.

Recent German stamps, on the contrary are strongly military, while a new series of stamps just issued by France represents the "sower," a female figure casting seed upon the earth. Spain issued a special set of "war stamps" for the purpose of raising revenue.

Practically all of the stamps of Venezuela depict that country's famous warrior, Gen. Bolivar. He appears in full military uniform and looks the part. A new series, portraying President Castro in civilian dress has appeared.

Perhaps the country making the most warlike demonstration on its stamps is the fierce nation of Haiti. The postal labels of this mighty military power fairly breathe war and ruin. Two ancient cannon, pointing in opposite directions, constitute the central feature, around which bristle small arms, war flags and piles of cannon balls. In a circle above appears the ferocious likeness of Former President Simon Sam in full uniform. Santo Domingo is content to depict upon one of its stamps a mighty fortress which guards its principal harbor against all comers. The dragons and monsters which adorn Chinese stamps serve as a warning of what may be expected if anybody attempts to invade that country.

THE GROWTH OF INSANITY

Alarming Statistics, But Some Authorities Think Them Not So Significant, After All---Increase of Lunacy Largely Among Immigrants, Unused to American Conditions.

Boston, May 19.—(Special to The Herald.)—Figures indicating marked growth of insanity in many American communities have lately been exciting widespread concern and giving occasion for alarmist newspapers and magazine articles. Thus, the New York state commissioner of lunacy produced statistics not long ago showing that whereas in 1892 there was only one insane person to 377 of population in the state the proportion is now one to 299. Again during this same period Massachusetts, according to figures gathered and published by the Chicago Chronicle, has increased its proportion of the mentally afflicted from one to every 360 to one for 246; New Jersey from one to 517 to one for 327; Pennsylvania (1890-1905) from one for every 710 to one for every 502; Indiana, from one for every 666 to one for every 156; Minnesota, from one for every 630 to one for every 486. These figures have been alleged to prove that insanitay in fifteen years has increased something more than 25 per cent, while the population of the county has grown only about 21 per cent.

The reasons for this tendency, which, if it should continue would eventually result in the United States becoming a nation of lunatics, are being plentifully discussed. A distinguished nerve specialist of this city who has been giving attention to the subject, doubts if the figures are in reality so alarming as would appear on the surface.

"You will find," he says, "that immigration is very largely responsible for the increase in the number of the insane, and that when our country is once filled up to the point of saturation and the work of Americanizing the whole mass of our population is well under way the proportion of the mentally diseased will steadily decrease. My personal experience extending over a period of forty years of practice among well-to-do people in the professional walks of life has led me to believe that among the comfortable classes nervous disorders leading to mental derangement are gradually becoming less frequent. Nervous prostration is no new malady, neither were the good old times free from every description of paranoia and paresis. The proportion of educated persons of fair income who go wrong mentally seems to me, from rather wide range of observation, to be much smaller now than it was in the sixties and seventies. With all that is said about the strenuosity of modern life—and that is real enough—it remains true that intelligent people are nowadays taking better care of themselves than ever before. The trend of the well-to-do population to suburban life which is marked in every large American community, together with the new interest in outdoor sports and more rational indoor occupations, is having the result that fewer cases, relatively, of nervous exhaustion and mental derangement come to us now; and that is true in spite of the fact that people are much readier to run to the specialist when alarming conditions appear than they were forty years ago.

"The improvement of physical conditions in business life is very much in point. I get comparatively few cases of late years from among the lawyers, bankers and other office men of good income. Those that do come are usually the direct result of dissipation. The strain of competition may be, and no doubt is, as fierce as it is said to be. Yet there is no question but that the man in the modern office has become less liable to physical and mental breakdown. His hours are shorter. The compartments of the better arranged skyscrapers are so well lighted that the element of eye strain has largely been removed. Ventilation is better, and many men of business now work with their windows open even in severe winter weather. Stenographers are more efficient than the copyists of the old days. The time is not far off—indeed it has arrived in a few offices—when the man of affairs will simply at his leisure dictate into a talking machine.

"Above all, the modern devotee of commerce is able to remain in a quiet, collected mood at his desk and transact his business during the hours allotted thereto, without jumping up a half a hundred times in the day to rush to other parts of his establishment, or to some other man's office, there perhaps to undergo half an hour's nervous fidgeting until the other fellow is ready to talk with him.

"The telephone has marvelously decreased the strain incident to business life, and has prolonged the years of a man's usefulness. When I first began to practice, back in the sixties, bankers, merchants and lawyers not only traveled about the city much more than now do, but fatiguing trips to other places were of more frequent necessity. A man, for instance, in the Boston selling agency of one of the manufacturing corporations of a nearby New England city always had his time table before him, and was constantly calculating how he could get out to Lowell or Lynn or Fall River, arrange a matter of business and be back in the city in time to finish his work before 9 or 10 o'clock in the evening. The telephone does all that in these days and the office man closes his desk at 5 o'clock en route to his restful suburban home, returning at 9 in the morning without that dragged, tired feeling, which was so common among all classes and conditions of business people thirty years ago, and which was so often the prelude to nervous breakdown.

"Fatiguing long distance trips, too, were much more common and necessary then than now. Men who formerly went to New York twice and three times in the month, enduring the nervous rack and broken rest of the journey on the midnight express, returning the next night in the same exhausting way, have now got in the habit of saving their strength and nervous energy by use of the long distance telephone, and do not make the trip more than once or twice a year. The extension of the long distance services of the Bell system over the whole eastern part of the United States has meant more to the health of Eastern bankers and other business men than you would have any idea.

"So, although the figures may show that lunacy is on the increase, I suspect you will discover that it is largely confined to the classes who have not yet accommodated themselves fully to the conditions of American living; who, in other words, have not got fairly established here."

This opinion, based upon professional observation, is somewhat supported by the report of Dr. W. C. White of the government hospital for the insane at Washington, D. C., regarding the geographical distribution of insanity in the United States. "The proportion," he states, "is highest where there is greatest congestion of population, and therefore where the stresses incident to active competition are most severe." The crowded centers of population are also, of course, the places where a vast population brought from the rural districts and the cities of Europe have been thrown into the restless hustle of American life without proper preparation, and frequently succumb to the strain, requiring treatment in public institutions.

In some cases, furthermore, European authorities have been known to make a practice of sending mentally diseased people to this country for the sake of getting rid of them. Secretary W. A. Gates of the California board of charities and corrections, formerly in Minnesota, wrote recently: "For six years it was my duty as deportation officer in Minnesota to hunt out and send back immigrants who became insane within a year or two after their admission. My experience in this work showed conclusively that unfortunates were being dumped into this country for us to care for. I have found persons who came almost direct from insane hospitals in the old country. One man discharged in Norway in January arrived in Minnesota in February and was in an insane hospital in March. Upon writing his father, we received a reply that he knew his son had been insane before he came over, but said he thought the trip to America would do him good, and had furnished him the money to come here. I think immigration from foreign countries is more largely responsible for this increase than any other one thing."

Again, Dr. H. R. Chase of the Friends Asylum for the Insane at Frankford, Philadelphia, in a recent report, said: "From the best information at hand we conclude it is probably true that there is still an increase in insanity. In the United States immigration has a potent bearing on the results of these computations. This may easily be seen when it is considered that only one-eighth of the population is foreign born, one-third of the insane belonging to this class. Insanity is essentially a disease that thrives most extensively in the cities. In the dense communities of the large cities of the Eastern states the ratio is one to 300 people, while in sparsely settled districts of the West the ratio does not exceed one to 500 of the inhabitants."

The opinion that the growth of lunacy is most noticeable among those who have not yet been fully endowed with the comforts and conveniences of modern existence is also shared by Dr. James B. Chapin, superintendent of the Pennsylvania hospital for the insane. Dr. Chapin states that private institutions like his own are not being overcrowded at this time, but that state institutions for the benefit of the poor are having difficulty in handling the many cases turned over to them.

The Kind You Have Always Bought.

THIS is the caution applied to the public announcement of Castoria that has been manufactured under the supervision of Chas. H. Fletcher for over 30 years—the genuine Castoria. We respectfully call the attention of fathers and mothers when purchasing Castoria to see that the wrapper bears his signature in black. When the wrapper is removed the same signature appears on both sides of the bottle in red. Parents who have used Castoria for their little ones in the past years need no warning against counterfeits and imitations, but our present duty is to call the attention of the younger generation to the great danger of introducing into their families spurious medicines.

It is to be regretted that there are people who are now engaged in the nefarious business of putting up and selling all sorts of substitutes, or what should more properly be termed conterfeits, for medicinal preparations not only for adults, but worse yet, for children's medicines. It therefore devolves on the mother to scrutinize closely what she gives her child. Adults can do that for themselves but the child has to rely on the mother's watchfulness.

RECORD RUN ACROSS CONTINENT.

Company Closed in Frisco and Opened in London Ten Days Later on a Wager.

Marcus Mayer and Ben Stern, theatrical managers, and E. L. Lomax, general passenger agent of the Union Pacific railroad; George Beltzhoover, of the Pennsylvania, and two or three other railroad men, met here recently upon the occasion of Mr. Mayer's return from Europe, says the Chicago Record-Herald.

The unique New York theatrical man chanced to mention the fact that he had made quick time across the Pacific, made good connections at Frisco and had therefore accomplished a fast journey from the old country to Chicago. As he was going out on an eighteen-hour train to New York that day he expected that he would complete about as fast a trip as he had ever had across the greater portion of the continent.

"Speaking about records," said Lomax, "do you remember the record trip you made with the original London Gaiety company from Frisco to London, Mayer?"

"I shall never forget it," replied the theatrical man. "I am now engaged in writing the story for the autobiography which is being prepared for me. I don't believe there has ever been such a run since—has there, Lomax?"

"Not over our rail, and when I recall it, now, it makes my hair curl to think of the chances we took to win that money for you. I can tell you it was going some on a fifty-six pound rail over the mountains."

All the members of the party had had something to do with Mayer's famous record run. Ben Stern was in Mayer's employ at that time, and Lomax had arranged the trip from Frisco to Omaha while Beltzhoover had superintended the arrangements for the run over the Pennsylvania from Chicago to Jersey City.

The original George Edwards London Gaiety company of 134 people had made a triumphal tour of the entire country from New York to the Pacific coast. The venture of bringing 134 people, including many of the well-known artists across the water had aroused great interest in the United States. The company appeared in "Faust Up To Date," and among them were Florence St. John, E. J. Lannen, Charles Danby, Martha Jones, Grace Pedley and the original Quartet Skirt Dancers.

During the closing week in San Francisco Marcus Mayer met a man from Australia named Williamson, and they chanced to talk regarding transportation in this country and in Europe. Williamson insisted that the United States was far behind Europe in transportation facilities. Mayer declared that European railroads were not in the same class with American roads.

"The cheapest road here," he declared, "can run a wheel off from the most famous road in Europe, and as for accommodations—well, they are not worthy of the name across the pond. When a man starts for a place in this country he knows he's going to get there in a hurry, and in comfort."

"You will have to show me," declared the man from Australia.

"I can show you for $1,000," retorted Mayer.

"I don't know what it is, but you're on," replied the foreigner.

"I mean," continued Mayer, "that the London Gaiety company closes here Saturday night and is going to open in London one week from the following Wednesday night. They are going to do that for $1,000 of your bloomin' Henglish money, by grace of the powers that be and of the great American transcontinental lines of railroad."

"To do that you will have to catch the boat at New York which sails early Thursday morning for Southampton?"

"That's what we will have to do and that's what we are going to do."

"For $1,000 of my money, did you say?"

"Yep—are you game?"

"I wish you had said $2,000."

"I'll say it now."

It was arranged that the Australian should go on the trip, and Mayer lost no time in consulting officials of the Central Pacific, now known as the Southern Pacific road. They said it might be done, but they were doubtful.

"It's got to be done," insisted Mayer. "That bloomin' Britisher will howl about it for all time to the ends of the earth if it isn't done, to say nothing about my $2,000."

"How few cars can you get along with and move your people and stuff?" asked the Southern Pacific man.

"Seven cars," replied Mayer, "is the best we can do."

"Whew! A seven-car special to New York by Thursday morning! Well, I'm glad it's your $2,000 and not mine."

The London Gaiety company tried to cut the last performance at Frisco short in order to get a good start for London. The seven-car extra stood waiting on the tracks long before the show closed, but by the time the scenery was loaded it was 2 o'clock in the morning. Rumor of Mayer's $2,000 bet had spread, and hundreds of people were at the pier to see them embark for the station across the bay, and other hundreds were gathered at the station. The run from Frisco to Cheyenne, all the way uphill, was not a remarkably fast one. Everything seemed to conspire to delay the special, and at Cheyenne they were informed that they were in behind a freight wreck that could not be cleared for at least ten hours. When Mayer heard this he almost gave up in despair, and the man from Australia was making life a burden. Women members of the troupe wept in vexation, and the men—well, most of the men swore roundly.

Lomax, however, had promised to see Mayer through his end of the route, and he came to bat like a major. Hearing of the wreck soon after it occurred, Lomax had hurried seven empties to Cheyenne, and they came tearing into town soon after the Mayer special arrived there. Two score men had been ordered by wire, and they began hustling scenery and baggage from the old special to the new one. It took several hours to make the transfer, despite heroic efforts, and when the special began its slide down the Rockies toward Julesburg there was despair in every heart except that of the gay Australian.

Upon Lomax's entreaty the track was cleared for him to Omaha, and the way that special careened down the mountains and then across the plains made the light steel rails groan and snap like a living thing.

"If we stick to the rails," Lomax told Mayer, "I'll bring you into Omaha on schedule."

"But will she stick?" asked Mayer.

"The way she is hitting the joints now I should say our chances were about even, no better, declared Lomax.

The race became so wild long before Omaha was reached that the Australian was about ready to give up his $2,000, provided the special would slow down to a decent pace. The run from Cheyenne to Omaha, a distance of 516 miles, was made in 10 hours and 45 minutes, and it has never been beaten. E. H. Harriman started out to beat it recently upon his return from the Orient, and with Mrs. Longworth, then Alice Roosevelt, on board. For some unknown reason he gave up the attempt, but before it was abandoned many railroad men were watching to see what he would do to that Mayer record made on a fifty-six pound rail.

When the special arrived in Omaha another difficulty was experienced. The London Gaiety company had gone to the coast over the Burlington from Chicago to Omaha. Now, the Burlington refused to wait for the special because of the necessity of detaining the mails more than an hour. The Northwestern officials were hastily communicated with by wire, and readily consented to make the run. But before the arrangement could be completed another hour had been lost, and Omaha was left behind with deep grief hanging over the special. The sun was just peeping up when the special tore through the Omaha yards headed for Chicago. The Northwestern made itself solid for all time with Mayer by bringing his special into Chicago under ten hours, averaging fifty-two miles an hour, including stops. This brought the party into Chicago less than an hour late, with barely twenty-four hours in which to catch the boat, which was to sail from New York the following morning at sunrise. In these days a twenty-four-hour run from Chicago to New York was not the joke that it is now, but the Pennsylvania buckled on its best engine and began the 982-mile run at a fifty-mile clip.

Upon arrival at Pittsburg, however, it became apparent that the company could not reach the boatside by sunrise, and Mayer wired the steamship agent, asking him how long he would hold the boat. The answer was delivered at Altoona that the boat, which was to sail at 6 a. m., would wait until 7 and not a minute longer.

"I have had many troubles in my time," declared Mayer to his friends, "but those few hours from Pittsburg to Altoona were the worst I ever spent. I simply felt that I should slaughter that Australian if we didn't get that boat, and what did he do—why, he grinned like a Cheshire cat all the time. It was exceedingly exasperating, I can assure you."

Every one in the London Gaiety company sat up all night with watch in hand. First despair, then hope, filled their hearts, and finally when Jersey City hove in sight at 6 a. m. there was a wild shout of joy. The Pennsylvania people had a special ferry and an army of laborers to make the transfer of scenery and baggage. The captain of the big liner was pacing the bridge impatiently as the ferry steamed up the river. The transfer was made quickly, and when the liner backed out of her slip Marcus Mayer and his company had twenty minutes of grace to spare. The liner met with no bad weather, enjoyed a good run over and drew into Southampton early Wednesday morning, supplementing the 104-hour run from Frisco to Jersey City. The London Gaiety company opened in London on the second Wednesday night following the close of their highly successful American tour.

"What did you do with the $2,000?" Mayer was asked.

"Never mind what I did with it, but I made that Australian pay it in the presence of the entire company. And say, he was game, all right, for when he handed over the check he made a handsome apology to the entire American railway system."

Oddly enough the record of the Mayer special stands as the Southern Pacific-Union Pacific record today after eighty-five-pound rails have been laid and after more than $100,000,000 has been expended upon those railroads.

The Week in Stageland.

AT THE LYCEUM

"The Story of the Reformation" by Local Talent on Thursday and Friday--Fred Warde to Lecture on Shakespearean Plays Tuesday and Wednesday Evenings and Wednesday Matinee.

A large home talent entertainment, entitled "The Story of the Reformation," or "The Life and Times of Martin Luther," will be presented in the Lyceum theater, Thursday and Friday evenings, May 24 and 25, under the auspices of St. John's English Lutheran church, Rev. J. L. Murphy, pastor.

The entertainment was originated by Mrs. H. E. Monroe of Washington, D. C. The dramatized portions will be connected by an illustrated lecture by Mrs. Della E. Mayers. The views shown are the finest that can be obtained on this subject.

The evening opens with a beautiful triuniphal church processional, which illustrates German theology brought into this country through the Lutheran, Presbyterian and Reformed churches. The processional is led by seven couples of peasants, representing the different Protestant countries of Europe, in the order in which the ideas of the Reformation entered those countries—Germany, Sweden, Norway, Denmark, Switzerland, England and the Netherlands. These are followed by ladies and gentlemen, wearing the colors of Germany and carrying the flag of that country, representing the German states, and ladies in red, white and blue, carrying Old Glory, representing States of the Union. As they march they sing and form many intricate figures. The figure ends with Ecclesia (the church) at the front, with uplifted cross, and the flags of the nations represented saluting the cross.

This is followed by a scene, "At the Monastery at Erfurth." C. F. Wlberg will impersonate the fretful old Monk of Erfurth. Into this scene will come twenty choirmen, who sing two pieces of Luther's music. The very best singers in Duluth have been secured for this scene, and the music will be rendered in an excellent manner.

The most brilliant scene of the evening is that of "Luther's Great Trial at the Diet at Worms." This scene will be given with great precision and nicety of detail that so important a trial demands. Prof. L. A. Ink will be Martin Luther, Dr. J. D. Parks will impersonate Cardinal Cajetan of Rome, and Prof. R. E. Denfeld will wear the robes of royalty and, seated upon a throne, will represent His Majesty, Emperor Charles V of Germany. B. P. Neff will represent that great friend of Luther and the Reformation, Elector Frederick III of Saxony. Charles Applehagen will sing a solo, "Dare to be a Luther."

There will be assembled bishops, princes, lords and knights, to hear the defense of the little monk who shook the world.

The drill team of the Modern Woodman of America, and a detachment from Company C, M. N. G., will act royal guards.

A very pathetic scene is that of a number of nuns and novices leaving a convent. The Mother Superior will be represented by Mrs. Bert Holcomb. About thirty ladies will take part in this scene. A short dialogue is given, and several pieces of music are sung. A solo, "Over the Line," will be sung by Miss Florence Nyland.

Frederick III of Saxony closed the convents and monasteries in 1522, for the purpose of using the money so invested in improving his university, and beginning the education of the common people. From one of these convents, a Cistercian convent of the Benedictine order, a number of women went out at one time. One of these was Catherine Von Bora, whom Luther afterward married.

The evening closes with a march. Then with flags flying and swords flashing, the class sings Luther's great battle hymn, "Ein Feste Berg."

FREDERICK WARDE

Will Deliver Three Lectures at Lyceum Next Week.

Frederick Warde, the well-known Shakespearean actor and scholar, who has visited Duluth many times at the head of his own company and as a costar with Louis James, will give three recitals at the Lyceum next week, Tuesday evening Mr. Warde will give "Hamlet," Wednesday evening "Julius Caesar," and Wednesday afternoon "Shakespeare and His Plays." In giving "Hamlet" and "Julius Caesar," Mr. Warde impersonates every character, and interpolates interesting comments. His talk, "Shakespeare and His plays," is said to be very interesting.

LITTLE ROSE DOBIE,
The Child Master of the Violin at the Bijou Next Week.

Louis James, etaoni shrdlu cmfwypvbg Tuesday and Wednesday evenings and Wednesday afternoon. He is coming to Duluth under the auspices of North Star lodge, Knights of Pythias, and after a most successful season on the lecture platform. His success has been fully as great as it has been on the stage. Everywhere, the newspapers have praised his talks and lauded his purpose, which has always been that of popularizing the study of the works of the bard of Avon in this country.

THE METROPOLITAN

John L. Sullivan With His Company of Vaudeville Artists Will Appear All Next Week.

John L. Sullivan, for so long the undisputed champion of the prize ring, and now a successful monologuist, will be at the Metropolitan with his own company of vaudevillians all next week, beginning with a matinee Sunday.

John L. is known the world over. There is not a city or a hamlet in the country that is not familiar with his name, because he attained more prominence than any of his predecessors or successors in the squared circle. His own turn on the stage nowadays is said to be very good, and he has gathered about him a host of clever entertainers, so that his organization puts forth a very good show.

Prominent in Mr. Sullivan's company is the Exposition Four. This act is one of the most expensive on the road. Every week a large sum is handed over by the management as salary to the four persons who comprise the Exposition Four, but their turn is said to be worth all that is expended to retain it.

The entertainment includes some boxing by John L. and Kid Cutler, who is said to be a whirlwind. Possibly local boxers and wrestlers will have a chance to meet them should they so desire. Further zest will be added to the entertainment by the moving pictures of the Corbett-McCoy fight. Other turns are contributed by such specialists as "Raffles, the dog," Franks and Franks, bag punchers and physical culture experts; Hope and Theiss, song and dance artists; Potts and Potts, expert musicians; Dan Gallagher, comedian and vocalist; Zurazel and Razel, comedians and trick pianists; the De Arcoes, champion rifle shots; Edna Murray, soubrette, and Dale and Dale, singers and conversationalists.

There will be the usual matinees on Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday.

As an extra attraction, John L. Sullivan's management has secured the first and original moving pictures of the San Francisco disaster. The destitution and devastation is thrown on the big white curtain with horrible realism, and the film which is used to give these sights cost a small fortune in itself. These are the first moving pictures of the Frisco earthquake and fire that have been shown in Duluth, and should attract widespread attention.

JOHN L SULLIVAN,
To Be at Metropolitan All of Next Week.

THE NEW BIJOU

The Great San Francisco Fire and Earthquake to be Shown During the Coming Week.

The great San Francisco fire and earthquake will be shown next week at the Bijou in moving pictures, presenting the early morning alarm, the running of the fire department to the down town district, the engines unable to obtain water, the rescue by ladders from buildings set on fire by the earthquake, the jumping of people from windows, the burning blocks near the water front, scenes showing the falling walls on Market street, panoramic views of the resident portion, refugees getting their meals, soldiers on duty giving refugees their rations from the supply wagons, scenes looking southwest over the north beach district, Nob Hill looking south, and many other scenes.

In conjunction with the big picture exhibit, one of the best vaudeville programs of the season will be seen. It will be headed by Adele Purvis Owen and Harry Tsudo, who present the most sensational electrical globe dancing and equilibristic feats ever before the public, an act that has been featured over two continents.

A big special attraction will be Frank Milton and the De Long twin sisters, who present their original one-act musical comedy, entitled "The Constable," in which sweet singing, dancing and refined comedy is introduced; also, a big musical number by three saxophones.

A pleasing attraction will be Little Rosie Dobie, a child of 10 years of age, who is considered a master of the violin, playing selections of late operas and heavy overture numbers, with a wonderful volume and perfect melody.

The Green Bros., two gymnasts of considerablo note, will introduce their double bat juggling act, appearing in burlesque baseball make-ups, which are said to be very musical.

Clark and Temple present the clever comedy sketch, entitled "The Bell Boy and the Maid," which is a very funny skit, with sinking and dancing introduced.

Morey Long will render the latest illustrated song, entitled, "Will You Love Mo in December as You Did in May."

Matinees are given daily at 2:45 and evening performances at 8 and 9:30. Seats may be ordered by both 'phones for evening performances; a children's matinee on Saturday afternoon. Regular performances on Sunday afternoon and night.

GOSSIP OF THE RIALTO.

Coney Island's Season Is in Sight---The Roof Gardens Soon to Open, While a Requiem is Heard for the Passing of the Theatrical Season--- New Plays Promised by Several Successful Authors.

New York, May 19.—Coney Island is in full blast, the trees are in full foliage, straw hats and peek-a-boo waists are occasionally seen on the street, the lilac man is doing business and the soda fountains are increasing their ice orders. All these are unfailing indications that the time of rest is coming for the actor people and that the season of 1905-1906 is soon to pass into history.

It has been a good season for all those attractions which have merited success. New York is willing to pay and to keep on paying to be amused, but the amusement must be to its taste. Of the season's successes, "The Music Master," "Peter Pan," "The Girl of the Golden West" and "The Squaw Man" have easily been the leaders, but a score of other plays have brought fame and fortune to authors, players and managers, and when the season of 1906-1907 opens they still will be found doing business to the capacity of the houses.

The roof gardens are beginning to be popular, and with these and the usual number of houses which run on the year-round schedule the visitor who has discovered New York to be the very best of all summer resorts will not suffer for lack of amusements. And then there is the ever new Coney, which will soon be in full blast. There are those who have traveled much who are willing to take oath that the old Coney Island had not a match the world round, but this year the great resort of the people will be as far ahead of last year as the capitol at Washington is ahead of the city hall at Cohosh. About the only thing that will remain from Sea Gate to Oriental Point will be the surf and the bathing suits, the frankfurters and the high-collared beer glasses.

There were two new productions along Broadway this week. Daly gave a new one-act curtain raiser by Bernard Shaw at the Lyric, entitled "How He Lied to Her Husband." It is typically Bernard Shaw, which is saying all that is necessary. Joe Weber is responsible for the other novelty. It is typical, but of Weber. "The Jays" it is called, and it is a burlesque of the Mystic Fays, who are headliners in vaudeville.

Wilton Lackaye, in "Svengali," at the Academy, has been so long away from New York as to be almost new. He gives his usual finished artistic portrayal of DuMaurier's remarkable character.

There is a mutual feeling between Broadway and De Wolf Hopper. It would be hard to say which is gladder to see the other. His engagement, which began Monday at the Majestic, is the third trial of "Happyland" on the great white way this season. Each engagement has been more successful than the preceding one.

Plans are already bing laid for next season. The most interesting event planned for the fall is the American tour of Henry B. Irving, son of the great Sir Henry. As a rule, the sons of great actors are over-shadowed by the fame of their fathers, and fail to keep up the traditions of the great names, but there are exceptions, and from what I hear from the other side I am inclined to believe that young Irving will prove one of the exceptions. Current rumor has it that Miss Ethel Barrymore is to appear with Mr. Irving. It would be a great combination should this report prove to have foundation.

I understand a new Klein play is on the stocks, that it deals with Socialism and that Herbert Kelcey and Effie Shannon are to produce it under the management of Henry B. Harris. I trust the report is true. A play by the author of the "Music Teacher" and the "Lion and the Mouse," in the hands of competent artists, should be worth while.

Milton Royle also is at work on a new play, which he is confident will duplicate the success of "The Squaw Man." It is to be a modernized miracle play under the title of the "Struggling Everlasting." I shall be curious to see how the author of "The Squaw Man" handles so difficult a proposition, and I am by no means alone in my curiosity.

The end has been reached of Fritzi Scheff's present New York season in "Mlle. Modiste." The final performance of the prima donna's six months' engagement in the Knickerbocker will be given this evening. Following a summer vacation, which Miss Scheff will spend abroad, the run of the opera will be resumed here, commencing on Monday, September 1.

George Ade is home again and soon will be talking crops with his Indiana neighbors. He brought with him one of the most ferocious looking bulldogs ever seen on the Western Hemisphere. There is a suspicion that Ade intends to use the dog in the new play which he is to write this summer for Frohman He is silent in all the continental languages he has learned during his trip abroad as to the subject of the new play, however.

The Grand Opera house is to break away from its traditions, which include changing the attraction every week, and indulge itself in quite a run. "The Clansman" has been booked for a fortnight. As an extra featuro a troop of United States cavalry horses will gallop, four abreast, from one side scene to another on their way to wreak vengeance on the Ethiopian villain.

Although we have with us moving pictures of the San Francisco horror. The "crash of matter," etc., does not phase the moving picture man. Hamerstein's Victoria theater gave New Yorkers the first chance to see the overwhelming disaster on the Pacific coast, as shown by the camera.

Nell Burgess, the old original "Widow Bedott," may be seen once again in his portrayal of the practical, prudish and prim old maid Aunt Abby, which he assumes in "The Country Fair," which will have a magnificent revival in the Murray Hill theater next week. Mr. Burgess has portrayed this quaint character role for seventeen years, and he is as popular today as when this famous New England play was first produced. The scenery and effects are the same which characterized the original production, and the great race scene, with its live horses running at a terrific pace, in full view of the audience, still remains one of the features.

• • •

The Washington Theater company was incorporated in New York last week, with Sam Scribner, Gus Hill and L. Lawrence Weber as the principal holders of the $125,000 issue of stock. It is said the new company is to build a theater in Washington on the same lines of their Gaiety theater in Baltimore, and that it will be added next season to the circuit of burlesque houses controlled by the Columbia Amusement company.

• • •

Hope Booth, a popular actress, who has been in retirement for the past three years, returned to vaudeville last week in a neat sketch called "The Little Blonde Lady," which was given a trial at Proctor's Twenty-third Street theater, and scored such a hit that Miss Booth will continue in vaudeville for an indefinite period.

• • •

Henry B. Harris has taken Rose Stahl under his managerial wing and is to make her a star in the No. 2 theaters next season. Miss Stahl will be seen in a four-act play by James Forbes called "The Chorus Lady." The inspiration for this is found in Mr. Forbes' one-act play of the same title in which Miss Stahl has been singularly successful for the past two seasons in vaudeville. It is said, however, that aside from the character of the chorus girl to be played by the star the new play will be entirely original and follow an entirely different theme.

• • •

Ellis Jeffreys, the English actress who was brought over to this country by Liebler & Co. for a second trial the present season, has closed her American tour and sailed this week for her home on the other side. Miss Jeffreys is looked upon as an accomplished comedienne and a talented actress, but so far she has been handicapped by unsuitable plays, and her tours in this country have suffered on this account.

• • •

Arnold Daly revived "How He Lied to Her Husband" at the Lyric theater last week and added another strong Shaw comedy to his repertoire. The play satirizes the same author's story, "Candida," and as Daly has been very successful in this, the audience relished the opportunity of having fun poked at their former favorite.

• • •

Gertie Carlisle, late of "The Pearl and the Pumpkin," has been booked for vaudeville again. The little singer and dancer will be seen next season as the star of Ned Wayburn's spectacular act, "Kitty Town."

• • •

Cora Rout, the Covington girl who was one of the principals in the all-but-forgotten neglige Seeley dinner, which Capt. Chapman rudely interrupted, has decided to return to the stage and will be seen in vaudeville next season. Miss Rout, after her marriage, went into retirement, and has not been seen in public for several years.

De Wolf Hopper's stay in New York this summer is indefinite. The engagement at the Majestic theater is also to try out a scheme the Schuberts have long been contemplating. The experiment will be made in the immediate future, and hereafter $1 will be the charge for the best seats in that pretty playhouse. After Hopper has worn out the welcome of "Happyland" he will revive "Wang" and "El Capitan." In the event that the $1 proposition proves what it is expected to, there is likely to be several changes made in New York theater prices.

The Theatrical Trust recently ceased directing the Holyoke Opera house, at Holyoke, Mass., and the Shuberts took control of the bookings there. The first attraction sent after the house passed under the independent management was "The Earl and the Girl," and this is what the Holyoke Evening Telegram of Tuesday, May 1, said editorially on the subject:

"It seemed like the good old theater days to see Manager Lawler's house packed to the doors last night. We have had no chance to see such a sight in Holyoke for a long time. Manager Lawler has broken away from the high collared crowd which held him, or tried to, yet gave him nothing to swallow but second-class productions. If the crowd had given him its better things the public might have been appeased, but Holyoke stood the affront from the Theater Trust as long as it could, then there was nothing for the Opera house to do but break away from the clutches of the monster. Manager Lawler need have no fear that Holyoke theater-goers have not appreciated his position. They have. And they were as pleased over his good fortune in a record house for the season last night as in their own good fortune in being permitted to see the attraction offered."

BOATS ARE SWAMPED

Gale Plays Havoc With Fleet of Duluth Yacht Club.

All Craft at Anchorage Either Sunk or Washed Ashore.

The gale of Thursday night and Friday played havoc with the boats belonging to the Duluth Yacht club.

Yesterday when the members went over to look at their boats, they found a scene of desolation.

Practically every boat that had been left at the anchorage was either overturned, sunk or torn loose from its moorings.

Three of the boats had drifted ashore and were stranded on the beach several hundred yards below the clubhouse.

Three others had sunk completely from sight, leaving nothing showing but spars.

Still others were overturned, and were lying on their sides, filled with water.

No attempt could be made to raise the boats during the day, owing to the heavy wind, but this morning some of the owners were at work on their boats, and before night it is likely that all of them will have been raised.

It is impossible to tell how much damage has been done to the craft, until they are raised and righted, but it is not believed that any of them have suffered any serious damage.

The clubhouse was not in any way injurd by the storm, and the boat clubhouse also escaped. Work on the additions to both buildings had to be discontinued, however, and in fact it has been difficult to accomplish anything all week, owing to the heavy winds. The carpenters have gone ahead with what superstructure work they could do, but the 'pile driving had to be abandoned temporarily, as the water was too rough in the harbor for the driver to be operated.

GOTCH AND JENKINS.

Will Wrestle in Kansas City Convention Hall May 23.

Kansas City, May 19.—After wrangling for over a year, Frank Gotch and Tom Jenkins have accepted the terms offered by the Missouri Athletic club, and on the night of May 23, in Convention hall, they will wrestle for the championship. The articles of agreement signed by the men call for a straight catch-as-catch-can match, best two out of three falls. Dave Porteus will officiate as referee.

Ever since the Missouri Athletic club first started to give wrestling shows the club's matchmaker has been trying to land Jenkins for a match with Gotch. The Iowan was willing to concede almost anything in order to get a try for the championship, but Jenkins did not appear at all anxious to try conclusions with the "Farmer." Jenkins is wrestling instructor at West Point, and he had to secure permission first from the war department before he could sign to meet Gotch.

Jenkins is at present the champion catch-as-catch-can wrestler of the world, and he and Gotch are old-time rivals. They have met on four occasions, each winning two matches. When they met last, about a year and a half ago, in Madison Square Garden in New York, Gotch was defeated after having his right leg broken. This put Gotch out of the running for several months, and since then he has been trying hard for a return match. Here in the Middle West the Iowan is a great favorite, but even at that Jenkins will be a favorite in the betting. Jenkins is the champion, and a champion always has the call.

Both men wrestle along the same lines. Jenkins will have a pull of about fifteen pounds in the weights, while Gotch is some ten years younger. Jenkins has had much more experience, and he is said to be the cleverest grappler in the business. He is a terrific punisher, and during his fifteen years in the business he has lost only three matches.

WEATHER IS TOO WINDY

Oarsmen Are Unable to Do Anything at Spring Training.

Junior and Senior Crews Will be Organized Next Week.

During the greater part of June, and until July 13, the oarsmen in training for the regatta to be held here on that date, will sleep in one of the houses near the boat club, and row both morning and evening, as was the custom last year, for a week or two previous to the regatta.

The cold and windy weather has delayed the spring training. In such weather as has prevailed for the last two weeks, it has been difficult to get more than one or two crews out, and then conditions were not favorable for good work. There have not been more than two or three evenings since spring training began, that were at allfavorable, and on many nights it was too rough to launch even a barge.

Next week, however, if the weather moderates, some crews will be organized. Two senior and two junior fours will probably be selected from men who can be counted on to row regularly and they will be expected to row at least once a day from then until the regatta. Shortly after June 1, these crews will take up their quarters on the point, either in a house that will be rented for the purpose, or in the new addition to the club house, which is under construction. They can then row in the morrings, and again in the evening, and cover the course twice a day.

The crews that will be selected next week are not necessarily permanent, but many changes may be made before the regatta, if the coaches think it necessary. Additional crews can also be organized as the men show themselves fit, and it is the aim of the rowing committee to get every man who rows regularly into some well organized crew.

The time for training is now very limited, the regatta being only about seven weeks off, and practically all of the work will have to be done in that time.

MORE NAMES ARE OFFERED

Suggestions for Nickname for Northern and Copper Country League.

Two other nicknames for the Northern and Copper Country league have been suggested to The Herald, and they come nearer to filling the bill than any that have been yet offered.

Carl J. Olin of 5309 Albion street, West Duluth, and also several fans from the Copper country, who neglected to sign their names, have offered the suggestion that the league be called the "Nancy" league, as a contraction of the initials, "N. C. C."

A. V. Johnson of Duluth offers as a nickname the "Copperpeg" league, which also seems to fit pretty well.

THE FORMER CHAMPIONS

Are Out of It In Contest for American League Pennant.

Boston Hopelessly Beaten —Batting Averages Improving.

Boston, May 19.—The major league clubs have gone one eighth of the distance already. In the American league all but Boston got off the mark in fairly good shape, while the teams of the National league are spread out.

Youth and skill will tell at the start, while nerve and heart will count for much after the half mile is passed, where the teams are well matched and no loafing allowed.

Several teams that look pretty good at the present time will wither like snow before the noonday sun and second time around the circuit, and the fans will wonder how they were deceived.

The clubs with the older players will be the slowest to get away where they are equally matched in science and speed. The older pitchers will refuse to take chances unless they are absolutely right, until good warm weather. Therefore, by the time the clubs reach the first quarter you will be able for the first time to get a true line on the strength of the teams.

At the present time no team is under a strain with players worrying about the championship, unless it may be the New York Giants, after seeing the great Mathewson lose his first game to Boston on the Polo grounds, for the New York men know the trouble ahead should Chris the fad to come around in his best form.

There is not a club in the American league at the present writing, with perhaps Boston excepted, that has not heard the pennant bee buzzing. Cleveland doped it out this spring in the South that they were to walk off with it. Detroit finished strong last fall and felt they had a look in. Griffith's Highlanders could see the flag floating from the highest point of Manhattan island. St. Louis has downed the pretenders and McAleer can see things coming his way.

Chicago and the Athletics are dead earnest about getting into the money series this fall, while Jake Stahl has forced Washington to a position to be respected, coming stronger each season.

I can see without a shadow of doubt that the Boston Americans have slowed up, and must have some new blood, not necessarily young blood, to get back some of the old-time enthusiasm. It will be the first of next month before the old pitchers get down to their best work, as they will refuse to take chances. The veterans are growing older and gradually slowing up. They have been given credit for being the gamest bunch that ever came over the pike. Never noted for inside ball playing, but fighting hard, both at home and on the road to a finish.

The greatest teams must naturally slow up some time, and I see plainly evidences of a lack of energy at time in the Collins team. For this reason unless new blood should revive the spirits of the vets and strengthen the playing of the team, I'll call off this year for the ex-world's champions.

I am not good enough prophet to name the club to win the money, but feel quite certain that several teams now well to the front will finish far below Boston, as they will not relish the last half mile of the race. I have witnessed all the Eastern teams at work in both leagues, and must say their all-round playing is not as good as last season, with the exception of the Boston Nationals.

The good-looking youngsters brought out have been second baseman Schafley of Washington; Ward, an infielder, of the Philadelphia club; Marshall, a catcher of the New York Giants; Graham, a catcher with Boston Americans, and a half dozen clever pitchers. It looks as if the West had picked up more good youngsters than the East, and the peculiar features about baseball are that the youngsters from the East get an opening in the West, while the major clubs of the East go West for their youngsters and mostly for their older players.

It's no easy matter to pick up the best of the young players, even by purchase, during the playing season, as clubs cannot afford to part with a good man during a race for the championship, and expect to hold their patronage, and this holds down the club with plenty of funds to a level with the club not willing to part with big money for talent. In this way the teams grow evenly matched, which is a splendid thing for the sport.

I am especially interested in the race this year between the New York and Chicago league clubs. Both teams will play inside ball and will have good handlers in McGraw and Chance. It looks like a case of nerve and staying powers, as I look at the present condition of the teams. I don't know of one member of the Chicago team that has gone through a winning campaign in major league society, with the exception of Sheckard, while nearly all the members of the Giants have seen several hard campaigns and know how to play the distance.

Should the league race come down to these two clubs, it would wake up the fans in the West, and the finish depends on which team stood best with the other six clubs of the league. Usually when teams are out of the race they work like fiends to down some unpopular team that has acted decently through the season. This feeling always helped the Boston clubs that pulled off championships, and will continue to be a factor in the game as long as it is played professionally.

It strikes me that batting averages are growing better each week and all pitchers are easily found up to date, which is a splendid thing for the game, for you must have hitting to bring out the beauty of the sport.

While our dear old world beaters find it as hard to get a start as a man would have to lift himself by his boot straps, I notice Uncle Ed Hanlon is having some trouble with his Cincinnati boys. Ed never had a chance. Joe Kelley knew it from the start, but he was given the hook and stood the jab like a true sportsman. Kelley got about as much out of the men given him as anyone could. Ed Hanlon never intended to keep Kelley on the team but was not taking a chance to get in bad with Kelly's friends. Then, too, Hanlon is fond of Kelley socially, but would prefer a new deal all around, feeling, perhaps, that it was not altogether just the thing to take a good fellow's job. I am sorry, as I would like to see Garry Herrmann have a winner, and I know that the Cincinnati fans would make things hum if they could land the honors just once more. Down this way we can afford to rest on our honors for a while as we are dead sure to come back with the goods as usual.

REMARKABLE SHOT

This shot was one of the most difficult made in the recent billiard tourney at Chicago. It was made by Willie Hoppe in the opening game with Louis Cure. The balls were almost in a line along the side rail, so that a draw for position was not advisable, the danger of a kiss-off being too great. Hoppe got himself out of the difficulty by driving the white ball around the table for position, as shown by the dotted line, while his cue ball, the dotted one in the diagram, was sent to the side rail with heavy reverse English, then to the end rail. The English threw it back along the side rail, from which it caromed off onto the red ball, completing the billiard. The white ball had rolled into perfect position within six inches of the other ivories. The arrows indicate the course of the cue ball.

SPORTING COMMENT

THE LAY OF THE BLEACHERITE.

I've seen a nigged seated
In a watermelon patch,
Seen an angler at his after dinner smoke;
Climbed up in a cherry tree,
When the fruit was luscious ripe,
And eaten till the branch I sat on, broke.

I've skipped from school in April,
To go fishin' in the brook,
I've smoked an acorn pipe behind the barn,
I've dozed beside the fire
In a good, old fashioned grate,
While an old retired sailor spun a yarn.

All these joys, and greater,
I have tasted to the core,
But none of them, to my mind, can compare,
With a seat up in the bleachers,
When the home team is behind,
And their pitcher starts a-going in the air.

Just get a sack of peanuts,
And a bottle of red pop,
And stand up on the wooden bench and shout;
And if the home team loses,
As the home team sometimes does,
You can heave a brickbat at the umpire going out.

Perhaps when we have shaken
Earth's dust from out feet,
Our team will always swat it on the nose;
No admission will be charged,
Pop and peanuts will be free,
And the open season on umpires never close.

That moaning sound heard this week was the howl of the Pittsburg fans, when the Pirates shut out the Giants in two successive games. They do love the Giants so down in Pittsburg.

Let's see. Didn't the Boston Americans once win a pennant? They seem to be drifting on the 2,000-foot level in the league standing at present, with a record of fourteen successive defeats.

Perhaps if the New York Giants would strike a little rough sledding like that encountered in Pittsburg, the other National league teams would shake the idea that McGraw's men are invincible.

Secretary Glass says the umpires are to be given complete control this year. What's the use, anyway? A ball player might just as well abandon his honest efforts to decrease the visible supply of indicator manipulators.

Houghton and Hancock turned out 3,500 people to the opening game. The police heartlessly went away, leaving the prisoners locked up in jail, and they missed the game. This accounts for the absentees.

That unaccountable liking for the buck saw and the woodpile, noticeable in the small boy this week, is accounted for at the Driving park this afternoon. He was "getting down to weight."

"Jawn" L. Sullivan will be in Duluth all next week. As a prize fighter, Jawn may de down and out, but he has a press agent that would make the London Times break columns. Jawn's description of the capitol as a "swell dump" and his vow to quit drinking, rank with Teddy's muck rake speech as national gossip.

AN OPEN-AIR CARNIVAL

Fight Promoters Not Discouraged by the Fire.

San Francisco, May 19.—If there happens to be a sports critic this side of Fire Island who hasn't written an obituary or sung a dirge over the passing of San Francisco as a pugilistic center, the Fight Trust out here would like to hear from him. To the individual who has controlled his emotions to the extent named the trust intends to forward a souvenir basket of fire relics.

As for those who have drawn largely on their pathos in telling how completely San Francisco has been sponged off the pugilistic map, the trust simply says, "Wait and we'll show you."

James W. Coffroth, who, it will be admitted, has made his mark as a promoter and money getter, declares that San Francisco will be up to its eyes in matchmaking again within a couple of months. He was always a sanguine rooster, this Coffroth, and he is willing to be quoted to the effect that a rousing fistic attraction on the Fourth of July is something more stable than a poet's dream.

Coffroth has made some kind of a proposal to the Mechanics' institute people, who own the site on which, before the fire, stood that historic pile, Mechanics' pavilion. It was there that John L. Sullivan and Paddy Ryan, Jack Dempsey and Jack Burke, Jim Jeffries and a half dozen would-be champions boxed. But a truce to reminiscences. Coffroth wants permission to build an arena of sufficient size to accommodate a 24-foot ring and a fight crowd. He promises to arrange his structure so that it will not interfere with the erection of a permanent improvement on the old pavilion block.

Coffroth believes that by July 4 there will be barrels of money in circulation, and that the time will be ripe for a renewal of Queensberry gambols. Both Woodward and Mechanics' pavilions being burned, the first thing is to secure house room for his ringsters and patrons, and this is the problem he is working on at present. He still retains control of the Colma arena, which he will use for pugilistic affairs of ordinary importance.

It is a notorious fact that the big fire accomplished wonders in the line of squelching vendettas and reuniting persons who had been long estranged. Before the blaze "strained relations" but feebly expressed the condition of things in connection with the Fight Trust. Eddie Graney and Jim Coffroth, in particular, were so much at outs that all kinds of bad results were feared by their friends.

When the flames were devouring San Francisco it was Graney, who, in his buggy, drove Coffroth and his valuables to a place of safety. Both men have maintained a dignified silence in regard to the Fight Trust squabbles ever since, and it is believed that said squabbles, like many other things, went up in smoke. It will surprise us all if there is any more friction in the Fight Trust.

Graney, who is known variously as "The Honest Blacksmith," the "Little Horseshoer" and "Village Chestnut," hardly thinks that there will be anything very pretentious in the fight until September 9.

"I expect to see a daylight event in the open air on admission day," said Graney. "It will be a world's championship. I don't understand why so many fellows away from San Francisco thought we had met our finish pugilistically. They all give us credit for being game to the core in other respects. If you pick up an outside paper you will see lost of comment on the way we are setting about rebuilding our city and restoring trade relations. Why then should we smother our love for ring sports? A few months from now this city will be busier than a thonsand ant hills, and unless I am greatly mistaken, the demand for high-class pugilism will be better than ever. Just think of the pay rolls there will be for labor alone, once we get fairly started with our new San Francisco."

Coffroth, it is understood, still bankers after Sam Berger and Jack O'Brien as an open air card in one of the big holidays. Graney thinks Joe Gans and Battling Nelson the very best attraction which could be secured. What is more, Graney believes he is about the only one among San Francisco's matchmakers who has it in his power to bring these famous lightweights together.

The "Little Horseshoer" relies upon the friendship which exists between Billy Nolan and himself. Before the fire Graney had hopes of putting Nelson and Gans in the ring on July 4. Now he has his eye on the match for September 9.

HERRERA AND NELSON STARS

The Aurello Herrera-Battling Nelson twenty-round contest, to take place at Los Angeles on May 25, is the next fight to which those interested in the game all over the country are looking forward. Kelly fights Barry. McGarry may meet Keys, Sullivan is scheduled to go on with Jimmy Gardner, O'Brien fights Chester Goodwin, Canole will don the mitts with Peter Sullivan, Fitzgerald and O'Keefe will square off for a ten-round bout, and Tancel will clash with "Kid" Taylor, and numerous other minor bouts are scheduled, but Nelson and Herrera are the pair that will hold the limelight. It will be Dane vs. Mexican; knock-out punch against endurance. A $25,000 purse has been guaranteed the men by Manager McCarey. This is probably as much money as all of the other fights together will draw.

Both men have been preparing for the bout for some time. Two years ago Nelson fought Herrera at Butte, Mont. In that battle the Mexican landed one of his wallops on Nelson's jaw. Nelson went down for the count of nine, but managed to "stall" until he recovered. Then he started boring in again. He did not leave himself open to any more of Herrera's punches. He outpointed Herrera in the twenty rounds that they fought and received the decision. Nelson, therefore, has a wholesome respect for Herrera's punch—in fact, he declared not so long ago that he considered Herrera the hardest man to beat that he ever fought. Herrera is an in-and-out fighter. If he is in condition he should give Nelson a good fight. Nelson is generally figured to have too much stamina for the Mexican. Then, too, Nelson has learned a lot since he fought Herrera. Nelson looks like a winner if he fights his usual style. If for a moment he comes out of his shell, raises his chin up off of his chest and starts to exchange punches with Herrera like he did with "Young" Corbett and Britt, the chances are about even that Nelson will hit the floor with a thud. Everything depends on Herrera's physical condition. If he is fit, he should give Nelson a hard twenty-round fight. If not, he will tire, and when he does Nelson will get over a couple of wallops that, while they have not the real sleep-producing pellet in them, are capable of stowing away a man when he is tired or weakened with punishment.

As the result of the decision of Magistrate Pool, who discharged the boxers charged with boxing at the opening show held in Madison Square garden, an eight-round bout will be tried in the garden tomorrow night. Mike "Twin" Sullivan and Jimmy Gardner are to clash for an eight-round bout at catch weights, which means about 140 pounds. So far no bout over four rounds' duration has been attempted openly in Gotham for years. It is thought that, in view of the numerous recent decisions rendered in New York courts that boxing before legitimate clubs, before members only, is not contrary to law, that the officers will not attempt to prevent the Sullivan-Gans bout from taking place. If the eight-round bout takes place it will cause a thrill of pleasure to shoot through every boxer in the country. It will virtually mean that the days before the Horton law was repealed are to be once more, when fighters of even ordinary merit drew crowds that paid as well as the assemblages that see championship battles these days.

Tom O'Rourke is still spreading reports that he will bring off 29-round fights at his Tuxedo A. C., at Essington, Pa. Last week he let the O'Toole-Kelly bout go by the board, which was about the only thing he could do in the face of the fact that Gov. Pennypacker of Pennsylvania had ordered the state constabulary to prevent the contest taking place. O'Rourke has come back, however, with a smiling face, and matched "Hock" Keys, the Australian lightweight champion and Ambrose McGarry for a 20-round fight to take place at his club next Wednesday night. The men are to weigh in at 135 pounds at 3 p. m. This would be a fairly good bout. Keys was matched to fight Joe Thomas at Frisco before the earthquake. McGarry is a Gotham fighter who has been fighting creditably for several years. It is doubtful if the bout will take place, however. In spite of this fact, O'Rourke announces that on May 23, Kelly and O'Toole will meet in a 20-round bout at his club, and on May 26, Bob Fitzsimmons and Tommy Burns will be his attraction for the men who are willing to put up to see the latest star in the fighting world go on with the oldest.

GAMES SATURDAY.

Duluth at Fargo.
Houghton at Hancock.
Lake Linden at Calumet.
Grand Forks at Winnipeg. (Two games.)

Fargo, N. D., May 19.—(Special to The Herald.)—Fargo inaugurated the baseball season in the Northern-Copper Country league by winning from Duluth 3 to 2, in a pretty game. The contest was witnessed by 1,000 shivering fans, many of whom were clad in fur coats, winter caps and gloves.

Preceding the game there was the advertised parade, with both teams in tallyhos. Two bands furnished music for the occasion.

At the grounds addresses were made by President Price of the league, and Mayors Johnson of Fargo and Nye of Moorhead. The teams were lined up on each side of the home plate with Umpire Anderson in the center as drill marshal and protected on either side by the captains of the two organizations.

President Price's spiel was in the nature of a welcome to the fans for turning out in such weather and in acting as master of ceremonies in the introduction of the mayors.

Mayor Nye spoke briefly on the advantages of outdoor athletics and particularly of the great national game.

Mayor Johnson praised the ardor of the fans and related that in the recent municipal compaign he had been called on by a delegation of ministers and asked to pledge himself against Sunday baseball. His honor announced that he informed the ministers he believed the national game was clean and wholesome and he saw no objections to Sunday contests, conducted in an orderly manner, and so long as they were, he would not interfere.

His statement caught the fans in great shape and the cheers were enthusiastic.

The ball was handed to Mayor Nye, who threw it to Capt. O'Dea, who made a terrible "muff" and threw to Capt. Stripp, who tossed the sphere to Mayor Johnson. The latter threw the horsehide to Umpire Anderson and called "play ball!"—and the season's contest in Fargo was on.

Despite the extreme cold, both twirlers were in mid-season form. There was a little wildness with Krick, the more unfortunate, but hits were evenly split. The luck of the game was with Fargo when Krick bunched his wide ones in the fourth, forcing in the first run for the locals, and again in the lucky seventh, when Barto let Dolan's hard hit grounder roll through him clear to the center field fence.

Ross starred in the clouting and Donovan and Finnegan divided the fielding honors.

There was nothing doing until the fourth period was reached. Duluth got one man across after Barto walked. He was pushed to second by McCarter's neat sacrifice, went to third on McCormick's out to Rose, and scored on Lovett's timely single.

Fargo knotted the thing up in her part when Krick had a balloon ascension. Rose singled, Dolan walked and both were advanced by Edwards' sacrifice. Then Krick's troubles began. He filled the bases with Fitzgerald and forced in a run with four more wide ones to Donovan. Walter's little one to Livingston resulted in Dolan's death at the plate and the best Finnigan could do was a weak smash to short.

In the fifth Duluth got another man across. Krick fanned and Livingston hit for two. Finnigan booted Grueber's smash and Livingston got to third. O'Dea hit a high one to Rose, who got a stroke of momentary paresis after catching the out and threw to second instead of home, Livingston scoring.

Fargo tied again in the fifth. Mehl led, Stripp walked, Rose made his third hit and Mehl scored on McCormick's fumble. Stripp and Rose started a double steal, but the captain was caught at the plate, Dolan and Edwards dying at first.

In the seventh, the lucky seventh, Duluth had done nothing and Fargo cinched the game. Mehl was an easy out from Krick to O'Dea. Stripp got one in the slats and Dolan concluded to take the game. With three balls and two strikes he drove one on the ground through the umps, the second sack, and Center Fielder Barto, the ball rolling clear to the center field fence. Stripp scored the winning run and Dolan was home a long time before the ball, but the umps thought he cut second and called him out. Lovett was as much to blame as Barto as he had a chance to retire Dolan on a foul, but failed to hold it.

Anderson's umpiring was gilt edged and satisfactory to both teams.

GIANTS WIN AGAIN.

Houghton Defeats Hancock in Slugging Match Marked by Ragged Fielding.

Houghton, Mich., May 19.—The Giants were lucky in yesterday's game, which was a slugging match, marked by ragged fielding. The weather was extremely cold and raw, and the players were stiff and unable to limber up. The grounds were also in bad condition, and fast ball was out of the question.

The feature of the game was a one-handed catch by Hastings of the Houghton team.

Both teams hit freely, Houghton getting fourteen safe drives and Hancock twelve. Hancock's errors were responsible for Houghton's large score.

The score was as follows:

Calumet, Mich., May 19.—Calumet turned the tables on the Lake Linden team here yesterday afternoon, and won the second game of the series by the score of 9 to 7. The weather was very disagreeable, and both teams had a number of errors marked up against them.

Both pitchers were hit freely, and the hits of both teams were bunched in one inning. Calumet's lucky session was the second, when seven runs were scored, and Lake Linden had a look in in the sixth, when six men crossed the plate. The score:

SULLIVAN IS COMING

John L. is Now an Ardent Supporter of Temperance Principles.

John L. Sullivan, ex-pugilistic champion of the world, and claimed by many to be the greatest fighter that ever stepped into a ring, will be in Duluth all next week with his show.

John is now discoursing philosophy and hygiene, and says he is a candidate for the 100-year old club.

He is also carrying a side line of temperance lectures, and says he is stuck fast to the seat of the water wagon.

"I haven't touched a drop of liquor for ten months," he told the St. Paul reporters, "and I never will again, I believe.

"I went the pace for twenty-five years, and I can't see anything to it. If we could get over the effects as easily as we take them on there would be something to it, but it can't be done. There's nothing in drink. It rubs the varnish off faster than anything, and doesn't put anything back in place of it.

"A man's stomach is a wonderful thing, and it can't be abused. Things can be cured, but not when they go too far. I believe consumption can be cured if it is caught in time. It's just like a little tree that starts to decay, but by careful attention can be trained up and made strong again."

Second only to the attraction of Sullivan himself is his manager, Frank Hall.

Mr. Hall is one of the old school of sporting promoters, and pushes a 118-candle power stud in front of him, or at least he did when he last visited Duluth. The piece of glittering glass simply fascinates the beholder, who lapses into day dreams of the value of the article if it were real. He uses it to hypnotize hotel clerks, and when the full power of its wonderful ray strikes the eye of the beholder, it is all off.

Mr. Sullivan and his manager will strike town some time tomorrow, after closing a very successful week at Minneapolis.

Mr. Sullivan's show is billed as an all-star vaudeville performance. He introduces his famous and wonderful monologue, and spars four rounds with "Kid" Cutler. Some other good vaudeville stunts are included in the program, and the show has been playing to capacity houses in the Twin Cities.

THE SMALLEST WATCH.

Philadelphia Telegraph: There are plenty of small watches in the world, and many ladies wear them, with faces no larger than a silver dime, in their bracelets. But Earl W. Eckel, who was found encamped at Eighteenth and Market streets, when that region was first discovered, and has been identified with the neighborhood ever since, has the smallest affair yet. He wears it as a lapel button.

The face of this tiny watch is much smaller than a dime. The back of it, which is about as large as a 5-cent piece, contains the works. It is a splendid little timekeeper, and ticks away the hours without making any fuss about it.

It is, says Earl, the greatest bore discourager in the world. The novelty of it directs attention to it, and no one can impose upon its wearer and forget the flight of time. It stares him in the face and conveys hints that are unmistakable, and which he meekly heeds.

Eckel picked it up in his travels, and has never seen another like it. The little watch was made in Switzerland, and is a remarkably fine piece of work.

MINISTERIAL PRODIGY.

Fred Chadwick, an 11-year-old boy of North Whitefield, Mass., is acquiring some reputation as a pulpit orator. The announcement of his appearance always fills the church, people coming from miles around. The lad talks in vigorous fashion and not at all as one of his years might be expected to speak. His father is a hotel keeper in North Whitefield.

INTERESTED AN INDIAN.

Kansas City Journal: A party of Apache Indians on a visit to Washington visited the senate and listened with stolid interest while Mr. La Follette talked of attempts by corporations to steal Indian coal lands. One of the red men had been imbibing freely, and when the bell rang for executive session he refused to depart, demanding that the pale face talk some more. It took the combined efforts of his friends to remove him.

JOBS HELD BY BOXERS

Before They Sought for Fame in the Prize Ring.

Three of Greatest Pugilists Worked at the Cooper's Trade.

New York, May 19.—Folk who take an interest in the doings of the boxing clans often wonder what the boxers did for a living before they took up pugilism as a profession. A perusal of a list of some of the more prominent boxers will show that they were recruited from the fields ranging from teamsters to bank clerks, and from newsboys to mechanics. In ninety-nine out of every hundred cases it will be found that they were engaged in honest and legitimate employment before they became professional boxers, and the belief held by some that as a rule they were an idle, shiftless class is without foundation. Before he became a professional boxer the world's champion, Jim Jeffries, was a boiler maker in Los Angeles. Ex-Champion, Jim Corbett, was clerk in the Nevada bank, San Francisco; Bob Fitzsimmons had charge of his brother's blacksmith shop in Timaru, New Zealand; Tom Sharkey was a sailor in the United States navy; Kid McCoy was clerk in a dry goods store; Gus Ruhlin worked in a printing house in Akron, Ohio; Philadelphia Jack O'Brien drove a team for his father in winter and worked in a bath house at Atlantic City in summer; Peter Maher was a cooper in a brewery in Dublin, Ireland; Joe Choynski was a candy maker in San Francisco; Frank Craig, the Harlem Coffee Cooler, worked in a restaurant in New York City; Sandy Ferguson was a fisherman; Jimmy Britt was clerk in a store in San Francisco; Battling Nelson was a waiter in a restaurant in Hot Springs; Jack Bonner was a coal miner in Schuylkill county, Penn.; Dick O'Brien was a bartender; Jim Jeffords was a miner; Billy Vernon was a brickmaker in Haverstraw, N. Y.; Young Peter Jackson was a window cleaner; Joe Gans worked in a fish market in Baltimore; Kid Sullivan worked in a billiard hall in Washington, D. C.; Leslie Pierce was a boat builder in Camden, N. J.; ex-Champion Kid Lavigne was a cooper in Saginaw, Mich.; Billy Lavigne, his brother, owned a Turkish bath in the same town; Frank Gerrard was a letter carrier in Chicago; Jerome Quigley was a plumber in Philadelphia; Joe Walcott worked in a billiard hall in Boston and did a little wrestling as a side issue; George Cole, the Trenton tea warmer, was a coachman; the twins, Jack and Mike Sullivan drove teams for their father in Boston; Jack Munroe, who created a sensation about three years ago by taking a handicap decision from Jim Jeffries at Butte City in four rounds, was a miner in Montana before he boxed the champion; Mysterious Billy Smith was a teamster; Spike Sullivan drove a team in Boston. Of the four Gardner brothers, George was a shoemaker, Jimmy a bookbinder, Billy a shoemaker, while the youngest, Paddy, held a government position in Washington; Owen Ziegler was a bricklayer in Philadelphia; "Bull" McCarthy was a brickmaker in the same city; Jack Blackburn, the colored light weight, was a bootblack; Walter Campbell was a sprint runner, and Horace Leeds worked on a dredging boat. Peter Jackson, the giant black, who went for fifteen years without meeting defeat, was a stevedore; Frank Erne, the ex-champion light weight, worked around the newspaper offices in Buffalo when he was a boy, and later becoming boxing instructor in the Y. M. C. A. gymnasium; ex-Champions Jack McAuliffe and Jack Dempsey worked in the same cooper shop in Brooklyn, and were life-long friends; Charlie McKeever was a cooper in Bridgeport, Penn., in his early days; Paddy Slavin was a steamship hand, and shipped from Sidney, Australia; Jimmy Handler worked in a brewery in Newark, N. J., and Tommy Ryan held a minor position in a railroad office in Syracuse.

* * *

Among the little fellows, ex-Champion George Dixon worked in a photograph gallery in Boston before he became a pugilist. His great rival, Terry McGovern, sold newspapers in Brooklyn; Dave Sullivan drove a team in Boston; Young Corbett was a clerk in a store in Denver; Kid Goodman was a newsboy in Boston; Young Erne was a glassblower in Philadelphia; Aurelia Herrera, the Mexican, worked in a poolroom in Bakersfield, Cal.; Rouse O'Brien was a machinist's helper in Boston; Eddy Santry worked in a gents' furnishing goods store in Chicago; Eddie Hanlon started boxing as a boy when under 17 years of age; Unk Russell was a stevedore; Jimmy Walsh was a clerk in a Boston bank; Tim Callahan was a newsboy in Philadelphia; Marty McCue was a waiter in a New York cafe; Gus Gardner worked in a gymnasium in Philadelphia; Adam Ryan was employed in a wholesale provision house in Philadelphia, and George McFadden was janitor in a New York apartment house. Of the English contingent, "Spike" Robson, now in this country, was clerk in a London store; Joe Bowker was a paper boy; Jabez White was a bank clerk in London; Jack Palmer, a coal miner; Ted Pritchard was a farm hand; George Crisp was a coal miner in Newcastle-in-Tyne; Alf Greenfield kept a public house in Birmingham; Jem Carney, the famous English lightweight, worked on a farm; Billy Plimmer was employed in a bottle works; Pedlar Palmer was a costermonger, and Charlie Mitchell was a layer of odds. While the above is only a partial list, limited space forbidding a more exhaustive review, it will give a pretty fair idea of how the boys behind the punch earned a living before the pugilistic bee began to do aerial stunts in their head.

HAD THREE DEAD HEATS

Race Was a Record in This or Any Other Country.

New York, May 12.—The recent long shots pulled off at Pimlico by the Marylander, Mart Jordan, recall that turfman's connection with one of the most celebrated races of the last forty years. At Prospect Park, L. I., in 1878, the horse Mart Jordan named after the Baltimorean ran a dead heat with Milton Sanford's Bingaman, and before the race was decided these two horses ran two more dead heats, three in all. At the fourth essay Bingaman was in a head drive by a neck.

When Daniel J. Crause years afterward owner of some noted horses, brought East in the last '70s a colt called John Boulger, by Revolver-Hattie C., few paid much attention to the 3-year-old. But he won a race or two for all that; then Crause changed his name to Mart Jordan, after the Maryland turfman. The change of name proved a mascot to the colt, for he won at Jerome and Saratoga after that.

Along in September, 1878, a race meeting of six days was got up at Prospect Park trotting track, since then the famous Gravesend racecourse of the Brooklyn Jockey club. Many of the best stables were at the meeting, such as the Belmonts, Lorillards, Sanfords, McDaniels, etc. And the week's racing received a large public patronage.

On the third day of that meeting a dash of 1⅝ miles brought out a fair field of six horses. They were Daly's Willie D., Lorillard's Rambler, Chamberlain's Hoaxer, Donorue's Spindrift, Crause's Mart Jordan and Sanford's Bingaman. Bingaman was the favorite, with Willie D. and Spindrift next. Mart Jordan had only 85 pounds to carry and was fourth choice.

Bingaman, at 114 pounds, was ridden by the then premier jockey, William Hayward, who had only recently come from England, and was riding with great success. He was an elegantly bred horse, a big chestnut, by Asteroid-Bay Leaf (dam of Preakness, Bayflower, Baywater, etc.). Bingaman has that year raced at New Orleans and in the Western circuit with great success.

Mart Jordan was ridden by the afterward famous jockey, Lloyd Hughes, called from his tow-colored hair, Whitey Hughes. He afterward rode Sensation, Monitor, Freida and all of George Lorillard's best horses. In this race, at 85 pounds, Hughes showed to such great advantage as to stamp a coming rider.

In the race Mart Jordan was taken right to the front, and, making the most of his light weight, almost made a runaway race of it. But Bingaman, under Hayward's strong effort at the finish, just got up in the last stride, and the official verdict was a dead heat, with Spindrift third.

Although Bingaman had come from behind in the dead heat and was cooling out well in the twenty-five minutes given between heats, his trainer sent word to the Ohio party that he was willing to divide the purse and bets and not subject the two horses to a second trial over so long a route. The 29 pounds' weight between the two horses looked a big handicap for the old horse.

But the Ohio people had their dander up, and saw good running in prospect, and sent back word that they did not want to divide and would run the race again. In the betting after the first heat Mart Jordan sold for $500, Bingaman $100 in the auction. Both horses cooled off well, and when called up for the runoff neither seemed any the worse for his previous efforts.

This time waiting tactics were pursued by each. The first mile was very slow, run in 1:58, but at the turn on the last sprint, Hughes suddenly stole away with the colt Jordan had opened up a gap of four lengths. This set Hayward to work on the old horse, who began closing so gradually that it looked as if he would never get up to the colt.

At the last furlong Jordan led two lengths and it looked as if he would steal Bingaman off. But Hayward's superior strength told, and inch by inch he forced Bingaman up to the colt. Then Hughes on the latter went to the whip, but while the colt answered game as a pebble, Hayward with a regular Chifney rush, reached the colt twenty yards from the wire and got Bingaman's nose in front. But Jordan, with a last game effort, got on even terms again and they passed the judges with their heads on the same mod. The officials could not separate them and a second dead heat was sung up.

Cheer after cheer greeted the two equine gladiators as they came back to weigh and the horses were closely examined. But this time both parties were anxious to have another trial and as there was no request for a divide the officials advised a second run off. Now Bingaman was the choice of $300, Jordan $200, it being argued that the young horse must succumb at the next trial to his older and tougher antagonist.

But these critics did not know the tough, little one-year-old from Chilcotae. That Jordan was a game cock in every sense of the word and so well did he show at the post for the third trial full of vim and ambition that many backers of Bingaman went and bought a pool or two on the colt to make themselves safe.

This time the colt's people decided to let their opponents set the pace which Bingaman did at a somewhat faster gait than in the second heat. For a mile and a quarter it was nose and tail the old one and the young one. Then Jordan with a rush drew up to the old horse and showed half a length in front. But Hayward, who had the rails, could not see it that way, and with a jab of the spur Bingaman drew up to the colt's neck and the two ran lapped into the homestretch.

Hammer and tongs they had it up the straight with 5,000 people almost rending the skies with their shouts of encouragement. At the furlong pole it looked like Jordan. At the sixteenth pole Bingaman had his head in front. Fifty yards from home they were in dead even terms. And stride for stride and nod for nod they passed the wire neither being able to get away from the other to any perceptible extent.

Another dead heat was hung up amid great cheering and now most people expected to see the parties interested get together and agree to divide the purse and bets. But in those days of heat races horses were expected to stand some pretty strenuous trials of endurance.

The Ohio party, however, did send word to the Bingaman people that they would agree to a divide, but now those behind the old horse, after consulting their jockey, decided to stand pat and would not listen to the offer of the Western folks.

As for the spectators, they hardly knew which horse to back in the speculation after the third dead heat. The first pools saw the two horses sell at $100 each. Then the Bingaman money grew stronger and that horse closed the choice at $500 to $350 for Mart Jordan. Both parties decided this time to run at each other from the start, at which game it was thought the old horse would wear out the colt.

At drum tap the two horses went away lapped, and with Jordan a neck in front, they ran the first miles in 1:50, the colt half a length in front. On the back stretch Bingaman drew up to the colt's shoulder and lay there round the lower turn and into the homestretch. The race home was again so close to the last furlong that a fourth dead heat looked probable, but Hayward on Bingaman let out a last link at the sixteenth pole and got his horse's neck in front.

Try as he might, the colt could not get on terms again and Bingaman beat him home by a neck in a drive. Thus ended a race never equaled in its unprecedented record of three dead heats by the same two horses in this or any other country.

In England, in 1855, the American bred mare, Prioress, and the two English horses, El Hakim and Queen Bess, ran a triple dead heat for the Cambridgeshire Handicap at Newmarket, with twenty-two others behind them. In the runoff, Richard Ten Broeck's mare, Prioress, proved the winner. But the three dead heats between Mart Jordan and Bingaman at Prospect Park are a record in the world's racing annals.

BIG PLAYERS GAME LOSERS.

Most of Them Go Broke With Remarkable Sang Froid and Commence Over Again.

"The lamentations of a German butcher in one of the markets, who put a bet on my old horse, Paul Clifford, on one of those days at the recent Benning meeting when Paul forgot to bring the kale home caused a lot of fun to the people who overheard the sad-souled Teuton," said John Pankle, the Washington owner of thoroughbreds, at Baltimore a couple of days ago, according to the Washington Star.

"The German butcher was standing close to me, at the end of the stand, on that day. When the horses finished I noticed that he ground the huge knuckles of his right hand into his right eye and began to moan gutterally. Then he pulled a big bandanna from his coat pocket and started in to weep bitterly.

"'I blay do' Baul Clifford mit swancy-flm tollar, all vat I maig in a veeg out of my mead shob, und he ged pead a plock, no?' he said, and then he rocked to and fro and blubbered.

"'Aw, give him a cookie,' the bunch who were listening to his lamentations jeered at him, but he was past feeling the sting of any jeering, and went right on weeping disconsolately.

"That was the first case of the weeps that I'd seen on a race track in a dog's age, and the incident started me to thinking how gamely most big players of the horses take their losses when the glib wallops come their way.

"I happened to be present at the breaking of a Kentuckian who had owned a half interest in one of the finest thoroughbred farms in the Blue Grass country, and had for several years raced a big string of good horses of his own and his partner's breeding. He was too keen to bet on his horses, though, and that was what spiked him, as it spikes all of 'em in time.

"First, he had to sell out his interest in the thoroughbred farms to his conservative, non-betting partner. Then all of the horses of the string reverted in the same direction, and finally he got to playing the horses from the ground with a few thousands that he had saved from the wreck.

On the day that the great but erratic May Hempstead was beaten by Rush, when May was 1 to 8 in the betting, my friend the Kentuckian had his whole fagot, a pat $8,000, on the May girl. He thought that Miss Hempstead would just waltz home.

"I was leaning on the fence alongside of him when Rush cantered home, kicking mud in May Hempstead's reproachful eyes. I knew that he was all in financially and I suppose that I had a considerable sized frog of sympathy in my throat for him.

"'Oh, well,' I said to him, with a grin that I felt looked like something enameled, 'the peach blossoms are out, anyhow, and there'll be fruit pretty soon for the asking.'

"He looked perfectly perky and cheerful, and it wasn't any up-stage imitation work, either, with him. He pulled three $20 gold pieces from his pocket and studied them humorously.

"'Well, I know what I'm going to do,' he said to me, as he jingled the gold coins. 'I'm going to buy a couple of nanny goats and sell the milk to invalids. I've got to be in the stock raising business in some old way.'

"There wasn't any slow music business of that kind of a finish because he wasn't any slow music kind of man, and two years later his colors were flashing again on the Southern tracks, with his own good horses to carry the boys wearing them. You can't keep a beaver up a tree, you see.

"Eddie McAvoy, the runt of a lad from Elkhart, Ind., who, when he was something under 18, ran a beanbag up to $18,000 at the Hawthorne track in Chicago in 1897, went broke as gamely as any trick I ever saw for his age, or any other age, as far as that's concerned.

"Eddie began on the Hawthorne track as a newsboy and gum seller, and one day he put over a 200-to-1 shot with a four-bit piece that he had deposited with a handbook man outside the gate. Then Eddie spiralled right along to the cone without a mistake, as they say in Joplin. He didn't take anybody's picks, tips, handicaps or suggestions, but just clung unto the running animals doped out and figured as winners by one E. McEvoy, Esq. The result was that just three weeks after he'd slid his 200-to-1 thing over he's combed the pile up to $18,000.

Then, of course, his minute to make the mistake heaved along, as it nearly always does. He thought that Macy was a good horse. Macy may have been a good horse in spots, but he was a polka-dotter, and the spots were hard to pick. Eddie McEvoy one day, put his whole $18,000 on Macy to beat the great old mare Imp, and Macy felt before that race was over as if the lady mare had just gone away and hid from him out of pure hide-and-seek deviltment.

"I was standing close to Eddie McAvoy when Macy failed to connect. The quiet youngster so pat reflectively at the grass, and then he trotted over to the stand of the boss gum man.

"'Gimme a couple o' boxes o' gum on tick,' said Eddie to the boss gum man, and then he began to circulate among the throngs, politely inviting them to purchase pepsin gum from him at the uniform rate of five cents the package. I guess that wasn't the spirit of the men who are now going to rebuild San Francisco!

"Then I well remember the curious case of a man who only thought he was broke—Frank Boland, the Montana plunger. Boland was broke a good many times during his career against the faro bank and the horses, but he was always so unctuous about it that you'd have thought that he really enjoyed going broke, and he wasn't just throwing on the dog in the matter, either.

"This time, when he thought he got a big bump at St. Louis, was a sure-enough entertaining incident. Frank had started in at the fair grounds track in St. Louis with a $100,000 wad that he'd hoed out of the Hot Springs poolrooms during the winter.

"But the fair grounds' game whanged him good. He got the crosscut and the whipsaw from the running of the Inaugural handicap, and every time for the high thousands—Boland didn't know how to spell the word 'piker.' The boys on the high chairs had Boland rocking long before the meeting began to draw to a close but Frank went right ahead with the grin that couldn't be erased. One day the bookies noticed that Boland wasn't playing 'em at all, and they joshed him about it. He didn't play on the next day, either, nor for the next five days. He just strolled around with his hands in his pockets and permitted the joshing bookmakers to offer him the loan of a chew of tobacco or the price of a bottle of pop. On the sixth day Mr. Boland became suddenly busy. There was a good old campaigner in one of the races named Siva, and Siva was an even-money thing. Boland had twenty $1,000 bills as the remainder of his package, and he's been waiting for the race and for Siva. He traipsed around the ring and got the even-money price against Siva for $20,000. Then he leaned against a stanchion, shucked peanuts and watched the race. Siva ran second. The bookies crowded around Boland with hoarse hoots of merriment—his personality made him a favorite all over the West—but he broke through the gibbering cordon and raced like a deer for the gate. There happened to be a truck gardener's cart passing just as Boland got outside.

"'How about a ride into town, mate?' Boland said to the driver, and when the startled driver of the truck cart, noticing Boland's fine raiment, nodded, Frank jumped into the cart and took a seat alongside the driver. The scene was visible from the back of the grand stand and a roar went up from the men in the stand who were Boland's friends.

"'Hey, wait a few minutes, Frank,' one of them yelled to the Montana plunger, 'and I'll carry you to town in my trap.'

"'I've done been trapped,' Boland called back, and then the truck cart, piled high with cabbages and things, turned a corner, with Boland in good-natured and interested conversation with the driver.

"Boland didn't find out till he reached a St. Louis ticker that instead of being broke, he was worth just $40,000, for the horse that beat Siva—a thing called Cangalion—was disqualified on account of the rider's rough riding and Boland's pick was placed first. He got back at the books from then on and chased some of them as far as the Arkansus river and beyond."

AITKIN

Aitkin, May 19.—(Special to The Herald.)—Mrs. Emma L. Clarke was found dead in the cellar of her house in this village last Tuesday noon, her body lying in about a foot of water. She had been despondent for some time and it is supposed she committed suicide. Mrs. Clarke was a widow, her husband having been killed about eight years ago. She was a useful and highly respected lady and had many friends. She leaves a daughter and a son. The funeral was held Thursday afternoon.

At a special meeting of the Commercial club Monday it was decided to take definite action toward securing an appropriation from congress to construct a cut-off canal to relieve the flow of water around the big bend in the Mississippi river during high water. The purpose being to handle the large volume of water through the low lands without its overflowing the banks and flooding a large tract of valuable meadow and farm land. President Hamilton was authorized to appoint a committee to secure the cooperation of the Duluth, Minneapolis and St. Paul interests in the management of the river and reservoir.

The county commissioners will meet next Tuesday to act on ditch and school district petitions and to transact general business.

District court adjourned Wednesday, having cleaned up the calendar with the exception of two cases to be continued. The most important case was probably that of Anna Carrigan vs. The Mississippi Transportation company, being a suit for $5,000 for the death of her husband, James Carrigan, alleged to have been drowned by falling off the steamer Irene. It could not be shown that he was drowned from the boat and the case was dismissed by the court. Another important case was that of J. N. Marr vs. The Village of Aitkin, to settle a survey affecting the corner of the Marr residence property. The decision was given in favor of the plaintiff. Aside from this particular lot, a great deal of other property is affected, and further litigation may arise. The trial has shown some very bad surveying in the original townsite, in which the most valuable property is located.

Oscar Lundmark of the town of Glory was severely injured in a runaway while driving with his little daughter. The child was unhurt.

The large steamer Queen Anne on Mille Lacs lake is in commission for the season and is gathering up logs on that body of water. It will do an excursion business later in the season.

J. J. Snyder of Grayling, while standing on the station platform Wednesday forenoon, was struck by the crane on the mail car of the westbound passenger and received such dangerous injuries about the head that it is feared he will not recover. He was taken to the Northern Pacific hospital at Brainerd.

One Hundred Schoolboy Athletes Competing for Gold Medal.

Pennant Will be Given School Winning Most Points.

More than 100 entries have been secured for the third annual interscholastic track meat, which is being held this afternoon at the Driving park.

Nearly every school in the city is represented in at least some of the events, and the larger schools are represented in all of the events.

A keen spirit of rivalry has sprung up among the schools, and the competition for the pennant will be much closer than it has been in either of the two previous meets. Five points are given for a first place in each event, three for the second, and one for the third, and the school winning the greatest number of points will be entitled to the possession of the pennant for one year.

In addition to the pennant, a handsome gold medal will be given to the boy winning the largest number of points individually, and a silver medal as second prize.

In addition to the medals, badges will be given the winners in each event.

The winning of the gold medal is an honor which anybody might well be proud of. The winner must competo with 100 of the best boy athletes in the city and prove his supremacy in all kinds of field and track competitions.

The list of events is a long one, and the program was due to begin at 2:15, in order that they may all be run off before dark. Following are the events, with the number of entries in each:

BOOKMAKER FORGOT THE JUDGES.

One Big Race Was Primed, But the Plot Was Discovered in the Nick of Time.

Sweet Charity covered a multitude of foibles on a recent Sunday at Suburban Park, where is situated in the parish of Jefferson, across from New Orleans, and seems to be outside the jurisdiction of the governor of Louisiana, says the Chicago Tribune.

A gentleman who had his start in the racing business by acting as the innocent person in a first-past-the-post frame up and builded better than he knew to the extent of becoming one of the biggest bookmakers on the Western turf and one of the most prominent breeders in Illinois, as well as owner of one of the best racing stables—albeit he cannot spell the name of any horse he owns—took on a bit of Sunday diversion about a month ago and put on a book at Suburban Park.

The price of putting on this book was $100 for the afternoon, and he figured his expense for clerk hire and such as $60 more. Sweet Charity had raced himself into popularity with the Sunday afternoon mob that frequents Suburban Park. It was expected that all the money would be bet on her that afternoon. The interest of the star operator in question was purely negative. He had been informed in the morning that the owner of Sweet Charity could be approached from the proper angel and that the rider of Sweet Charity was docile enough to do what he was bidden to do.

Clerks out for a holiday, blacksmiths, bricklayers and cotton screwers, longshoremen and the rest were willing to accept any price that was offered about Sweet Charity. The market money of the frugal housewives of Algiers had been saved up to bet on Sweet Charity at any price the bookmakers might offer. The conservative bunch in the betting ring opened Sweet Charity at 3 to 5, but the man with the large bank roll immediately hunched it at 4 to 5. Thereupon he was hailed as a benefactor to mankind.

One cannot get much for $2 on a 4-to-5 shot. The large operator realized this and went to even money. There was a shower of two-spots that embarrassed the sheet writer in the book. But he was not dealing that kind of a game. He wanted the large bills that are yellow on the back, and you could not blame him as he had one of the horse's hoofs in the box. He tapped a stream of coarse notes that waited on further inducement by again hunching the price to 6 to 5. The small fry of fellow workers followed him timidly at first, but afterward boldly. In less time than it takes an ordinary horse to go twice around a half-mile track the price on Sweet Charity was 5 to 1, and the large bookmaker was still taking it. From 5 to 1 it went to 10 to 1. The sheet on which his bets were recorded was freckled with bets on Sweet Charity. If the price on the slats did not suit the customer it was bent in accordance to his wishes.

About the time that the presiding judge got ready to ring his bell, all the money in the betting ring was centered in the tin box of the operator of the big store. It got abroad among the professional element quite naturally that Sweet Charity would begin at home and finish anywhere—in other words, that she had been consigned to Slab No. 6 in the morgue. The small fry among the eight bookmakers who had paid the privilege were anxious to get a little piece of the soft money at up to 20 to 1.

Now it happened that the paddock judge, who took his duties seriously, detected something wrong in the equipment of Sweet Charity, and he tore to the judge's stand to inform the powers that were that Sweet Charity evidently was not meant. The judges were not in with the play. This may strike the casual observer as extraordinary. The starter was called into consultation, and he was told by the judges that Sweet Charity should get all that was coming to her from the start.

The race was at one mile, which means twice around the half mile Jericho. It may be considered superfluous to explain this, but half-mile tracks are not always what they seem. The starter, who hails from Kentucky, and has a high sense of his sporting honor, took a slant on the unusual equipment on Sweet Charity as she came before him, and hailed the jockey.

"What are your instructions, suh?" he asked.

"Oh, just to do the best I can."

"Well, I tell you. Take that horse back to the paddock, have them there bandages removed, and tell the clerk of the scales that I say to pick out some other boy to ride this here horse."

The order was obeyed. Immediately from 20 to 1 the price against Sweet Charity dropped to 2 to 5. When the paddock judge removed the bandages he found that they had been bound so tight as to stop the circulation of the blood, and that the boots she wore on her hind feet were filled with lead foil. The distinguished bookmaker, who thought he was trafficking in the dead, made a frantic effort to sell the goods he had bought at 10 to 1 to any one at any price he could get for them, but there were no takers.

The race was started, and Sweet Charity made the first circle of the track before the others got fairly under way. She won standing on her hind legs.

And ever since the big bookmaker has been declaring that Sunday racing is a menace to the honesty of the turf.

WORK ON WRECK OF THE STEAMER MATAAFA.

The reproduction of a photograph given here is taken of the actual work being done on the steamer Mataafa, now lying on the Duluth beach. The picture was taken from the forward part of the ship and shows the pumping and other work going on at the stern, which is the part that seems to be the most baffling for Capt. Reid and his crew.

little stories disclosing the humorous side of the situation begin to be heard. one of the most amusing of these comes from Chicago, where "Mexicanna," the comic opera by Robert Smith, Clara Driscoll and Raymond Hubbell, is playing at the Garrick theater. When news of the horror reached the Windy City, people charitably inclined immediately began sending supplies to California. The manager of "Mexicanna" placed on the call-board a notice to the effect that clothing which the members of the company could spare would be gratefully received and passed on to the relief committee. The spirit of benevolence spread its wings over the organization, every person in which contributed his or her mite to the big box being prepared.

Virginia Blake, one of the chorus girls, appeared with a small parcel neatly tied together. The package seemed exceedingly soft to the touch of San Gerson, manager of the Garrick theater, who was superintending the packing of the box. He turned to the donor. "Miss Blake," he said, "this parcel is rather light. Does it contain wearing apparel?"

"Certainly," returned Miss Blake. "It contains two pairs of black and three pairs of red silk tights."

The man who gets so exvited at a play that he forgets that the incidents depicted are not actually occurring is a rarity in sophisticated New York. He cropped up recently, however, at the Princess theater, where Harry Woodruff is appearing in "Brown of Harvard." The dramatic incident of this piece is a boat race which takes place off stage and in which an American crew defeats an English one. At the end of this act last Saturday evening, a spectator whose appearance proclaimed him a Londoner sprang to his feet in great excitement. "I don't believe you beat us," he cried. "I don't believe it! I am from Mississippi."

Dramatic companies do not take encores, and so they were unable to "show him."

Considering the amount of inventive genius that is required in the writing of a modern play, it is remarkable how little of the same quality is shown in devising titles for these works. Nearly every good name that has been seen on a billboard in the past four or five seasons has been taken from a novel, as in the case of Virginia Harned's comedy, "The Girl in Waiting." Literary men seem much more prolific in this respect than dramatists.

If imitation is the sincerest flattery, every playwright is sincerely flattered. Henry Arthur Jones wrote "The Manoeuvers of Jane;" since when there has been the greatest possible number of manuscripts with captions which hinge on some proposition. We have had "The Whitewashing of Julia," "The Superstitions of Sue," "The Stubbornness of Geraldine," and "Brown of Harvard." It will be observed that very little thought is required in getting up good sounding titles of this sort. Alliteration seems to be the principal desideratum. One might sit down offhand and compose an endless line of such names as "The Nerve of Norman," "The Awakening of Archibald," or "The Weakening of Winnifred."

The production of "Top-o'-My-Thumb" last season was followed by other hyphenated cognomens, including "Alice-Sit-by-the-Fire," and "All-of-a-Sudden-Peggy." This year we have had a deluge of paradoxes in the form of "The Folly of the Wise," and "The Strength of the Weak." These sound ingenious, and yet it is astonishing how easily they may be hit upon. One might suggest fifty of the kind, beginning with "The Crimes of the Innocent," "The Youth of the Aged," and "The Brightness of the Dark." One beauty of these titles is that they work equally well either way. One might say "The Strength of the Weak" or "The Weakness of the Strong." A good, forceful title like "The Girl With the Green Eyes" or "How He Lied to Her Husband" is worth a score of them.

If, however, play titles are alike, what shall be said of the names of musical comedies? For ten years there have been few of these without the word "girl." We have had "The Casino Girl," "The Chorus Girl, "The Telephone Girl," "The Circus Girl," "The Shop Girl," and a hundred others. One of the few really good comic opera titles was devised by the late Frederic Ranken, who called the book which he wrote for DeWolf Hopper by the name "Happyland." This title is not only short and catchy, but it has the advantage of creating the impression of mirth and enjoyment. The great success which Mr. Hopper has enjoyed this season may be attributed in a large degree to the caption of his vehicle. The appearance of "Happyland" was followed almost immediately by the appearance of "Fairyland," "Tomorrowland," "Loveland" and "The Forbidden Land." Recently it has been announced that a great many summer parks are to be called "Happyland."

Wilton Lackaye has finally reached the point where his long deferred dramatic version of "Les Miserables" was produced this week in Waterbury, Conn. The Lackaye version is to be known as "The Law and the Man." It is arranged in five acts and a prologue and follows the vital points in Victor Hugo's great novel. Mr. Lackaye will be seen in the powerful role of Jean Valjean. The fact that he has been studying this character for years and is looked upon as the one actor in America who can do justice to the part made the initial performance. The play opens at an inn on the outskirts of Paris, where Fantine and her gay associates are dining. It is the anniversary of the birth of Cosette, Fantine's daughter. Valjean is introduced in the following scene, which changes to the residence of the Bishop Bienvenue and ends with Valjean's theft of the Bishops silver plate and his escape through the kindness of that prelate.

The first act shifts to the city of Meme, where Valjean has become the mayor and is known as M. Madeleine. The trial of the alleged Valjean, the approaching death of Fantine and the declination of M. Madeleine that he is the real culprit form the dramatic essentials of this act. Then follows through the immediate acts the escape of Valjean from Javert, in the hospital; scenes at the inn of the Thenadiers, the engagement of Marius and Cosette, the great barricade in the streets of Paris, where Marius is wounded and carried through the sewer by Valjean, which is made the crowning damatic element of the entire play. The last act discloses the wedding of Cosette and Marius and the death of Valjean.

Manager W. A. Brady has made a great production of the play for Mr. Mackaye and a strong company has been engaged to support the star in this great undertaking.

Henry B. Harris, in pursuance of his intention to assemble a noted cast for the production of Charles Klein's new play has engaged Herbert Kelcey and Effie Shannon. Negotiations are pending with other noted players for important roles in the play which will be seen at the Hudson theater next season.

MARGARET ANGLIN'S RISE

An Actress Who Has Fulfilled Her Promise---The Old Fashioned "Emotional Actress" Humanized, Modulated and Refined.

Not so many years ago, says the Boston Transcript, when "East Lynne" and "Camille" were widely regarded as the last word in plays and Clara Morris had not yet forsaken the stage for the lecture platform and the magazines, there used to be a "female person" rampant on our stage known as the Emotional Actress. It was her plesant prerogative to make people cry. When the curtain rose on the first act a still, small voice said, "All ye who have tears, prepare to shed them now." When the Emotional Actress entered, there was a burst of applause and a wave of sympathy. She was, in the play, always a poor, persecuted thing, abominally abused by all the other stage characters. To be sure, what she had done would not in real life have been thought especially dreadful, and that is why the audience sympathized. It never occurred to them that it was ridiculous that she should be treated on the stage in quite another fashion to that of real life.

Little consistencies like that never troubled the theater-goers of thirty, forty and fifty years tendes like that never troubled the theatergoers of thirty, forty and fifty years ago. They sank back in the assurance that the Emotional Actress had a clean handkerchief, while they were similarly provided, and enjoyed the luxury of easy tears. Of course, the Emotional Actress exhibited rage and defiance and numerous other passions, and other characters made the audience laugh, too. But the main thing was the tear-tapping; the Emotional Actress must suffer and make them cry, or the evening was wasted.

Today this is all different—or at least, we flatter ourselves that it is different. The Emotional Actress, like ping-pong and crinoline, is a fashion of the past. Of course, modern audiences are keen to detect any theatricalism in plays, and to resent it, to know at once when the folk on the stage are not behaving in a life-like manner, and to scoff. Of course, "up-to-date" audiences do not want to cry. Fidelity to life, to the emotions of the human heart viewed in a hard, white Darwinian light—that is the modern drama. It is no place for the Emotional Actress who moved our mothers to gentle sobs and choked the throats of our kindly but ministerial fathers. She did her part while she lived; she scattered the sunshine of perhaps unthinking, but certainly sympathetic, tears. Peace to her ashes!

Nevertheless theatrical ashes have a queer trick of smouldering until the right actress comes along to set a spark to them. There were signs as long ago as Margaret Anglin was playing in "Mrs. Dane's Defense" that she was the actress who could set them in flame again and warm audiences with them. Then she disappeared from us in the East. She had offended someone that sat in the seats of the mighty in the theatrical world as it then was, and she had to take refuge in stock companies in the Far West and in rather unfortunate starring ventures of her own. Meanwhile she was ripening and disciplining her talents; her opportunity came to prove them when she returned to New York last September to act in "Zira." It is an old-fashioned piece, as Miss Anglin herself once called it, dressed up in modern garb—no other, indeed, than Wilkie Collins' "New Magdalen," with the scene shifted to the Boer war in South Africa and to a social settlement in London. The play is an acting machine, and the old-fashioned emotional actress would have revelled in it. Perhaps Miss Anglin revels in it too, in her way. "I'm a poor persecuted person in 'Zira,'" she said, deprecatingly, last autumn in a talk in New York. "I don't deserve what I get. Out in the audience they feel toward that other woman much as I imagine men feel toward the big bully who is pounding the little fellow in a fist fight. They are for me. 'If you hadn't checked her, I should,' said a spectator to me the other day. They are ready to cry when I cry. They forget—if they ever remarked it—the falsity of the original basis of the situation; the immediate situation before their eyes is all that counts. And they enjoy that situation; they enjoy crying. They are quite as ready, I believe, as they ever were, to welcome an emotional actress.

"I set out to be a comedienne, via the soubrette route," Miss Anglin went on. "Then I played Mrs. Dane, and my doom was sealed. I beg you, don't blame me. Kismet! Still, I don't mind saying that I have no great horror of being considered an emotional actress, with a little 'e' and a little 'e.' The chief trouble with the old-time Emotional Actress was that she was eternally lugubrious; there was always a set in her voice; she portrayed females in a constant and abnormal state of nerves and persecution; she never climbed off the emotional rack; the 'East Lynnes,' and 'Fedoras,' and 'Camilles' fed her with plays which were built in this idea. She wallowed in tears. She was a monument to crude excess that has defeated its own end and become tiresome and disgusting.

"But, supposing—it may sound fantastic—but supposing somebody should write a play in which the heroine starts out in a normal nervous condition, lives among normal people and normal events, is on almost as happy as most of us are in real life, and gradually, naturally, is precipitated into situation where her state is pitiful, where her emotions are aroused, where the sympathy of an audience goes out to her, without any reservations; supposing all this to happen; then would not the actress playing the part be glad of the power to bring tears, to inspire pity, to dampen handkerchiefs? Wouldn't she accept, without shame, the term emotional actress? I would, anyhow. Some day I hope to get such a play. You know we are all emotional actresses, if we are any actresses at all. For a play that is 'any good' must appeal to the emotions. It's only a difference in style after all. Styles change. Hearts don't.

And the virtue of Miss Anglin's acting as Hester Srent inEVELYN SHERDLUC as Hester Trent in "Zira" is that she has changed the style of the old emotional actresses. The moods and the passions through which they ranted and writhed she expresses humanly in the terms of life itself. She refines, she modulates, she tempers, she prepares. Her audiences do not sit by and watch an histrionic spectacle of emotional gymnastics. She leads them with her into the feelings that are swaying the character until they receive them as their own. Her passionate and eloquent sincerity transfigures all that it touches. It happened to be the good fortune of the Transcript's reviewer to see that first performance in New York eight months ago, when an audience that had come doubtingly and for a while watched coldly, yielded completely and broke, as an American audience so seldom does, into an applause of cheers. There seems no reason why he should not repeat now what he wrote of it at the time in another newspaper. If it will commend Miss Anglin to her audiences here, so much the better:

"Last night for the first time in a season that has begun with exceptional triviality, the art of acting came into its own. It expressed large and sharp emotions and seized and stirred those that looked and listened—stirred them so that at the first pause they burst into applause that was half nervous relief. Rarely has such applause come in our theaters except for the great actresses of the continent. It was acting, moreover, that expressed these emotions humanly. It had the necessary resources of the theater at its command. It used them with elastic force and keen fineness. Intelligence and experience controlled it. The intangible thing we called temperament warmed and fired it.

"Above all, it had the vitality that carried it living across the footlights into the minds and feelings of the spectators. It had as well the truth to life, stripped and quivering in moments of emotional crisis, that made it irresistible. Three or four years ago Margaret Angelin left us with one of the rarest promises in an English-speaking player—the promise of an actress that could express and rarify large and deep emotions. In the interval, so far as her acting went last night, she has escaped every pitfall, ripened every power. It was the beginning—and more—of fulfilment that she revealed. To many in the audience it was like a discovery. All the cooling of the night and the reflection of the morning do not lessen the power and poignancy, the truth and the humanity with which Miss Anglin acted the scene that makes the play—a scene that passes from frenzied pleadings for some show of respite and mercy to hard and reckless defiance. She seized every one of its emotions. Her intelligence, her insight, her feeling, went straight, firm and clear to them. She gave them the body and the weight of truth, the light of sincerity. She made them pierce. She made them transport. And they pierced the more keenly, they moved the more deeply because she was expressing them in the terms of life itself. There was no tangible thought of technical mastery, or even of illusion. There were only the emotions alive before you, true before you, and, therefore, irresistible."

HOW WEBER CHORUS GIRLS

Played at Keeping Store in New York and Raised Money for the San Francisco Sufferers.

New York, May 12.—It takes an earthquake to make the Weber chorus girls get up early, but once up there is none of the cold gray dawn air about them and they are wide awake. Many a Johnny found this out to his sorrow when he wandered into the bazar opened for the San Francisco sufferers.

The setting was elaborate and formed a fitting background for the fair and fragile beauty of the chorus girls and Mr. Weber. There was a barrel of hams flanked by Easter lilies on one side and a case of mienral water on the other. One end of the shop was devoted to the glory of spring hats and at the other was a pile of odds and ends.

Mr. Weber himself presided at the cashier's desk and in the intervals of selling chances explained to the reporters how easy it was to keep store by the modern system of checking purchases. It was not difficult to see that he was prouder of his ability to add $9.87 to $7.53 and get something that nobody dared dispute than of his famous stage makeup.

The counter where narcissus blooms, bits of heather, bride roses and tulips were for sale was topped by bunches of real stage flowers and an elaborate Paris gown and a piano in the center of the room view with each other for popularity, the chances on each being $1 and no one asking the size of either.

"I'm sure I couldn't wear the gown and I have no place for the piano," said one philanthropist, "but I feel so sorry for the poor dears that I'll take a chance on both, and if I should get them would you mind?" and she looked appealingly at Mr. Weber, who stopped adding four and four to listen, "sending them out to San Francisco? It's little enough to do, and there must be lots of people there who have never been without a piano in their lives."

Mr. Weber said he would.

The counters were so arranged that when attention was distracted from them for a moment the girls could climb on them and remonstrate. On them you could find more things than ever Horatio dreamed of in his philosophy.

There was a ring sold by Mrs. Sam Marion which belonged to Louis XIV, or was it Louis XV? There was absolutely no doubt on the subject, because there was a letter shown to every purchaser of a 50-cent chance—and whenever the letter got lost Mrs. Marion was terribly nervous and upset; said she was afraid that people wouldn't take her word and was only relieved when somebody found the letter. Then you were forced to believe—and take a chance.

The costumes of the chorus girls were distractingly pretty—all spring fashions—and somebody donated the finishing touches in the shape of little aprons tied with big bows of blue ribbon. All the hands of the salesgirls were covered with real diamonds and many of them wore pendants and tiaras of the same; with such small salaries as they get, they said they had to wear their diamonds all the time for they could not afford to run the chance of losing them.

Any man could be a cashboy who knew one of the chorus girls and could spell champagne. The cradle and the grave were robbed for this corps with impartiality, and the cashboys all wore large circles of pasteboard bearing the number "22." When "22" was called the salesgirl was sure of getting attention.

There is no one quicker to read the want of this character than a chorus salesgirl. Witness this:

A tall youth approaches, casting glances of approval on either side with absolute impartiality and judicial discrimination. His trousers are rolled up four inches, his spring checks are of the latest cut, a stick hangs over his arm by its handle and his hat is set just far enough on the back of his head to display a row of the cutest little curls.

He pauses and without a moment's hesitation the salesgirl leans over her stock, picks up to toy monocle and says:

"Only $5 for this. Just what you want."

"Weally? How clever of you!"

He manages to get his hand tangled up with hers and the monocle chain, and it takes him fifteen minutes by actual count and $10 to get it untangled but think of the families that may be rescued from wearing monocles all their life by that $10!

At the natural history counter stands George Odell, who has been used as understudy for one of the absent. His animals are all velvet and he names them to please himself, as did Adam and Eve.

One, a long, sprawling creature, he sells to a near-sighted customer and calls it a dashhund pig, which it looks like. Two young gigglers approach and ask the price of everything in sight, and finally admit that they have only ten cents between them.

There is the making of a real salesman in Mr. Odell. He picks up a papier mache duck, writes his autograph thereon, and pockets the ten cents. After the girls pass by, he shouts to the busy crowd.

"This way for autograph ducks! This way! Don't rush! Plenty of time!"

And he sells them, too, the price going up 50 per cent in ten minutes.

At the postal card counter a purchaser stands a long time, trying to make up his mind whether to take a view of the late Masonic temple in San Francisco or one with a kitten and a doll. There is a very pretty girl behind this counter, and she and the customer discuss the merits of postal cards in a very low tone. At the end of an hour or so he hands out a $50 bill, takes the kitten postal card and reluctantly makes way for another customer.

The girl relaxed her attitude after he passes along and says to the reporter:

"Ain't so bad. He spent $300 here yesterday. No, if I were you I wouldn't mention his name. You see he has a very peculiar father, who doesn't care for bazars at all, and might object to his son being so deeply interested. Can you imagine a man not caring for bazars? Ain't it queer?"

A salesgirl thrusts a pincushion in the shape of a red lobster in the face of a young woman, coming in, and shouts:

"Lobsters only $2!"

The second one recoils and says:

"I can't get a lobster cheaper than that."

They recognize each other and embrace and the salesgirl apologizes.

"My dear, I didn't know you. Haven't seen you since you left the chorus. The idea of my trying to sell you a lobster! Ain't that a scream?"

Outside the bazar there is a conglomerate mass of masculinity, hoboes, messenger boys, chewing gum and gray haired veterans of many bazar wars. Hour after hour they stand there.

"Why don't they come in?" is asked one of the flower chorus girls.

She casts a disdainful look over her shoulder at the crowd outside as she replies:

"There ain't any place outside there to leave their money, I suppose," and turning to a possible customer, continues nonchalantly: "Violets $5 a bunch. Yes, I do wear them whenever I get them. Thank you so much. Cheap, aren't they? won't you take a chance on a parasol, too? It is simply stunning. Only $40, and the very latest. I don't believe there is another one anywhere near as good style in New York. No, I haven't seen it myself, but the girl that's at the other end of the room told me about it. You don't care for it? Too bad! Violets $5 a bunch." And she turns to the next.

"You've got to keep on buying all the time to get those girls to talk to you," says the customer, as he walks on sulking.

A breezy Westerner comes in. He saakes hands effusively with the press agent.

"My dear fellow," he cries, "I was hoping to get in here in time to make the first purchase, but I was held up, lost all my money, and now it's too late."

"How much have you got left?" is the uncompromising response.

"Only $8."

"Let me see it."

The breezy one takes the eight from his pocket slowly. One of the salesgirls pounces on it and gives him in exchange a tin dog.

"Is that all?" he asks, as he looks at the dog disdainfully.

"All? Why, it's got a mechanical tail. What do you expect for $8?"

From the entrance of the Gilsey house a couple stroll toward the hat counter. The man stubs his toe over the pedestal of a wax figure which is resplendant in a dark brown neck ruche, a picture hat and down drooping veil. He apologizes profusely with his hat off, and is it easy to see that he is not used to wax figures.

Before he can get his breath a vision in black and white checks with pink cheeks, glittering eyes and diamonds to correspond twinkles toward him on the tips of her toes.

"You must buy that hat," she says to him, taking up a confection and twirling it in her hand. "It's awful cheap. Try it on," and she addresses the lady.

Everybody near enough gave an "Ah" of admiration and the twinkling chorus girl says to the man:

"Did you ever see anything sweeter?"

He admitted he never had.

The woman seemed pleased with the admiration she excited and turned this way and that to get a peep into nearby mirrors.

"It's only $45," says the saleschorus girl, persuasively.

"You don't say?" repeats the man, still embarrassed from his encounter with the wax figure and the bright eyes fronting him.

"Of course you'll take it?" and the eyes couldn't have looked more persuasive.

"Oh, yes, I'll take it."

He pulls out a roll of bills and pays for the hat without a murmur. Then he looks in an embarrassed manner again at the wax figure, the chorus girl and the lady in the $45 hat. The latter after a moment disappears, and his expression brightens a bit. The chorus girl takes pity on him.

"It really is a bargain,' she declares, "and your wife looked lovely in it."

"My wife?"

"Wasn't she your wife?"

"Of course she was my wife! You've been reading newspaper accounts of this bazar, my dear girl. Do I look like a man that buys $45 hats for anybody that comes along? Not on your life! She's been trying to get another hat out of me for a week. It's a big earthquake that doesn't do somebody good."

At the counter where a set of books on palmistry is being sold a chappy leans over with hand outstretched.

"Let's see if you can tell my fortune all right by the book, and if you do perhaps I'll buy half a dozen copies."

She takes his hand coyly.

"I see a crowd, and you seem to be in it. It looks like a theater. Oh, yes, and there I am, right in the front row. Ain't that strange! Then I don't seem to see the theater any more, just a couple—and, oh, yes, there is someone else, but it looks like a waiter. Maybe it is. Yes, the stage entrance is on Twenty-ninth street. You can't miss it. There's always a crowd there. Half a dozen volumes? Thank you."

A tall man succeeds him and she greets him cheerfully.

"See that fay, dear? Just sold him half a dozen books for $15. How did you leave Willie? His throat better? And did mother come over from Jersey. It seems quite like old times to be down here with the girls. Almost forgot I was married."

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, mannufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from ten drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials.

LAKE SUPERIOR COPPER

Victoria to Ship Rock to its Stamp Mill This Month---Buildings at Champion Mill to be Rebuilt.

Calumet, Mich., May 19.—It is expected that the Victoria mine will start shipping rock to its stamp mill this month. Construction work on the mill was delayed by the non-arrival of material which was necessary in the work, otherwise the mill would have been in commission before now. The Taylor hydraulic power plant at Glenn Falls is proving highly successful. Underground the Victoria management has been cutting out stopes for the last few weeks and it is stated that the values are better than was indicated by the character of the ground penetrated in the drifts. With its water power plant, which renders the use of fuel unnecessary, the Victoria should be able to mine and mill a ton of rock at less expense than any property in the Lake Superior copper district.

The Northern Construction company has been awarded a contract for the building of a large warehouse, assay office, etc., at the Champion Copper company's stamp mill on the shore of Lake Superior. Excavating for the foundations for the new buildings has started and it is planned to have the structures completed as soon as possible. They replace the ones destroyed by fire some time ago, when all the valuable records covering the last few years' experimental work were destroyed.

Surveyors in the employ of the Calumet & Hecla Mining company have been at work on the property recently acquired by that corporation northeast of the Mohawk mine and it is understood that an early start will be made in exposing the Kearsarge amygdaloid bed there. About five forties of the property carry the lode. Some of the eastern officials of the company went to the property in an automobile and looked over the ground. The tract includes 240 acres, lying northeast of the Mohawk, and adjoining the Seneca, owned by the Bigelow syndicate. The values in the Mohawk's northernmost shafts are excellent and it is probably this fact that influenced the Calumet & Hecla in its acquisition of the property. Work upon the lands will be highly important to the Seneca and may lead to the inauguration of activity there in the next year or so.

Construction work on the new steel shaft and rock house at No. 3 shaft of the Wolverine is advancing rapidly. The Wisconsin Bridge & Iron company of Milwaukee, Wis., has the contract and the structure will replace the one destroyed by fire a few weeks ago. Operations in No. 3 shaft during the construction of the surface building, are confined to the handling of men and material in connection with the rebuilding of the skip tracks with cross ties, according to ordinary railroad method, in place of longitudinal stringers, which are generally in use through the district. It is not certain when it will be possible to resume regular mining work in No. 3 shaft but probably after another month has passed work will again be under way there.

pany has built a house for General Manager Campbell which is exceedingly pretty. The office of the company will also be located on the ground.

On the Crescent Mining company's ground, which adjoins the Indian Camp, the lessees have struck three feet of ore which will ship between walls. This is exactly twelve feet from the Indian Camp side line, and Mr. Campbell reports that he has followed the outcrop clear across the Indian Camp for 175 feet.

On the Union No. 9, shipping ore continues to be sacked, but the richest strike which has been made on Lease No. 1 of three feet of ore that will average $600 per ton, is on ground that is at present in conflict to the Stray Dog and is also claimed by the Jumping Jack people, and it is probable that the Dexter company will have a lawsuit on its hands in the near future.

On one lease on the Dexter, at the 160-foot level, they have disclosed twenty-eight feet of milling ore. The lessees have opened up a great mine for that company, but will hardly be able to avail themselves of their find, because it will not pay to ship and there are no mills as yet in Manhattan by the aid of which this ore could be mined at a profit.

Bingham to the Bingham Central company. Mr. Dignowity went from here to Nevada for the purpose of examining properties in several of the boom camps for Eastern clients. He will return to New York about the end of the present month.

The Star Consolidated company, operating in the Tintic district, has just ordered a complete new hoisting plant capable of operating to a depth of 1,500 feet, and the Carisa company in the same camp is now about ready to keep up a steady production of a carload of ore a day. This property is under option to the American Smelting company and the experts have just concluded their examination.

The directors of the Yankee Consolidated have ordered the payment of a dividend of 2½ cents per share, or $12,500, on June 1, transfer books to close on May 25. This is the first distribution in a year. The company carries a surplus of more than $75,000, and other distributions are expected.

The Beck Tunnel company has ordered the payment of a $25,000 dividend, the Uncle Sam Consolidated has posted its usual $5,000 distribution and the Grand Central, Victoria and Utah Mine companies' payments are expected to be posted soon.

ages to raise 1,000 tons of ore with it every day. The question of replacing it with a more substantial plant has been under consideration some time, but it was not until a few days ago that the decision to buy a new one was reached. The Pennsylvania is one of the good mines of the company.

* * *

The vein on the 1,900-foot level of the Original mine, a Clark asset, is now one of the leading copper ore producers in the Butte district. The vein was cut at this depth only a short time ago, and since then it has been prospected and opened sufficiently to determine its value. It is seventeen feet wide, and while it is all good ore, six feet of it is peacock copper and copper glance that assays 42 per cent copper. This places the mine among the first-class producers of the district and demonstrates that depth alone in Butte is required in order to obtain the best results. Between the 300 and 600 foot levels the vein on this property was not worth much, but every 100 feet added since the 600 was reached has added value to the production.

* * *

The shaft on the property of the Butte Hill Copper company is now 170 feet deep, and is going down rapidly. When the bottom touches the 200-foot mark a crosscut will be driven through the vein for the purpose of ascertaining the mineral showing at that depth. This work finished, sinking will be resumed and continued until the 300 mark is reached, at which point another crosscut will be driven. The company is quite confident of transforming the property into a commercial enterprise, and will continue development with this object in view. James W. Murphy, who is looking after the property, says the indications for striking ore in paying quantities are improving daily, and he expects to surprise the natives with results.

* * *

Raven Copper made another strike of rich ore in its property Monday. The strike was made in the east drift raise seventy feet above the 1,200-foot level, and consists of four feet of peacock copper and bornite that will assay between 15 and 20 per cent copper. The company is now drifting east and west to determine the extent of the shoot. If it is found as large as expected, a good working raise will be run up so that the ore can be mined rapidly and economically. The drift on the north vein on the 1,500-foot level is progressing eastward at the rate of seven feet a day. The face is now in 250 feet, and is looking good. All of this work has been done in a vein of good ore from five to twenty-five feet wide. Chutes are being put in on the 1,200 preparatory to mining the ore on that level. The company is now extracting about 100 tons of ore a day, but will double the quantity in the near future. The entire mine is looking fine and the prospects of the company are exceedingly bright.

GOBALT SHOWING RICH ORE

good growing campt at Cobalt for years to come.

Yesterday the writer asked Capt. Harris, a man of world wide experience as a mining engineer, what he thought of the future of Cobalt.

"If you had asked me this a year ago," he said, "I would have told you that it was altogether beyond precedent that such enormously rich values as we find here at Cobalt could last to any depth. Today every indication from this entire section points to the strong probability of generally increasing values in depth throughout the field. I came here a year ago very much of a pessimist on Cobalt. Today I am an optimist—made so by close observation of actual conditions. Cobalt will last for years and make many fortunes.

While it is true that Cobalt is primarily a "poor man's camp," in that the values are very near the surface and require little in the way of expensive machinery or equipment to get them out, it is equally true that sound business judgment and experience are as essential to success here as elsewhere.

As an example of the class of investors attracted by the wonderful richness of this new silver camp, the list of board of directors contained in the first annual report of the Nipissing Mines company gives the names of several very prominent men in the world of finance and commerce. Among these directors are Capt. J. R. DeLamar, Edmund C. Converse, Col. Robert M. Thompson, E. P. Earle and Ambrose Monnell of New York; Joseph Wharton of Philadelphia and Duncan Coulson and David Fasken of Toronto.

Surrounding the Nipissing properties on all sides and extending throughout Coleman township are fully twenty going camps. Among the largest of these, owning respectively from twenty to fifty acres, are the Timmins La Rose mine, which has produced over $400,000, the Tretheway, owned by Toronto capitalists, with an output to date of nearly $300,000, and the McKinley and Darragh, Foster and Jacobs claims with a clean-up of $100,000 to $150,000 each. The Drummond is a paying claim. So are the Lawson, Buffalo, Hargraves, University, Temiskaming, Hudson Bay, O'Brien and others. From each of this latter group of claims ore ranging in value from $30,000 to $60,000 has been shipped.

The leaders in Cobalt—the men who really have properties of value—are doing all they can to discourage wildcat speculations. Of course, there is some of it, but very little, as compared to the skyrocketing at Cripple Creek when the boom was on. At least, that is what the old timers say. They say further that beyond any reasonable doubt Cobalt has come to stay, and that in a year or so it will settle down and become one of the features of the mining world, for every one who knows is certain that fortunes in silver are here for years to come.

the Black Hawk mine of the Arizona Commercial Copper company. The crosscut encountered the ore body seventy-eight feet from the shaft, although at forty-six feet carbonate ore was uncovered in the floor of the crosscut, which is apparently the apex of an ore body, and the crosscut is in ledge matter carrying some copper from that point till it cuts the ore body, which last Friday had been penetrated eight feet. The ore is hematite, carrying copper and silver, of the same character as that opened on the surface and in the upper workings, but of higher grade.

One of the largest mining deals that has ever been recorded in Grant county was consummated in Silver City last week when the Burro Mountain Copper company took over the properties of the Southwestern Copper company in the Burro mountains for a consideration of $400,000. Nathan F. Leopold, president of the Burro Mountain Copper company and a millionaire of Chicago, and A. L. Nickerson of Boston, representing the Southwestern Copper company, were the principals in the deal. The Burro Mountain Copper company has had the properties under lease and option to buy, for several years.

THE MARQUETTE RANGE

for shipment to the docks at Escanaba, and the daily output so far this season has averaged twenty to twenty-five cars. A force of about seventy-five men is employed, at present. The Volunteer mine, owned by Senator Alger of Detroit, and last operated by the Steel corporation, remains in idleness, although shipments are being made from the stockpile, estimated to still contain 75,000 tons. It was stated early in the spring that the mine would be wrought this summer, this time by the Jones & Laughlin Steel company, but nothing has been heard recently concerning the promised resumption, nor have any preparations to that end been started. A good deal of repairing will have to be done before the Volunteer can be put into condition to resume mining. Some fifty feet of the hoisting shaft caved in near the surface last fall, and it will be necessary to rebuild this part of the shaft.

It is thought that it will not be far from five months before the hoisting plant to be installed at the Rolling Mill property, at Negaunee, is in readiness for duty. The work might be done in shorter time, but it is likely that the plant will not be needed sooner than that, as it will require at least that period before the shaft, now being sunk to reach ore deposits previously located by diamond drill, is bottomed at the desired depth. The machinery will come from Ishpeming, being transferred from the East End mine of the Lake Angeline property, operated by the Jones & Laughlin company, which also is opening the Rolling Mill. Not only the hoisting plant, but the building in which it is housed, will be removed to the new location. The foundation is laid on which the engine house will rest at the Rolling Mill, and the contracting concern which has the task in hand has already started the work of removing the building, which will be taken apart and re-erected. Two new boilers are in place and enclosed. While the hoist is being removed from the East End property, this portion of the Lake Angeline mine is far from being worked out. The stopes here still present an excellent showing, and give promise of being active for many years to come. The ore, instead of being taken out through the old shaft, is conveyed by motor car to the outlet at the west, thus doing away with the necessity of maintaining the former avenue. Opened in 1864, the Lake Angeline has passed the zenith of its career, although its ores are deep-rooted and compact, a substantial product being obtained from a comparatively small area. The mine cannot be said by any means to be nearing its end, but it has not the extensive territory possessed by its big neighbors, the Cleveland Cliffs and Lake Superior companies, from which to draw future ore supplies. Its ores are of the highest grade, and if placed on the market would command a premium.

A new changing house, 80 by 24 feet, and similar in equipment to the "dry" now in use, is in course of erection at the Mary Charlotte mine at Negaunee. Its construction is made necessary, because of a considerable increase in the working force at this mine, and the new shaft being put down on the same company's Breitung property adjoining. The addition to the number of employes is because of the adoption of an eight-hour schedule for all classes of underground work, which necessitated putting on one-third more men. A laboratory building, which will be equipped with every modern convenience, is also being constructed.

After a year's search with the diamond drill, the big Colby vein is reported to have been located at a depth of 1,000 feet, and 500 feet northward from the bottom of No. 6 shaft of the Steel corporation's Tilden mine, on the Gogebic range. The extent of the new body in Tilden ground is a point still to be ascertained, but there is little reason to doubt that the strike, if as reported, has added greatly to the life of the property.

The Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul road has received from its Milwaukee shops two of the largest engines ever seen in Northern Michigan. The locomotives weigh 125 tons on the drivers, without coal or water. They will be employed in hauling ore trains on "the hill run," between Iron Mountain and Channing, en route to the North Escanaba docks, and are expected to handle about twice the tonnage of the ordinary engine.

The Ashland Iron & Steel company, being unable to secure a sufficient number of wood choppers in the vicinity, is importing Italian laborers for its wood camps at Dunham, Gogebic range. The men, 300 in number, are coming from Pennsylvania.

Twenty dwelling houses for the accommodation of employes are being constructed at the Ironton mine, Gogebic range, by Corrigan, McKinney & Co., operators of the property.

season in the past. The Dunn passed into the control of Corrigan, McKinney & Co., in 1899, and since then it has been redeemed. A new lens, a continuation of the one formerly worked, has been opened by a new shaft. The mine is today bigger and better than it ever was, and during the past year it has been given an equipment in keeping with its worth, included in these acquisitions being an air compressor of large capacity, a fine first motion hoisting plant, a big crusher and adequate pumping facilities. The shaft house has been replaced with a larger structure, and recently twenty-five additional dwelling houses were built for the accommodation of employes.

At the Armenia, another property which Corrigan, McKinney & Co. are bringing to life again, a new ore body is being opened at depth. Operations at present have in view the development of a new level, the purpose of which is to determien the extent of the deposit before sinking and equipping a new shaft, the present opening being located too coise to the ore body to assure permanency. Some ore will be sent to market this season. A somewhat similar program is being carried out at the Fairbanks property, the first mine opened in the district and supposed to have been worked out twenty years ago. Corrigan, McKinney & Co. leased the mine a year ago, cleaned out the old shafts and sunk them 100 feet deeper, and will make a fair-sized shipment this season. A deposit of medium grade ore is being developed. Work of like nature is in progress at the Kimball, another old-time proposition, which, however, had never attained the dignity of a producer. The future of this property is by no means assured as yet, but some ore has been hoisted during recent months and this will be shipped out this year.

Still another property that had been abandoned in the Crystal Falls district is the big Mansfield, now operated by the Steel corporation. It was not, however, because the ore pinched out, apparently, that work was suspended here, although the mine is today bigger and better than was ever dreamed would be the case, but because of the calamity of September, 1893, when in following a rich vein of ore the openings were raised so high under the bed of the Michigamme river that the mine was entirely flooded in five minutes, drowning twenty-eight miners like rats in a trap. The property remained idle for some years, until 1897, when the course of the stream was deflected and the mine unwatered by the De Soto Iron company. Then it was found that the shaft was unsafe, and, added to this, the ore body gave indications of petering out. Depth, however, disclosed new deposits, and since then the Steel corporation has sunk to a depth of upwards of 1,000 feet a new shaft in the hanging wall. This shaft has but recently been completed and permanently equipped with machinery. The Mansfield has three developed levels of ore ready to be attacked, the "blocks" averaging about 100 feet. The mine is the only property in the district that has produced bessemer ore in any considerable quantity.

The Tobin mine, the largest in the Crystal Falls field, is expected to come close to producing half a million tons this year, or about double the output of last season. It is one of the Corrigan, McKinney & Co. group, and is the only property in the district equipped with an electric haulage system. This was installed during the winter and has been in commission now for about a month, with the best of results. The old Tobin shaft, enlarged and equipped as the main avenue, has taken the place of the Hennepin opening, which has been abandoned and will be permitted to collapse, because of its too close proximity to the ore body, and in every other respect the mine has been equipped for big production. The physical condition of the property is of the best. Operations are practically confined to the Hennepin portion of the property. West of the Tobin shaft, where it is known that a very large deposit exists, little is being done for the reason that with the labor supply available the operators have all they can do in the present workings, hence the possibilities of the mine are yet to be determined.

Like the Dunn and the Tobin, the Great Western mine, still another of the Corrigan-McKinney group, will make the largest output in its history this year. The ore here is not of the best grade, although running fairly high in metallic iron, it containing more than the average amount of phosphorus, but the vein is wide and diamond drill borings have determined the deposits to be continuous to great depth. The usual tonnage will be shipped from the Crystal Falls mine this season. This also is a Corrigan-McKinney property. Conditions here have shown but little change the past few years, although last year not as much development was accomplished as usual, for the reason that there was a contest with the fee owners over the terms of the new lease, which finally was settled satisfactorily to both interests. The mine is in need of a new shaft, the present opening dipping away from the ore body, and later on it will be provided. Pending this time, transfer is made at the eighth level to an incline shaft sunk close to the ore. The Lamont mine, still another of the same group, is not looking as good as it has been. The ore body has narrowed considerably, and at present depth is comparatively small. Much lateral drill work was done during the winter, with little result, and hope is now pinned on the possibilities to be met with in the ground beneath existing workings. The Lamont is well equipped and will make its customary shipment this year.

The Bristol, formerly known as the Claire, a Crystal Falls mine controlled by Oglebay, Norton & Co. of Cleveland, will make a big product this year. Much improvement work has been done the past year, both underground and on surface, and the property is well equipped for economical mining. The shaft has been enlarged and reimbered from top to bottom, and it has been supplied with a new hoisting plant. Considerable of the tonnage to be sent out this season will be mined by the open pit method, however, a system formerly exclusively in vogue at the property, and with that purpose in view there has been stripped an area of the overburden at the north end of the former big opening. The ore that will be taken out here was not considered worth mining a few years ago, but there is a market for it now.

In the Iron River-Stambaugh district of the Menominee range, the work of sinking a new and larger shaft at Pickands, Mather & Co.'s Baltic mine was started recently, at a point about forty rods north of the present opening. The shaft will be three compartments in size, containing two skipways and a ladder and pump-way, and several months will be required to put it down to the depth of the present avenue. At the old Jumbo mine, in the territory between Saunders and Pentoga stations, the company has a diamond drill at work and intends to explore the property thoroughly. There is a well-defined formation on the tract, but it has never been given a systematic test, the last work there having been done a score of years ago. The discovery of merchantable ore bodies at the Jumbo would open up what is comparatively a new field, and especial interest attaches to the work now in progress. The Iron River-Stambaugh district, itself, as now determined, is in the neighborhood of twelve miles wide, offering great possibilities in the way of ore development. As far as determined to date, the formation strata at the Chicagoan mine, on the east, and has been traced some six miles west of the Iron River village.

The Mineral Mining company, in which the Pewabic Mining people are interested, has taken an option to the Sheridan tract in the Iron River field, and will explore the property with a diamond drill. The Sheridan has been operated somewhat extensively in the past, although never opened below the fourth level, and there is expectation that depth will reveal important deposits. The Mineral company also has started work on the James property, in the same field. The old shaft will be unwatered and equipped with a plant of machinery. There is an exceeding-

A DIFFERENCE IN LUNGS.

In the Edinburgh University three human lungs lie side by side. One is of an Eskimo and is snow white. In life, this would be ruddy with rich blood. Another is that of a coal-miner and is black. The other is of a town dweller and is a dirty slate gray, as are the lungs of most city residents. That's why consumption thrives in cities.

One reason why Scott's Emulsion does so much to keep down consumption is because it helps to keep the lungs clean and supplies them with rich, red blood. It makes the lungs germ-resisting. If the body is run down and health is at a low ebb Scott's Emulsion will build it up quickly and permanently.

ly good chance for the development of a profitable mine here, for the reason that a well-defined body of ore is already shown up, lack of funds having had considerable to do with the decision of the former operators to abandon work.

The Atkins Mining company is a new concern organized to conduct exploratory work in the Iron River region. Lands near the Paint river and about eight miles distant from Iron River village will first be given attention. M. E. Gleason of Gladstone and Clarence McDermott of Iron River are engaged in exploring both the Brown property, west of Buchholtz, and a tract adjoining the Baker on the south. Test pits are sinking and later diamond drills will be utilized. The Carl Woempener homestead is being explored by W. J. Blair, and the Winnifred Mining company is conducting similar operations at the Morgan property. A diamond drill is in commission on the Hoolihan tract, and is reported to have encountered ore. Work of similar nature is under way at other tracts in the field. Not all of these properties possess merit, nor is it believed that the majority will develop into producers, but it is believed that in consequence of operations now in progress a number of mines will be added to the Iron River shipping list. Altogether a dozen diamond drills are at work in the valley, and innumerable test pits are going down.

The Eastern furnace syndicate which recently acquired the Section 12 mine, in the Iron River region, taking over the interests of the G. Walt Youngs ...ning company, operator of the property for a consideration of $575,000, has in addition secured possession of other tracts in the district and plans to give them early attention. The operations will be conducted under the management of G. W. Youngs. The first work at the Section 12 mine was done only about three years ago, yet since that time the property has developed into one of the best in the district. It corners on the Baltic mine and the Fogarty property. The shaft is down to the third level, from which drifts have shown up a large ore body, it being estimated that at present there are upwards of 200,000 tons in sight.

Capt. John Cuff of Norway, Dickinson county, has disposed of the mining options held by him on the lands in Sections 32 and 33, 40-29, Menominee range. Included in the transfer is the old Iron Hill property. The new interests are identified with the recently organized Few Mining company and purpose to actively push exploratory work. Capt. Cuff receives a cash bonus and royalty on the ore mined. Officials of the Wisconsin & Michigan railroad are members of the Few company, and it is understood a branch line will be built to the exploration during the summer. The Chicago & Northwestern road is laying a spur track to the Saginaw mine, formerly the Perkins, near Norway. This property is being reopened by John T. Jones of Iron Mountain, after having been abandoned as worthless, and is showing up considerable ore bodies.

BIGGEST WARSHIPS BUILT HERE.

Soon to Join Ranks of American Navy--Features That Make Them Equal to Most Effective War Engines Afloat.

Two of Uncle Sam's first 16,000-ton battleships are soon to go into commission. The Louisiana, which for the time being will be Queen of the American Navy, will before long share honors with the Connecticut, whose trial trip takes place within the next month.

In tonnage, battery power, speed and safety the Louisiana and Connecticut will rank with the most effective warships afloat under any flag. They will embody all the "latest improvements" in warship construction, and are over 1,000 tons heavier than our next largest ships. Four more battleships of the same class are building—the Kansas, Minnesota, New Hampshire and Vermont.

A description of either the Louisiana or Connecticut would do for both, for they are sister ships. Poised on her rudder alongside the highest skyscraper in New York, the Louisiana's bow would tower 450 feet in the air, seventy feet above the Park Row building. In beam these ships are 76 feet 10 inches, the width of three ordinary building lots. This huge mass is driven through the water at a speed of more than 18 knots an hour by engines of 16,500 horse power.

For these powerful engines there is a normal coal supply of 900 tons, but one of the factors that will make these new battleships especially effective engines of war is that if necessary they can carry enough coal to steam continuously at half speed for a distance of 5,000 miles. No battleship in any navy has ever equalled this record.

Officially, the Connecticut and Louisiana are known as seagoing battleships, with two 12-inch and four 8-inch turrets. For their protection and safety the armoring of these vessels is unusually heavy and extensive, while their bulkhead arrangements are such as to insure them against sinking under almost any imaginable conditions.

There is a waterline armor belt, extending from stem to stern. For a third of the length of this belt amidships the armor is eleven inches thick at the top and nine inches thick at the bottom, tapering to four inches at bow and stern. Above the main belt, between the main barbettes, there is a continuous wall of side armor, seven inches thick, reaching from the main belt to the main deck. At the ends of this armor bulkheads of seven-inch steel extend athwartship, connecting with the main barbettes.

The coal bunker and the main passage bulkhead doors on the Connecticut and Louisiana, as well as the armored hatches of the protective deck, are operated by electricity. Each of these doors and hatches has an electric motor, which is started from a central emergency station on the bridge.

During an engagement, or on the approach of danger of any kind, the officer of the deck can turn a wheel and know that every compartment door vital to the ship's safety has been closed by its electric motor. This is the "Long Arm" system that the navy has adopted for nearly all the new cruisers and warships. It makes our warships practically unsinkable, by assuring that their watertight doors will be closed in time to keep the ship afloat in spite of punctures below the waterline.

United States naval constructors have been the first to learn and apply the lesson of scores of disasters, due to the fact that bulkhead doors could not be closed by hand in time to save the ship. The naval authorities are taking no chances with vessels that cost millions, and which may some day stand between the victory or defeat of American sea forces.

A continuous protective deck from one to three inches thick, ten-inch armor for the main barbettes, 12-inch armor for the main turrets, and 8-inch armor for the four 8-inch gun turrets completes the protective features of these ships.

Offensively as well as defensively, the Connecticut and Louisiana will be splendidly equipped even for this day of ever heavier guns. They will carry four 12-inch guns in two turrets fore and aft and eight 8-inch guns in turrets, two on each broadside. The emplacement of these guns is such that the two forward turrets have an arc of fire from dead ahead to a point well aft of the beam, while from the aft pair of turrets gun fire may be directed forward of beam to dead astern. Firing through casemates on the gun deck is a powerful battery of twelve 7-inch guns. The 7-inch pieces are something new in ordnance, having exceptionally high velocity and penetration.

To this formidable array of heavy guns is added twelve 3-inch rapid firers, the same number of three pounders, and fourteen machine guns distributed on the superstructure, bridges and fighting tops. It was not intended originally that the Connecticut and Louisiana should carry any torpedo tubes, but afterwards it was decided to add four such tubes to their equipment.

Among the many other lessons of the Russo-Japanese sea fights, it was shown that better protection was needed for officers directing a warship in action. The Connecticut and Louisiana will be as safe in this respect as a man-of-war can be made. The forward conning tower is protected by nine inches of Krupp steel, and the aft conning signal tower, located below the aft bridge, has five-inch armor.

Keen interest has from the first surrounded the Louisiana and Connecticut on account of the unusual conditions under which they were built. What developed into a shipbuilding race began when the government decided to construct the Connecticut at the Brooklyn navy yard, giving the contract for the Louisiana at the same time to the Newport News company. The Louisiana was launched a month ahead of the Connecticut, but the score between them lately narrowed down to 2 or 3 per cent. The reason why the race cannot be definitely decided one way or the other is that allowance must be made for a number of factors that do not appear in the official progress figures. The Louisiana is undoubtedly in the lead, but the builders of the Connecticut have explanations for this, one being that congress has not provided men and material as rapidly as the builders could have used them.

But one thing is certain—both government and private yards have made splendid records on the Connecticut and Louisiana. It is equally certain that the normal time for the building of a battleship would not have been reduced from forty-four to thirty months if there had been no contest. This was a world-beating performance until Great Britain launched the Dreadnought in four months with every prospect of completing this new sea monster in a year and a half.

CRIPPLE CREEK DISTRICT

Bonanza Gold is Found by Lessees on the Ida May ---The Pharmacist Mine is to be Thoroughly Prospected.

Colorado Springs, Colo., May 19.—Ore worth $20 a pound has been opened at 120 feet depth on the Ida May by lessees. The property is on the summit of Raven hill, Cripple Creek. A seam two to three inches wide, in the center of a two-foot vein carrying $40 to $70, contains the bonanza mineral. The shoot is supposed to be an extension of the Jo Dandy mine on Bull Hill. The property is owned by Colorado Springs capitalists. Several years ago $60,000 was taken from a pocket in the upper workings. A new machinery plant has been installed.

The Beebe-Large lease on the W. P. H. mine on Ironclad Hill, Cripple Creek, has reelved returns from 370 pounds of ore of $4,132.90. The ore was taken from a winze sunk from the 400 foot level. The value is $11.17 a pound. This is the richest ore ever discovered in the famous bonanza.

The Pharmacist mine, Cripple Creek's first dividend payer, is to be thoroughly prospected. President Walter Rupp has leased the mine to Kansas capitalists who do extensive work. The shaft, now 650 feet deep, will be sunk to 1,000 feet. Laterals will then be run to cut either the Shurtloff vein of the Findley mine or the American Eagle's vein. The mine has been equipped since 1892, when it yielded fortunes from shallow depths.

The Dillon Gold Mining company has demanded $150,000 damages against the Portland Gold Mining company for alleged wrongful extraction of ore. The Portland company has a like demand for $400,000 damages against the Stratton's Independence, Limited, of London, and the Christmas company wants $420,000 from the Gold Cycle company for the same cause. Suit in court in each case is probable. Work will soon commence on the stamp mill of the Humboldt at Ward, Colo.

G. W. Gladden and associates have taken a bond and lease on the Virginia claim on the Carbonate Hill. The bond is for $15,000. The lease runs for ten years. The claim is owned privately. Lessees will sink a second shaft to cut the Stigley vein on the Buckhorn.

An electrical transformer is being planted at the mouth of the Newhouse tunnel, Idaho Springs district, for generating power for motors. Other additions are being made to the machinery and electrical equipment. A strong force is being kept at the breast of the tunnel. The big bore has already passed the 14,500 foot mark. The tunnel is being widened to facilitate handling the rock from the breast. The objective is Quartz Hill, in Gilpin county, 21,300 feet from the portal. Laterals are being run to the workings of the Old Town, Saratoga, Sun and Moon and other mines. Work will be constant until the end is reached, which will require two or more years yet.

The Atlantic mine at Alma, Colo., is in $60 ore. The body is ten feet high in the tunnel breast and fifteen to twenty feet wide.

B. F. Musgrave, owner, has taken a specimen of free gold ore from the Big Kelley group of claims, Idaho Springs district, which is estimated to carry $10,000 to $20,000 gold per ton. The specimen was taken from a contact vein between granite and porphyry. The rich streak, which lies in the center of a four foot vein, runs on the foot wall next to a streak of talc. The vein contains good milling values. The property is being developed by a tunnel.

MINING IN THE BLACK HILLS

Mill of Lexington Hill Company Has Been Leased---Homestake Extension Company is Planning to Sink Two Shafts.

Deadwood, S. D., May 19.—Good news has been received from the Lexington Hills property, about three miles from this city. For several months past this company has been tied up by extensive litigation and the purchase of the Highland Chief property involved it still further. A meeting of the creditors has just been satisfactorily adjusted. The eighty-stamp mill on the company's property, which has lain idle for over a year, has been leased for twelve months to Dr. Ogden and associates, with the permission that they treat a portion of the Lexington Hill company's ore.

This will leave the company free to develop its property, while at the same time some of the ore will be treated and a revenue obtained from the mill without the cost of operating it. The new lessees of this mill will also treat custom ore from other Spruce Gulch properties. The mill is a wet cyanide mill with a capacity of 200 tons daily, and a complete equipment. This company has been organized a number of years and the ground is fairly well developed. It comprises 350 acres, and the main tunnel has been run in 360 feet. This will be used as a working tunnel, and the ore will be taken from the stopes. The ore deposit is extensive and carries high values.

The mill at the Clara Bell, at Custer, will be completed within the next three weeks, so far as the stamp mill is concerned. A few weeks longer will be required in order to put in the cyanide tanks and to complete that annex. A classifier for the purpose of separating the sands from the slimes is being put in, and it is now estimated that these tailings will assay not less than $9 a ton. At the mine the new working shaft has reached a depth of about fifty feet. It will be sunk until it encounters the ore body, when drifts will be run and stoping will be commenced.

The Homestake Extension company is now planning to sink two shafts, each to the depth of 350 feet. So far the exploratory work has been through a tunnel and eight crosscuts, but this has developed the ore on the upper levels alone. One shaft will now be sunk at about the center of the property, and will be connected by a tunnel with the New England shaft across the gulch. This will be the working shaft, and the other will be used temporarily for ventilating purposes. A much larger force of men will be put to work in a few days as soon as arrangements have been made for beginning this work. In that time the contracts for the mill will be let, Supt. McHugh also plans to put in large bins at the bottom of the New England shaft for both this property and the Homestake Extension property.

and the property opened up very rapidly.

On the Golden lease on the Jumping Jack, the lessees are sinking two shafts and are extracting some very rich ore from both. General Manager John D. Campbell reports that the ore now being sacked on this lease will go from $85 to $90 per ton. Others estimate the average at above $200.

On the eighty-foot level in the No. 1 Golden shaft, they have drifted for a distance of eighty feet, and have encountered a cross ledge that shows gold in the pan. Work has been discontinued at this point for the present, the foreman stating that he is waiting for trucks and cars with which to prosecute the work on a larger scale. There are a number of vertical ledges cutting the main contact on this property, and the experts here are a unit in believing that all of the veins that penetrate the Stray Dog will be found to have their origin in the Jumping Jack.

The sensation of the week is a series of discoveries that have been made on the Indian Camp. On this ground five lessees are sacking ore; a month ago only one of them had struck a pay shoot. Not less than seven strong ledges have been disclosed by prospecting on the surface of this property, and all of them carry values from $10 to $50 per ton.

Company work on the Indian Camp is going on fourteen feet from the point of intersection of very strong ledges, where a seven by four shaft is being sunk. Two feet of good milling ore have already been encountered and cut through on the dip. The company announces that it will sink to the 200-foot level and then crosscut to reach the veins again. At this point it is believed that the values will be of a shipping order. A fifteen horsepower Fairbanks-Morse gasoline hoist, complete, is on the way to the mine and will be installed this week. The volunteer fire department responded very quickly with the two hose carts, but the 1,000 feet of hose would not span the distance between the nearest hydrant and the fire. Five hundred feet more were brought from the storehouse, and put into service, but the elevation of the fire and the friction due to 1,500 feet of hose and a 3-inch pipe line from the hydrant to the tank main so reduced the pressure at the nozzle that it was of little use. The house was practically destroyed, though most of the contents were moved to a place of safety. The building was insured for $1,500. Mr. Bemel had just left on the 12 o'clock incline, and did not learn of his loss until he reached home in the evening.

They cure backache.
They cure every kidney ill.

Ernest Grotke of 926 Fourth avenue east, Duluth, Minn., says: "I speak from experience when I say that Doan's Kidney Pills are a reliable and valuable remedy. I first heard of their merits from a friend who had received gratifying results in his own case, and I was then suffering from severe, dull pains in the small of my back and loins, and had become so bad that I was almost compelled to give up work. I procured a supply of Doan's Kidney Pills and began using them. Although other remedies had failed to help me, I soon noticed the benefit, and kept on using Doan's Kidney Pills, until the pain and other symptoms gradually but surely disappeared, until I was entirely free from the trouble."

For sale by all dealers. Price, 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, New York, sole agents for the United States.

How Harry Hunted Birds.

BY WILLIAM WALLACE, JR.

Harry Jones had just made what he called a "dandy bargain." He had traded a drum, a kite and a bamboo fishing rod for an airgun—an airgun that would shoot with precision and hit the mark with a vengeance.

And now that Harry possessed a gun he meant to try his skill at shooting birds; not any certain kind of bird, but any fowl, great or small, that chanced to fly athwart his vision as he wandered through the woods.

It was a beautiful, sunshiny day; just such a day when all the world seems glad, and Harry, as he trudged along, felt thankful for the grand good blessings that nature bestowed upon him. "I am glad to be a boy," he said to himself as he stopped to pluck a daisy that nodded its pretty head to him. "I'm glad I am not a flower to be yanked up by the first hand that comes along."

"Then why not have pity on the dear, helpless flowers?" asked a sweet voice. "You should do unto others as you would be done by."

Harry turned to see beside him a sweet-faced little girl with the kindest expression of countenance he had ever noticed on the face of anyone. A blush spread over his sunburned cheeks as he noticed the little girl's eyes rest on the airgun he carried so proudly over his shoulder. "Why, what are you going to do with that?" she asked, pointing to the gun. Then as Harry did not reply (he felt too ashamed to confess his object in being abroad with the weapon) the little girl continued: "I feel quite sure you are out for the purpose of killing the dear little feathered songsters that live in these woods, which ring with their music. But before you begin your cruel pastime come with me to my home and let me introduce you to some of my friends of the woods."

"Without a word Harry walked beside the little girl, who tripped lightly through the green woods leading him over a low hill into a smiling valley. Beautiful hedgerows of flowers surrounded a velvety lawn, which stretched about a gardener's cottage, cozily neat and homelike. Everywhere trees and shrubs were full of birds, red-breasts, larks and mocking-birds, their choruses filling the air. Bees swarmed about the hedges and flower beds and pretty gauze-winged butterflies flitted everywhere, giving the impression of flying blossoms. On the fresh grass under the trees little squirrels frisked gaily about, cracking the nuts that had been thrown to them that morning by the little girl who had brought Harry thither.

"Oh, how lovely!" Harry exclaimed involuntarily as his eyes feasted on the happy scene about him and his ears drank in the birds' songs.

"And why is it lovely?" asked the sweet-faced little girl, leading him to a seat beside a sparkling little lake where many birds were dipping their wings in the fresh, cool water.

"Why, there are so many flowers, birds and squirrels and all seem so tame," replied Harry.

"Ah, I thought this picture would appeal to the good side of you," the little girl remarked. "And now I must tell you that on my father's lands—which, however, are not vast, he being only a gardener—there is no life held lightly. Of course, destroying insects which would ruin our gardens and flowers, if not molested, are killed; but birds, bees, butterflies and squirrels are protected and cherished. Instead of plucking the beautiful flowers we let them live their lives as Nature intended they should, and thus they beautify the grounds and furnish sweets to the bees for making honey. The birds are as safe in these trees as you are safe in this yard. And they know it. So here they nest and rear their young. And here they sing all day in peace and contentment, making us the happier by seeing their happiness. But suppose just one boy—with a gun—should be turned free into this little valley! Oh, I shudder to think of the ruin he would cause. Soon the dear birds and squirrels—those that might escape being ruthlessly killed—would leave here, hiding away in the wildest manner whenever a human being might appear near their quarters.

"But see how tame they are now, the birds permitting us to go quite near them; and the squirrels will come and eat from our hands and run up on our shoulders. And just look at the beautiful flowers everywhere; yet, by two ruthless hands, they could disappear within a day, and we would be robbed of their beauty and perfume and the bees would go hungry through the flowers' death."

"Why, I always supposed flowers grew to be picked," ventured Harry.

"And I suppose you thought that birds were created to be shot," the little girl remarked. "But of what use are dead flowers or dead birds?"

Harry did not answer, but somehow he wished that he did not have that airgun over his shoulder. For the first time he realized how precious was the life of all harmless things, especially all things that helped to beautify by sight or sound the great palpitating world, of which he was so small a part.

The little girl, seeming to read his thoughts, rose and said: "If you want to get rid of that ugly weapon—so that it may never be the means of taking innocent life—you may tie a rock about it and throw it in the lake, which, at the opposite side, is very deep."

Harry sat silent for a moment. He had parted with several very valuable possessions to own that gun, and he felt he would be a loser should he destroy it. Then an idea came to him, and he said: "I tell you what I'll do. I'll swap this gun off. I can get something out of it, for it is a fine gun. I hate to lose its value, you know."

"But what about the boy who trades for it?" quickly asked the little girl. "Won't he go out and shoot the pretty birds and squirrels? No, by putting that gun into another boy's hand you only transfer the means of killing from your own hands to the hands of another. The suffering of the birds will be in no way lessened."

"I see," said Harry, jumping up and running around to the deep side of the lake. "I'll never, never take the life of a bird, or any harmless insect or animal, again. And what's more, I'll not have in my possession so cruel a thing as this." And he took a strong string from his pocket, found a good-sized rock nearby, and tied it about the gun, which he then tossed into the lake. "That hit the mark," he laughed as he heard the gun strike the bottom of the lake.

As he was about to depart from the gardener's grounds the little girl said: "Don't forget that there are thousands and thousands of boys who carry airguns and use them wantonly in the woods. Among them you have a few friends. It is your duty to make them understand the lesson you have this day learned."

Then she bade Harry good-by and ran merrily singing to the cottage, while about her bloomed the flowers, frisked the squirrels, hummed the bees and sang the birds.

"And all this beauty, fragrance and melody comes through saving life and 'doing unto others as you would be done by,'" said Harry as he waved a farewell to the little girl, who stood in the vine-wreathed porch of her home. "Well, I'm glad that beastly airgun is drowned, anyway. And, what's more, I must tell all the kids about the things I have learned today while out hunting birds. I may not convert them as easily as that sweet little girl converted me—but I'll not give up, even though the task be a hard one."

The Game Called Location.

HOW IT IS PLAYED.

There is a lively and interesting little game called "Location." It may be played for 10, 15 minutes or for an hour, just to please the pleasure of the little participants.

Let the children assemble in the sitting-room, when the weather will not permit of playing in the yard, and seat themselves in a circle about the room. One begins the game by telling of his travels (true or imaginary) in slow, precise tones. When he comes to the name of some well-known city, lake or mountain, the boy or girl sitting next on his right must quickly call out the location of the place named. If he or she gives the location correctly the boy or girl next in line must take up the story of travel and continue to some other prominent place on the world's geography; but if an error is made the boy or girl who makes it must resume the story, leading the listeners along over different lands and seas till some place of interest is reached, after which the game continues as begun.

For example:

"I started out on a tour of the United States," begins a boy. "I made my first stop at St. Paul——"

"St. Paul, Minnesota!" cries the child on his right, and the answer being correct the next child to the right resumes the story, relieving the one who answered correctly of telling a part of the story at this junction, though it may fall to him the next time round the circle.

"While there," begins the next story-teller, "I rested a few days from my travels. Then I resumed my journey, going direct to Cheyenne——"

"Cheyenne, Montana!" cries the boy on his right, which, being wrong, causes all in the circle, who know of the mistake, to cry "Error, error!" Then, after being corrected the boy making the mistake must take up the thread of the narrative and "travel on."

Not only is there much life and fun to be had from playing the game "Location," but the children's knowledge of geography is brought to the test and the art of impromptu story-telling is cultivated.

Some Facts About Earthquakes the World Over, and the Loss of Life Therefrom.

Since the compiling of reliable records, beginning in the year 1147, 1,096,000 persons have perished by earthquakes.

Prior to this time, however, we have the facts of terrible earthquake disasters.

In 742 A. D., Syria, Palestine and cities of their region were wrecked by a series of earthquakes which destroyed more than 500 towns and hundreds of thousands of human beings.

In 1137 an earthquake in Sicily took the lives of about 15,000 persons.

Of much later dates we have the horrifying records of the great Japan earthquake in 1703, when 200,000 lives were lost at Yeddo. Another horrible disaster of the same kind visited Japan in 1891, when 10,000 persons perished on the island of Hondo.

At Peking, China, and vicinity 100,000 souls perished by earthquake in 1761. In Canton, in the year 1830, 60,000 persons were killed by earthquake, which almost totally destroyed the city.

In 1755 the beautiful seaport city of Lisbon was swept away by earthquake, which was aided by tidal wave and fire. About 40,000 persons lost their lives.

In 1768 Sicily was again visited by earthquake, the loss of life reaching to 60,000. In 1805 Naples lost 60,000 souls by earthquake.

Kashen, Persia, was devastated by earthquake in 1755 and 40,000 persons lost their lives.

In 1797 an earthquake and tidal wave swept across Panama and 40,000 lives were lost. In 1868 Ecuador and Peru were visited by earthquake, 25,000 persons perishing.

In August, 1886, an earthquake visited Charleston, S. C., doing much damage to life and property.

Early on the morning of April 18, 1906, a terrible and destructive earthquake visited the Golden Gate City, San Francisco, Cal., laying it in ruins and causing a terrible loss of life. On the same date many cities and towns throughout California were visited by severe shocks and thousands of lives lost.

Jimmy Phlarity.

My name is Jimmy Phlarity;
I'm Irish, as you see,
An' nearly all the kids at school
Are a bit o' feared of me.

For I won't take no foolin'
From anyone my size;
They can't poke fun at my red hair,
My freckles an' squint eyes.

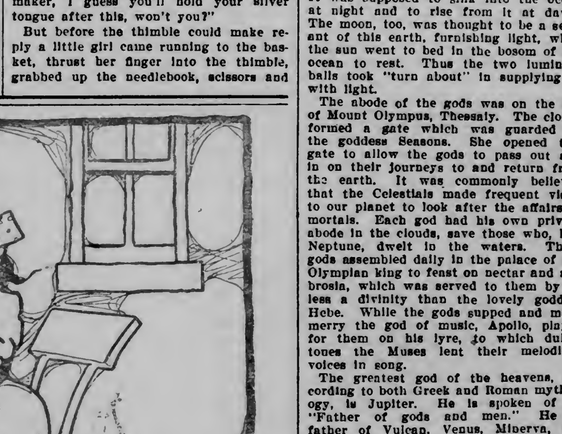
One day a chap, so smarty,
Yelled, "Hello, Emerald Isle!
Can you eat banished toads and snakes?"
An' I answered, "I should smile."

An' then I ups an' at him
Before he winked an eye,
An' got him by the pants an' neck—
You ort o' heard him cry.

As through the air I flung him,
Just as I would a ball,
Across the schoolhouse picket fence,
What kindly broke his fall.

For one of them sharp pickers
Caught in his clothes, you know,
An' though he kicked and yelled like sin,
It wouldn't let him go.

Well, after I had laughed enough
I went and took him down,
And from that day to this one
He's the meekest kid in town.



For he knows I mean blazes
When my Irish blood gits riled,
And now he takes most awful pains
To keep my temper mild.

For my name is Jimmy Phlarity,
(With a nature full of grit!)
An' many a fight I've bravely fought
An' many more I'll hit.

Minnie's New Spring Hat and the things It Told Her.

BY ANNIE JAMES.

"I don't like you, so I don't," pouted Minnie, as she flung her new spring hat on the bed after having looked it over critically. "I wish grandma would allow me to go and select my own hats, so I do. I'd have had one trimmed in red and yellow roses and—and—let me see—oh! in blue ribbon, and——"

But a strange, low groan came from the bed and interrupted Minnie's soliloquy. The little girl leaned over to ascertain where the sound—so like a human's—came from, and as she did so a soft, full, cream-colored rose that lay gracefully on the front of the broad-brimmed hat reared its petals and spoke:

"Dear child, how can you wish for those cheap, gaudy things—red and yellow roses? Why, in the factory where I was made everybody fairly raved over me, and look at my leaves—all crimped by hand. But maybe I should not talk, being only a poor, artificial flower who am indebted to my maker for my beauty."

"Go on and tell me your story," pleaded Minnie, much astonished that an artificial rose could find a voice with which to speak.

"Yes, give us the story of your life and I'll then give you mine," said a pretty bow of cream-colored ribbon that helped to adorn the hat.

"What! You talk, too?" And Minnie almost gasped in her amazement as she saw the loops of the ribbon rear themselves into a speaking posture.

"And why not?" replied the ribbon. "Surely, we poor, inanimate things should be granted the privilege once in a lifetime to defend ourselves against our critics."

"To be sure," acquiesced another and a cheerier voice, which Minnie observed came from the white straw hat itself.

"Well, what an interesting spring hat!" laughed the little girl, getting upon the side of the bed that she might not lose a word that was said. "Come, Miss Rose, you speak first."

"Well, I'm cotton, as you know," said the rose. "But I am a fine, soft piece, you may be sure of that. I grew in a big cotton field away down in Georgia. I was picked by a little colored girl, who sang all day long as she worked. With thousands and thousands of my brothers and sisters I was put into a bale and sent to the cotton mills, where we were woven into cloth.

"But to make a long story short, I found myself a part of one long piece of milliner's fabric, as white as snow. This was folded about a bit of smooth board, and from the many yards there were cut thousands of rose-shaped petals, large and small. These were tinted by hand—by hand! Do you realize what that means? And the rose nodded emphatically as it asked this question, which it answered itself without waiting for a reply from Minnie. "Well, it means hundreds of girls at work on making us fine roses, and it takes a girl two hours or just one like me. I was artistically tinted, hand-crimped and curled, then carefully wired and leaved and budded. Now, those little gaudy red and yellow things that you seem to prefer to me are made by the thousands in a day—did you understand that?—thousands in a day, and all the work is done mostly by machinery. Ah, then, think of my feelings when I am not fully appreciated—when my artistic beauty is not held above the cheap, gaudy stuff which we fine roses sneer at."

"Oh, I'm so sorry I have hurt your feelings," apologized Minnie, for the first time noticing the exquisite beauty of tint and graceful form of the big creamy rose that lay bedded in the soft green leaves, which rivaled nature's very own. "I now see how truly beautiful you are," she went on, "and I appreciate dear grandma's generosity and good taste in selecting you for my hat."

"Ah, you make me very happy by those words," smiled the rose softly. "Now I shall take pleasure in being on your hat. But from this moment I must be dumb. However, though you never hear my voice again, know that I am content. Good-by."

And the rose lapsed into a silence which was never again broken.

"Well, it is your turn to speak," said Minnie, addressing the pretty bow of ribbon which had expressed a desire to talk. "Tell me something of your origin."

"I was once the cloaks of worms," began the bow of ribbon. "From the fine fiber, which you call silk, I was woven into my present form, dyed and cut into certain lengths and rolled on rounds of pasteboard. In the big store I lay on a shelf with many hundreds of other ribbons, rolled up neatly like myself.

"Then came a day when a pretty milliner cut me off, formed me into a bow and sewed me on this hat. A few days later a sweet-faced old lady saw the hat hanging in a case and bought it for her little granddaughter, who does not seem well pleased with her dear grandma's choice."

"Oh, yes, I am, now that I understand," declared Minnie. "At first I did not notice how fine the rose and ribbon are. I wouldn't have yellow and red roses with blue ribbon for anything, so I wouldn't."

"Then I am content," said the ribbon. "It is our duty to adorn and please, and since you are satisfied, I shall, like the rose, end my existence happily by sitting gracefully on the brim of your hat. So now I shall say good-by and forever after hold my tongue."

Then the ribbon's voice was hushed, to never speak again.

"Now, dear, pretty hat, won't you tell me what you were before being made into your present shape?" asked Minnie, gently stroking the brim of the hat.

"I was nothing but grass—a soft, cool, broad-bladed grass which grew in a meadow. Being very pliable and soft, I was cut when green, allowed to lie on a board rack in the sun till dried. Then I was plaited by machine into long strips, the strips sewed into a hat, then bleached and pressed over a shaping block and sold from the factory to a wholesale millinery establishment. From there I journeyed to a little millinery store, was duly trimmed and sold to your grandmother. There—you have my story in a nutshell. But you are getting sleepy; lie down here on the bed beside me and take your afternoon nap."

The voice from the straw hat sank into a whisper, and, with drooping lids, Minnie sank back on the pillow to lose herself in a little siesta. Half an hour later she awoke with a start, sat up, rubbed her eyes and looked at the pretty new spring hat beside her.

"How strange!" said Minnie to herself, rubbing her eyes wide open. "Somehow, I really believe that hat, rose and ribbon, did talk to me before I fell asleep. But can it have been a dream, I wonder?"

Then she picked up the hat, softly touched the rose and caressed the bow as she said: "Dream or reality, I am greatly pleased with you, and I must run and thank grandma for so lovely a new spring hat."

The little girl leaned over to ascertain where the sound came from.

Neigh-eye! A hook on a string!
Toss it, while making a wish,
Into the water of running brook
And surely you'll catch a fish.

The Dissension in the Work Basket.

A great commotion occurred in the work basket one morning when all the inhabitants were idle. (And this proves the old adage that idleness always finds mischief to do.)

It began by the needlebook declaring that when she gaily waved a leaf at the scissors he cut her. Whereupon the scissors answered, rather saucily: "Madam, I never could abide bookish people, particularly needlebook ones, for they always think themselves so sharp. Now, I can prove my charge by the very needles you take care of, for you give each a stitch in the side."

"I don't know that that is any of your business," exclaimed a long darning needle, whose head stuck from the leaves of the needlebook. "Ever since I've been in this basket I've kept my eye on you, and I note that you are forever a bit too pointed in your remarks. Then, you make yourself obnoxious by flirting every time you get the chance with that snarled spool of basting."

At this rude remark the spool of basting grew very angry and rolled over and over, becoming much unraveled and tangled, and declaring that she had a mind to thrust her sharp thread point right into the darning needle's eye if he did not turn it in another direction, for she did not mean to have her actions spied upon by anyone in that basket. Then she wound up by exclaiming: "You horrid thing; you are always profane—for you are forever 'darning'!"

"Well," calmly interposed the spool of darning cotton, addressing the angry spool of basting, "you trample another's toes by that last remark. I feel the trample myself. And another thing I wish to impress on your mind is this—that darning needle is the best friend I have on earth—he always pulls me through the ragged places of life."

Just then the silver thimble raised her bright self and said: "Come, come, comrades; since we must live together in this basket let it be in peace and friendship."

"Oh, oh! You may appear a bright member," cried the buttonhole cutter, addressing the thimble. "But all is not gold that glitters. In fact, my dear needle-pusher, if you but look within yourself you'll find you are as empty as a knot hole."

"And what are you?" retorted the thimble, for once losing her amiability. "It's a fine figure you cut, indeed."

"Oh, therein you err," laughed the doughty buttonhole cutter. "I do not cut figures—I cut holes."

"Yes, holes—and nothing in them," sneered the thimble.

"Again you err," remarked the buttonhole cutter. "The holes I cut are always filled with buttons."

Then a laugh ran around the basket, and the scissors said, thrusting a point towards the thimble: "Madam Peacemaker, I guess you'll hold your silver tongue after this, won't you?"

But before the thimble could make reply a little girl came running to the basket, thrust her finger into the thimble, grabbed up the needlebook, scissors and darning cotton and carried the all away.

"No more fun today," sighed the buttonhole cutter. And he stretched out to sleep at the side of the spool of basting.

ANNIE JAMES.

"Oh, I'm sorry I have hurt your feelings."

"Well?" calmly interposed the ball of darning.

Little Peeps Into Mythology.

In the long, long ago the Sun was supposed to exist for the purpose of furnishing light and warmth to this planet alone. It was supposed to sink into the ocean at night and to rise from it at dawn. The moon, too, was thought to be a servant of this earth, furnishing light, while the sun went to bed in the bosom of the ocean to rest. Thus the two luminous balls took "turn about" in supplying us with light.

The abode of the gods was on the top of Mount Olympus, Thessaly. The clouds formed a gate which was guarded by the goddess Seasons. She opened this gate to allow the gods to pass out and in on their journeys to and return from the earth. It was commonly believed that the Celestials made frequent visits to our planet to look after the affairs of mortals. Each god had his own private abode in the clouds, save those who, like Neptune, dwelt in the waters. These gods assembled daily in the palace of the Olympian king to feast on nectar and ambrosia, which was served to them by no less a divinity than the lovely goddess Hebe. While the gods supped and made merry the god of music, Apollo, played for them on his lyre, to which dulcet tones the Muses lent their melodious voices in song.

The greatest god of the heavens, according to both Greek and Roman mythology, is Jupiter. He is spoken of as "Father of gods and men." He is father of Vulcan, Venus, Minerva, Diana, Apollo and Mercury, all great and superior gods and goddesses.

PLAN FOR THE MERGING OF BISBEE COMPANIES IS OFFICIALLY ANNOUNCED

A New Consolidated Company Is to be Formed at Once.

New Corporation is to Have $15,000,000 Issued Capital Stock.

Old Stockholders Can Secure Additional Stock in Company.

After weeks of rumor and speculation, comes the official announcement from Calumet of the plan for consolidation of the Bonanza Circle copper properties at Bisbee.

With the acquiescence of 50 per cent of the stockholders the formation of a corporation under the laws of the state of Minnesota for taking in the Calumet & Pittsburg, Lake Superior & Pittsburg, Junction and Pittsburg & Duluth companies, will be made.

The talk of consolidation has been hanging over the copper stock market for a long time, but the official announcement which reached Duluth stockholders of the four corporations concerned this morning, was rather unexpected at this time.

The stock in the four present companies will be exchanged for stock in the new consolidated company on the following basis: 1 share of Calumet & Pittsburg for 1 35-60 shares of the new stock; 1 share of Lake Superior & Pittsburg for 1 35-60 shares of the new stock; 1 share of Junction for 1 25-60 shares of the new stock and 1 share of Pittsburg & Duluth for 1 3-60 shares of the new stock.

Figuring the price of Calumet & Pittsburg and Lake Superior & Pittsburg, which are to go in on the same basis, at $33, the price of Junction should be then $28.83 and Pittsburg & Duluth $21.88.

The announcement circular states that application will be made to list the stock on the Boston exchange as soon after the consolidation as arrangements can be perfected.

The Consolidated company is to have

BIG BATTLESHIP TO BE OPPOSED

Senators to Express Doubt on Policy of the Administration.

Washington, May 21.—The naval program, providing for the construction of one great battleship of tonnage equal to any afloat or now building, will meet opposition in the senate, but not of such stubborn character as is thought to endanger its passage. There are several members of the senate committee on naval affairs who have expressed themselves as opposed to the building of "the great, unwieldy type of the Dreadnaught, now being constructed for the navy of Great Britain." These men have announced that they will express their doubt, although they have not determined to record their vote against the policy of the administration. The battleship proposed by the program, and provided for by the bill as it passed the house, in some features will be greater than the Dreadnaught. The tonnage must be as great as the biggest battleship now planned. This is estimated at about 20,000 tons. Its speed must be at least 21 knots, and its draft will be about 28 feet. It is in the armament that it will surpass the Dreadnaught. According to the plans for this giant defender for the British navy, it will have ten 12-inch guns. Chairman Foss of the house committee on naval affairs said the battleship for the United States should have twelve 12-inch guns. The South Carolina and Michigan, plans for which have recently been completed, are the biggest ships now authorized for the United States navy, and they will have eight 12-inch guns.

The naval appropriation bill will not be taken up by the senate committee until the last of the week. Hearings will not be had, the house hearings being relied upon, so that it should be reported to the senate by Monday next. It carries just $100,600 less than it did when it was reported from the house committee, the item of decrease being $100,000 for the floating dry dock for Chesapeake bay.

CONTEST BEGINS ON WEIGHTMAN ESTATE.

Philadelphia, May 21.—The contest over the estate of William Weightman, the millionaire manufacturing chemist came up today in the orphans' court. The principals in the case are Mrs. Jones-Wister and Mrs. Anna Weightman-Walker. The latter was the sole heir of Mr. Weightman whose estate is estimated to be almost $60,000,000. Mrs. Jones-Wister was the wife of William Weightman, Jr., and after his death she married Jones-Wister. The suit was brought in the name of Martha Wister, the only grandchild of William Weightman, who is a minor. It is charged that Mrs. Walker exerted undue influence over the testator and that he was of unsound mind when the will was executed. It is also charged by Mrs. Jones-Wister that a codicil making provision for her children, Mr. Weightman's grandchildren, was destroyed.

STORM IS AVERTED

Refusal of the Czar to Receive Deputation is Ignored.

Parliament Proceeds With Regular Order of Business.

St. Petersburg, May 21.—The threatened storm over the emperor's refusal to receive the delegation from the lower house of parliament, appointed to present to him its reply to the speech from the throne, has been averted. The house this afternoon adopted a resolution to proceed with the regular order of business and the discussion of the agrarian question began.

The moderate leaders of the Constitutional Democrats, after laboring with the hot heads until the early morning hours succeeded in convincing them that it would be a fatal blunder to precipitate a conflict upon a false issue and a resolution was prepared pointing out that the importance of the address consisted in its contents and not in the form in which it was transmitted to the emperor.

Some of the Constitutional Democrats frankly expressed the opinion that the house itself committed an error in appointing the deputation when the law specifically provided that communications from the house should go through the president. The emperor's action in refusing to receive the deputation created much popular excitement. The papers voiced the fear that it meant a rupture and crowds collected about the Tarride palace before the opening of the session of the parliament today. While his majesty's action is in strict conformity with the formalism which has characterized his career, nevertheless his failure to seize the occasion to meet the people's representatives directly is sure to produce a bad impression in the country where hte burden is sure to produce a bad impression in the country where the burden of the popular outcry has always been directed against the bureaucratic intermediaries. The Radicals in the house wanted to make his refusal a "casus belli."

Count Solsky, president of the upper house of parliament, has been notified in terms identical with the reply to President Mouromtzeff, of the lower house, that the address of the upper house should be presented to the emperor through Baron Fredericks, the minister of the imperial house.

EMPEROR REFUSES

To Receive Deputation From the Lower House of Parliament.

St. Petersburg, May 21.—A bomb was thrown into the parliamentary camp yesterday afternoon, by a note received by President Mouromtseff of the lower house, from Peterhof, which, instead of making an appointment for an audience at which he and the deputation could present the address in reply to the speech from the throne, contained the information that Emperor Nicholas would not receive the deputation and that the address must be presented through the ministry of the court.

Disconcerted utterly at this unexpected development, the leaders of the majority hastily summoned in caucus the constitutional Democratic deputies.

The Associated Press is informed by a member of the ministry that Emperor Nicholas was willing to receive President Mourmotseff, but that the action of the house in appointing a delegation to accompany him was regarded as a dangerous precedent, capable of being stretched to include a deputation of any size—even the whole house.

This ministry intimated that if the leaders desire to avoid a rupture they can do so by presenting the address through the ministry of the court as a proper and justifiable matter of routine or keeping within the limits of the constitutional provision, direct the president of the house to apply alone for an audience. It is pointed out that no distinction has been made between the lower house and the council of the empire and that the latter body has also been instructed to present its address through the ministry.

BIG RAILROAD MEN CALLED TO TESTIFY.

Philadelphia, May 21.—Subpoenas have been issued by the interstate commerce commission for several important officials of the Pennsylvania road. They will be asked to testify concerning car distribution and gifts of coal companies' stock when the commission resumes its hearing Wednesday. The new witnesses will include officials from the Philadelphia office of the Pennsylvania company and others from the western part of the state. Samuel Rea, third vice president, will be among the number. Last week, T. A. Estep of Edensburg, testified that M. W. Saxman had told him that Mr. Rea was one of the men who intended purchasing certain coal lands. President Cassatt's two assistants, Robert Pteairn at Pittsburg and W. A. Patton of this city, will also be called. It is said to be the intention of the commission to subpoena First Vice President John H. Green, General Manager W. W. Atterbury and A. W. Gibbs, general superintendent of motive power at Altoona.

SENATOR BURTON.

Must Serve Term in Jail and Pay $2,500 Fine.

Can Never Again Hold Office Under U. S. Government.

If He Does Not Resign He Will be Expelled.

Washington, May 21.—The supreme court of the United States today rendered a decision in the case of United States Senator Ralph Burton of Kansas. The decision was against Burton, affirming the decision of the United States circuit court for the Eastern district of Missouri, by which Burton was sentenced to six months' imprisonment in jail of Iron county, Mo., and required to pay a fine of $2,000, and deprived of the right to hereafter hold office under the United States government.

The opinion was by Justice Harlan. All of the points made in Burton's interest were overruled.

Senator Burton was prosecuted on the charge of violating section 1782 of the revised statutes which prohibits senators and representatives from receiving compensation for services rendered before any of the government departments in any matter in which the government may be interested. He was specifically charged with accepting a fee of $500 per month for five months from the Rialto Grain & Securities company of St. Louis for services rendered that company in an effort to prevent the issuance of an order from the postoffice department prohibiting the use of the mails by the company.

This was Senator Burton's second appeal to the supreme court. In the first case the circuit court found him guilty and imposed the same penalty that was imposed in the present case but the supreme court reversed the decision in the first instance because it was made to appear that the money was paid in Washington and not in St. Louis where the case was tried.

Washington, May 21.—If Senator Burton does not resign "at once," as a prominent senator puts it, a resolution will be introduced to declare his seat vacant.

BLOODY FIGHT AT CHISHOLM

One Man is Dangerously Wounded But He May Recover.

Chisholm, Minn., May 21.—(Special to The Herald.)—As a result of a bloody free-for-all fight, last night, in a Lake street saloon, owned by Jovo Hajbukovic, one man lies very dangerously wounded in Adams' hospital, at Hibbing, and two others languish in jail on charges of committing the assault.

The injured man is Sam Rajovic, and the duo said to be responsible for his condition, Jake Vitich and Mile Rickovich. Mike Alnich and John Kodovitch are implicated in the affair, as aides to the two men who are in jail.

The fight occurred between 8 and 9 o'clock. All of the participants were drunk, and at the conclusion of considerable drunken wrangling, Rajovic was hit over the head with chairs. Vitich and Rickovich are said to have wielded them, and to have had the assistance of Alvich and Kodovitch.

Rajovic's skull was fractured, and he suffered other painful and dangerous injuries. He was removed at once to the Hibbing hospital, where his life was despaired of for a time. His condition is much improved this morning, however, and he may recover.

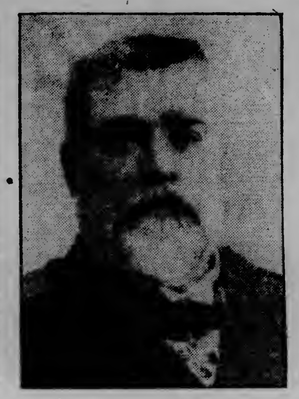
After the attack, Rajovic's assailants fled, but they were captured and lodged in jail. Their preliminary hearing takes place this afternoon.

ASKS EXPLANATION; GETS FATAL BULLET.

Bluefield, W. Va., May 21.—Charles Brown, a traveling salesman, who was shot three times by Henry McNew at Witten's Mioll, Va., late Saturday afternoon and who was brought to Bluefield hospital on a special train, died yesterday. It is alleged McNew insulted Brown's wife and when Brown called on McNew to explain his conduct, McNew opened fire. McNew escaped to the mountains and a sheriff's posse is now searching for him.

GEN. STOESSEL AND ADMIRAL NEBOGATOFF TO BE EXECUTED

GEN. STOESSEL.



ADMIRAL NEBOGATOFF.

St. Petersburg, May 21.—It is rumored that the military court which has been investigating the surrender of Port Arthur and the batle of the Sea of Japan has condemned to death Lieut.-Gen. Stoessel, who commanded the Russian forces at Port Arthur, and Rear Admiral Nebogatoff, who comanded one of Admiral Rojestvensky's squadrons and who surrendered during the naval battle to the Japanese.

TRIPLE TRAGEDY AT WOODCLIFFE

Engineer Kills Daughter, Wounds Wife and Shoots Himself.

Woodcliffe, N. J., May 21.—John Cole, an engineer, killed his daughter, Maria, with an ax today, attacked his wife with the same weapon, striking her in the head and probably fatally injuring her, and then killed himself by shooting. The tragedy followed the departure from Cole's house of a young man, to whom it is said the daughter was engaged. The girl was still looking in the direction in which the young man had disappeared when her father, ax in hand and upraised, sprang out at her. The girl jumped back, but as she dodged the father drove the ax into her skull, and she fell, dying instantly. As the girl fell, her mother ran from the house, and was immediately attacked by Cole, who rendered her unconscious with a single blow. Then the man drew a revolver and killed himself.

MOORS TAKE PASSENGERS FROM AMERICAN STEAMER.

Melilla, Morocco, May 21.—The steamer Manolita, bound from Tetuan, Morocco, for this port, and flying the American flag, has been attacked by Moors, who took away some of her passengers. The Manolita's machinery got out of order, and she was obliged to approach the coast. While lying off Penon De Velez, about half way between Tetuan and Melilla, a number of Moorish fishermen swam off to hand over to them a number of Moorish passengers belonging to the Beni Barraguel tribe.

U. S. CONSUL MURDERED

Victim an Englishman Representing the United States.

Batoum, May 21.—W. H. Stuart, the American vice consul, was shot and killed at his country home last night. The assassin escaped.

Mr. Stuart was a British subject and one of the largest ship brokers and exporters of Batoum. During the revolutionary troubles of last fall his life was many times threatened by longshoremen, and at Christmas a deputation visited Mr. Stuart's office and practically compelled him to give them $1,500 under the guise of a holiday gratuity for dock laborers.

Washington, May 21.—Vice Consul Stuart, who was killed at Batoum, was an Englishman, 49 years old and had filled the position for about two years. At the time of his death he was acting consul.

Batoum is situated on the east coast of the Black sea and has a population of 30,000. They are chiefly Turks and Armenians. It is the part of the Russian oil district and the shipping of oil is the chief industry.

The state department received information of the murder in a dispatch from Ambassador Meyer at St. Petersburg. The dispatch said the murderer escaped. No details of the crime were given.

Ambassador Meyer having taken cognizance of the case, the state department officials do not believe that it requires action at their hands at this moment. It is not doubted that the Russian government will make every effort to capture the assassins and mete out full punishment to them and it is consequently felt to be well to allow them to proceed in that direction without further pressure.

LOSS NOT SO GREAT

By the Forest Fires in Michigan as at First Reported.

Rain Is Now Falling and All Danger From Flames Past.

Marinette, Wis., May 21.—All danger from forest fires is past. It is raining this morning and the wind has died out. The loss everywhere is believed to have been greatly exaggerated.

The I. Stephenson company at Wells, Mich., was the heaviest loser and its losses will not be more than $40,000. Most of the buildings destroyed were of frame construction. The sawmills destroyed were all small ones worth not more than $5,000 to $15,000. The total loss in the burned area will not be more than $200,000. The number of settlers burned out has also been greatly exaggeratcd. Some papers have placed it as high as two thousand. Considering the way in which the northern country is settled it is certain that not five hundred have been burned out and it is probable that the actual number who lost their homes is not more than two hundred and it may not reach this amount.

The most damage is at Quinnisec, Mich., a large town which was destroyed but the fire there was not due to a forest fire but due to a bonfire in the rear of a livery stable. There are no woods around Quinnisec.

PUTER IS CAPTURED

Arrested in Alameda, Cal., at the Point of Pistol.

Is Accused of Complicity in the Oregon Land Frauds.

San Francisco, May 21.—S. A. D. Puter, accused of complicity in the Oregon land frauds and who has been hunted for months by the federal authorities since he escaped from detectives at Boston, was arrested at Alameda yesterday by secret service men. Puter did not willingly submit to arrest but attempted to draw a revolver. The detectives quickly covered him with their pistols but even then had much trouble in getting their prisoner to the station. Puter arrived from New York three days ago and went to Alameda. He took a room in a lodging house in Park street. Saturday night he visited his wife at Berkeley and after remaining there several hours returned to his lodging house. The secret service men learned of Puter's whereabouts by shadowing a woman. He was on his way to keep an appointment with this woman when arrested.

Puter had taken the name of James William Barr and traveled under that alias since leaving the East. He informed the detectives that he had engaged passage on a steamer for China and intended leaving for that country in a few days. According to the secret service men Puter's room in Park street resembled an arsenal. Over his bed hung a rifle and in a drawer was a heavy revolver, beside the one found in his possession when captured.

Boston, May 21.—Stephen A. D. Puter, who was arrested at Alameda, Cal., yesterday, made a sensational escape from Deputy United States Marshal W. J. Burns in Boston on March 26. Deputy Burns, who had been detailed to find Puter, discovered the man as he was applying for his mail at the Fenway postal station, in Boylston street. He immediately arrested Puter and started to take him to the nearest police station. He had gone only a short distance, however, when Puter suddenly pulled out a revolver and threatened to shoot the officer. Before the deputy had recovered from his surprise, Puter had disappeared.

FEUD FOUGHT OUT IN DEPOT

Seven Men Shoot and Slash Without Any Interference.

Cincinnati, May 21.—A bloody battle was fought at the Southern depot in Walton, Ky., twenty miles south of Covington, yesterday and as a result William Merrett lies in a precarious condition at his home near Walton with his throat cut from ear to ear, by a pocket knife; the arm of George Marchant was fractured by a bullet from a revolver and Clayton Anderson is suffering from concussion of the brain caused by several blows of a pick handle and others with various hurts. The injured are recent settlers in Walton from the feud district of the Kentucky mountains. Seven men were in the fight and they were not interfered with.

Citizens of Walton stood aside and watched the fight, fearing that any attempt at peace making would result in harm to themselves.

After the fight it was said, by those who took part, that the trouble arose over an old mountain feud.

No arrests were made and the wounded were taken to their homes.

TO BE READY FOR AN EMERGENCY

Marines to be Held at Cuba, Awaiting Panama Elections.

Washington, May 21.—Although no official statement to that effect cannot be had, it is known that the marines now being shipped on the cruiser Columbia at League Island, Pa., are bound primarily for Guantanamo, Cuba, there to be kept in readiness for any emergency that may arise on the isthmus of Panama. The elections that will take place there next month may be accompanied by revolutionary disorders, in fact certain inquiries that have been directed to Governor Magoon by discontented party leaders have been followed by threats of an uprising against the Amador administration. These have led Secretaries Root and Taft to serve notice upon the malcontents that no such manifestation will be permitted anywhere near the canal zone, or at any place where the peace of the zone may be threatened. To give effect to this notice the navy will have a sufficient force of marines on either side of the isthmus to maintain order, and to this end the Columbia is goin to a convenient point for observation and action if necessary on the gulf side, while the Marblehead is nearing Panama on the Pacific coast.

WEATHER FORECAST—Rain tonight and Tuesday; northeasterly winds.

"In my way of thinking," said Sherlock Holmes impressively, "every man should dress as well as his income will permit. If you look successful more success is apt to be your portion. If you look shabby you are apt to be treated shabbily, nine cases out of ten. And to dress well is no burden in these days of perfected ready-for-service clothes."

Burden! Surely not. It's a pleasure and an economical one. There is no taste so exacting that we can not please it; no man so poor that we can not satisfy his wants. This is a cosmopolitan store.

COCHRANE

SOME QUEER TRADES.

New York Sun: A request was recently sent out by an English paper for suggestions of novel ways of earning money. Some of the replies have novelty enough and to spare. Here are a few "professions" which were proposed.

A professional flee catcher, a custodian for safety pins, a collector of dried flies for hens' food, purveyor of fads to the leisure classes, a lion hunting agency for society's use, a motor car library to call at out of the way places with the newest books, a maker up of minds, a grievance abater, a manner teacher.

Evidently dried flies are in demand, for the suggestion of a dried fly merchant came from two quarters. As for the maker up of minds and an equivalent of the motor car library, they exist in New York at the present time.

So also does the umbrella and waterproof exchange recommended by another person. Among other occupations described as already followed is that of artistically painting, with harmless pigments, fictitous, if scanty, hair on bald heads.

"A man I know," says one answer, "makes his living out of funerals and weddings. He attends a funeral, gets a list of the wreaths from the undertaker (on reciprocal terms), takes a shorthand note of the minister's address, draws up a souvenir report of the whole thing, and offers it to the survivors.

"Bereaved people are an easy prey. Not infrequently he receives encouragement also from the printer or typist if he can persuade them to have it put in type.

"His tactics are similar in regard to weddings; but there, as he suffers severely from the competition of the newspapers, his great source of profit is acting as agent for the loan of wedding presents. It is said that at the second wedding of a well-known politician at Birmingham the presents were valued at £30,000, and two-thirds of them were hired. Commission on £20,000 worth of business is not to be despised."

Another case is that of a busy farmer's wife in Australia who had the misfortune to have a paralytic son who was bed ridden. She was a notable manager, and, considering the great cost of the invalid and the loss of his services on the farm she persuaded him to allow clutches of eggs to be placed with proper precautions in the bed, that the equal and continual warmth might hatch them. This was accordingly done, and the paralyzed youth was as proud of the broods as possible and thoroughly earned his living, besides gaining an interest in his life.

YACHTING EXPENSIVE.

New York Cor. Kansas City Star: The fleet of millionaires' steam yachts in Erie basin, numbering at least fifty, is in preparation for an early spring. J. P. Morgan's Corsair will be ready in a week, and H. H. Rogers's Kanawha is already in commission. Colonel Payne's Aphrodite, John Jacob Astor's Nourmahal, W. K. Vanderbilt's Virginia are all ready for summer cruises. Not one of these yachts cost less than $300,000 to build, and in most cases the cost was even greater.

That is the first expense, of course—the cost of construction. The cost of maintenance comes after. The skipper of the Corsair, Morgan's yacht, receives no less than $200 a month, if, indeed, he does not receive more; the mates are paid from $70 to $100 a month, while the pay of the seamen, the oilers and the firemen averages at least $50 a month. The pay of the chef depends upon his culinary ability, and while the average is said to be $50 a month, there are many nautical gastronomic artists who command considerably more than that.

The chef's assistants receive $30 to $40 a month, according to their ability, and the chief steward, who virtually runs the social end of the yacht, purchases supplies, attends to the reception of guests, and in other ways makes himself generally useful, and sees that everything in the way of a function goes off like clock work, is cheap at $125 or even $150 a month. Aside from the feeding of owners and guests the feeding of the fifty-eight men comprising the ship's company costs 50 cents a day for each man.

American Medicine: Marriage is an institution highly conducive to the health of both husband and wife.

Statistics prove that among married men over 20 years of age and women over 40 the mortality rate is far less than among those who remain single. Among the widowed and divorced the mortality is exceptionally great. Suicides among the unmarried are much more numerous than among the married.

The matrimonial state promotes temperance in every form. Furthermore, the probable duration of life of a married man of 20 exceeds that of his unmarried brother by five years, and the wife may expect to live one year longer than a single woman of the same age.

ON TRIAL FOR LIVES

John Spejar and Joseph Sertich Are Facing a Jury.

Are Charged With the Murder of Charles Peterson.

John Spejar and Joseph Sertich were placed on trial for their lives this morning, the charge against them being murder in the first degree, the penalty for which is death by hanging, without the alternative of life imprisonment.

The entire morning session was taken up in securing a jury, 34 talesmen being examined before twelve were accepted. Most of those excused from service at this trial expressed their disapprobation of capital punishment. It lies with the jury, however, to return a verdict in a lesser degree, or to acquit entirely.

The following twelve men have been chosen to decide the fate of Spejar and Sertich.

Christ Vangen, woodturner, West Duluth.

Rufus H. Redman, buyer for Wright-Clarkson Mercantile company.

George H. Schulenburg, grocer, London road.

William B. Dunn, draughtsman, Smithville.

George D. Lucore, manager Duluth Candy company.

Nels H. Nyhus, livestock dealer, West Duluth.

Marcus Calvert, farmer, town of Industrial.

Richard W. English, contractor, West Duluth.

John Sundeen, grocer, West End.

Robert Ferguson, laundryman, Duluth.

John C. Walker, contractor, Duluth.

Victor Stearns, F. S. White and Alfred Jaques were triers. Several challenges were submitted to them during the examination of jurors.

The alleged murder for which Spejar and Sertich are being tried occurred March 22 last, near the old townsite of Aurora. Charles Peterson was found dead in the snow near the road with his pockets showing every sign of having been rifled. Death seemed to have resulted from gunshot and knife wounds.

Several days afterward Spejar and Sertich, two Austrians who are alleged to have been seen in company with Peterson the night of the tragedy, were arrested at Hibbing where they were employed in one of the mines. They left Aurora the day following the murder.

The state, it is understood, has a strong chain of circumstantial evidence with which it expects to entangle Spejar and Sertich and establish their guilt.

The two men are defended by J. D. Holmes and J. H. Morton and they are being tried together instead of seeking separate trials.

APPEAL TO CHURCHES

For $300,000 for Relief of Presbyterians at San Francisco.

Report of Board of Missions for Freedmen is Submitted.

Des Moines, May 21.—The Presbyterian general assembly in annual session here today adopted a resolution calling on the Presbyterian churches of America to raise $300,000 for the relief of churches which suffered from the San Francisco disaster. The third Sunday in June, or as soon thereafter as possible is the date fixed for the taking of a collection in every church.

The committee on bills and overtures submitted its first report today recommending action on several important issues. In each case the action of the assembly followed the recommendation of the committee of which retiring Moderator Moffat is chairman. The overture of the presbytery of Freeport, Ill., requests that the journals of the assembly refrain from printing advertising of proprietary medicines containing alcohol. The assembly deprecated the publication of such advertisements but takes no action because the specific overture does not apply to journals of the assembly.

The overture of the presbytery of Topeka, Kan., protests again Sunday funerals. The assembly disapproves all work on the Sabbath and requests all ministers to aid in diminishing Sunday funerals except where absolutely necessary.

On the overture of the presbytery of Boulder, Colo., asking the creation of a society on "applied christianity," the assembly takes no action.

Forty-five presbyteries submitted overtures on "common worship and forms of service." The committee recommended that this be laid on the table, to be taken up when the report of the committee on forms and service is reached.

The report of the board of missions for freedmen stated that the hopes with which the board began this year had not been realized, but the disappointments had been greatly mitigated by the increase of the receipts, which passed the $200,000 mark for the first time. The women's societies contributed $51,709, the Sabbath schools $11,275, and young people's societies and miscellaneous sources $2,053. The sum of $70,900 was distributed as follows: Salaries, $21,883; scholarships, $19,297; general fund for school purposes, $14,851; building fund, $14,758. The Sabbath schools had advanced in contributions the past year, but there is yet room for a great forward movement, as but 22% had remembered the freedmen, there remaining over 7,000 to be enlisted.

The Christian school is recognized as a necessity in every department of mission work. This is especially true of the work among the freedmen. The total number of schools established and maintained is 108, with 332 teachers and 14,118 pupils.

The freedmen are advancing in many instances toward self-support. Their total gifts for church and school during the year reached the sum of $143,631, of which amount $67,631 was in support of schools.

Entertains Fishing Party.

William Wilson entertained the "Up-the-Creek" club, Sunday, at Hotel de Miller, on Eagle lake. The party left Duluth Saturday afternoon and reached the lake in the evening. "Billy" Smith acted as chef for the banquet in the evening, and Frank S. Sleeper performed the duties of master of ceremonies. The banquet was followed by refreshments and cigars from Mine Host, and others of the party made speeches. T. W. Walker bore off the honors as a fisherman. He caught a speckled trout from Eagle lake that weighed three pounds. All members of the party had excellent luck, so that the baskets were well filled when the return trip was made last evening. In the party were William Wilson, William Smith, L. Culbertson, E. S. Sleeper, George Mason, T. W. Walker, Burt Holcomb and C. B. Eskelson.

OHIO COURT SUSTAINED IN THE HAY RATE CASE.

Washington, May 21.—The supreme court of the United States today affirmed by a divided court the decision of the circuit court for the northern district of Ohio in the interstate commerce case known as the hay rate case. The case grew out of the change of hay from the sixth to fifth class of freight by the leading railroads, and the interstate commerce commission sought to prohibit the change through a writ of injunction. This the circuit court refused to grant and today's decision sustains that action. Justice Holmes declined because of his interest in one of the roads involved to participate in the decision. Owing to the fact that the court was divided there was no written opinion in the case.

The lower courts awarded the unsual sum of $9,000, and the railroad company appealed the case.

MINING CAMP TRAGEDY.

Woman Shot by Husband and He is Killed Later.

Rhyolite, Nev., May 19.—Drunk and desperately angry, Stephen O'Brien, former president of the Tonopah Miner's union, on Saturday murdered his wife, Mrs. Ellen O'Brien, a trained nurse. He was shot and killed by Deputy Sheriff J. R. McDonald.

O'Brien, who had for some months been separated from his wife, who had brought suit for divorce, commanded her to have the proceedings dismissed and return to him. This she refused to do, thereupon he shot her twice, in the face and breast. She ran out of the house and across the street to a drug store and died there a few minutes later.

The shooting attracted a number of people who were preparing to lynch the murderer. O'Brien came out to the hotel with a revolver in one hand and a miner's candlestick in the other. Sheriff McDonald and Justice of the Peace John Donnelly rushed to the scene and the former grabbed the murderer, who pulled away. Donnelly jumped between the two and O'Brien stabbed him with the sharp end of the candlestick, but only broke the skin. McDonald then shot O'Brien dead, the bullet penetrating the heart.

A coroner's jury, which was summoned immediately, acquitted the deputy sheriff.

WILL MAINTAIN LUMBER PRICES

Manufacturers Are Not Disposed to Force Another Advance.

Northern lumber manufacturers are disposed to maintain present quotations rather than attempt any further advance in lumber prices. No advance in prices has been reported for some days and the market is said to be firm.

The vessel transportation rate from Duluth to Lake Erie and Lake Michigan continues to be $2.25 per thousand feet. The carriers attempted to get a uniform rate of $2.50 for the season, but some early chartering was made on the basis of $2.25 and that seems to be the going rate.

The lumber movement down the lakes continues quite heavy. The lake marine strike came to an end just in time for the carriers, as the owners of lumber tonnage were beginning to wonder if they were not to have their coal supply curtailed.

Late prices have not undergone a decline, in spite of the fact that the new cut rate is now in the market. The supply is said to be steadily absorbed by the trade at the old prices. No immediate changes in the prices are expected. The Virginia Lumber company is said to be getting all the orders for lumber and lath in the car trade that it can fill.

At Scanlon, Minn., the Brooks-Scanlon Lumber company is operating its big mill on a day shift only. It is understood that the company will begin running a night shift as soon as it can get a crew together. From 50 to 75 per cent of the mill's production will go through Duluth for Eastern delivery by the lake route. Formerly the mill sawed for the car trade.

The Tower Lumber company at Tower is said to have sold practically every foot of stock to be cut this season. All the Norway pine lumber goes to the Edward Hines Lumber company of Chicago and the white pine stock to Pittsburg. The mill will saw about 30,000,000 feet of norway and about 10,000,000 feet of white pine. Lumber shipments are being made from Two Harbors.

BUILDING ON STILTS

Chicago Skyscraper on Jackscrews During Past Five Years.

Closely Guarded Secret Well Kept From the Public.

Chicago, May 21.—One of Chicago's sky scrapers, containing a hotel, a theater and offices, has been on "stilts" for five years, and the public has been none the wiser.

Five years ago jackscrews were placed under the foundation of the Majestic hotel building, which adjoins the Great Northern hotel, to "take up" any settling that might occur. Every little while the building settles a few inches and the jackscrews are used to elevate the building to the old level.

Building Commissioner Bartzen does not detect any danger in the situation, and thinks the jackscrew foundation might be safely maintained with actual advantage for an indefinite period. Other buildings which, like the Majestic hotel, have been on "floating foundations" have been placed on concrete or piling foundations within the last year.

A notable example of strengthening a floating foundation was afforded when concrete caissons were placed beneath the old Marshall Field building at State and Washington streets. The building was supported by gigantic crossbeams of steel while twenty-six concrete caissons were sunk down to bedrock. The only indication in the building that such work was in progress was the displacement of a few pieces of plaster here and there.

The Majestic hotel building, which extends from Quincy street to Jackson boulevard, between Dearborn and state streets, is 100 feet wide and fifteen stories high. Adjoining it on the west and constructed after the same pattern is the Great Northern hotel, facing on Dearborn street.

The Majestic building belongs to the Majestic Building company, of which Washington Porter is president and Nate R. Salisbury is secretary. It was built a number of years ago according to plans and specifications considered up to date at that time. The foundation was of concrete and stone resting on the soil.

For fifteen years this foundation sufficed and then the building began to settle. Dozens of large jackscrews were then placed beneath the north, south and west walls, the east wall apparently being on a secure base.

The fact that the building was on "stilts" was a closely guarded secret, the owners of the building and the managers of the hotel and theater thinking that if the fact were made public it would create unnecessary alarm. Besides, they had the word of the building department for it that the measures they were taking to insure the safety of the building were entirely adequate. This view is still held by the building department. Edward F. Kelling, inspector for the downtown district, visits the building frequently and has found nothing to cause alarm.

The Majestic building is the only building in Chicago that has been on "stilts" for so long a period. Whenever a new skyscraper is built it is necessary to put jackscrews under the abutting walls, which generally sag a few inches during the progress of the work. The jackscrews, however, are removed as soon as the foundation of the new skyscraper is strong enough to prevent abutting walls from settling farther.

ASTOUNDING CHARGE MADE

That Austrian Emperor's Companion Was Bribed to Obtain Pardon.

Vienna, May 21.—The astounding charge is made that Mme. Katti Schratt, who for twenty years has been Emperor Francis Joseph's companion and counsellor, accepted jewels worth $10,000 to obtain from the emperor his pardon for the brothers Joseph and Daniel Baruch.

These men were purveyors to the army and were convicted of frauds in filling their contracts. It was then, Joseph Baruch swears, they bribed Mme. Schratt to play the part of Mme. de Pompadour.

Any role would be easy for her, for she was formerly an actresss of the Court theater here, the Austrian Comedie Francaise, and has played in the Thalia theater, New York, when it was managed by Heinrich Conried.

The accusation against the emperor's intimate friend is made in the indictment in legal proceedings brought by Joseph Baruch against his brother. In a sense the charge is a compliment to Juan Schratt, for Joseph Baruch says so honorable was she that, when her coaxings failed to gain the emperor's intercession, she returned the jewels to Daniel Baruch. But he has withheld them from Joseph, to whom they belong, and who wishes to gain possession of them.

The public was excluded from the court while the case proceeded, and it was soon adjourned.

Juan Schratt will be one of the witnesses. The old monarch's confidante, now perhaps 55 years old, is still beautiful. Her once slender, aristocartic figure inclines to be matronly, but time has not dulled her blue eyes nor stolen the luster of her light brown hair.

But time has changed the emperor's constant devotion, so remarkable in a Hapsburg, to a platonic affection. He visits her constantly, whether she be in her villa, near Ischl, or her flat on the Elizabeth strasse—which is not Vienna's Fifth avenue, but rather its Gramercy park.

The Viennese respect the "Frau Kaiserin," as they call her, and are grateful to her for comforting their emperor's declining days.

WORTH $100,000 TO BE N.Y. SENATOR

Witness Says the Money Comes Largely From Insurance Companies.

Washington, May 12.—Some additional inside light was thrown on insurance methods in New York today by Representative James Goulden of that state before the house committee on judiciary considering the Ames bill for the regulation of insurance in the district of Columbia. Mr. Goulden is general agent of the Pennsylvania Mutual Life in New York.

"Why," he said, "it was a well conceded fact that to be a senator at Albany was worth anywhere from $50,000 to $100,000 a year and that the money came largely from insurance companies. This is no secret. Every New York man knows it. I know it, I know it well.

Touching on the campaign contribution, Mr. Goulden said that his company had given $10,000 to a national campaign committee in 1896. He did not say which campaign committee received the money, but remarked that the same thing was tried in 1900 and 1904 but without success, owing to the firm stand taken by Mr. Plymton of Massachusetts, one of the directors who declared that every director who voted for such contributions would be held personally liable for the amount.

The hearings on the Ames bill closed with the testimony of Mr. Goulden.

TWO MEETINGS BEING HELD

Greysolon Road Pavement and Garbage Disposal Discussed.

Two important meetings are being held this afternoon in the city hall.

One meeting is for the purpose of deciding what kind of pavement shall be selected for Greysolon road. There are only about twenty property owners interested, as most of the land is held by large owners, and it will be an easy matter to decide which kind of pavement will be selected.

The other is a mass meeting of all citizens interested in the proposed garbage collection contract. On the result of this meeting will depend largely the action of the council this evening.

Some strong opposition has developed to the bid, and the meeting this afternoon is likely to bring up an animated discussion on the merits and shortcomings of Mr. Root's proposal.

PRESENCE EXPLAINED.

Man Seen Leaving Burning Building, Went in to Get Typewriter.

The presence of a man in the building, occupied by the Zenith Paper company at the time of the fire last evening, was satisfactorily explained today.

One of the employes of the company stated that he was near the building when the fire started, and that he ran down to the office to see what he could save. He picked up a typewriter, which was on a desk close to the door, and ran out with it, taking it to a place of safety. This was just before the fire department reached the scene.

Dress and Women

One's dress somehow seems to walk a pace or two in advance of one and to be a sort of introduction. You have seen clothes that amounted to a certificate of character—clothes that said as plainly as though it were lettered on their sides: "Here's a woman of fashion—a woman who knows—who can give reasons—who is the acme of style." And then there are other clothes.

The big thing about S. & B. Co.'s wearing apparel is that they can be depended upon to say the right thing at all times and in all places. They do not scream, but they deliver the message quietly, firmly and effectively. You can wear and show them everywhere and they immediately proclaim the wearer a woman of refinement and taste.

Clothes that will do this for one—well, there is no way of quite computing their value and such clothes are always and only to be found here for the Head of the Lakes.

Special Values - Colored Wash Fabrics

The thing that distinguishes this wash goods section from all others, and which is in fact characteristic of our entire store, is that we avoid and abhor all job lots, bankrupt sales, and purchases of last season's leftovers. Every piece here is selected with care, taste and discrimination and is exclusive to the last degree. But more important yet to bear in mind is that piece for piece and quality for quality, you pay no more and usually less here for the fine stuffs than you do for the cheap and passe sorts elsewhere. Test this for yourself.

TOGO SILKS—Pretty, soft fabric. For dresses and waists—will launder well—all popular shades, 45c yard.

IMPORTED DIMITIES—The real Irish kinds—always dainty—washable—in small and large effects—25c and 35c yard.

New Dress Goods

In no department is our pre-eminence in the better grades of goods more marked than in this section. Fine dress goods and a fine store are always synonymous. For this week:

FANCY PLAID SKIRTINGS—in the black-and-white and navy-and-white combinations now so much in demand—$1.10, $1.35 and $1.50 the yard.

Workman Killed Who Objected to Working on Lord's Day.

St. Paul, May 21.—(Special to The Herald.)—Peter Tracy, aged 36, of 152 Forbes avenue, was killed yesterday afternoon on the farm of O. E. Chubb, near Inver Grove, while engaged in repairing an artesian well. Chubb was also seriously injured.

The men were replacing pipes in an artesian well, and had improvised a lever with the limb of a tree and chains. While one of the pipes was being lowered, the chain slipped, and the pole struck Tracy on the head, fracturing his skull. Death resulted instantly.

Chubb was hurled several feet and fell unconscious. His most serious injury was a fracture of the jaw. It is stated that Tracy objected to working on Sunday, but was persuaded to assist his employer in the work of repairing the well.

NO STRIKE EXPECTED

Firemen's Vote Looked to be Against Enforcing Demands.

New Longshoremen's Organization at Detroit---Out to Do Keefe.

It is generally believed that there will be no strike of marine firemen. The matter is hanging in the balance for the reason that a referendum vote is being taken in the union of Marine Firemen, Oilers and Water Tenders, and the decision will not be known for a day of two yet. But it is expected that the members of the union will vote against striking.

Should another marine strike occur, about 6,000 firemen and water tenders would be involved. There are 1,000 boats in the Lake Carriers' association, and each employs about three firemen and three water tenders. The total number who would be on strike, including the grain scoopers, would be in the neighborhood of 10,000 at least.

The tugmen will go to work on their new scale today. This year the licensed men—that is, the masters and engineers of the tugs belonging to the Great Lakes Towing company, will have full charge of their subordinates, such as the firemen and linemen. The officials of the company claimed that these men violated their contracts in several instances last year, and they wished to have them under control. Therefore the company insisted that the licensed men should have the hiring and discharging of these men this year and would be responsible for them.

The L. T. P. A., like other unions of today, does not countenance violation of contract, and therefore acceded to the demands of the company in this respect, and firemen or linemen of the tugs will find themselves up against a chilly proposition in their own central union this year should they start in to break a contract.

Word comes from Detroit that a new organization of longshoremen to buck the old organization headed by Daniel J. Keefe has been organized in Detroit, with Luke Hawley as president and William J. Frasier as secretary.

The failure of Keefe's organization to win in the recent strike betrayed the weakness of the old organization in Detroit, where it was born.

Luke Hawley, who for some time has been out of the old organization, and who with many followers has been fighting Keefe and Barter, believes that the time is ripe for a new union, and the organization was perfected at a meeting held in Roudy's hall, River Rouge, Wednesday night.

Out of about 2,000 dock workers in Detroit and vicinity, it is declared that not a hundred belong to Keefe's organization. Hawley and Frasier say the new organization will get after all of the Detroit workers, and once firmly established in Detroit, will broaden out and make it an international affair.

Already the new union has secured contracts to unload boats from a number of down-river firms, including the Restrick Lumber company and other lumber companies on the Rouge.

Hawley believes that Keefe is just about down and out, and that the members of the old union are thoroughly dissatisfied with the way things have been managed.

As it is not likely that Keefe will stand by and see Hawley unload boats and organize men not now in any union, it is thought that there may be fireworks on the Detroit river at almost any time.

SECOND IN TONNAGE.

But Duluth is Fifth in Valuation of Receipts and Shipments.

According to the figures of United States Engineer W. V. Judson, Duluth is second of the five big ports of the Great Lakes in point of tonnage, but fifth in point of valuation of receipts and shipments for last year's business. In point of valuation the order of the ports is thus: Buffalo, Chicago, Milwaukee, Cleveland and Duluth, the amounts of valuation being:

Buffalo	$361,559,682 43
Chicago	227,458,060 55
Milwaukee	198,224,513 25
Cleveland	147,344,821 76
Duluth	110,791,180 10

In point of tonnage the five ports rank as follows:

	Tons.
Chicago	14,783,619
Duluth	14,506,408
Milwaukee	12,900,156
Buffalo	11,571,171
Cleveland	10,538,229

WRECK UNLIGHTED.

Sunken Steamer Armenia is Menace in Lake Erie.

Capt. Frank Boyer of the steamer B. Lyman Smith, who is in the city, claims that the report that he struck the sunken steamer Armenia in Lake Erie is untrue. He says he passed the wreck in daylight and was clear of it by 1,000 feet or more.

The Duluth hydrographic officer, Capt. A. Swenson, says that a report was made to him regarding the wreck by Capt. Gunderson of the steamer Henry Steinbrenner, who says it is a menace to navigation in Lake Erie, as it lies in the track of boats between Colchester and Middleground lights, in Canadian waters. He says that the Canadian government should mark the wreck by a light at night. The steamer is west, northwest of the Middleground light.

Crowded at Ore Docks.

An enormous amount of tonnage is in the Duluth-Superior harbor today. Since Saturday morning fifty-nine vessels have arrived, the greater number of them for ore. So glutted have the ore docks become that the vessels coming light for ore are being held at anchor in the lower harbor waiting for the docks to become freed from the steamers which are there demanding cargoes now.

RAILROADS

McDONNELL QUITS JOB

Nothing Further to Do With Rainy Lake Extension.

Hill Will Build a Line From Vancouver to Duluth.

Although officials of the Duluth, Rainy Lake & Winnipeg line have made no statement concerning the matter, no doubt is said to exist that P. McDonnell, who was awarded the contract for the construction of the line from Ashwa to the International boundary, will have nothing further to do with the work. It is understood that he has withdrawn altogether, and that the railroad company will build on the extension itself, or else relet the contract.

Mr. McDonnell's intentions were all right, but when he got fairly into the job he found that he had taken hold of something that was a good deal bigger and harder to handle than he had at first supposed. The construction of this piece of track will be one of the most difficult jobs in the railroad line that has been tackled in Minnesota for a long time, owing to the nature of the country through which the road will run, and Mr. McDonnell is said to have concluded that to continue the work would mean a big money loss.

Just what steps were taken to release him from all responsibility in the matter are not known, but it is understood that the work was progressing so slowly that it became evident to the railroad officials that their line would not be completed until a date much later than was originally figured on. This made the outlook a serious one, for it is desired to have the work completed at the earliest possible date, in view of the fact that two other lines, the Great Northern and Minnesota & International, are building toward the border, or are about to do so.

For this reason it is important that the Duluth, Rainy & Winnipeg be finished as soon as circumstances will permit, to get in ahead of the competing lines. When the Rainy Lake people found how things were going, and that there was apt to be a big delay in the construction work, they began to get worried, it appears, and when opportunity finally presented itself, were not averse to releasing the Duluth man from his contract, and taking up the work themselves. The contract may be relet, but it is considered likely that the road will look after building the extension itself.

Mr. McDonnell has already taken in a large amount of supplies, and put quite a number of men at work. More men will probably be sent into the district within the next few days, and the job will be pushed with all possible speed. Much of the territory to be traversed by the extension is of a very swampy character, and building operations will be expensive, and carried on under difficulties.

The crew surveying for an extension of the same line from Virginia to Duluth, which started work several weeks ago, as was announced in The Herald, is now within the city limits. It is not easy to tell just now, however, the exact route the line will follow when it gets into Duluth.

VANCOUVER TO DULUTH.

J. J. Hill Says That He Will Build Another Transcontinental Line.

J. J. Hill is reported as indicating his intention within a few years of having a line continuous from Vancouver, B. C., to Duluth, via Winnipeg, although the course outlined seems to show that the object of construction will be rather to reach the wheat lands to the north of the Canadian Pacific than to form a competing transcontinental line.

The railway magnate figures that he can build in an almost direct line from the boundary to Duluth over a country where a grade can be obtained not exceeding four-tenths of a mile on a total mileage of 280. Mr. Hill is quoted as saying:

"We have brought our terminals right into the heart of the city of Winnipeg, and we shall lose no time in getting our connecting link from the Minnesota boundary into the city constructed. It should be finished next fall. We are now pushing forward the grading on the branch lines from Gretna to Portage la Prarie and from Bottineau, vlo Boissevain and the Souris, to Brandon, having got terminals in both Brandon and Portage la Prairie. About the main line. We have fully decided on that. We have a line in British Columbia to Fernie, and we propose without unnecessary delay, to push that line across the great western prairie until Winnipeg is reached. We do not consider that (running his index finger across the territory south of the Canadian Pacific, from Lethbridge to near Weyburn) good land, and we propose to cross the Canadian Pacific and run a line considerably north of it, where the country is A No. 1, and where the local traffic is sure to be heavy."

"Then you are not thinking of the most direct transcontinental route, in order to capture passenger traffic?"

"No, we are not so much concerned in that as in tapping a territory prolific in agricultural resources. We figure that we can run in an almost direct line from the boundary to Duluth over a country where we can obtain a grade not exceeding four-tenths per mile on a total mileage of 280. Then add the sixty-odd miles from the boundary to Winnipeg. With a good roadbed and such grades as I have indicated, we can reduce the cost of hauling enormously, if not cut it in two."

BERNECHE GETS $1,500 VERDICT

Jury Awards Him Damages Against Building Contractor.

Wilfred Berneche who sued John W. Hilliard for $10,000 damages, has been awarded a verdict of $1,500. The verdict was made public at the opening of the district court this morning. The jury reached an agreement last Friday evening and returned a sealed verdict.

Berneche was employed by Mr. Hilliard. He alleges that while he was standing on the foundations of a new building under construction, a large rock that was being hoisted by derrick and tackle swung against him and he was knocked from the wall, striking on some timber and receiving injuries that will permanently disable him, he claims. Mr. Hilliard denied his responsibility for the accident or his liability for damages and claimed contributory negligence on the part of Berneche.

IS BARRED FROM HOME

Sevan Anderson, Living in Minneapolis, Deported to Canada.

Cannot Re-enter Country Because Afflicted With Disease.

When Sevan Anderson of Minneapolis tried to enter the United States yesterday, through the port of Duluth, arriving on a boat from Port Arthur, he learned from Immigrant Inspector William H. Dean of a law governing immigration, which he never knew existed. As a result of the law, Mr. Anderson was ordered returned to Canada, although he has been a resident of the United States, but not a citizen, for the past four years, and he will be barred from entering this country until such time as he recovers from trachoma, a contagious disease of the eye with which he is now afflicted.

Mr. Anderson was afflicted with the same disease when he crossed the border into Canada, but that makes no difference in the eyes of the government. The law reads that no alien, who has a contagious disease of any kind, shall be admitted to the United States. As Mr. Anderson has never taken out citizenship papers, he is still regarded as an alien by United States officials, and is so treated. He is 50 years of age and landed at New York from Sweden in May, 1902. He proceeded to Minneapolis, and has resided there ever since. Trachoma is a disease from which the patient does not easily recover, and it may be several years before Mr. Anderson is allowed to return to his home, unless he succeeds in eluding the immigrant inspectors, which is not at all likely, especially if he trys to get home again through Duluth.

If he had waited a while longer before going into Canada, and taken out citizenship papers, he could not have been compelled to return to the Dominion, no matter how serious the nature of his disease. This law, and the head tax law, requiring all aliens to pay a $2 head tax when entering the United States, whether for the first time or not, is said to be having the effect of making many persons take out citizenship papers who would not otherwise do so, particularly in and around Duluth, for they do not care to run the risk of being barred from the United States every time they wish to visit Canada, and later return to this country.

KING PETER IN DANGER

Political Complications of Servian Nation Rapidly Reaching Climax.

King May be Seized and Taken Out of Country.

Belgrade, May 21.—There will certainly be no reason for surprise if we hear that one of these nights King Peter is captured in his bed and conducted across the Danube, out of Servian territory.

He has reached such an impasse that it is difficult to see how he is going to get out of it. Servia, for twenty-five years past, has been a sort of vassal state for Austria. The Obrenoviches were the faithful allies of Franz Joseph. King Peter, however, is Russian in his sympathies and on coming to the throne made a feeble effort to shake off the Austrian yoke.

The first timid step in this direction was the commercial convention with Bulgaria, which would, undoubtedly, have been followed by a military one, in which Montenegro would have been included. Austria saw the danger at once. A Balkan combination of this kind would close the route to her onward march to Salonika, which is regarded as Austria's heritage when the break-up of the Ottoman empire comes.

Austria took her usual steps. She closed her frontier to Servian pigs, and in three weeks' time brought about a commercial crisis of such acuteness that the agreement with Bulgaria had to be modified. Unfortunately for King Peter, however, the immense majority of the country is radical—that is to say, anti-Austrian. If King Peter goes too far in his concessions to Vienna they will undoubtedly depose him.

King Peter, in his dilemma, thought of an appeal to Britain for aid, but King Edward replied by the stern nonpossumus—"First punish the regicides." All these latter are trailing their sabres over the pavements of Belgrade, masters of the garrison. King Peter is helpless. There is, undoubtedly, a strong movement to depose him. But what is most extraordinary, the person suggested as his successor is his brother, Prince Arsene Karageorgevitch.

This would, however, be pure comic opera politics. Prince Arsene is the never-do-well of a family none of whose members ever distinguished themselves for civic or other virtues. Undoubtedly he would suit excellently the gang of regicides who surround King Peter, as he certainly would not be troubled with scruples of any kind. It can hardly be believed that even Servian regicides would flagrantly defy public opinion by making him their king.

PLAN FOR MERGING BISBEE COMPANIES

...c. authorized capitalization of $20,000,000, divided into 2,000,000 shares, of the par value of $10. One million four hundred thousand shares of the par value of $14,000,000 will be set aside for the exchange of the outstanding stock of the four corporations. The issued stock of the four present companies aggregated 1,000,000 shares, with a total par value of $10,000,000.

One hundred thousand shares of the new stock, with a par value of $1,000,000, will be sold at par to the stockholders in proportion to their respective holdings. This is for the purpose of furnishing the corporation with a working capital, and under this arrangement, stockholders can buy one share for the new stock at $10 for every fourteen shares acquired by them in the exchange. The remaining 500,000 shares, valued at $5,000,000, shall remain in the treasury of the company.

At least 50 per cent of the outstanding stock in the four old companies must be exchanged in order to perfect the consolidation, and every stockholder must turn in all of his holdings. A portion of them will not be accepted.

Certificates of stock in the old corporations are to be sent to Charles Briggs and James Hoatson, trustees, in care of the Merchants' and Miners' bank, Calumet, Mich., before noon of the 20th day of June, 1906. If 50 per cent of the stock has not been turned in by that time, all will be returned to the holders. Those who are tardy in turning in their stock will not be permitted to subscribe to any part of the 100,000 shares, which will be issued to stockholders.

Stockholders may subscribe for any part of the 100,000 shares they may be entitled to. Responsible parties have agreed to buy at par, without commission, all of the shares left over.

No certificates for a fractional share shall be issued but the directors of the new corporation will so adjust the fractional shares on exchange and subscription that the total issue will not exceed 1,500,000 shares.

Stockholders are instructed, in assigning their certificates, to name the trustees, Charles Briggs and James Hoatson, as assignees and leave blank the name of the attorney in fact who is authorized to transfer the stock on the books of the corporation.

Following is the announcement to the stockholders, in part:

"Your directors having in view the stability of your investments under their control and the desire to render them permanent and secure, have for a long time, deliberated upon the possibility and advisability of perfecting a consolidation of Calumet & Pittsburg, Lake Superior & Pittsburg, Pittsburg & Duluth, and Junction Mining companies, on a basis fair to all, so that the properties can be operated as one mine and placed on a basis that will enable it to compete permanently as an independent producer with any other property in the country for a long period.

"The reasons which lead your directors to recommend this consolidation are:

"I. The properties are so situated as to be interdependent. The shafts of each are so located as to be very necessary to the economical development of its neighbor.

"II. As far as opened the ores of each property are a desirable complement of the ores of its neighbors to make the most satisfactory smelting mixture for economical operation.

"III. The net earnings of the four properties operated as one consolidated unit would be greatly in excess of the combined net earnings of the four operated as separate units.

"IV. It will be necessary, in the not distant future, to provide smelting facilities for these corporations.

"V. The stock of the Consolidated property will be a safer and more permanent mining investment than is the stock in any one of the present companies.

"VI. It will avoid the necessity of an expensive system of accounting and of sampling of ores and of adjusting differences in the values of the ores of the several companies.

"VIII. All the properties are so in-

"VII. All the properties are so interdependent that should at any time the controlling interest of any one become unfriendly to that of the others, it would be a matter of very serious concern to the stockholders.

"Your directors know that the actual value of the four properties cannot be definitely determined for many years and until after complete exploration of their whole territory and therefore they realize that the present determination of their relative values can be only approximate and not definite; but they believe that the benefits to accrue from an immediate consolidation, based upon the relative valuation possible with our present knowledge, would more than offset any temporary loss which any stockholder may conceive he would suffer from such consolidation."

GOVERNOR WAS SUCCESSFUL

In Getting Promise of Donation for Gustavus Adolphus College.

St. Paul, Minn., May 21.—An assurance of a large donation for Gustavus Adolphus college at St. Peter, a half hour's talk with the president, some valuable pointers on correctional institutions and the landing of the next annual conference of charities and corrections for Minnesota, were some of the results of Governor John's trip to the East.

Governor Johnson returned yesterday. He made no reference to the recent statement attributed to him in which he declared that Bryan was the man who would lead the Democratic party to victory if Roosevelt kept out of the game. Governor Johnson spent two days in New York. The principal object in going there was to ask Andrew Carnegie for a donation for Gustavus Adolphus college. Governor Johnson stated that he was practically assured of a liberal donation if the questions which are sent out by Carnegie concerning the work of the institution, are answered successfully. It is expected that the donation will be between $25,000 and $50,000. Governor Johnson, in company with L. A. Rosing, visited many of the state institutions for the purpose of study.

Why Many People Suffer From Constipation.

A Sure and Safe Relief.

Constipation is most often caused by a torpid liver or failure of the stomach and bowels to perform their proper functions. The condition is commonly due at first to irregular habits of living and improper food, and if properly treated can be readily relieved. It is, however, too often aggravated and made chronic by the use, as medicine, of powerful and expensive drugs, which purge and perhaps give temporary relief, but are so drastic in effect as to damage the tender lining of the stomach and bowels, leaving a condition worse than at first. This can, however, be avoided and the bowels gently and thoroughly opened by the use of Nature's own remedy—the famous Natural Mineral Laxative Water—HUNYADI JANOS—which has been relieving suffering mankind all over the world for nearly half a century. One dose, ½ a tumblerful, drunk on arising in the morning, (slightly warmed for best results) will, within an hour, bring a delightful and refreshing relief. A whole bottle costs but a trifle, and it is best to keep one always on hand. Every Druggist keeps it.

HOMESTEADER MEETS DEATH

Top of Tree Falls on Him While Burning Logs.

Deer River, Minn., May 21.—A special from Effie, Minn., to the Itasca News, says: While Charles Rowen and Oscar Paulson were clearing on the former's claim, in town 63-27, about sixty miles north of Deer River, on the 10th of this month, a burning tree broke off some distance up from the ground and pitched topmost downward, striking Paulson on the head, fracturing the skull, from which death resulted in about three hours.

His faithful friend did all in his power to relieve him, and immediately after death went to the only neighbors, Frank Hopper and A. J. Erickson and notified them of the untimely demise of his friend.

Then leaving them, he set out for the "Wright county" settlement, in 62-26, which he reached in the night, and at once his cousin, William Rowen, left for Bigfork to notify the coroner, and to try to get word to Paulson's relatives, of whom little was known. No word having been received from relatives or authorities, the remains were interred with appropriate burial service.

Oscar Paulson was known by a number of people in Deer River, he having worked here at the carpenter trade most of the summer a year ago. He was about 28 years of age, a quiet, industrious and temperate man. He was of Norwegian nativity. Deceased has a brother, Paul, who is a settler in the Wirt district. The brother went up to the Bigfork country Friday.

SAVED BY SIMPLE REMEDY.

"White Plague" Sufferer in Iowa is Restored to Health.

Clinton, Iowa, May 21.—Harry Maclay of this city, aged 22 years, who was in the secondary stages of tuberculosis, is experiencing a cure which is considered remarkable.

Five weeks ago he was weak and ill, scarcely able to walk, and troubled with all the symptoms of consumption. His sputum was examined by Dr. C. E. Eagan of the Illinois health board at Springfield, who said he was afflicted with tuberculosis in an advanced stage.

In this extremity the father of the young man, W. J. Maclay of 113 North Sixth street, Lyons, thought of a recipe he had received some time before from an aged man at Chadwick, Ill., who declared that the preparation would cure consumption.

He found the prescription and had it compounded. The ingredients of the medicine are butter, turpentine and organic oil. After using it for five weeks, young Maclay gained six pounds in weight and Clinton physicians say he is recovering rapidly, and that all traces of tuberculosis are disappearing from his system.

Mr. Maclay says the prescription was given him with the stipulation that he neither barter nor sell it, but give it free to the afflicted, and he is ready to make good this condition and to give or send it to any sufferer.

His son, who a few weeks ago was scarcely able to leave his bed, departed for Boone to visit relatives there.

DROPPED FROM TRAIN.

Finlander Escapes While Being Brought to County Jail.

Mount Iron, Minn., May 21.—By dropping from a moving train Victor Kapuri, a Finlander, succeeded in escaping from Marshal McLaughlin of this place while being taken to Duluth to serve a sentence in the county jail. He is still at large, and no trace of him has been found.

Kapuri was arrested on a charge of being drunk and disorderly, and was sentenced to sixty days. While the marshal was taking the prisoner to Duluth on a Missabe train, the latter asked to go to the closet. When the train began to slow up for the next stop he climbed out of the window, dropped to the ground and had run a considerable distance before the trick was discovered.

SOCIETY GIRL AND A YOUNG ATTORNEY ELOPE.

Menominee, Mich., May 21.—Another sensational elopement took place to this city last Friday night, the principals being Jeremiah Mulloy, a prominent young attorney of Menasha, Wis., and Miss Maude, a young society lady of that city.

The runaway couple telephoned ahead to have the details of the wedding arranged. They were driven in a hack from the station post haste to the home of Judge Van Den Berg, the famous marrying justice, where the county clerk was waiting to make out the license.

The formalities were finished, the wedding performed, and the young couple left in a few minutes, being driven hurriedly to the station in time to catch another train going south.

GREAT FUTURE AHEAD FOR BUTTE CITY CAMP.

Butte, Mont., May 21.—Eastern mining experts familiar with the conditions in Butte declare that the mines of this city are only in their primeval stages of development, that the most valuable ore bodies are yet to be encountered, and all unite in calling Butte "the greatest copper camp in the world."

The great Anaconda mine is pointed out as conclusive proof of their assertions. The arguments of Heinze and his engineers have proven correct and the lower levels have been found rich in copper ore, although the owners themselves formerly had grave doubts concerning the value below the 1,600-foot level. It was only necessary to sink through a zone of white iron pyrites. Rich ore was truck on the 2,200-foot level and the 2,400-fot level is just as good.

The return of Joseph A. Coram to Butte is creating much speculation in mining circles. It is almost generally conceded that F. Augustus Heinze is associated with the Boston man. Some interesting announcements are confidentially expected, as it is known that Mr. Coram and his associates have secured control of a large acreage of valuable ground in this city.

CUMMINS BOLT IN IOWA COUNTY

Two Sets of Delegates Chosen and Nearly a Riot.

Des Moines, Iowa, May 21.—In a convention that amounted almost to a riot, and finally ended in a Cummins bolt, Wapello county Republicans, Saturday afternoon, instructed its twenty-six delegates to the state convention to vote for George D. Perkins of Sioux City for governor.

In Des Moines the political leaders hung breathlessly on every detail of the convention which meant Perkins' defeat in the state if he had lost it. The final result—a vote of 112 for Perkins and 109 for Cummins, adds fresh hope to the Perkins leaders in the state.

The total instructed delegates for Cummins number 534; for Perkins, 447; and for Rathbun, 90; uninstructed, 66; total anti-Cummins, 505.

The week's results in the gubernatorial fight show great gains for Perkins. He has secured 166 delegates during the week to 31 for Cummins.

Perkins' headquarters claim that by the end of this week Perkins will have 620 delegates to 594 for Cummins.

The returns Saturday were very disappointing to the Cummins followers. There will be a fight to the finish now in every county in the state.

SENATORS NOT COMING

Nelson and Clapp Will Not Attend the State Convention.

Washington, May 21.—Neither Senator Nelson nor Senator Clapp will attend the Republican state convention at Duluth on June 13. Some of the most important legislation of this session, which has not come up in the senate because of the consideration of the rate bill, will be considered between now and adjournment, and the senators want to be here to participate in the consideration of this business.

GIRL SHOT BY FIANCE, IS WED AS SHE DIES.

Pittsburg, May 21.—Within a few hours of the one set for their marriage Saturday, Davis J. Coldren accidentally shot his fiancee, Bessie Regent, while they were arranging the furniture in their new home at 418 Budd street. The wound has been pronounced mortal.

No sooner had the girl been informed that she would probably die than she asked that Father O'Connor be sent for, and while she lay gasping for breath upon a cot in the Presbyterian hospital the marriage ceremony was performed. It was followed by the last rites of the church. A policeman then arrested Coldren and took him away.

GOVERNOR DAVIDSON

Takes Hand in Wiping Out Gambling in Outaganie County.

Appleton, Wis., May 21.—Governor Davidson has taken a hand in wiping out gambling in Ouatgamie county.

He has written Sheriff Koch that it is his duty to throw out all slot machines without waiting for complaints to be filed. As a result fifteen places in Kaukauna, each of which is operating from one to six machines, will no doubt be raided.

The governor's letter is the result of an attack on gambling made by Rev. A. W. Zeichel, representative of the Wisconsin Anti-Saloon league. Ziechel says he presented affidavits to the sheriff from fifteen persons on May 4, showing that the machines were in operation, but that the official refused to take action against the Kaukauna men, that place being his former home.

The governor has written a letter directing that slot machines in Outagamie county be removed.

A crusade is to be made also against raffling at church fairs. Sheriff Koch today sent out notices that if he learned of any church society holding a lottery of any kind arrests would follow. His decision was caused by the letter he received from Governor Davidson, saying in part, "It is your duty to confiscate all gambling devices of all kinds and destroy them."

The sheriff rules that the raffling indulged in at Catholic fairs here is gambling.

WOMAN KILLED THROUGH SON'S CARELESSNESS.

Fort Worth, Tex., May 21.—Near Weatherford, Parker county, a young man by the name of Carr discovered a nest of snakes in an old stump in the yard and placed two sticks of dynamite in the stump to blow it up. His mother was standing near and the force of the explosion was so great that a fragment of the stump struck her on the head, injuring her so badly that death resulted in a short time.

THOUGHTLESS CRUELTY.

Yesterday afternoon a man was drowned in the St. Louis river because of the thoughtless cruelty of other men who were in a position to save him and refused to do it.

J. A. Buchanan, the man who died, and R. G DeMary, both Superior men, were out in a canoe when the frail craft was overturned and both men were precipitated into deep water, a considerable distance from shore. DeMary found refuge on a pile that stuck up out of the water, and Buchanan clambered upon a boom log.

While they were in this situation, which should have appealed to everybody who saw them as desperately uncomfortable at the best, if not positively perilous, a gasoline launch and two rowboats came along at different times. The men in the boats looked, laughed, and passed on. One man in one of the rowboats shouted: "Hope you fellows will have a good time."

A little later Buchanan sought to swim to shore and rescue his companion, who could not swim, by making a raft. He was attacked by a cramp, apparently, and sank to his death.

What kind of men were those who saw these human beings in distress and refused to come to their rescue?

They will say that they did not realize their danger. Of course they did not, for they would have been infinitely less than human, if, seeing their peril, they had let them remain in it.

They will say that it was mere thoughtlessness, not cruelty or heartlessness, that led them to pass on instead of stopping to help their brothers to safety.

But that kind of thoughtlessness is often more cruel than malice, and does fully as much evil.

They could not fail to realize that the water was cold, that these men must have been wet to the skin and chilled to the bone, and that it was their duty to stop and help them. But they were too intent upon their Sunday pleasuring to take the time. They passed on, and a little later, thanks to their cruel heedlessness, one of the men gave up his life.

The lesson ought to sink deeply into their souls. It would have cost them little effort to stop and find out whether assistance was needed. And if they had stopped their minds would be much easier today.

But they all passed by on the other side, and there was no good Samaritan to come to the rescue. So a man's life was sacrificed by thoughtlessness, and not for the first time nor the last.

STRANGE FLESH FOODS.

Householders who are wrestling with the meat problem in this country and who are annoyed by the high prices inflicted upon the public by the beef trust, have no idea of what trouble is, compared with those in European countries who are forced to consume meat of a nature that would revolt the average American stomach.

Horses have been slaughtered for food in Europe for many years. Though the world was a bit amazed at the eating of horse meat during the siege of Paris a generation ago, when it was forced by the necessities of the famine, the flesh of horses has become a staple article of diet in many parts of Europe, and now even dogs are slaughtered for food.

In Germany, where both horses and dogs are consumed in great numbers, the condition is brought about largely by a high protective tariff against outside meats, so the consumer is up against the impositions of the tariff in a form that the American public has never yet dreamed of.

The Badische Landes Zeitung of Mannheim in a recent issue says that the consumption of horses and dogs never reached such a large total as in the fourth quarter of 1905. While the number of horses slaughtered in the fourth quarter of 1904 amounted to but 44,650, and in the first quarter of 1905 to but 35,966, in the fourth quarter of 1905 it rose to 52,584. Most of these horses were consumed in a few North German states, with Mecklenburg at the head. In Mecklenburg-Strelitz 29 steers and 136 horses were killed; in Mecklenburg-Schwerin 783 horses and only 256 steers were slaughtered.

In Anhalt 159 dogs were slaughtered for food. In Prussia 326 dogs, in Bavaria 181 dogs, and in Baden only three dogs were killed in the last quarter of 1905, while in Hessen there were none. According to official records there were 2,405 dogs slaughtered during the last quarter of 1905, as against 1,762 during the same quarter of 1904.

Those who have eaten horse flesh say that it is not bad at all, and that it is by no means greatly inferior to that of cattle. The horse is a cleanly, herbivorous animal, and there is no reason in its mode of living that should make its flesh other than wholesome. The dog, however, is something of a scavenger, and the thought of being driven to its flesh for food is much less agreeable than that of being compelled to eat horse meat.

OIL TRUST'S PRESS AGENT.

The announcement that the Standard Oil company is to have a press agent whose duty it shall be to see that the public gets the oil trust side of public affairs is a great tribute to the power of public opinion.

Through long years the Standard Oil company has disdained the public, except as an object of exploitation or a source of tremendous profit for smooth gentlemen equipped with ability to manipulate monopoly and high finance. Abuse has poured off its back as water drips from a duck's feathers. The very nature of its operations resulted in abuse and contumely as inevitably as night brings darkness. Yet it has never responded, except to defend itself in court when called upon to do so.

Now, however, it has seen a light. It has recognized in public opinion a rising force greater even than its own great power, a force that must be met and coped with before its flowing tide becomes irresistible and overwhelming. So the Standard Oil company is going to have a press agent to present to the public the other side of the story.

It was not until very recently that the Standard Oil chiefs even condescended to deny charges made against them. With the hypocritical affability of Uriah Heep they have accepted the torrents of condemnation that have been poured upon them. And now that they are denying things, they can't get anybody to believe them. They have denied charges of underhanded methods of competition, but the people that have viewed the wrecks of thousands of lives and the destruction of happiness in thousands of homes, wrought by the stealthy methods of monopoly, laugh at the denial. They deny that they have solicited or received rebates or special consideration from the railroads, and the people who have had abundant proof that they have are vastly aroused at this pretense of innocence.

So the Standard Oil company is going to have a press agent, who will furnish the public with interviews and statements showing what an innocent lamb the oil trust is, and how it has benefited a great people by its multitude of philanthropies. Soon newspaper offices over the country will be flooded with nicely typewritten "specials" from New York and Chicago telling about the virtues of Standard Oil, furnished free by the press agent, out of his overflowing benevolence and good will toward the newspaper man and unselfish consideration for his hungry cry for "copy".

So long as the Standard persists in its methods, the press agent will not help it much, but the new stand is instructive and encouraging to the people because it shows them what they can do to even the Standard Oil company by the mere force of their indignation.

A LONELY OPPONENT.

The Fergus Falls Journal, which ought to be a Northern Minnesota newspaper and stand for that which will build up this end of the state, is out with a specious argument against the drainage campaign, in which it says, among other things:

> Some time it may pay to drain the swamps and marshes of Northern Minnesota, but so long as there are hundreds of thousands of acres which are untilled, which can be cultivated without the great expense and trouble of drainage, it will not pay to do it. Those who own these swamps and wet lands naturally want them utilized and would welcome help, but nothing is to be gained by rushing into elaborate schemes of drainage until the people are ready and want the lands.

It is difficult to see just how Editor Adams could be so completely misinformed as to write in such a manner. He was in the legislature at the last session, and perhaps he acquired there a habit of opposition from which he finds its difficult to extricate himself, but he should have acquired enough information about Northern Minnesota and drainage to enable him to do better than this.

As to the many acres of available land now untilled, such of it as may be actually available is owned by the state, which will find purchasers and settlers just as rapidly as it will offer it for sale. But much of this land, though nominally available, is actually inaccessible because it is surrounded by swamps that must be drained and settled.

The idea of waiting for drainage "until the people are ready and want the lands" is silly. Drainage must be conducted on a comprehensive system that will cover large areas. It will take time. It cannot be done in a year or in two years. It certainly cannot be arranged so that if a settler comes along and wants a particular piece of swamp land it can be drained for him on a moment's notice and handed over to him the next week dry and arable.

The Journal also gives tacit approval to the old notion, which is no longer held even in Southern Minnesota, that the drainage campaign is a campaign to get state aid for private owners of swamp lands. It is no such thing. It is a campaign to have the state drain its own swamp lands, and no others. Individuals owning low lands will have to drain them without state aid, and none of them are asking for state aid.

Before the campaign for settling Northern Minnesota can go very far, the state's swamp lands must be drained, so that it can offer them to settlers with hope of finding purchasers. If the state waits until people want them, it will wait forever, because nobody is going to pay $5 an acre for submerged lands.

HOTEL GOSSIP.

"I sent home for my overcoat yesterday," said G. N. May of Keokuk, Iowa., at the Spalding. "I am in such a hurry for the garment that I wired for it. They cannot get it here any too quick to suit me. I came up here dressed as I am at home during the summer, and never for a moment thinking I would need a heavy coat upon my arrival. I have been freezing ever since I struck town, and find it almost impossible to get warmed up at all. I didn't suppose I could find such a change in the climate in such a short distance. Do you have any real summer weather here at all?

"A great many Iowa farmers come up here every year looking for land. Once here, they cannot understand why it is that your local people do not buy up more of the cheap acreage. Good land, entirely suitable for farming, on sale at from $5 to $12 an acre, is to them too great a bargain to be passed by. The soil is just as good as that they left back home, and the value of the land is sure to increase several times within the next few years. Some of these men probably have disposed of their farms in Iowa for $100 an acre or more, where the lands orighally cost them $10 or $15 an acre.

"Lots of residents of the state are also passing through Minnesota and going into Canada. The fact that the farms up in Alberta are on prairie land, with no need for clearing away of timber, appeals to them strongly. Timber on land should really be looked upon as a benefit, but the average person thinks of all the work it will be to clear the ground, and forgets the fuel and other values of the timber, which more than makes up for the extra work of cutting the trees. In certain parts of Canada they can go to farming without cutting so much as a bush."

"I was in Seattle, Wash., at the time of the San Francisco earthquake," said T. I. Sedwick of Chicago at the Spalding. "A good many traveling men whose homes were in the coast metropolis were in Seattle and Tacoma at the time, and they were naturally very anxious regarding the situation. They got together and engaged a special train to carry them to San Francisco. The train contained three or four cars.

"I never saw such a real estate boom as there is this year all through the West, particularly in Idaho and Montana. On my last trip out I got enthusiastic over the prospects myself, and purchased nine acres of land at Billings, Mont. Seattle, Portland, Tacoma, Spokane, and all those towns are enjoying a substantial real estate boom. The expected quiet did not follow the Lewis and Clark exposition at Portland. Business activity has never been greater than now in the Oregon city.

"But Seattle is the prize winner from the boom standpoint. All the property has substantially increased in value, but the most marvelous advance has been made in the tide lands. I know of one young fellow working on $125 a month, who invested $500 in a tide land lot. He sold the lot for $15,000.

"Rents are being raised in Seattle at a startling rate. One jeweler who was paying $200 a month rent for his place is moving because the rent has been doubled, and he is asked $400 a month. Four other jewelers were preparing to move when I was there, two or three weeks ago, to allow the erection of new buildings."

"One naturally wonders that the labor organizations which are supposed to protect the welfare of the laboring class, do not make a protest at the present conditions of immigration," said C. A. Dodd of Madison, Wis., at the Lenox. "It is manifestly impossible to maintain the present scale of wages or any civilized standard of living when our working class is compelled to meet such competition.

"Incidentally, one might inquire what has become of the theory that our protective tariff holds up the price of wages. As it stands, the present price of all articles is maintained at a high level by the protective tariff, while the whole theory of protecting wages is broken to pieces by unlimited immigration.

"Nor much of the immigration now arriving in New York is of a high order, and most of it would not be desirable for an addition to any population. It is estimated that more than a million immigants will land in the United States this year. Of this vast number of new arrivals, only a small per cent come from the Scandinavian and German countries. The immigrants include all sorts of mixed bloods from Servia, Roumania and Bulgaria.

"A great many are illiterate and ignorant, and many of them are diseased and insane when they arrive at New York. The latter, it is understood, are deported again before they have an opportunity to get into the country, but many of the bad ones must get in, in spite of every effeort of the immigration office. I believe some criminal and insane people slip through Ellis Island and are added to the incompetent, crim- country."

An Important Pin.

Kansas City Journal: A Short Grass paper reports this embarrassing incident:

"Arthur Todd," said the school teacher impatiently, "what is it you are fidgeting with?"

Arthur colored up, but did not reply. However, the class "snitcher" was ready, as usual, with full information.

"It's a pin he's got," he said triumphantly.

"Take it away from him and bring it here," said the teacher. The offending pin was brought to her and there was no more trouble from Arthur.

Presently it was Arthur's turn to read; but instead of standing up as the rest had done, he sat still and looked scared.

"Well, why don't you go on with the reading?" said the teacher. "If you misbehave any more I shall make an example of you."

"Please, Miss," stuttered Arthur, "I can't stand up. The pin you took keeps me pa-pants up."

THE WEATHER.

Yesterday started out fine, turned cold, cloudy and threatening, turned fine again in the evening, and then in the night became downright bad, so that this morning it was cloudy, foggy, rainy and disagreeable, though the temperature was mild and the wind slight. What little wind there was appeared to be northerly, with easterly tendencies. Last night's lowest was 49 deg. and yesterday's highest 51 degs. Rain, fog, cool weather and northeast winds form the weather man's quiverful of disagreeabilities for tonight and tomorrow. Says Mr. Richardson of conditions:

"A disturbance of considerable area overlies the Northwest, with centers of lowest pressure near Medicine Hat and Rapid City. It is causing quite general rains throughout the Northwest and local showers in Kansas and New Mexico. The easterly movement of this storm will be attended by more or less rain and fog and probably strong easterly winds at the head of Lake Superior tonight and Tuesday. Cool weather prevails in northern districts. The barometer is high in New England states and off the Pacific coast."

DOMESTIC PLEASANTRIES.

Chicago Tribune: "Minnie, do you think you could be happy with a man who earns only $15 a week?"

"If you had asked me that question a few days ago, Herbert, I might have said yes, but Tom Hussel asked me last night if I was willing to risk marrying a man with a salary of $18 and I told him I was."

Towne—How?

Browne—Oh, my wife is always bothering me to get her gowns as swell as the cook wears.

Somerville Journal: Mrs. Whyte—Is your husband even-tempered?

Mrs. Browne—Well, yes, I suppose so. Sometimes he's even bad tempered.

Washington Star: "What I want," said the young man, "is to get married and have a peaceful, quiet home."

"Well," said Farmer Corntossel, "sometimes it works that way, and then again sometimes it's like joinin' a debatin' society."

An Irrepressible Conflict.

Kansas City Star: There are times in the development of national ideals when the people, like the tried warrior of romance, lay aside their armor and seek recuperation in undriven leisure. Even the most unflinching advocate of reform must sometimes seek the strength for renewed efforts by way of mere idleness. The conquering armies of Japan fought their greatest battles when they marched into the field of war again from the peace of winter quarters.

If the spirit of reform that has already inspired the patriotism of this country to clean out so many Augean stables of corruption should ever stack its arms to bivouac there should be no thought of its capitulation in despair.

The fight that has been carried on so long for the right and rational doctrine of the Square Deal in political and civic life may moderate at times, but it will only be to marshal its forces for a greater battle, and when the contest is opened afresh the boodlers and monopolists will find their Armageddon.

Will Take It All.

Louisville Courier-Journal: Years ago, it is recalled, Parton predicted that the coming man would neither smoke nor drink. The coming man has not yet arrived. But if the coming man will neither smoke nor drink, the indications are that it will be because the coming woman will leave him nothing to smoke or drink.

"In the Hands of His Friends."

Stillwater Gazette: Louis Moran has been drinking rather freely lately and as a result his nerves were strung up to a high pitch. In view of the circumstances it was thought better by his friends to have him placed under restraint for a few days.

The members composing the Christian church society, which was recently organized, report progress in their affairs. A lot has been purchased on the corner of Eighth avenue and First street, and a suitable building will be erected as soon as the necessary funds are secured.

The suggestion of The Evening Herald, made a few days ago, relative to constructing a boulevard along the hillside north of the city, has been received with considerable favor. A number of citizens visited the proposed driveway yesterday and were surprised to find an almost natural roadway for a distance of one-half a mile, and the expense of placing this line in order for a boulevard would be slight. The citizens of Duluth realize what an advantage this would be. The picturesque view as derived from this proposed road is unexcelled anywhere, and that it will be of great importance in settling up the territory on the hill there is no question.

R. C. Cooper, the founder of Coperstown, Dakota., is at the St. Louis. Mr. Cooper is a bonanza farmer, and connected with the Cooperstown railroad. He comes to Duluth on a business trip and is surprised to see such a lively and hustling city.

W. S. Young, formerly of Minneapolis, has arrived at Superior to take charge of the Lehigh Coal company's business there.

At the village council meeting, Marcus Franklin, who was licensed on April 13 to sell goods at auction and paid $100 into the treasury, presented a communication setting forth that he had been unable to meet liabilities and was about to discontinue business. He therefore asked that the council refund a portion of the license money. The communication was tabled. The council found all bids for the Superior street sewer were irregular and decided to advertise for new bids. It was decided to build a new hose cart house in the rear of the Grand Opera house block.

M. Fink and M. Haug have departed on a trip to Nova Scotia. These gentlemen, together with Joseph Mannheim and Herman Berg, own a valuable gold mine at the point of their destination and will remain to develop it for some time.

MINNESOTA OPINIONS.

Albert Lea Tribune: It would seem that the United States senate had discovered some way to hear the voice of the people.

Ada Herald: Governor Johnson is growing in popularity every day and his opponents are beginning to realize the task they will have on their hands next fall.

Preston Times: The Winona Republican Herald says that "the question is daily asked what Former Governor Van Sant will do in the campaign, stump the state for the ticket nominated at Duluth or remain steadfast to Governor Johnson." Easily answered: He will have another fit of anger and run for United States senator.

Windom Reporter: The appendix, the knife and the check book are indissoluble friends.

Windom Republican: The state convention may well spend its time in selecting the right man for lieutenant governor. It doesn't matter much who is nominated for governor if he is clean and upright, but it does need a wise, level-headed man for president of the senate, whose power in legislation is great, and who can wield an influence for wholesome laws in his appointment of committees.

Le Sueur News: Congressman Williams, the democratic leader, said one day last week, "if you don't revise the tariff, we will." Minnesota people fully agree with him.

Royalton Banner: State development is to be brought about not so much by the expenditure of money as by co-operation.

Elk River Star News: It seems to be the general opinion that Jacobson will have the biggest vote on the first ballot and his nomination is, of course, among the possibilities, but there are few politicians who think he will land.

Princeton Union: While the government is engaged in investigating the methods of combines it should not overlook the notorious lumber trust. The unceasing advance of lumber without any apparent reason therefor, makes necessary the overhauling of this monopolistic combination of cormorants.

Mankato Free Press: Senator Clark resigns because his wife wants him to. Mr. Clark is a dutiful husband, and regret is expressed that more senators' wives have not that strong influence over their husbands.

Buffalo Journal: The government policy of cutting the wings of the trusts has begun to bear fruit, as the paper trust laid down and will be dissolved. If the ball is kept rolling there will be some show for a square deal all along the line.

Browns Valley Tribune: Whether Minnesota Republicans are to have a popular subscription campaign fund depends largely on the candidates nominated at the Duluth convention. If certain candidates are nominated the party will have to have a popular subscription fund, if it has any, but in such case it won't need to be large. If certain other candidates are nominated, the corporations will fix up the fund business, and it will probably be a fat one.

The Reward of Service.

The sweetest lives are those to duty wed,
Whose deeds, both great and small,
Are close-knit strands of an unbroken thread,
Where love ennobles all.
The world may sound no trumpets, ring no bells;
The Book of Life the shining record tells.
Thy love shall chant its own beatitudes

A sick man helped by thee shall make thee strong;
Thou shalt be served thyself by every sense

A Spelling Lesson.

Chicago News: Students in a London school were recently asked to write this: "A gluttonous sihyl with her glutinous hand complacently seized a sieve, a phthisical ichneumon, a noticeably supercilious, irascible and cynical sergeant, an embarrassed and harassed chrysalis, a shrieking sheik, a complaisant proselyte and an anonymous chrysolite. These all suddenly disappeared down her receptive esophagus. She simply said: 'Pugh! not saccharine!'

"She then transferred a billion of bilious mosquitoes, an unsalable bouquet of fuchsias, lillies, dahlias, hyacinths and phlox, a liquefied bdellium, an indelible, defamatory, inflammatory synchronism and a debatable syllogism to the same capacious receptacle.

"Peaceably surrendering her daguerreotype to the ecstatic aeronaut, she descended with her parachute—a synonym for barouche—and grievously terrified the stolid, squalid yeomanry already torrefied by the heat, 101 Fahrenheit."

ECHOES OF HARMONY.

Park Rapids Clipper: When the Republicans of Minnesota come to fully realize that a few newspaper politicians of the Sixth district always know just what "the people" want it will save a lot of trouble all around.

From the Blue Earth Post: Now the Post is for harmony, politically and otherwise, but it cannot exactly reconcile itself as to the eternal fitness of choosing men as delegates to nominate a Republican candidate for governor, who helped elect the present governor. To trust a man to help put in nomination a candidate to oppose the governor he supported two years ago, is asking just a little bit too much. Don't you think so? We hope the voters will remember this when they select their delegates to the coming county convention.

Paynesville Press: The Blue Earth Post does not want anyone who helped to elect the present governor to go as a delegate to the Duluth convention. What about some of the candidates who will come before that convention? It is well known that some of them have traveled all political roads in the last few years.

International Falls Border Budget: Harmony is the subject which all Republicans, good, bad and yellow, are discoursing on these days. Pre-convention talk is unity of action and personal sacrifice for the success of the party, but there is a wholesale gnashing of teeth beneath the surface that forecasts trouble, and it would'nt be at all surprising to see a repetition of the knife act crop out again this year. The nomination of either Block or Jacobson will cause a disruption in the Republican ranks that will leave Governor Johnson to play a game of solitaire.

Princeton Union: The Duluth newspapers are certainly giving all candidates for governor a square deal. Even Jacobson is accorded a pleasant look.—Elk River Star News.

And Jake would be honored more highly than this were he to cut loose from the insurgents who pretend to be his friends. Their aim now is to boost his nomination, and, should he secure it, to knife him from behind his back.

St. Cloud Journal-Press: Says the genial Duluth News Tribune: "The St. Cloud Journal-Press makes a noise as though it had been hit by something that hurt." Not to be outdone in politeness the equally genial Journal-Press gives the retort courteous. The News Tribune barks like a yellow dog wearing a corporation collar that cramps the windpipe." Now let the gubernatorial contest proceed along the lines of harmony, hustle and hades.

Princeton Union: Will the great corporate interests defeat the will of the people at the state convention at Duluth? Certainly they are going to try it.—Breckenridge Gazette.

There is no doubt that they will try it through the medium of their representatives—the Johnson-Republican delegates.

Princeton Union: The Post will heartily support the candidate for governor named at Duluth, June 13. We never bolt.—Rush City Post.

It is to be presumed that the Duluth convention will nominate Republicans. If a traitor or one who countenanced or aided the traitors two years ago is nominated the Union will not support him.

An Anonymous Letter.

American Spectator: A certain congressman from Virginia has long retained in his employ a colored man by the name of Ezekiel. One morning the master left the house, leaving behind him a letter he had forgotten. Some time in the afternoon he remembered the communication, and, as it was of some importance, he hastened back home, only to find that the letter was nowhere to be seen in his library. He had a distinct recollection that the letter had been left on a table. He summoned Ezekiel and asked if he had seen the letter.

"Yessah, yo' lef' it on yo' table."

"Then where is it now?"

"I mailed it, sah."

"You mailed it! Why, Zeke, I had not put the name and address on the envelope!"

"Jes' so, sah! I thought it was one of dem anonymous letters."

ROOT WILL WITHDRAW

Announces That He Will Drop Garbage Contract Fight.

Angered by Remark by H. H. Phelps—Responded Heatedly.

John M. Root of Minneapolis will tonight at the council meeting withdraw his application for a garbage collecting contract with the city.

He so declared at a mass meeting at the council chamber this afternoon, when in great heat he replied to H. H. Phelps who spoke against the letting of the contract.

The mass meeting was called for this afternoon to give citizens a chance to express their desires regarding the letting of this proposed contract to John M. Root of Minneapolis. Dr. Codding was elected chairman of the meeting and the first speech was by H. H. Phelps of West Duluth.

Mr. Phelps said that he is against this kind of contract for the reason that he does not believe such a contract necessary. He said he is a believer in cleanliness but that he knows that Duluth is one of the healthiest and cleanest cities in the United States. He declared that this proposed contract is based on an erroneous plan and asserted that the plan of charging for the collection of garbage on the size of the house collected from is unfair.

The thing which made Mr. Root mad was the statement by Mr. Phelps to the effect that in his observation such schemes are always permeated with graft. He said that he believes the city should do the work of collecting garbage itself and he was also of the belief that nine-tenths of the citizens of Duluth are against the contract.

Mr. Root replied to Mr. Phelps in high dudgeon. He said:

"This dirty reference to graft is entirely uncalled for. And under the present city charter your city cannot collect the garbage as has been proposed. But you can rest assured that my offer will be withdrawn tonight and you can go home and thank your stars that you have not been robbed."

With that Mr. Root strode majestically out of the room.

A. D. STEPHENS IN CITY.

Candidate for Nomination for Governor Looking Over the Local Field.

A. D. Stephens of Crookston, Minn., candidate for the nomination of governor on the Republican ticket, is in the city today looking over the local field. He expects to leave for St. Paul tonight. Mr. Stephens has a good many friends in the city, several of whom formerly resided in Crookston. As he is a Northern Minnesota man, with a platform that strongly favors this section of the state, he looks to St. Louis county to appear in a friendly attitude at the state convention in June.

"Everything looks bright so far as my candidacy is concerned," said Mr. Stephens. "I think my strength is just as great now as anyone else's, and that at the convention a liberal number of the delegates will rally to my support. I see no reason why a Northern Minnesota man should not stand an equal chance with anyone else in the race for the governorship."

Mr. Stephens and Senator Cole of Walker, who is another Northern Minnesota man in the field, are the two wealthiest candidates who have announced their intentions in this direction.

NO INTEREST IN RATE BILL

Measure Gets Back to the House in Disfigured State.

Washington, May 21.—Without the faintest show of interest either by members of the house or galleries, the railroad rate bill came back to that body today from the senate somewhat disfigured but still recognizable. The bill went to the speaker's table. The speaker will, during the day, examine the amendments made by the senate and should they make it necessary the bill will be sent to the committee.

The house passed the bill amending Section 6 of the currency act approved March 14, 1900. The bill gives to the secretary of the treasury authority to issue gold certificates in denominations of not less than $5 instead of not less than $20 as now provided by law and also gives to national banks the authority to place in circulation such portion of their circulation notes in the denomination of $5 as the secretary may have from time to time authorized by regulation instead of being limited in their right to issue five dollar notes to one-third of the circulation as now provided by law.

The house today passed an amendment to the present pension laws curing a defeat by a joint resolution of section two of the resolution approved July 1, 1902, construing the act of June 27, 1890.

The resolution makes the section harmonious and equitable in its application to any enlisted men of the army, including regulars, volunteers and militia, who were honorably discharged from the last contract of service entered into by them during the civil war.

IN THE SENATE

Washington, May 21.—The senate today passed the following bill:

Authorizing the payment of the actual necessary expenses of United States circuit and district court judges traveling on official business.

Ayme, Illinois, at Lisbon, Portugal; Leo Allen Bergsolz, New York, at Canton, China; William T. Fee, Ohio, at Mukden, China; Julius G. Lay, District of Columbia, at Capetown, Cape of Good Hope; Ernest Madiman, Florida, at Copenhagen. Consul—Charles T. Eberhardt, Kansas, at Iquitos, Peru. Commissioner general of immigration—Frank P. HAM AND EGG "JAG."

Chicago Post: His habit of reading the newspapers—any old one and every old one which he can secure—saved John Benson a visit to the Bridewell today. This same habit of "omnivorous reading" gave him the distinction of offering a new excuse in the Harrison street police station. He likewise shattered the theory, deep rooted in the minds of police and justice court officials, that every excuse for a jag had been offered long since in the dingy down-town police station.

John arrived in town yesterday from the West with a carload of cattle which he sold at the stockyards. Then, his pockets uncomfortably weighed down with currency, he boarded one of the "long green" cars and came down town to see the sights. Fearful that he might overlook something, Benson took many "eye-openers" and left a trail of glory and small bills along Clark street.

After a time Benson floated into a Chinese restaurant and ordered ham and eggs. What he got was so utterly different from any ham and eggs he ever had seen that he objected vigorously. His protests availed him nothing, however, and in a rash moment he ate the concoction.

Matters reached a climax when Benson saw the size of his check. The immediate result was a confusing whirl of dishes, Chinese and Benson which ended with the Westerner alighting on the sidewalk underneath two dusky Orientals, who held him securely until the Harrison-street patrol wagon came and removed him to the lockup.

Benson awoke this morning with a headache and a thirst for both water and news. The good-natured lock-up keeper heeded his pleas and gave him a tin dipper of "raw" lake and a newspaper. Once thereafter, a whoop was heard from Benson's cell, but when the turnkey ran to investigate he found the man quietly reading his paper.

At 10 o'clock Benson faced the majesty of the law in the person of Justice Caverly.

"Drunk and disorderly," read the court clerk, and the justice asked wearily, but as a matter of form: "Well, what have you to say for yourself?"

"I wasn't drunk," declared Benson. "No, sir; it was them Chinese ham and eggs that went to my head. They's more intoxicatin' than any booze ever smuggled into Iowa, Yer, Honor, an' I thinks strangers visitin' this great city should be warned against the intoxicating nature of ham and eggs, Yer Honor, especially Chinese ham and eggs."

"What's that?" demanded the justice. "Ham and eggs intoxicating?"

"They are, yer honor," Benson insisted. "Just look at this," and he laid before the court the following form of a morning paper:

"London, April 10.—Dr. Harry Campbell, president of the Society for the Study of Inebriety, in a lecture on alcoholism tonight, said many kinds of food contained stimulants. He declared it was possible for a man to become intoxicated on a meal of meat. He said he had seen children in a semi-intoxicated condition after eating a meal consisting entirely of vegetables."

"That's all that was the matter with me," Benson insisted. "I had a ham-and-egg jag."

"Discharged," said Justice Caverly, and the court loungers gazed in awe as the man with a new excuse departed free.

IN HIS LINE.

Boston Herald: A party of gentlemen sitting on the veranda of a leading hotel at Jackson, N. H., fell into an amiable discussion of their delightful host, who bore a high military title, and who won his military spurs on the staff of a New Hampshire governor.

One of them asked: "Did he get his title from service in the defense of his country?" And the reply, from a retired army officer, was: "He must have, for he has not forgotten how to charge."

IN WAR TIMES.

Boston Herald: I have heard my father tell the following story about his friend and classmate, Sherman Hoar:

When Mr. Hoar was running for congress his opponent was Mr. Fox of Cambridge, and Mr. Hoar called his own campaign "the Fox chase." The older leaders and local men of course gave Mr. Hoar points on what to speak about and what local characters or subjects he might have to run up against or to argue about. In Watertown, he was told, there was an old gentleman, a veteran of the Civil war, who dated everything that ever happened from the war; nothing important, he thought, had ever happened since.

This old soldier attended every political meeting, whether Republican or Democratic, seating himself conspicuously in the front row, where he could both see and hear better. Mr. Hoar was told that this old gentleman was sure to be present to hear him speak, and that he would probably, as was his custom, ask him some questions about the war, and whether or not he had done anything toward saving his country, regardless of whether Mr. Hoar was old enough to know personally anything of the great contest.

Mr. Hoar, sure enough, was interrupted in the middle of his speech by the veteran, who said: "What I want to know is, what were you doing during the war? Did you fight for your country, or didn't you? That's what I want you to tell me and the rest of the folks here. What were you doin' along in '61 and '62, an' up to Appomatox?"

"Well," said Mr. Hoar, with a kindly smile and a boyish twinkle in his eyes, "I guess I was suffering about as much as you were, for along in '61 and '62 I was teething." And the veteran, as the shouts of laughter went up, was unable to say a single word that could be heard, though he kept on talking for some time.

"Self-help" will come to mean more to you than a pair of words, yoked together, if you get into the habit of reading The Herald want ads.

Fargo, N. D., May 21.—(Special to The Herald.)—Superior box work by Morton won Saturday afternoon's game for Duluth. The big fellow, formerly of this league, Toledo, Boston and a few other places, was invincible when hits meant runs, except in the second when Fargo bunched three for a pair of scores.

Three home runs, by Dolan and Ross of the locals and by McCormick of the White Sox were the batting features. Each smash was a clear drive over the left field fence. Livingstone of the visitors was the stellar swatter. Donovan's first double in the third was the fielding feature. Fink, Fargo's southpaw, twirled. He was nervous at times and his wildness was very costly.

Duluth scored in the opening inning when Livingstone led with the stick, went to second on O'Dea's out and scored on Mehl's error. In the second three hits, two stolen bases, a wild pitch and Donovan's error gave the visitors another pair of unearned runs.

Fargo got a pair in her part of the second when Dolan led with a homer. Edwards and Fitz fanned, Donovan hit, reached second on Barto's boot, and scored on Walter's nice single.

In her part of the third Duluth had second and third occupied. McCormick drove a hard one to Donovan, who stepped on third and threw the runner out to Dolan in fast time.

After two were struck out in the fourth, Rose clouted a homer, and it made Morton so sore he struck out the great Dolan.

In the sixth after one was down McCormick hit for a homer. Lovett retired and then Fink had his troubles. He allowed both Adams and Morton to walk and this was followed by singles by both Livingstone and Griebner, scoring a trio of runs.

In the eighth a base on balls, Walter's error and Griebner's second swat scored two more runs.

The chances looked bright for Fargo in the eighth. With one down, Stripp and Rose each singled, Morton got liberal and allowed Dolan to walk, filling the sacks. The fans looked for something doing, but both Edwards and Fitzgerald died on flies to McCarter.

Rose robbed O'Dea of a single in the first inning by a quick return of a sharp drive to Dolan.

MAROONS WON TWICE.

Season is Opened at Winnipeg With Two Games With Tigers.

Winnipeg, Man., May 21.—(Special to The Herald.)—The ball season in Winnipeg opened auspiciously Saturday afternoon, after being twice delayed by unfavorable weather.

The Grand Forks and Winnipeg teams played a double-header, and the Maroons succeeded in capturing both games by close scores.

Both teams put up a fast article of ball, and the fans were delighted with the showing. Between 3,000 and 4,000 people witnessed each game.

Perry Sessions was once more seen in the league, and opposed his old team, the members of which were unable to find him for more than five hits. Bushelman also pitched good ball for Grand Forks.

The two southpaws, Ginchie and Brennan, opposed each other in the second game. They were wild, and the fielding was a little more ragged than in the firs: game, but the contest was even more exciting. The scores:

First game—

Winnipeg	1 1 0 0 0 0 0 0 *	2	8 3

MILLERS LOSE.

The Millers tried three pitchers, and all were found freely by the Cloquet batters, while Resche was more or less of a mystery to the Duluth men until the eighth inning.

The Cloquet team scored in every inning but the sixth and piled up a total of eighteen runs, while the Millers scored seven.

The score by innings:

The Clippers Won.

A large crowd witnessed the defeat of the Superior Stars by the Duluth Clippers yesterday on the former's grounds. The game throughout was very exciting and full of features. Walter Jansen, the Clippers' new player, with one out, two on bases and the Superior Stars two runs ahead in the last half of the ninth, landed on the ball for a clean home run. The score:

FRESHMEN ARE VICTORS

Either this year's Freshman class at the high school is one of the liveliest classes that ever came into the school, or they are pursued by a most extraordinary streak of good luck, for their record of success has been phenomenal. Last fall they won a glorious victory over the Sophomores on the gridiron, their spread a week ago was the most brilliant of the year, and Saturday they defeated the second year men at baseball by a score of 4 to 3.

Earl Cummings and Max Cook, the school's best twirlers, were pitted against each other, and the Freshman had decidedly the best of the battle. Cummings fanned sixteen Sophomores, gave two passes to first on balls, and hit two. Cook had better control, no free passes being checked up against him, but the first year men found his twisters easy and bunched their hits very effectively. Cook was, however, laboring under a serious disadvantage, as there is no one in the Sophomore class able to do the backstop act for him when he puts on full steam.

Cummings passed Whittle, the first man up to bat. Hestole, second. A passed ball advanced him to third, and after MacFarlane fanned the air, he came home on Caulkins single, making the first score for the Sophomores. Caulkins was cut off on an attempt to steal second, and Cook failed to reach first. Three easy flies settled the Freshmen for the inning. The second was a shut out for the Sophomores, but when the Freshmen came to bat Bowen found Cook for a two bagger, and came home on timely singles by Ostergren and Wharton, tying the score.

Cummings started the third by sending a wide inshoot into Neubauer's ribs, and he walked to first, stole second, and two passed balls enabled him to score. The next two men fanned the air, and though Caulkins and Cook both got singles, they were left on bases when Cargill failed to connect. Cooley reached first on an error by Cargill, stole second, and came home on Cummings' single, again tying the score. During the next four innings both pitchers pitched glit-edged ball, and neither side succeeded in getting a man over the plate, but in the eighth, with two men gone, Caulkins got a hit, which a wild throw stretched into a two bagger, and came home on Cook's single, making the score 3 to 2 in favor of the second year men. The Freshmen landed on Cook for three safe ones in the last half of the inning, however, and Cooley and Cummings crossed the plate making the score 4 to 3 in favor of the Freshmen.

McKinley got a single in the ninth, but was retired at second on a short hit by Sharpless. Olson reached second on an error by Ostergren, and Sharpless went to third on the same play. Neubauer fanned out, and a pop fly to Cummings by Whittle ended the game.

"VAN" IN AUTO ACCIDENT.

Winnipeg, May 21.—(Special to The Herald.)—At 2 o'clock Saturday afternoon the motor car of L. Van Praagh, cigar manufacturer, with the owner and two guests on board, while crossing the street car tracks opposite the Dominion bank office on Main street, collided with the St. Boniface car, No. 102, of the electric railway. The automobile suffered the more severely, the two fore wheels being smashed and the mechanism generally disarranged. The fender of the street car was badly broken. No one was injured beyond the convictions in the minds of both Mr. Van Praagh and the street railway motorman that the other was flagrantly to blame.

CHOOSING CREWS.

Oarsmen Are Being Assigned Regular Places for the Spring Training.

The training of the oarsmen of the Duluth Boat club is beginning to assume some definite form.

Three fours were out Saturday evening, the conditions being excellent for rowing, and an effort will be made to get four or five crews out every evening this week.

From now on, the rowing committee will begin to select crews which will be more or less permanent, and will row together regularly. One or two of these crews have already been selected, and others will be chosen as fast as men are available for them.

MAY ERECT TOWERS.

Judge Dibell Decides in Favor of the Great Northern Power Company.

Judge Dibell has granted the petition of the Great Northern Power company for an order appointing three appraisers to fix an equitable compensation to be paid the Manistique Bank of Manistique, Mich., for erecting poles and towers across the bank's property in this county. The appraisers are R. H. Doran, E. C. Little and F. J. Pulford. They were to meet at the courthouse this morning to act along the line of their duty.

The land involved comprises portions of eight quarter sections in various parts of the county. The banking interests opposed the erection of the towers on the land.

JEFFERSON IS WINNER

East End School the Victor in Interscholastic Field Meet.

Arthur Helmer Wins Gold Medal for Highest Individual Score.

The Jefferson school athletes won the pennant in the third annual interscholastic track meet held Saturday afternoon at the driving park, and Arthur Helmer of that school captured the gold medal, with the remarkable record of five firsts and two seconds out of the fourteen events.

The meet which was witnessed by more than 3,000 people, was held under the auspices of the boys' department of the Y. M. C. A., and it far surpassed either of the two previous meets in point of attendance, enthusiasm and the records made.

The meet developed into a race between the Jefferson and Lincoln schools. The Jefferson school's victory was due almost entirely to the remarkable showing of Arthur Helmer, who scored thirty-one of the fifty-one points made by the winners.

Sidney Morterud of the Lincoln school won the silver medal for second place, and added twelve points to his school's score.

The Madison school, which won the championship last year, was out of the running this year, and her representatives did not manage to win a point.

The Washington school team won six seconds and four thirds, making a total score of twenty-two. Irving was fourth with one first and a third, and Lakeside fifth with one first. The Longfellow school had two points with two thirds.

Following are the records of the different schools:

Jefferson—Eight firsts, three seconds and two thirds. Total, 51.

COMES INTO POSSESSION.

Shattuck-Arizona Company Pays Over Money to Fee Holders.

The Shattuck-Arizona company has just come into full possession of its properties and the Shattuck-Arizona mine will become a shipper within a short time. The papers have been filed at Tombstone, Ariz.

About $1,125,000 was paid for the titles, of which L. C. Shattuck, after whom the property is named, received $775,000. Mr. Shattuck is also a heavy stockholder in the company.

The aerial tramway at the mine will be completed by July 15 and Superintendent B. M. Pattison expects to have the mine shipping on the basis of 200 tons of ore a day by the first of August. It is said that the Shattuck people are planning to erect a smelter of their own and that Douglas has been chosen as a site for it.

Drifting on the Denn-Arizona property is progressing steadily and the officers of the Denn-Arizona Development company have great faith in their property.

TRIPLE TRAGEDY IN A KENTUCKY WAREHOUSE.

Mayfield, Ky., May 21.—A triple tragedy, the details of which will probably always remain a mystery, occurred last night at Lynnville, this county. A visitor to the warehouse owned by Mark Wilson, a prominent merchant, found the proprietor, his brother West Wilson, and Arthur West on the oflor, shot to death. Revolvers were found beside the bodies of Arthur West and West Wilson. Two citizens reported that they had been at the warehouse shortly before 7 o'clock and left the trio apparently on good terms, although all had been drinking. The supposition is that West Wilson and Arthur West engaged in a shooting affray, killing each other, and that one of the bullets struck Mark Wilson.

BURNED FOR THIRD TIME

Origin of the Blaze is Matter of Considerable Mystery.

For the third time within four years the Zenith Paper company, at 222-224 West Michigan street, was burned out last evening, the fire entailing a total loss on building and contens of between $25,000 and $30,000, which is fully covered by insurance.

The fire began about 8:40 o'clock. It was first seen by Engineer Leonard of the Northern Pacific switch engine which was at work in the rear of the building. He attempted to give the alarm by blasts from his whistle, but before notice was taken of the noise, a sheet of flame burst from the third floor of the building on the Railroad street side, and cast a reflection that could be seen from all parts of the city. The reflection was seen at headquarters, and the chief immediately turned in a general alarm, summoning all the apparatus from the central part of the city.

When the firemen reached the scene the building was burning fiercely, and the heat and smoke made it impossible for the men to enter the building. The salvage corps attempted to cover the stock on the first floor with tarpaulins, but they were driven back, and an attempt on the part of the pipemen to reach the upper windows from ladders was also unsuccessful. For a time the firemen had to fight the fire from the ground through the windows.

Four steamers kept eight streams of water playing on the fire, and within half an hour it was well under control, the men gradually fighting it back.

The firemen succeeded in keeping the blaze confined to the paper company's building, and the Knudsen-Ferguson company on the east and the Thomson & Dunlop company on the west sustained but a nominal loss from the smoke which percolated through the walls.

The burned building was owned by Eastern parties, represented by E. W. Peet of St. Paul. The roof is destroyed, but the floors held and only the upper one is charred. The walls are also damaged somewhat, and the loss on the building will probably amount to about $5,000.

It is difficult to tell what percentage of the paper company's stock is destroyed. It was valued at from $25,000 to $30,000, and a very large part of it will be a total loss. What was not touched by the fire was damaged by water and smoke.

Frank Leslie, president of the company, was in Chicago at the time the fire occurred, having left Saturday. The secretary, C. J. McBride, stated that the company had more unfilled orders on hand than at any time in its history. He was unable to give any insurance figures, but said that the loss was probably covered.

The origin of the fire is more or less of a mystery. The building was closed and locked up at 1 o'clock Saturday afternoon and no one was called upon to enter it after that time. It was reported to Chief Black last evening, that a man had been seen hastily leaving the front door of the building just before the firemen were called, and an investigation will be made, to learn if possible the man's name and his business there at that time.

The sheet of flame which burst from the rear of the building was preceded by a dull, muffled explosion not unlike that made by dynamite.

A carload of paper, which was standing on the track in the rear of the building, was directly in the way of the firemen. An effort was made to remove it, but it had to be abandoned, and the firemen were compelled to throw the water over this obstruction into the second story windows.

Live wires carrying the power and light from the Duluth Edison Electric company, for a time threatened the lives of firemen and spectators along Michigan street, until the current was shut off from the power house. Truckman Becker of No. 2 house came in contact with the wires, and was thrown to the ground and stunned, but suffered no serious injuries.

The last fire which visited the paper company's store, occurred a year ago last February. It was believed to have started from electric wiring, although the firemen were unable to locate its origin, owing to the rapid spread of the flames.

The loss on the company's stock in that fire was $20,000.

SHOOTS HIS TORMENTOR.

Marietta, Ohio, May 21.—John West, 30 years old, is in the hospital with a bullet near his heart and John Buck, charged with the shooting, is at large with a posse of neighbors hunting him with blood hounds. Buck had been tormented by West and a number of companions, so pelted his house with stones. Saturday night Buck lay in wait with a gun. When the stones began to rattle against the house, he fired and West fell. Buck escaped to the woods, leaving a note, saying that he intended to commit suicide.

COULD HAVE BEEN SAVED

Three Boating Parties See Plight of Men and Pass On.

Parties of pleasure-seekers in two launches and one row-boat may well feel themselves responsible for the loss of life of John A. Buchanan, an engineer of the Superior shipyards, who was drowned at the end of the Merrill & Ring slip on the St. Louis bay yesterday afternoon. Ralph G. De Mary, engineer at the Republic elevator, Superior, who was Buchanan's companion in a canvas canoe, the capsizing of which put both men into the bay, was almost gone when rescued by a boating party from West Duluth.

Buchanan and De Mary went up the river in the canvas canoe yesterday morning and in the afternoon were returning. They had just passed a lumber barge near the Grassy Point bridge when Buchanan attempted to change position. His motion caused the canoe to lose its evenness of keel and she went over, precipitating the two men into the water. De Mary got hold of a pile which at the time was about six feet from the boat, and hung on. Buchanan, although physically deformed, was an expert swimmer and clambered onto a boom log where he rested for a time.

It was during the time that the men were in these positions that the thoughtless and unconsciously brutal pleasure parties passed.

De Mary told The Herald this morning that two gasoline launch parties and one in a row-boat passed but offered no assistance. Asked if these parties had seen the men, De Mary said that they did for he and his companion shouted to them and they shouted back, those in the row-boat saying:

"Hope you fellows will have a good time."

Shortly after that Buchanan, who was quite safe on the boom log, realized that his companion was in a bad position clinging to the pile, so he started for the shore, telling his companion that he would make a raft and go out and get him. When about thirty feet from shore he suddenly threw up both hands and shouted:

"Good-bye, Ralph; I'm gone."

With that he sank and did not come to the surface again. De Mary clung to the pile for nearly an hour before he was rescued. He was taken in by a boating party from West Duluth. He naturally feels very bitter toward the excursion parties which passed him and his companion, and feels that these people should answer for the life of Buchanan.

After De Mary's rescue, the police were notified, Lieut. Briggs, Patrolman Micks and Undertaker M. J. Filiatrault went down to the bay and dragged the bottom. After four hours of this, Buchanan's body was found and is now at Filiatrault's morgue in West Duluth.

Buchanan's widowed mother lives in Hancock and has been notified. As soon as word is received from her, funeral arrangements will be made. Buchanan came to Superior from Hancock last September and he and De Mary became chums. They both roomed at the Superior mission and expected shortly to start for Canada to do special work for the C. P. R.

Just before the accident happened yesterday, De Mary, getting enough tobacco to roll a cigarette, put on the bottom of the boat, a purse containing about $70. When the boat capsized, this was lost.

THOUSANDS HOMELESS

The Flames Appear to Have Practically Burned Themselves Out.

Milwaukee, May 21.—A staff correspondent of the Sentinel, who yesterday made a tour of the district in the upper peninsula of Michigan, covered by the forest fires, in a special train, the first train to go through the district since the catastrophe, telegraphing to his paper, says the fire appears practically out in all of the district, which is about 100 square miles in area. The fire raged for a distance of sixty-four miles along the line of the Escanaba & Lake Superior railroad, and for thirty miles beyond Channing, the western terminus of the road. It seems certain now that 2,000 persons are homeless in that district, and that 1,000 are left desolate at Quinnessec. The Quinnessec fire, however, was of different origin from the Escanaba fire, having started in a field where men were pulling stumps and burning debris. This fire spread into the city, wiped out all the buildings except three residences and the paper mills. Then the fire spread into the timber, and running north for forty miles, finally joined the flames sweeping east on Escanaba. It was also learned that Woodlawn and Klingsley, on the Escanaba & Lake Superior line were destroyed, and Perkins on the Northwestern. The strip burned along the Escanaba & Lake Superior line appears to be thirty miles wide, and the alarming nature of the earlier reports of the fire seem to be thoroughly verified by the trip. Stories of heroic battles against the flames are numerous. Dozens of towns were saved only by the most desperate battle with the flames. Northland, a town of 1,000 inhabitants, was three times threatened. The fire was checked each time at a distance of only ten yards from the houses on the outskirts. First the fire swept toward the place from the north, but was checked when two residences were scorched. Wagons, with barrels of water, prevented the catching of the fire. Driven away, the fire swept west, and then returned from that direction and again was stopped. A third time the fire spread into a great tract of timber, south of the town, which reached up to the doors of the houses in that part of Northland, and a third time was checked. The home of one man who carried the coffin, with the corpse of his dead baby thirty miles to Escanaba, in his escape from the fire, went back on the special train and found his home gone, but the picket fence surrounding his house untouched. The ashes of his home had been blown away by the gale, and the fence was the only evidence of human habitation. The rest of the town had been swept away.

A remarkable feature of the fire is the fact that nearly all the refugees are not disheartened, but are determined to return and begin over. They have only the clothes they wear, but say this is the fortune of the frontiersman, and that if their homes are lost, at least the fire has cleared the land for them, and this much labor is saved.

The town of Sopertown, Mich., owned by the Bay Shore Lumber company, suffered a heavy loss from the forest fires. All communication was cut off from the place until yesterday. The loss includes a number of buildings and a large amount of logs. The Bay Shore company lost 3,000,000 feet of logs, valued at $50,000. For a time Sopertown and Wabeno people were cut off. All that saved the towns and people from complete annihilation was a shifting of the wind. Wabeno's loss was not as serious as Sopertown's.

OVERSEER VOLIVA IS REDUCING EXPENSES.

Chicago, May 21.—W. G. Voliva, the present head of the Christian Catholic church, announced to his followers in Zion City yesterday, that between January 15 and May 19 he had reduced expenses to the financial department of the church from $9,400 per month to $3,832 per month. A saving has been made also in the ecclesiastic department that will amount to $70,00 annually.

Overseers who have been receiving $300 per month were reduced to $60. The pay of others was cut in proportion. His own compensation under the new adjustment, Voliva said, is $100 per month. These facts, he said, were some of the details of a report which he made Saturday to a committee appointed by Federal Judge Landis to investigate the condition of the industries in Zion City.

The condition of John Alexander Dowie was said to be practically unchanged.

MAN MURDERED NEAR PLEASANT HILL, MO.

Pleasant Hill, Mo., May 21.—The body of a man about 20 years old, at first supposed to have been killed by a train, was found Saturday morning near a Missouri Pacific bridge a short distance west of here. Before the coroner's jury, Dr. Prentiss, local surgeon for the Missouri Pacific, after having examined the wounds, gave it as his opinion that it was a case of murder. The verdict of the jury has been withheld.

There was nothing on the body to aid in identification except a Pacific Express company receipt on a grip sent from Sedalia to Kansas City, issued to "John Walker." The grip was sent down from Kansas City and opened before the coroner, but it contained nothing that would help in identifying the body.

WILL SOUND CANDIDATES

Are Asked to Address Good Roads Meeting June 12.

Vice Presidents of County Association to be Named Then.

Candidates for the Republican nomination for governor of Minnesota will be invited to attend the meeting to be held in Duluth June 12 by the St. Louis County Good Roads association and express their views on the good roads movement in the northern part of Minnesota.

Members of the association are now congratulating themselves that the date of the next meeting was set just one day in advance of the Republican state convention to be held in this city, for all the candidates for governor, as well as the candidates for the other state offices will be here. The voters in the northern counties will have an opportunity to find out how those seeking nomination stand on the road question.

A great deal of enthusiasm has been manifest in the city and in the county ever since the good roads meeting was held, a few days ago, when the county organization was perfected.

The officers and the executive committee of the Good Roads association are daily receiving words of encouragement from business and professional men, as well as the farmers. It is the belief of the promoters of the movement that the St. Louis county association will easily have a membership of 5,000 before the summer is over. To get this membership, all those who have already been enrolled are being urged to hustle hard and bring in as many more members as they can get, for it is believed that a great deal of the success of the association in securing future appropriations will depend on the showing that can be made of the strength of the organization.

Membership cards can be had of Secretary Eva of the Commercial club, the officers or the executive committee of the association. The officers are: President, W. E. Culkin; vice president for Duluth, H. R. Patterson; secretary-treasurer, Edward Hazen. The executive committee comprises L. B. Arnold, chairman, E. M. Patterson, David Sang, W. A. Crosby, of Duluth; Neil McInnis of Eveleth; John Owen of Tower, and Dr. Rudd of Hibbing.

The executive committee and officers of the association have just issued a circular letter of invitation to the meeting which is to be held in Duluth June 12, for the purpose of electing vice presidents. Every organized town, village or city in the county is entitled to a vice president. It may be deemed expedient to make some suggestions to the Republican state convention to be held the following day, relative to the needs of this district in the way of highways and drainage.

Governor Johnson and State Auditor S. G. Iverson will attend the meeting, on invitation, to give short talks on the topic of highways and the needs of the Northern districts. State Engineer George W. Cooley will also speak. Invitations to attend will be extended to all the county commissioners in the northern district. They will express their views and state their needs in the way of highways.

The invitation to the public has been a general one. There are no subscriptions, fees or dues asked of applicants for membership. The object of the association is to influence legislation in favor of more liberal appropriations by the state for building and maintaining public highways and securing better management and results in the expenditure of road taxes and appropriations.

One of the projects that is receiving serious attention from those interested in the good roads movement is the passage of a law for the appointment of a highway commission for each county. This commission will have the supervision of the expenditure of all road funds and will be empowered to employ a competent engineer to act as overseer of all highways built or improved.

For Erection of Business Block—The Frisco Relief Fund.

Virginia, Minn., May 21.—(Special to The Herald.)—Haugner & Larson of Duluth have secured the contract to erect the double business building on Chestnut street for which the foundation was laid last fall by H. J. George and P. Sullivan. The contract price is $12,000. Mr. George will occupy the first floor of his portion of the building with his hardware stock and the second floor will be arranged for two modern flats. He will install a heating plant.

A total of $1,428.10 was collected in Virginia for the relief of the San Francisco earthquake sufferers, as follows: Second ward, $191; Third ward, $479; Fourth ward, $344.10; Commodore mine, $51.75; Oliver and Higgins mines, $172.50; Minorca mine, $53.75; Lincoln mine, $145. The committee appointed to solicit in the First ward did nothing, else the returns would have been considerably larger. The balance of the money has been forwarded to Governor Johnson by Treasurer W. Elmquist.

The members of the different Finnish societies in all the range towns will meet in Virginia this year to celebrate Midsummer day, which occurs on June 24. A monster picnic will be held in a nearby grove and there will be exercises appropriate to the Finnish national holiday.

The Devaney brothers, formerly of Proctor, have organized the Virginia Produce company and have established an office at the rear of Tredway's drug store in the building formerly occupied by John Honkey. They are building a commodious warehouse on the Great Northern tracks at Walnut street and will handle flour, feed, grain, hay, butter, eggs and all kinds of country produce at wholesale.

The sawmill of the Virginia Lumber company, which has been closed down for repairs during the past two weeks, resumed operations today. A night shift will also be put on at the lath mill tonight. The electric light plant recently installed at the lath mill has been tried out during the week and found to work smoothly. It is a perpendicular engine with a direct connected dynamo.

At the home of Captain and Mrs. Joseph Roskilly occurred the wedding of At the home of Capt. and Mrs. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Henry A. Logan, pastor of the M. E. church. Miss Jenkins acted as bridesmand and Albert Roskilly, brother of the groom, was best man. The groom is a nephew of Capt. Roskilly and arrived here from England about a year ago. The bride arrived from the same place but a few days since. They will make Virginia their future home.

OUR TRADE WITH AUSTRALASIA

In Last Fiscal Year Aggregated Thirty-Eight Million Dollars.

Washington, May 21.—Trade between the United States and British Australasia in the fiscal year 1905 aggregated $38,000,000, against $245,000,000 in the preciding year, $32,000,000 in 1900, and $14,000,000 in 1895. Statistics compiled by the department of commerce and labor through its bureau of statistics show that imports from British Australia have grown from $4,000,000 in 1895 to $12,000,000 in 1905, and exports thereto in that same period from $9,000,000 to $25,000,000. For nine months of the present fiscal year the exports are about $2,000,000 in excess of the same months of last year.

The term "British Australasia," as used, includes Australia, Tasmania, New Zealand, and the Fiji Islands, but the commerce included under the term is chiefly that of Australia and New Zealand. Australia has an area of practically 3,000,000 square miles, or but little less than that of the United States, and its population approximates 5,000,000, or slightly in excess of that of our country at the beginning of our national existence. While the northern portion lies within the tropics, the southern and more populous section, representing about three-fifths of the total area, is in the South Temperate Zone, with population, customs, and institutions, and therefore social requirements not dissimilar to those of the United States. Agriculture and stock raising are the most important industries, though the mining of gold and copper has assumed considerable proportions. The value of the principal corps aggregated in 1900 about $125,000,000, wheat being credited with $21,000,000, hay $20,000,000, oats $10,300,000, orchard and garden products $10,000,000, pota toes $6,000,000, and corn nearly $6,000,000. Wheat, wool, and meats are the chief productions. While certain sections of Australia do not produce wheat, the production of other sections and of New Zealand is sufficient to supply all domestic demands and leave a considerable surplus for exportation. Australasia is the largest wool producer in the porld, her production in 1899, according to the reports of the National Association of Wool Manufacturers, being 510,000,000 pounds, against 370,000,000 for Argentina, 261,000,000 for Russia, 280,000,000 for the United States, 140,000,000 for the United Kingdom, 104,000,000 for France, 103,000,000 for Spain, 160,000,000 for the British South African colonies, and 96,000,000 for Uruguay. The latest available statement of live stock in Australasia reports sheep, 94,000,000; cattle, 11,000,000; horses 2,000,000, and swine 1,000,000. This brief analysis offers an explanation of the relatively small value of agricultural products exported to that section of the world and suggests that its importance to American producers rests largely, for the present at least, in its value as a market for manufactured products and as a source of supply for certain manufacturers' materials not produced in the United States in sufficient quantities to meet local requirements.

INJUSTICE TO GREENER

Former Consul Is to be Restored to the Service.

Assistant Secretary Peirce Failed to Verify the Charges.

FROM THE HERALD WASHINGTON BUREAU.

Washington, May 21.—Special to The Herald.)—Secretary Root has started a thorough investigation into the charges made by Assistant Secretary Peirce against the former consuls in the Orient, and the counter charges made by the accused men against Mr. Peirce. The three most premoinent cases to which the attention of the public have been directed are those of Dr. McWade, former consul general at Canton, China; O. F. Williams, formerly consul at Singapore, and Richard T. Greener, who occupied a like position at Vladivostok.

The inquiries of Secretary Root have proceeded far enough to warrant him in the belief that a great injustice was done in the case of Richard T. Greener, and it is officially announced that that gentleman is to be restored to the consular service.

An old Latin maxim is ex uno disce omnes—from one learn all—and it remains to be seen if it will apply in all three cases. Those who know the three principal victims of the Peirce report are unable to account for the radical change which has come over them, according to that document, since their sojourn in the Orient.

Dr. McWade was for nearly a quarter of a century editor of the Philadelphia Ledger. He was the founder of the Permanent Relief society of the Quaker City, an organization which has expended upwards of $15,000,000 in the prompt relief of such sufferers from calamities as those of Johnstown, Memphis, Galveston and San Francisco. He was elected permanent secretary of the society, and up to the time of his appointment to the consular service his reputation was as high as that of any citizen of the Quaker City.

Mr. Williams of Rochester, N. Y., another of those against whom Mr. Peirce has made such serious charges, enjoys the respect and confidence of his fellow citizens of Rochester, and it is said that the general disposition among them is to believe that Secretary Peirce has been greviously misled in this case at least.

Richard T. Greener is a colored man. He was born in South Carolina, and was educated at Harvard. He was the first colored man to be graduated from the Cambridge institution. For some time he was law clerk in the office of the comptroller of the treasury, and afterwards was appointed secretary of the New York civil service commission and secretary of the Grant monument fund. Both in Washington and New York he enjoyed the confidence of everyone with whom he came in contact. His integrity was never questioned, and so far as being "boorish" in his demeanor, he was, on the contrary, a man of the most gentlemanly bearing—that is before he went to Vladivostok.

The fact is that Mr. Peirce seems to have set the example followed by Poultney Bigelow in his investigations into the condition of affairs on the canal zone. He seems to have believed all he heard, and to have made little effort toward "investigating" for himself. The Orient is full of "graft." The free ports of China and the ports of India are filled with men who have schemes to put through. American consuls might aid them materially, and if they refuse, these schemers at once set about to "do" the man who refuses to aid them. Mr. Peirce seems to have listened to many of these people. They are the muck rakers of the Orient. Secretary Root has already discovered that in the case of Greener, at least, Mr. Peirce failed to veritfy the information which Greeners' enemies volunteeded. It remains to be seen what will be the result of his inquiry into the cases of McWade and Williams.

The committee on rivers and harbors has not yet been able to formulate a bill for the protection of Niagara Falls which promises to have the support of a majority of that body. When Chairman Burton, after conference with the president, first offered his bill to curtail the rights of the companies chartered by the state of New York in the matter of the amount of water which may be diverted from the upper river, it seemed that he had easy sailing. There was apparently such a widespread public sentiment in favor of the Burton bill, and besides it had the endorsement of the president—that its early passage was confidently expected. But suddenly capital awoke to the danger of confiscation. Congressman Wadsworth, in whose district the celebrated spectacle is located, asked that the men who have invested millions of dollars in "harnessing Niagara" be given an opportunity to present their side of the case. And the prayer was granted.

Capitalists from New York, from Buffalo and from other cities appeared before the committee. They were accompanied by engineers and electrical experts and it was shown, according to these witnesses, that at least 40 per cent of the flow may be diverted without endangering the scenic beauties of the great American spectacle. But after an exhaustive hearing, the international waterways commission was called upon for an opinion and that body recommended that the amount of water allowed to be diverted be limited to about 15 per cent of the normal flow. This would mean the crippling of the development of the existing power companies and the absolute prevention of further development. In the meantime it was decided by members of the committee that if the diversion of water from Niagara river is to be limited to protect navigation it is clearly within the province of congress to limit the amount of water which may be taken from Lake Michigan for the Chicago drainage canal. At present 4,300 cubic feet per second are thus used. The canal commissioners want the privilege of taking 15,000 cubic feet per second and here is the rub. Chairman Burton thinks that such a quantity diverted from Lake Michigan would lower the level of the lakes and he is not willing to grant such permission without a careful examination by expert authority. Other members of the committee take an opposite view, and as a consequence no progress whatever has been made toward the formulation of a bill "to protect the scenic beauties of Niagara". The present indications are that the whole subject will go over until next session and it is doubtful if a bill can be enacted during the life of the present congress.

WRECKERS ARE BUSY.

Captain Reid's Men Are Lively at Wreck of Mataafa.

The scene of the Mataafa wreck has taken on an air of increased activity during the past few days. Bad weather kept the Reid wrecking tugs inside the harbor for about a week and now the crew is making up for lost time.

Yesterday work was going on full blast aboard the wrecked boat. Ore was being removed from the cargo hold and the pumps were kept throbbing all the time.

No time will be lost from now on. The officers of the Pittsburg Steamship company are anxious to get all their available boats into commission and unless the Crescent City and the Mataafa can be released soon, they will see little service this season.

The marine strike delayed things and the owners of the ore carriers and the mine owners are very anxious to make up the time lost.

IS DISEASE A CRIME?

Not so very long ago, a popular magazine published an editorial article in which the writer asserted, in substance, that all disease should be regarded as criminal. Certain it is, that much of the sickness and suffering of mankind is due to the violation of certain of Nature's laws, which, if understood and implicitly followed, would result in the prevention of much of the sickness and suffering of humanity. But to say that all sickness should be regarded as criminal, must, on a little sober reflection, appeal to every reasonable and intelligent individual as radically wrong.

Thousands suffer from contagious and infectious diseases most innocently and unconsciously contracted. Other thousands suffer and die of cancerous affections, the cause of which no medical man has yet been wise enough to ferret out and determine, and which can not, therefore, be avoided. Then too, many times stress of circumstances compel people to expose themselves to various disease-producing agencies, such as malaria, bad air in overheated factories, coal mines, and many other situations, and surely those who suffer therefrom should not be branded as criminals.

In-so-far as disease is contracted or brought on one's self from harmful excesses, over-eating, intemperance and other like indulgencies and debauchery, we think, with our editor friend, that it should be regarded as little less than criminal. On the other hand, we think it would be harsh, unsympathetic, cruel, yes criminal, to condemn the poor, weak, over-worked housewife who sinks under the heavy load of household cares and burdens which she is obliged to struggle along under until she succumbs to the strain and over-exertion, and suffers from weaknesses, various displacements of pelvic organs and other derangements peculiar to her sex.

The too frequent bearing of children, with its exacting demands upon the system, coupled with the care, worry and labor of rearing a large family, is often the cause of weakness, derangements and debility which the mother has to bear and which are aggravated by the many household cares, and the hard, and never-ending work which she is called upon to perform. Dr. Pierce, the maker of that world-famed remedy for women's peculiar ills—Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription—says that one of the greatest obstacles to the cure of this class of maladies is the fact that the poor, overworked housewife can not get the needed rest from her many household cares and labor to enable her to secure from the use of his "Prescription" its full benefits. It is a matter of frequent experience, he says, in his extensive practice in these cases, to meet with those in which his treatment fails by reason of the patient's inability to abstain from hard work long enough to be cured. With those suffering from prolapsus, ante-version and retro-version of the uterus or other displacement of the womanly organs, it is very necessary that, in addition to taking his "Favorite Prescription" they abstain from being very much, or for long periods, on their feet. All heavy lifting or straining of any kind should also be avoided. As much out-door air as possible, with moderate, light exercise is also very important.

It is Dr. Pierce's observation that many housewives suffer much in a weakened condition of their system from too close confinement in-doors. Often the kitchen, where they spend most of their time, is ill ventilated and the bad air and overheating thereof act most unfavorably upon the woman's strength, until she finds herself suffering from various weaknesses attended by backache, bearing-down pains, or dragging-down sensations that are extremely hard to bear. A catarrhal, pelvic drain, of most debilitating and disagreeable nature, is a common symptom of the congested or inflamed condition of the lining membranes of the pelvic organs, attended, perhaps, with tenderness and pain in these regions.

Now, while all the foregoing disagreeable symptoms and sensations will generally yield to the faithful and somewhat persistent use of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription, to realize the very best results from its use, the patient must, as far as possible, abstain from over-work, worry, and too close confinement in-doors.

To such women as are not seriously out of health, but who have exacting duties to perform, either in the way of household duties or in social duties and functions which seriously tax their strength, as well as to nursing mothers, the "Favorite Prescription" has proved a most valuable supporting tonic and invigorating nervine. By its timely use, much serious sickness and suffering may be avoided. The operating table and the surgeons' knife, would, it is believed, seldom have to be resorted to if this most valuable woman's remedy were resorted to in good time. The "Favorite Prescription" has proven a great boon to expectant mothers by preparing the system for the coming of baby, thereby rendering childbirth safe, easy, and almost painless.

Bear in mind, please, that Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription is not a secret or patent medicine, against which the most intelligent people are quite naturally averse, because of the uncertainty as to their harmless character, but is a medicine of known composition, a full list of all its ingredients being printed, in plain English, on every bottle wrapper. An examination of this list of ingredients will disclose the fact that it is non-alcoholic in its composition, chemically pure glycerine taking the place of the commonly used alcohol, in its make-up. In this connection it may not be out of place to state that the "Favorite Prescription" of Dr. Pierce is the only medicine put up for the cure of woman's peculiar weaknesses and ailments, and sold through druggists, that does not contain alcohol, and that too in large quantities. Furthermore, it is the only medicine for woman's special diseases, the ingredients of which have the unanimous endorsement of all the leading medical writers and teachers of all the several schools of practice, and that too as remedies for the ailments for which "Favorite Prescription" is recommended.

A little book of these endorsements will be sent to any address, post-paid, and absolutely free if you request same by postal card, or letter, of Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y.

Don't forget that Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription, for woman's weaknesses and delicate ailments, is not a patent or secret medicine, being the "Favorite Prescription" of a regularly educated and graduated physician, engaged in the practice of his chosen specialty—that of diseases of women—that its ingredients are printed in plain English on every bottle-wrapper; that it is the only medicine especially designed for the cure of woman's diseases that contains no alcohol, and the only one that has a professional endorsement worth more than all the so-called "testimonials" ever published for other medicines.

An invitation is extended by Dr. Pierce to every sick and ailing woman to consult him by letter. There is absolutely no charge or fee for this. Every letter is carefully considered, fully answered, and its statements held as strictly private and sacredly confidential. Address as above directed.

Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets cure constipation. Constipation is the cause of many diseases. Cure the cause and you cure the disease. One "Pellet" is a gentle laxative, and two a mild cathartic. Druggists sell them, and nothing is "just as good."

MERCURY A DECEPTIVE TREATMENT

Mercury and potash are very deceptive treatments and the blood poison sufferer who depends on them for a cure is sure to be disappointed. These minerals will remove the external symptoms and shut the disease up in the system for a while, but the trouble will surely return and the loathsome symptoms of sore mouth and throat, copper-colored spots, falling hair, sores and ulcers etc., will be accompanied by the disastrous effects of the treatment. The continued use of these strong minerals will completely ruin the health and weaken the system to such an extent that the original disease often becomes incurable and sometimes fatal. Mercury and potash eat out the delicate lining of the stomach and bowels, destroy the gastric juices, producing chronic dyspepsia, cause mercurial Rheumatism, salivation, and where they are taken in large quantities cause necrosis or decay of the bones. WHAT RETAIL MARKETS OFFER.

Garlic, 25 cents a lb.
Green onions, 3 bunches for 5 cents.
Cabbage, 5 cents a pound.
Green peas, 12½ cents a quart.
Lamb chops, 25 cents a pound.
Pork chops, 15 cents a pound.

Broiled lamb chops with peas might help one to forget some of the disagreeable features of life. If you are trying to keep down the grocery bill, however, it won't help that any, for rib lamb chops are the most expensive kind, and peas are 12½ cents for about a teaspoonful and a half.

Garlic dried and braided into very nice-looking wreaths repose in a bushel basket in the market and the green onions are beginning to have that little round knob at the end that shows that they are at last real onions. They are not expensive, three bunches being the quantity for 5 cents.

Rhubarb a Valuable Dish

Rhubarb and Sorrel.

Please give me through your excellent household department, recipes for different ways of utilizing rhubarb; also sorrel, and oblige, H. K.

Rhubarb Cobbler.

Butter a deep earthen ware pie dish and fill with rhubarb, unpeeled, but thoroughly washed and cut in pieces half an inch long. Add sugar to sweeten, then cover with a rich puff paste, or if preferred, a fritter batter, of eggs, flour, milk, and salt, allowing a large tablespoonful of flour to each egg, a tablespoonful of baking powder to each cup of flour used and milk to make the right consistency. Pour over the rhubarb which should be slightly heaped in the centre and bake until light and brown.

Stewed Rhubarb and Figs.

Allow a third as much figs as you have rhubarb. Soak the figs in not water long enough to plumb them. Put into a double boiler, with the rhubarb washed and cut into inch pieces without peeling, add sugar to make as sweet as desired and steam until tender without adding any water.

This makes an excellent spring remedy as well as sauce.

Rhubarb Pudding.

Put a few thin slices of lightly buttered bread in the bottom of a pudding dish. Moisten slightly with boiling water. Then put in a layer of rhubarb cut in small pieces.

Sprinkle thinly with sugar and gratings of lemon peel, continuing in this order until the dish is full. Put a few lumps of butter on top and bake a golden brown. Serve hot or cold, as preferred.

Rhubarb Ice Cream.

Cut up enough rhubarb without peeling to make three pints. Put into a preserving kettle, add a pinch of salt and just enough cold water to cover. Stew until tender, add a pound of sugar, stir until dissolved and strain through a fine hair sieve. When nearly cold add one pint of cream and more sugar if needed, and freeze.

Rhubarb Sherbet.

This makes a refreshing drink for a hot day. Wash a dozen stalks of rhubarb, cut up and cook in three pints of water ten minutes. Put into a large jug or pitcher a cup sugar and the thinly peeled yellow rind of two lemons. Strain the liquor from the rhubarb over the lemon and sugar, stand away on the ice or cellar bottom until thoroughly chilled and serve with a grating of nutmeg on each glass and more sugar if desired.

Rhubarb Greens.

In Queen Elizabeth's time, rhubarb leaves were used as a pot herb and considered superior to spinach or bee greens. Cook in just enough water to cover until perfectly tender, then drain thoroughly and chop fine. Put a tablespoonful of butter in the frying pan and toss the leaves into this until very hot. Season with salt, pepper and a suspicion of nutmeg, mound on a hot dish and garnish with the yolks of hard boiled eggs put through a ricer.

Rhubarb Jam.

Allow to each pound cut rhubarb, one pound sugar and one lemon. Peel the lemons as thin as possible, taking care not to get any of the bitter portion, and put into a large bowl with the lemon pulp, leaving out the seeds. Cut the rhubarb into inch pieces, put into the bowl on top of the lemon and the sugar on top of the rhubarb. Cover and stand away in a cool place over night. The next day empty into a preserving kettle and cook slowly with frequent stirring for three-quarters of an hour. Take from the fire, cool a little and pack in glasses or earthen cheese jars. Cover with brandied paper, then seal. This jam is especially nice for the children's fruit sandwiches. Another delicious jam is made by combining rhubarb, pineapple and cranberries in equal proportions.

Rhubarb and Orange Marmalade.

Cut into inch pieces two pounds rhubarb that is plump and tender. Peel thin one-half dozen oranges and cut the yellow rind into shreds. Put the orange pulp, shredded peel and rhubarb into a preserving kettle with a pound and a half granulated sugar and place over a gentle fire. Cook, stirring often until the consistency required, then turn into jars, but leave uncovered until thoroughly cold. Cover with brandied paper or paraffine.

Sorrel Soup.

For one pint of the sorrel gathered in the fields or purchased in the city market, allow one onion, a few leaves of lettuce, spinach or celery chopped fine. Put a tablespoonful good drippings, olive oil or butter into a saucepan, and when melted add the chopped vegetables. Cover and steam in their own juices ten or fifteen minutes, then add two tablespoonfuls flour. As soon as incorporated with the rest of the mixture, add three pints boiling water, and cook until smooth and slightly thickened. Season with salt, pepper and nutmeg and just before serving add a cup of hot milk with one or two eggs beaten with it. Take at once from the fire and serve with croutons.

Sorrel and Dandelion as a Vegetable.

Wash and shred dandelion and sorrel leaves, but keep separate, as the dandelions require longer cooking. After they have stood in cold water for an hour, put the dandelions in a saucepan of boiling salted water. Stew until nearly tender, add the sorrel and simmer until the liquor disappears and the leaves are all tender. Chop or beat with a wooden spoon, and season with salt, pepper, butter and nutmeg if desired. Serve with a garnish of hard boiled eggs, the whites cut in rings and the yolks rubbed through a ricer.

TORTURED BY ITCHING ECZEMA

Suffered Tremendous Itching Over Whole Body—Scratched Until Bled—Worse at Night, With Soreness and Excruciating Pains—A Western Lady's

WONDERFUL CURE BY CUTICURA REMEDIES

"Last year at this time I suffered with a tremendous itching on my back, which grew worse and worse, until it spread over the whole body, and only my face and hands were free. For four months or so I suffered the torments of the damned, and I had to scratch, scratch, scratch, until I bled. At night when I went to bed things got worse, and I had at times to get up and scratch my body all over, until I was as sore as could be, and until I suffered excruciating pains. I did not know what it was, and resorted to a number of blood purifiers, using at times also Cuticura Soap. They told me then that I was suffering from eczema. Then I made up my mind that I would also use Cuticura Ointment and Cuticura Resolvent. I used them according to instructions, and very soon indeed I was greatly relieved. I continued until well, and now I am ready to recommend the Cuticura Remedies to any one who suffers as did your obedient servant. Mrs. Mary Metzger, Sweetwater, Okla., June 28, 1905."

The EVENING STORY.

THE SLAVE OWNER

By F. Hopkinson Smith.

(Copyright, 1906, by Joseph B. Bowles.)

It was on the Limited, 10:30 night express out of Louisville, bound south to Nashville and beyond.

I had lower Four.

When I entered the sleeper the porter was making up the berths, the passengers sitting about in each other's way until their beds were ready.

I laid my bag on an empty seat, threw my overcoat over its back and sat down to face a newspaper within a foot of my nose. There was a man behind it, but he was too intent on its columns to be aware of my presence.

Suddenly the man's fingers tightened on the edges of the paper. He was still reading, entirely unconscious that my knees were within two inches of his own.

Then I heard this exclamation:

"It's a damned outrage!"

My curiosity got the better of me—I coughed.

The paper dropped instantly.

"My dear sir," he said, bending forward courteously and laying his hand on my wrist, "I owe you an apology. I had no idea anyone was opposite me."

He was 65, if a day; gray, with bushy eyebrows, piercing brown eyes, heavy well-trimmed mustache, strong chin and nose, with fine determined lines about the mouth. A man in perfect health, his full throat browned with many weathers showing above a low collar caught together by a loose black cravat—a handsome, rather dashing sort of a man for one so old.

"I say it is a shame, sir," he continued, "the way they are lynching the negroes around here. Have you read the extra?" passing it over to me—"Another this morning at Cramptown. It's an infernal outrage, sir!"

I had read the "extra," with all its sickening details, and so handed it back to him.

"I quite agree with you," I said; "but this man was a brute."

"No doubt of it, sir. We've got brutal negroes among us, just as we've got brutal white men. But that's no reason why we should hang them without a trial; we still owe them that justice. When we dealt fairly with them there was never any such trouble. There were hundreds of plantations in the south during the war where the only men left were negroes. We trusted our wives and children to them; and yet, such outrages as these were unheard of and absolutely impossible. I don't expect you to agree with me, of course; but I tell you, sir, the greatest injustice the North ever did the slave was in robbing him of his home."

"Were you a slave owner?" I asked, not wishing to dispute the point.

"No, sir; but my father was. He had fifty of them on our plantation. He never whipped one of them, and he wouldn't let anybody else strike them, either. There wasn't one of them that wouldn't have come back if we had had a place to put him. The old ones are all dead now, thank God!—all except old Aleck; he's around yet."

"One of your father's old slaves, did you say?"

"Yes! carried me about on his back when I was so high," and he measured the distance with his hand. "Aleck and I were boys together. I was about 8 and he about 15 when my father got him."

My companion paused, drumming on the leather covering of his chair.

"I was a little fellow then, running around barefooted, but I remember meeting Aleck just as if it were yesterday. He was holding the horse while my father and the overseer stood talking on one side. They were planning his work and where he should sleep. I crept up to look at him. I had heard he was coming and that he was a runaway slave.

"'What's your name?' I asked.

"'Aleck,' he said; 'an' what's your name, young marster?'

"'Sammy,' I said.

"That's the way it began between us, and it's kept on ever since. I call him 'Aleck' and he calls me 'Sammy'—never anything else, even today."

"He calls you 'Sammy'?" I said, in astonishment. The familiarity was new to me between master and slave.

"Yes, always. There isn't another person in the world now that calls me 'Sammy.'"

My traveling companion stopped for a moment, cleared his throat and continued

"Aleck didn't do a thing but look after me. We fished together and went swimming together; and we hunted eggs and trapped rabbits; and when I got older and had a gun Aleck would go along to look after the dogs and cut down the trees when we were out for coons.

"What Aleck had in those days I had, and what I had he had; and there was no difference between us till the war broke out.

"I was grown then, and Aleck was 6 or 7 years older. We were on the border line, and one morning the union soldiers opened fire, and all that was left of the house, barns, outbuildings and negro quarters was a heap of ashes.

"That sent me South, of course, feeling pretty ugly and bitter, and I don't know that I've gotten over it since. My father was too old to go, and he and my mother moved into the village and lived in two rooms over my father's office.

In a few months they had drafted Aleck and carried him off.

"Three years after that my mother fell ill and I heard of it and came back in disgust; and was arrested as a suspicious character as I entered the town. I didn't blame them, for I looked like a tramp and intended to. The next day I was let out and went home to where my mother and father were living. As I was opening the garden gate—it was night—Aleck laid his hand on my shoulder. He had on the uniform of a United States soldier. I couldn't believe my eyes at first. I had lost track of him, and, as I found out afterwards, so had my father. We stood under the street lamp and he saw the look in my face and threw his hands up over his head as a negro does when some sudden shock comes to him.

"'Don't turn away from me, Sammy,' he cried, 'please don't Sammy. 'Tain't my fault I got on dese clo'es, 'deed it ain't. Dey done fo'ced me. I heard you was here an' I been tryin' to git to ye all day. Oh, I so glad to git hold ob ye, Sammy, so glad, so glad.' He broke out into sobs of crying. I was near it myself, for he was the first one from home I had seen, and there was something in his voice that went through me.

"Then he unbuttoned his coat, felt in his pocket, pushed something into my hand and disappeared in the darkness. When I got inside and held it out to the light, he had given me two five-dollar greenbacks.

"I was sitting by my mother the next night about 10 o'clock—she wouldn't let me out of her sight—when there came a rap at the door and Aleck came in. I knew how my father would feel about seeing him in those clothes. I didn't know till afterwards that they were all he had and that the poor fellow was as bad off as any of us.

"Father opened upon Aleck right away, just as I knew he would, without giving him a chance to speak. He upbraided him for going into the army, told him to take his money back and showed him the door. The old gentleman could be pretty savage when he wanted to, and he didn't spare Aleck a bit. Aleck never said a word—just listened to my father's abuse of him—his hands folded over his cap, his eyes on the two bills lying on the table where my father had thrown them. Then he said slowly:

"'Marse Henry, I done hearn ye every word. You don't want me here no mo'; an' I'm 'gwine away. I ain't a-fightin' agin you an' Sammy an' neber will—it's 'cause I couldn't help it dat I'm wearin' dese clo'es. As to dis money dat you won't let Sammy take, it's mine to gib 'cause I saved it up. I gin it to Sammy 'cause I fotched him up an' 'cause he's as much mine as he is your'n. Please, Marse Henry, let Sammy keep dis money. Dere didn't uscter be no diff'rence otween us, and dere oughtn't to be none now.'

"My father didn't speak again—he hadn't the heart, and Aleck went out, leaving the money on the table.

"When the war closed I came home and began to pick up my life again. Aleck had gone to Wisconsin and was living in the same town as young Crugor, one of my father's law students. When my father died I telegraphed Crugor, inviting him to serve as one of the pallbearers, and asked him to find Aleck and tell him. I knew he would be hurt if I didn't let him know.

"It was 2 o'clock the next night when Aleck came. I hardly knew him, he was so changed—much older and bent, and his clothes hung on him in rags.

"I pointed to the parlor door, and the old man went on tip-toe into the room and stood looking at my father's dead face for a long time—the body lay on a cot. Then he placed his hat on the floor and got down on his knees. There was just light enough to see his figure black against the white of the sheet that covered the cot. For some minutes he knelt motionless, as if in prayer, though no sound escaped him.

"Then he bent down and picked up one corner of the white sheet, and kissed it reverently. He did not touch the face. When he had tip-toed out of the room, he laid his hand on my shoulder. The tears were streaming down his face.

"'It was jes' like ye, Sammy, to send fo' me. We knows one anudder, you an' me—' and he turned towards the front door.

"'Where are you going, Aleck?' I asked.

"'I dunno, Sammy—some place whar I kin lay down.'

"'You don't leave here tonight, Aleck,' I said. 'Go upstairs to that room next to mine—you know where it is—and get into that bed.' He held up his hand and began to say he couldn't, but I insisted.

"The next day was Sunday.

"'Sammy,' said Aleck as soon as he saw me, 'I want ye to let me drive my marster's body to de grave.'

"I held out my hand, and for an instant neither of us spoke.

"'Thank ye, Sammy,' was all he said.

"When the carriages formed in line I saw Aleck leaning against the fence, and the undertaker's man was on the hearse. I caught Alecks' eye and beckoned to him.

"'What's the matter, Aleck? Why aren't you on the hearse?'

"'De undertaker man wouldn't let me, Sammy; an' I didn't like to 'sturb you an' de mistis.'

"The tears stood in his eyes.

"'Go find him and bring him to me,' I said.

"When he came I told him the funeral would stop where it was if he didn't carry out my orders.

"He said there was some mistake, though I didn't believe it, and went off with Aleck. As we turned out of the gate and into the road I caught sight of the hearse, Aleck on the box. He sat bolt upright, head erect, the reins in one hand, the whip resting on his knee, as I had seen him do so often when driving my father—grave, dignified and thoughtful, speaking to the horses in low tones, the hearse moving and stopping as each carriage would be filled and driven ahead."

At this instant the Pullman porter came up.

"Your berth's all ready, major," said the porter.

My companion rose from his chair, straightened his leg, held out his hand and said:

"You can understand now, sir, how I feel about these continued outrages. I don't mean to say that every man is like Aleck, but I do mean to say that Aleck would never have been as loyal as he is but for the way my father brought him up. Good night, sir."

He was gone before I could do more than express my thanks for his confidence. It was just as well—any further word of mine would have been superfluous.

Gifts For Ocean Travelers

No gifts are harder to select than those for persons going abroad, because they must not only be appropriate, but made in shapes that can be conveniently carried or packed where there must be economy of space. For this reason the variety of small bottles in silver, flat miniature hand glasses, and all the other necessary toilet articles and leather bound pieces shown now in the shops are favorites.

For women the number of things to select from is both large and exceedingly attractive. And considering that they are in dimensions that readily admit of close packing, not extremely expensive.

One of the most practical presents that can be bought is an oblong soap box; one that is about half or three-quarters of an inch in height would make a most desirable and serviceable gift. Most of these are plain so that initials, or any engraving wanted, can be put on the lids. According to size they can be bought for from 50 cents up.

Hand glasses that look as if they were made for dolls, with real French plate, are stunning, and will be found most useful, despite their smallness. Most of them come in gilt frames with long coiled handles, and are as delicately wrought and accurately made as the large ones. Some of them—the more costly varieties—are studded with semi-precious stones.

There are silver holders to put over the bristles of tooth brushes when wet to protect things among which they are packed that are prettily carved and cost comparatively little.

Small cut glass tumblers for drinking water, with a silver standard artistically carved, are acceptable presents that are not unusually expensive.

One of the newest and at the same time most practical things to give a woman before she sails is what is called the "Fishwork basket." It includes a number of silver pieces, all decorated with fish, oyster shells, oars, or something relative to the sea on them. The scissors have miniature fish for handles, the bodkins or ribbon runners are in the shape of fish, while the thread is wound like coils of rope one is familiar with on decks of vessels. The needles are, of course, like those ordinarily used, but are stuck in a pretty piece of flannel covered with red silk that resembles a small row boat. The box in which these are fitted is of willow lined with red silk, and looks like the basket that fishermen carry with them on trips. The cost of it is $4.50 and up, according to the size.

Then there are air cushions or pillows for use on the backs and seats of steamer chairs, that come in neat leather cases and can be bought for 75 each.

Bon Voyage books, with data about the flags and colored smoke stacks, by which passing vessels can be identified, with plain pages for taking notes, are serviceable. Bound in red morocco they are quite attractive, and sell for from $1.50 up.

Small leather bound clocks with flat bottoms that can be placed on any smooth surface, will be most convenient when traveling, and done in leather are practically proof against breakage. In green, blue and red morocco; they are worth $5.

Marine glasses with strong lenses are always a joy to the possessor in scanning the great watery waste where a speck of sail seen miles in the distance is eagerly watched by the majority of those on board.

There is a most useful watch case, similar to those used for carrying cigars or cigarettes, made in natural colored calf skin, or in green or black morocco, that can be purchased for $3.50. They have a standard, so that when not used in a pocket or case, they can be set up on a dresser like an ordinary desk clock.

Body is Recovered.

The body of Thomas E. Creighton, the lumberman, who was drowned, April 20, in an attempt to break a log jam at Independence, was taken from the Cloquet river, near Burnett station, yesterday. The dead man was 27 years old, and a son of Rev. John Creighton of New York. Rev. S. F. Sharpless, pastor of the Second Presbyterian church, Duluth, and an old friend of the Creighton family, has taken charge of the remains until the arrival of relatives from the East. Creighton was employed at Bailey's camp, near Independence. He was taken with cramps and drowned while swimming from the log jam.

DODGES OF THIEVES.

How Criminals With Brains Carried Out Daring Projects.

That the successful burglar is "born, not made," may be judged from the report of a case which recently came before the Berlin courts, says London Tit-Bits. The assistants at a large hairdresser's shop, on arriving early one morning, found a placard on the shutters bearing the inscription, "Closed on account of sudden death." Thinking that the proprietor, Herr Jaskowiak, had died in the night, the assistants returned home, but later in the day some of them went back to the shop. They then found, to their astonishment, their master seated at his desk making a list of goods stolen from his salon. Knowing that the assistants arrived early, the burglars, three in number, put up the placard in order that they might not be disturbed.

Somewhat similar, though even more daring, was the ruse of a clever gang of international thieves which, a few years ago, robbed a firm of London goldsmiths of goods worth $125,000. Aware that a watchman was not kept on the premises, and that the principal and employes of the firm lived in outlying suburbs, the burglars waited until 9 o'clock on an evening which was both wet and dark. The shop had then been closed about an hour and the thieves, carefully made up to resemble the men whose premises they were about to ransack, deliberately turned on a flood of light and affixed notices to the windows: "Great Stock-Taking Sale! Twenty Per Cent Off All Marked Prices. Goods Sacrificed To Make Room For New Season's Stock."

Policemen on the beat, thinking they saw the proprietor and his assistants apparently hard at work checking their goods, suspected nothing, and the burglars safely escaped with their booty to the continent.

A clever burglar's ruse, showing careful study in the habits of the victim, was recently reported to the police. It is the custom of a business man who resides at Brixton and has his office in Queen Victoria street, to leave home every morning and not return until dinner. Recently his wife received an anonymous letter, which informed her that her husband, instead of working in his office, frequently went to a Charing Cross tea shop accompanied by a young lady. By the same post the husband received a letter which gave the information that, while he was at his office, his wife spent her time at a certain tea shop in the neighborhood of Charing Cross.

Husband and wife, bent on catching each other red-handed, hastened to Charing Cross, and proceeded to the tea-shop indicated in the anonymous letters. Judge of their surprise when they came face to face! There was a mutual explanation. Husband and wife then came to the conclusion that some one had been playing a joke on them. They thought no more of the matter, and decided to end the day by a cozy dinner before returning home. When they did return to their house they found the place ransacked and the most valuable articles missing. The husband rushed away to his office, only to find the same confusion there. The burglars had made good hauls, both at the house and the office.

Last summer a series of very audacious burglaries occurred at the home of New York's "Smart Set." Perhaps the most remarkable instance was the looting of the residence of Jose Aymar, America's millionaire lawyer. Three burglars lived a whole week in the house, freely helping themselves to the old wines in the cellar, and removing the valuable household effects nightly. Jewels and paintings to the value of over £25,000 were taken away.

Mr. Aymar and his family had been spending the summer in Canada, trusting to the vigilance of the police to protect their possessions. The burglars effected an entrance through the front basement. After taking an iron door off its hinges by means of a crowbar, they established themselves in a back bedroom on the second floor. Sleeping during the day, they used an alarm clock to awaken them at 7 o'clock every evening, and then commenced their work of plunder. The caretaker of the adjoining house heard the alarm clock several times, but thought some of Mr. Aymar's servants had returned home.

After about a week her suspicions were aroused, and she notified the authorities. The burglars, however, decamped before the arrival of the police, taking nearly everything of value which they could carry away. They cut twenty pictures out of their frames, and many of the household effects were removed in wagons. This is by no means an isolated instance of jovial burglars making their home for days in the houses of other people.

During a round of inspection the proprietor of a hotel situated on the Grimsel Pass, Switzerland, was astonished to see smoke issuing from one of the chimneys of the hotel, which he had carefully locked up and left for the winter months. He unlocked a door, entered, and, attracted by the sounds of a piano, went into one of the best bed sitting rooms. There he found a young man, decked out in borrowed clothes, playing and singing. The stove was lighted, and on the tables were bottles of of his best champagnes and other delicacies. The piano and a large bookcase had also been dragged into the room.

"For the last month," said the youthful burglar, on seeing the proprietor, "I have been thoroughly enjoying myself. I never had such a good time in my life. I do not mind going to prison now and I hope you will forgive me." The jovial burglar put on a coat and hat, took a last glass of champagne, then followed the proprietor to the hotel police station in the valley.

BOOTH'S DAILY MENU.

Kansas City Journal: It is interesting to know what a man of Gen. Booth's age and vitality lives on. Here is his day's menu: For breakfast he takes a moderate quantity of buttered toast, with strong tea and an equal portion of milk. Between breakfast and lunch he eats a few raisins. For lunch he has a bowl of vegetables, especially potatoes cooked in their jackets, and whatever green stuff is in season. Then he sleeps from a quarter to half an hour. Tea is similar to breakfast, with the occasional addition of a few mushrooms. For supper he takes invariably a plate of rice and milk.

NOT DISQUALIFIED.

Green Bag: The judge had his patience sorely tried by lawyers who wished to talk and by men who tried to evade jury service. Between hypothetical questions and excuses it seemed as if they never would get to the actual trial of the case. So when the puzzled little German who had been accepted by both sides jumped up the judge was exasperated.

"Shudge!" cried the German.

"What is it?" demanded the judge.

"I tink I like to go home to my wife," said the German.

"You can't," retorted the judge. "Sit down."

"But, Shudge," persisted the German, "I don't tink I make a good shuror."

"You're the best in the box," said the judge. "Sit down."

"What box?" said the German.

"Jury box," said the judge.

"No," said the judge, "the bad box is the prisoners' box."

"But, Shudge," persisted the little German, "I don't speak good English."

"You don't have to speak any at all," said the judge. "Sit down."

The little German pointed at the lawyers to make his last desperate plea.

"Shudge," he said, "I can't make noddings of what these fellers say."

"Neither can any one else," he said. "Sit down."

With a sight the little German sat down.

CAUGHT.

Boston Herald: Some time after the opening of the war of 1861, when things began to look black and men of all classes were forced to take up arms in defense of the Union, one of Bridgewater's prominent men, the late George Miner, who had evaded service, was finally compelled to appear for a physical examination. He said he was "stone deaf." Every ruse was tried to surprise him into hearing, but this was a hopeless case.

The officer in charge gave orders to discharge him, saying: "Poor fellow, yours is a sad case." Miner, with a sly grin on his face, left the building. A young doctor coming up behind him suddenly remarked, in a very low voice:

"Oh, Mr. Miner, how long have you been deaf?"

"Ever since I was born, b'gosh," promptly replied Miner.

He went to the front.

POSTMAN RUNS ERRANDS.

Kansas City Journal: The French postman of rural neighborhoods ekes out the small salary of his governmental position by doing all kinds of errands in the village for people who live along his route. He makes a small income from the fees recieved for these services. In summer he sometimes goes his rounds on a bicycle, but in winter he has to walk.

"If 'twere well it were done quickly," then it were necessary (in most cases) that it were done in "the Herald want ad. way."

TWO DOLLAR DIVIDEND

Stockholders of North Butte to Receive It This Quarter.

Consolidation Announcements Cause Activity in Bisbee Stocks.

Predictions of a $2 dividend on North Butte have been fulfilled. It was declared today, and when it has been paid, $1,800,000 will have been paid out to stockholders by the company in one year. This record is a remarkable one, and it is no small wonder that the hearts of the shareholders are glad.

If this dividend is maintained—and there is no doubt that it will be—at every quarter during the coming year, it will mean an annual income to the stockholders of $8 per share, or more than 50 per cent interest on their investment for those who bought the stock at $15 per share.

The dividend declared today is the fourth quarterly one. The books will close June 9, and the dividend will be paid June 23. The first quarterly dividend was 50 cents, the second 75 cents, and the third $1.25.

A FLOATING HELL.

Bellingham, Wash., correspondence New York Herald: What was at one time known on the Atlantic coast as the "worst" craft afloat has just sailed from Puget sound, lumber laden, for New York. With the sailing of this ship, the bark Gatherer, Capt. Wirchuletts, passes from the shipping list of the Pacific coast.

Although since 1882, when the Gatherer came to the Pacific, its history is not so bad, prior to that time no vessel that sailed the seas was so generally feared by the unfortunate sailor or landlubber that awakened from a drugged sleep to find himself numbered among its crew. Scores of sailors have been "keelhauled" from the Gatherer. The process consists of shipping a line from the port to the starboard side of the vessel, passing under the keel. The offending sailor is then securely bound and attached to the end of the line and hauled below the surface of the water under the ship and up again on the opposite side.

When the announcement was made in 1882 that the Gatherer was to be sent to the Pacific coast, its reputation as a floating hell had preceded it, and many an old salt offered up a silent prayer that he might be spared a voyage in its forecastle.

It was on the trip around the Horn that the worst chapter was added to its history. The Gatherer was in command of Capt. John Sparks. With Sparks was a gigantic mate named Watts, a man of remarkable powers, and whose fame as a fighter was exceeded only by his record for cruelty. The vessel had barely passed Sandy Hook when the clubbing of the men began. Within a week not a man dared look at an officer, let alone speak to one. This process was known as "trimming" the crew, and it was continued until the vessel made the port of San Francisco.

While rounding Cape Horn, one of the sailors, who had been a particular prey of the man, ran aloft and sprang from a yard into the sea. No effort was made to rescue the man. The ship proceeded on its way, leaving him struggling in the waves. The next incident to break the monotony of the cuffs and kicks of the officers occurred when a German sailor was killed by the mate. The body was scarcely astern when a sailor named Swensen climbed to the rail, severed his throat with a sail knife and toppled over into the sea.

The most revolting act of cruelty perpetrated on the voyage was reserved until a few days before the vessel reached San Francisco. Among the crew was a young fellow who had shipped out of New York, hoping the voyage would build up his shattered health. He was a college man, and among his other afflictions was short sightedness. Three days out from San Francisco the young man was knocked clear across the deck by a blow in the face from Watts. While blindly staggering to the forecastle he was again assaulted by Watts, who knocked him down and with a long case knife gouged out one of his eyes.

Despite his horrible injuries, the young man lived. He was kicked off the boat at San Francisco to find that he had relatives in that city. Watts was arrested and sentenced to seven years in Folsom prison. He served his term and then went to a logging camp in North Carolina, where he was killed by the snapping of a heavy cable.

Capt. Sparks escaped prosecution by swearing that Watts was to blame for the cruelties. But another penalty was in store for him. Before he sailed from New York he was engaged to marry the daughter of one of the owners of the Gatherer. As soon as the story of the voyage reached the East the captain was discharged, and, owing to his reputation, was unable to get another command. In despair he took to drink and died soon after of delirium tremens.

STUDIED HARD.

Kansas City Journal: A curious story which has escaped the biographers of Matthew Arnold, but which concerns both him and the late Archbishop Temple, has lately been told in regard to Arnold's undergraduate days at Oxford: "Matthew Arnold got leave, at the last moment, to take in logic for responsions, instead of Euclid, which he could never master. The day before the examination he went to Jowett, who was his master, and asked how he could learn the subject in time, as he was wholly ignorant of it. Jowett said his only chance was to go to Temple, and see if he would try and teach him in one day. Temple consented, and starting about 9 o'clock in the morning, talked continuously, allowing two pauses of half an hour each for meals, till past 2 o'clock the next morning. Arnold had been provided with paper, but took no notes. He lay back in his chair, with the tips of his fingers together, saying from time to time, 'What wonderful fellows they were!' Soon after 2 o'clock a. m. Temple sent Arnold away to get some sleep, after which he satisfied the examiners in logic. He answered every question."

How much good it did him is not stated, but the performance speaks well for Temple's gifts as a "crammer." Matthew Arnold's constitutional inability to grapple with geometry affords an interesting commentary on his well-known theories of education.

THE CHICAGO MARKET.

Chicago, May 21.—The wheat market was firm at the opening today and trading was active. The chief cause of the strength was the absence of rain in the Southwest. There was a big demand from commission houses, and the principal selling was by a principal bull. The tone of cables was bearish, Liverpool failing to respond to the advance of Saturday in the local market. July opened 1½@⅝c up at 83c to 83¼@⅜c advanced to 83⅝c and then sold at 83⅝c. Minneapolis, Duluth and Chicago reported receipts of 196 cars against 154 cars a week ago and 344 cars last year.

Additional buying followed a report of a liberal decrease in the visible supply and the price of July was carried up to 84⅛c. A part of the grain was lost on profit taking. The close was firm with July up ⅝@¾c at 83⅝@¾c.

The corn market was firm, partly in sympathy with wheat, and also because of a good demand from cash interests and commission houses. Offerings were light. July opened unchanged to ⅛c up at 47¼c to 47⅜c, advanced to 47½@⅝c and declined to 47⅜c. Local receipts were 331 cars, with 22 of contract grade.

The high point for July was at 48⅛c. A slight reaction took place on profit taking but the close was firm with July ⅝@1c higher at 48⅛@¼.

The oats market was strong and active, despite considerable profit-taking by local bulls. July opened ⅝c to ½c higher at 33½c to 33⅝c, sold up to 33⅝@¾c, and on profit-taking sales declined to 33¼c. Local receipts were 120 cars.

The provisions market opened easier but rallied on good demand from packers for all products. July pork opened 7½c lower at $15.50 and advanced to $15.65. Lard was 5c lower at $8.52½ and sold up to $8.62½. Ribs opened a shade to 2½@5c lower at $8.85 to $8.97½ and advanced to $9.02½.

Close: Wheat—May, 86¼c; July, 83⅝@¾c. Corn—May, 48¼c; July, 48⅛@¼c. Oats—May, 34⅜c; July, 34c. Pork—May, $15.02½; July, $15.22½. Lard—May, $8.66; July, $8.85. Ribs—May, $8; July, $9.05@9.07½. Grain Gossip.

Logan & Bryan, Chicago: The wheat market had the greatest buying today witnessed since the bull campaign began. Wheat maintained its lead, but was closely followed by coarse grains. The situation in wheat continues to grow stronger from day to day, almost independent of the one primary bull feature, which is the drought covering the whole winter wheat country. How important the trade regards the weather may be noted from the fact that reports of showers near the close caused a flurry of selling and quit the reaction in the price. Similar reactions to this may be expected as the bull market progresses, but there is nothing in the situation to warrant any particular change from the strength now shown in the market. Smyley, who is supposed to know most about the Kansas crop, issued a statement declaring the conditions worse than he thought possible. He refers to a large section of the western part of the state as promising only 25 per cent of an average crop. Illinois and Kentucky points are reporting wheat holding very short. The smut reports of the season came from soft wheat sections today. The visible supply decrease of over 2,350,000 bushels added to the buying force. Shorts were forced to cover in all months. Look for a natural reaction, and buy wheat off the weather map does not change.

Corn—Chicago stocks of corn in public houses were reduced one-half, leaving only 216,000 bus. The visible supply is again declared over 500,000 bus, leaving a total of only 2,250,000 bus. The enlarged receipts which were to break cash and futures are here, but the market went up stronger than before. The trade gets short in anticipation of a very large estimate for tomorrow, and when 445 cars were posted there was a stampede to cover. Some of the strongest talk heard in the trade were covering short corn for all months. May prices are up sharply on the drouth, and the shortage of moisture may soon become a feature of the corn trade.

Oats—Visible stocks of oats which were 28,000,000 bus a few months ago, are down to 10,500,000 bus, and but a trifle more than at this time last year. Local stocks were reduced more than 1,000,000 bus for the week. There is just one vital question to consider in the oats trade, and that is precipitation such as will save the new crop from partial failure. Prices should react from such a strong swell as today, but without general rains would buy the oats on reaction.

Provisions—Instead of 45,000 hogs estimated, this market received 50,000 and prices closed 10 to 15 cents higher. Several big packing companies were quickly ranged on the buying side of ribs, and shorts were buyers of all products. The situation is naturally a strong one, and on any depression in prices, from whatever cause, would place buying orders for a natural advance.

* * *

Wisconsin Grain & Stock Company: Wheat—It begins to look more and more as if the big men in the trade were trying to keep prices up in order to put out the large lines of cheap wheat. The crop is all right for every one agrees that if it needed rain last week the rains of Saturday night and yesterday and today must have benefitted it. As soon as these people get what they want there will be different crop reports received, and right now every one agrees that the Southwest will yield as large as it did last year.

TRADING IS VERY LIGHT

Money Was Easy, But There Was Little Buying Demand.

New York, May 21.—First prices of the week in the stock market today were but slightly changed from previous closing quotations, except for one or two specialties. International Pump was marked up 2¼ and Distillers' Securities 1¼. The volume of business was very small. Only a limited number of issues were dealt in.

Both dealings and price fluctuations were along restricted lines and half a point was about the widest variation of any of the leaders. Some selling followed the opening trading, but the ensuing slight losses were recovered before 11 o'clock.

The sluggish and irregular prices left the market without any definite tone. There was a drop which carried Pennsylvania, Reading, New York Central, Colorado Fuel and Manhattan a point lower than last week's closing. Interborough Metropolitan 1½ and Delaware & Hudson 3⅝. Slight recoveries followed. United States Reduction rose 2½. Bonds were steady at noon.

The demand for St. Paul increased sufficiently to advance it to a point, but the other leaders were almost stationary.

The favorite stocks continued neglected until well into the afternoon. The only stocks in which there were fluctuations extensive enough to call for notice were in the inactive class. There was a rise to above 132 in Reading. Minneapolis, St. Paul & Soo yielded 1¾.

Lackawanna rose 12 to a new record price at $5.40. Delaware & Hudson recovered 1¼ over Saturday and Illinois Central made a gain of 1¾. The market then lapsed into stagnation again and yielded slightly. The closing was heavy and lifeless.

Stock Gossip.

Logan & Bryan to Paine, Webber & Co.: The market closed irregular. The volume of business was by far the smallest we have had for some time, the market clearly showing hesitation from some unknown reason. Today's hesitation may come from uncertainty over crop conditions, or it may be that Wall street would rather wait until after the banks of San Francisco have been opened next Wednesday morning. Money was extremely easy, but the action of special stocks, such as Pennsylvania for example, does not at the moment inspire the public with confidence in the stability of the list. We have for some days been predicting a traders' market. We see nothing at the moment likely to change present conditions. The market is a slow one, extremely well held.

* * *

Walker Brothers to Paine, Webber & Company: The market was dull and uninteresting today and the changes slight. There was little or no news and traders left the floor early. It looks as if we were going to run into dullness for some time to come. Money was easy, but there seemed to be little inclination on the part of the public to go into the market. The close was steady and without feature.

The Cotton Market.

New York, May 21.—The cotton market opened steady at an advance of 2@5 points in response to higher cables and good spot sales in the English market. Following the call the market eased off under a renewal of liquidation and bear pressure inspired by favorable reports and renewed rumors that the big bulls had liquidated their holdings. The trading was moderately active. There was a good deal of covering around 11.13 for July or about 3@4 points net lower, but the market showed little rallying power and the middle of the morning was at practically the lowest.

Spot closed quiet, 5 points lower; middling uplands, 11.90; ditto gulf, 12.15. Sales, 3,000 bales. Copper Gossip.

Boston to Paine, Webber & Co.: The market continued very dull, showing no fluctuations of interest outside of Calumet & Hecla and North Butte, both of which were very strong. North Butte was placed on an 8 per cent basis, but the $10 rise in the stock which occurrer a few weeks ago seems to have discounted the increase in the dividend. The strength in Mohawk is accounted for by the expectation that their next dividend will be at least $3.

* * *

Dee to Paine, Webber & Co.: I know of sales of copper for August delivery at 25c, and do not see how the large producing mines can remain around this level very long under such conditions.

THE PRODUCE MARKETS.

The following prices, with the exception of those on hay, feed and meats, are the official quotations of the Duluth Produce exchange, and shippers can rely upon them as being correct The list is corrected daily by the secretary, and shows accurately the market condition up to 12 o'clock on the date of issue. The weekly market letter, published on Fridays, is not an official statement of the exchange, but the information is gathered personally from the different dealers.

LATE DOINGS IN MICHIGAN

Sunday Closing Movement to be Extended to Other Towns.

Ewen—The Sunday closing movement, which was instituted at Ewen a few weeks ago, is to be carried to the other towns of Ontonagon county, according to the reported intentions of Rev. Horace Westwood, pastor of the Methodist church at Ewen. Since the arrest of the three saloonkeepers at Ewen their places of business have been closed on Sunday. The merchants there have also received a communication from Mr. Westwood asking them to refrain from doing business on the first day of the week. So far they have not complied with it, and whether further steps are to be taken is not known.

Iron Mountain—The St. Paul road has received from the Milwaukee shops two of the largest engines ever seen in the upper peninsula. The engines weigh 125 tons on the drivers without coal or water. The locomotives will be employed in hauling ore trains on "the hill run" between Iron Mountain and Channing and are expected to haul about twice the tonnage of an ordinary engine.

Ishpeming — Beginning Monday, the mines of the three corporations operating properties here will start their men to work half an hour earlier than formerly, abandoning the "mining time," which has been in vogue here for many years. There will hereafter be but one time, the standard. The change will doubtless be quite satisfactory to the working men, while it will also please the business people.

Marquette—The Northern Construction company of Milwaukee, which was recently awarded the contract, will begin the construction of the new south wing of the Northern normal school here the latter part of this month. The material is now being assembled. The structure, which will replace the building destroyed by fire last December, will be absolutely fireproof, and with the heating and plumbing will cost about $50,000. The building is expected to be available for occupancy the latter part of October.

Gladstone—Under the terms of an ordinance just enacted by the common council, no livery stable can hereafter be constructed within 100 feet of any building occupied as a residence in the city of Escanaba, with the exception of Ludington street, the principal business thoroughfare. Violation of this provision is made a misdemeanor punishable by a fine not exceeding $100 or by imprisonment for a term not exceeding ninety days, each day the conditions of the ordinance are ignored to be considered a separate offense.

Gang of Thieves Work Successfully in Three Towns.

NORTH DAKOTA.

Fargo—A burglary next door to the police station occurred here. The safe of the North Dakota Harness company was opened and several thousand dollars' worth of drafts taken, but no money was secured.

Entrance was secured through a rear window of the basement. The work appears to be that of someone who had in some manner secured the combination, as the safe was not damaged.

Mapleton—The billiard rooms of Henry Otis were burglarized. The till was tapped and the slot machine broken open and contents removed.

Enderlin—The postoffice safe was blown open and about $200 in cash and stamps secured. Three suspicious characters, who disappeared after the crime, are being traced by officials. United States authorities are also working on the case.

THE STAGE

TONIGHT'S ATTRACTIONS.

METROPOLITAN—John L. Sullivan and company.

COMING ATTRACTIONS.

LYCEUM—Tuesday and Wednesday, Frederick Warde in lectures.

JOHN L. SULLIVAN.

Big Fellow and His Company Make a Big Hit.

John L. Sullivan and his vaudevillians are at the Metropolitan. There are bag punchers, musical artists, song and dance comedians, soubrettes, coon shouters, nightingales, moving pictures, pugilists and, the best of all, John L. Sullivan, monologuist and former pugilistic champion of the world. John L. is still in the ring, as far as a personality and an ability to interest the public is concerned.

It is several years now since John L. ceased to be the reigning power in the prize ring, but unlike other fistic "has-beens," his name has not been forgotten by people and he is as well known wherever he goes, today, as he was when he was at the height of fame as a fighter. While the famous old fighter will never be a greater monologuist than Marshall P. Wilder or George Fuller Golden, he has a line of talk that is all his own and he is interesting, from the time he comes on the stage until he leaves it. He will also be seen during the week in a little sparring bout with his partner, Kid Cutler, who is said to be a whirlwind.

The Exposition Four, comprising the three Alexander brothers and James Brady, provide an interesting musical turn. They are far above the average, as to ability and selections.

The moving pictures of the San Francisco disaster cannot help but excite interest. They are clear and are evidently not fakes, as are so many of the moving pictures of today.

Jeanette Young has a pleasing voice and her numbers are well received. Others who share in the applause are Dodge and Seeback, Hall and Thorndyke, Baker and Patting, Dan Hayes and Hodge, Le Mar and Lancaster.

FREDERICK WARDE.

Frederick Warde, who opens an engagement of two nights and a matinee at the Lyceum tomorrow evening, is apparently attaining as much success and as many American dollars as a lecturer as he did when he starred at the head of his own company in Shakespearean drama. He has not forsaken Shakespearean drama but this season is giving them alone, and his recitals are said to be very interesting and instructive. Tuesday evening, he will give a lecture-recitation on "Hamlet," Wednesday afternoon on Shakespeare and His Plays," and Wednesday evening on "Julius Caesar."

Dance at Lester Park

Tomorrow night and Thursday night.

DEATH PENALTY AWAITS MAN AND WOMAN FIENDS

Tangier, May 21.—An official denial is given to the statement that it is intended to crucify the Marrakosh cobbler, Hadj Mohammed Mosfewi, who has confessed to the murder of thirty young women.

There is an old Moorish custom which admits of criminals being burned alive when there is a strong public demand for this form of execution, but the probability is that Mosfewi and his female accomplice will be beheaded.

The true facts in connection with the murders are that Mosfewi and a female accomplice named Rahaili, 70 years old, were in the habit of inviting young Moorish women to dinner.

During the dinner the administered a narcotic to their victims and afterward murdered them in their sleep, with the object of robbing them of whatever jewelry and other valuables they possessed.

When the crime was discovered thirty headless bodies were found buried beneath a room in the cobbler's house. While the accused couple were being conducted to jail under arrest an infuriated crowd made an egort to lynch them. Each were afterward driven around the city on donkeys in a half-naked state and publicly flogged, during which process they made loud confession of their crimes.

Deadwood.—The suit brought by George V. Ayers & Company et. al. against the Hidden Fortune Gold Mining company, was decided today in the circuit court by Judge Rice, who held the first mortgage bonds to be valid. The lien holders come prior to the bonds to the extent of $398,005.

The plaintiffs were suing for a judgment on liens, and the bondholders came in as intervenors. The question arose as to the validity of the bonds, and C. J. Blackney and R. D. Thompson of Denver, with Chamber Keller of Lead, appeared for the bondholders. After the decision was rendered A. M. Stevenson of Denver made the following statement:

"The desire of the present bondholders is that the company be reorganized in the interests of the old stockholders, and that all old stockholders who desire to participate in such reorganization come in on an equal footing."

Miss Nell Hasson of this city has been elected to take the place of Miss Jessica Hoffman, resigned, and Miss Hazel Gantt of Sioux City will succeed Miss Luvern Wood. All the other teachers were re-elected.

NEW TREATY IS SIGNED

Made With Mexico Regulating Waters of the Rio Grande.

If Approved Will Remove Friction of Twenty Years Standing.

Washington, May 21.—Secretary Root for the United States and Ambassador Casaus for the Mexican government today signed a treaty regulating the use of the waters of the Rio Grande, which, if approved by the senate, will remove what has been for twenty years past a source of friction in the relations of the two countries.

For almost a century the Mexicans living along the lower river have made large use of its waters for the purpose of irrigating their lands. But in recent years private companies on the upper waters in the United States have, by the construction of wing dams, diverted a large part of the water to this side of the river. The Mexicans have preferred claims for the damages sustained, but so far without success. Now the plans of the reclamation service have made it certain that practically all of the water will be retained on American soil, unless some proper scheme of diversion can be arranged. The construction of the $7,000,000 dam across the Rio Grande at Engel, N. M., brought the matter to a climax and led to negotiations between the two countries which culminated in the treaty signed today. The underlying principle of the convention is the recognition of the common law right of the Mexicans to the use of a fair share of the waters of the river, but as the United States government is put to the entire expense of building the great dam and canals. It is estimated that the impounded waters will suffice to irrigate about 200,000 acres of otherwise arid land, and it is stupulated that of this total 60,000 acre feet of water which is to make arable about 25,000 acres of land, will be delivered on the Mexican side of the border each year. For its part the Mexican government guarntes the United States government aginst any suit for liability on account of claims of individual Mexicans who have so far suffered through the diversion of water.

He took De Mary to his house, gave him a complete change of clothing, and acted the good Samaritan in general. Mr. De Mary feels exceedingly grateful to his rescuer.

Mr. De Mary was merely helping on the engine at the Republic elevator, filling in time before going to the Canadian Northwest, where he was to write up the country for the Outing Magazine. He is a newspaper man by profession, and recently came from the East, where he worked on the Boston Traveler and other papers.

DROMEDARY DIES OF BROKEN HEART

Washington, May 21.—That animals, as well as human beings, sometimes die of a broken heart is believed by many, and never has this theory been better illustrated than in the death of the big Arabian camel or dromedary, at the National Zoological park. In the death of this animal the collection loses its last representative of a valuable species, the daughter of the dromedary having died about four months ago.

Ever since her offspring passed away the big animal has been sick. She would lie down and pay no attention to any one. When food was given to her it would often be an hour or more before she made any attempt to eat. Her big, glassy eyes stared piteously off into space and the comment of the keepers was that she wouldn't last long. She was examined several times, but no special ailment could be discovered.

A few weeks ago the animal became seriously ill. She was given medical attention, but failed to respond to the treatment, Gradually her condition became worse, and last week she died.

Dr. Buckley of the bureau of animal industry of the department of agriculture performed an autopsy. Death from old age and cancer of the liver was the official verdict, but the knowing ones say it was a broken heart, and that she had pined away since her offspring died.

The animal had an interesting history and, besides being a rare species, had a royal pedigree. She was a little over 30 years of age, and during the Italian campaign in North Africa in 1896 was attached to the army under Gen. Baratcri, operating in Abyssinia. After the defeat of the Italians by King Menelik, this camel, with some of her companions, returned to Italy. Shortly afterward the Italian government, through its consul at Baltimore, presented this one and several others to the authorities in charge of David Hill park.

Five years ago the two animals, mother and offspring, were purchased by the authorities at the local zoo for the nominal sum of $100 each. Their affection for each other has always been a cause of great interest to the officials and keepers, for seldom does a mother show marked attention to her offspring after it is several years old. She was a proud mother, however, and watched the younger animal as closely as human children are watched.

Two other animals also died at the park last week. A loon starved itself to death, following the example of its two mates a couple of days previous, and one of the recently acquired red howler monkeys died from captivity. Several of these monkeys arrived at the park about three weeks ago, but all have died except one.

The three loons that have recently died were web-footed birds with short wings, and are sometimes called the Northen diver. They arrived at the park abott a week previous, but refused to eat.

CHADWICK DEPOSITION

Pittsburg, May 21.—Unusual interest attached to the case of Mrs. W. C. Jutte against F. W. Friend to gain possession of her dead husband's millions, which was resumed today, as it was expected that the deposition of Mrs. Cassie Chadwick, taken recently by the plaintiff's attorneys, would be opened by Judge Shafer. It was agreed, however, by counsel that the testimony of the woman now confined in the Columbus, Ohio, penitentiary, is not to be offered until there is a lull in other testimony which may not be until the prosecution finishes its case. No inkling of its coutents will be given out until then.
